"During these two years (October, 1836, to January, 1839,) I was led to think much about religion. Whilst on board the Beagle I was quite orthodox, and I remember being heartily laughed at by several of the officers, though themselves orthodox, for quoting the Bible as an unanswerable authority on some point of morality. I had gradually come by this time to see that the Old Testament was no more to be trusted than the sacred books of the Hindoos. The question then continually rose before my mind, and would not be banished, is it credible that if God were now to make a revelation to the Hindoos he would permit it to be connected with the belief in Vishnu, Siva, etc., as Christianity is connected with the Old Testament? This appeared to me utterly incredible. By further reflecting that the clearest evidence would be requisite to make any sane man believe in the miracles by which Christianity is supported, and that the more we know of the fixed laws of nature the more incredible do miracles become; that the men of that time were ignorant and credulous to a degree almost incomprehensible to us; that the gospels cannot be proved to have been written simultaneously with the events; that they differ in many important details, far too important to be admitted as the usual inaccuracies of eyewitnesses; by such reflections as these, I gradually came to disbelieve in Christianity as a divine revelation. The fact that many false religions have spread over large portions of the earth like wildfire had some weight with me. But," adds Darwin, "I was very unwilling to give up my belief. I feel sure of this, for I can well remember often and often inventing day-dreams of old letters between distinguished Romans and manuscripts being discovered at Pompeii or elsewhere which confirmed in the most striking manner all that was written in the Gospel. But I found it more and more difficult, with free scope given to my imagination, to invent evidence which would suffice to convince me. Thus unbelief crept over me at a very slow rate, but was at last complete. The rate was so slow that I felt no distress. Although I did not think so much about the existence of a personal God until a considerably later period of my life, I will here give the vague conclusion to which I have been driven. The old argument from design in nature, as given by Paley, which formerly seemed to me conclusiv, fails now that the law of natural selection has been discovered. We can no longer argue that, for instance, the beautiful hinge of a bivalve shell must have been made by an intelligent being like the hinge of a door by man. There seems to be no more design in the variability of organic beings and in the action of natural selection than in the course the wind blows."

Darwin proceeds to say: "Passing over the endless beautiful adaptations which we everywhere meet with, it may be asked how can the generally beneficent arrangement of the world be accounted for? Some writers are so much impressed with the amount of suffering in the world that they doubt, if we look to all sentient beings, whether there is more of misery or of happiness; whether the world as a whole is a good or a bad one. According to my judgment, happiness decidedly prevails, though this would be difficult to prove. If the truth of this conclusion be granted, it harmonizes well with the effects which we might expect from natural selection. If all the individuals of any species were habitually to suffer to an extreme degree, they would neglect to propagate their kind; but we have no reason to believe that this has ever, or at least often, occurred. Some other considerations, moreover, lead to the belief that all sentient beings have been formed so as to enjoy, as a general rule, happiness." Darwin goes on to aver that everyone who believes, as he does, "that all the corporeal and mental organs (excepting those which are neither advantageous nor disadvantageous to the possessor) of all beings have been developed through natural selection or the survival of the fittest, together with use or habit, will admit that these organs have been formed so that their possessors may compete successfully with other beings, and thus increase in number." Darwin explains that "an animal may be led to pursue that course of action which is most beneficial to the species by suffering, such as pain, hunger, thirst, or fear; or by pleasure, as in eating and drinking and in the propagation of the species, etc.; or by both means combined, as in the search for food. But pain or suffering of any kind, if long continued, causes depression and lessens the power of action that is well adapted to make a creature guard itself against any great or sudden evil. Pleasurable sensations, on the other hand, may be long continued without any depressing effect; on the contrary, they stimulate the whole system to increased action. Hence it has come to pass that most or all sentient beings have been developed in such a manner through natural selection that pleasurable sensations serve as their habitual guides. We see this in the pleasure from exertion, even occasionally from great exertion of the body or mind—in the pleasure of our daily meals, and especially in the pleasure derived from sociability and from loving our family. The sum of such pleasures as these, which are habitual or frequently recurrent, give, as I can hardly doubt, to most sentient beings an excess of happiness over misery, although many occasionally suffer much. Such suffering is quite compatible with the belief in natural selection, which is not perfect in its action, but tends only to render each species as successful as possible in the battle for life with other species in wonderfully complex and changing circumstances."

Darwin does not dispute that there is much suffering in this world. He points out that "some have attempted to explain this with reference to man by imagining that it serves for his moral improvement. But the number of men in the world is as nothing compared with that of all other sentient beings, and they often suffer greatly without any moral improvement." This very old argument from the existence of suffering against the existence of an intelligent First Cause seemed to Darwin a strong one. Nevertheless, he contends that the presence of much suffering agrees well with the view that all organic beings have been developed through variation and natural selection. He then touches a point of deep interest to some readers: "At the present day, the most usual argument for the existence of an intelligent God is drawn from the deep inward conviction and feeling which are experienced by most persons." Darwin acknowledges that "formerly I was led by feelings such as those just referred to (although I do not think that the religious sentiment was ever strongly developed in me) to the firm conviction of the existence of God and the immortality of the soul. In my journal (of the voyage in the Beagle) I wrote that, 'while standing in the midst of the grandeur of a Brazilian forest, it is not possible to give an adequate idea of the higher feelings of wonder, admiration, and devotion which fill and elevate the mind.' I well remember my conviction that there is more in man than the mere breath of his body; but now the grandest scene would not cause any such conviction and feeling to rise in my mind. It may be truly said that I am like a man who has become color-blind, and the universal belief by men of the existence of redness, for example, makes my present loss of perception of not the least value as evidence. This argument would be a valid one, if all men of all races had the same inward conviction of the existence of one God; but we know that this is very far from being the case. Therefore, I cannot see that such inward convictions and feelings are of any weight as evidence of what really exists. The state of mind which grand scenes formerly excited in me, and which was intimately connected with a belief in God, did not essentially differ from that which is often called the sense of sublimity; and however difficult it may be to explain the genesis of this sense, it can hardly be advanced as an argument for the existence of God any more than the powerful though vague and similar feelings excited by music."

On another point Darwin sums up his views as follows: "With respect to immortality, nothing shows me so clearly how strong and almost instinctive a belief it is as the consideration of the view now held by most physicists, namely, that the sun with all the planets will in time grow too cold for life, unless, indeed, some great body dashes into the sun and thus gives it fresh life. Believing as I do that man in the distant future will be a far more perfect creature than he now is, it is an intolerable thought that he and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long-continued slow progress. To those who fully admit the immortality of the human soul the destruction of our world will not appear so dreadful. Another source of conviction of the existence of God, connected with the reason and not with the feelings, impresses me as having much more weight. This follows from the extreme difficulty, or rather impossibility, of conceiving this immense and wonderful universe, including man, with his capacity of looking far backward and far into futurity, as the result of blind chance or necessity. When thus reflecting, I feel compelled to look to a First Cause having an intelligent mind in some degree analogous to that of man, and I deserve to be called a Theist. This conclusion was strong in my mind about the time, as far as I can remember, when I wrote the 'Origin of Species,' and it is since that time that it has very gradually with many fluctuations become weaker. But then arises the doubt—can the mind of man, which has, as I fully believe, been developed from a mind as low as that possessed by the lowest animals, be trusted when it draws such grand conclusions? I cannot," concludes Darwin, "pretend to throw the least light on such abstruse problems. The mystery of the beginning of all things is insoluble by us, and I, for one, must be content to remain an agnostic."

Writing to W. Graham, in 1861, he says, apropos of the book by Mr. Graham entitled "The Creed of Science," "It is a very long time since any other book has interested me so much. The work must have cost you several years and much hard labor with full leisure to work. There are some points in your book which I cannot digest. The chief one is that the existence of so-called natural laws implies purpose. I cannot see that. Not to mention that many expect that the several great laws will some day be found to follow inevitably from some one single law, yet taking the laws as we now know them, and looking at the moon where the law of gravitation, the law of the conservation of energy and the law of the atomic theory, hold good, I cannot see that there is necessarily any purpose. Would there be purpose if the lowest organisms alone, destitute of consciousness, existed in the moon? But," adds Darwin, with humility, "I have had no practice in abstract reasoning, and I may be all astray. Nevertheless, you have expressed my inward conviction, and far more vividly and clearly than I could have done, that the universe is not the result of chance. But then with me the horrid doubt always arises whether the convictions of man's mind, which has been developed from the minds of lower animals, are of any value or at all trustworthy. Would anyone trust in the convictions of a monkey's mind, if there are any convictions in such a mind? Secondly, I think that I could make somewhat of a case against the enormous importance which you attribute to our greatest men; I have been accustomed to think second-, third-, and fourth-rate men of very high importance; at least, in the case of science. Lastly, I could show fight on natural selection having done and doing more for the progress of civilization than you seem inclined to admit. Remember what risk the nations of Europe ran, not so many centuries ago, of being overwhelmed by the Turks and how ridiculous such an idea now seems. The more civilized so-called Caucasian races have beaten the Turkish hollow in the struggle for existence. Looking to the world at no very distant date, what an endless number of the lowest races will have been eliminated by the higher civilized races throughout the world!"

The duke of Argyll has recorded some words spoken by Darwin in the last year of his life. "In the course," he says, "of a conversation I said to Mr. Darwin, with reference to some of his observations on the wonderful contrivances for certain purposes in nature—I said it was impossible to look at these without seeing that they were the effect and the expression of mind. I shall never forget Mr. Darwin's answer. He looked at me very hard and said, 'Well, that often comes over me with overwhelming force, but at other times,' and he shook his head vaguely, adding, 'It seems to go away.'"

The Freethought Federation of America.

[Headquarters, 345 West Randolph street, Chicago, Ill. S. P. Putnam, president; John R. Charlesworth, secretary; George L. Robertson, treasurer.]

Elated with the success that had attended my debate with Braden, I left Seattle in jubilant spirits and went on to Tacoma, where the Secular Union gave me quite an ovation the next evening upon the occasion of another lecture in that city by myself. The Tacoma Secular Union is making rapid headway, and doing a good work. I regret that C. B. Reynolds was unable to be present upon this occasion; although Mrs. Reynolds was with us, and at the conclusion of my lecture she recited in a splendid manner Mr. Putnam's poem, "Why Don't He Lend a Hand?" Mr. Howden opened the meeting with two fine songs, which brought down the house with applause. He is fortunate in the possession of a clear, rich voice, and can use it with splendid effect. Mr. Ford, president of the Secular Union, occupied the platform with me. While in Tacoma I was right royally entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Babcock.

I was met at Barlow, Ore., by W. W. Jesse, president of the Oregon State Secular Union, whose guest I remained during my stay here. Mrs. Jesse and her boys gave me a hearty welcome in their midst.

The weather is wretched now, so that the attendance of the people at my lectures is very meager, being almost limited to the townspeople, with the exception of a few that came from Canby, four miles distant. Mr. and Mrs. Smith came from Oregon City. They left their mountain home to come and attend my lectures and have a little talk upon the good of the cause in general, to devise ways and means for the future successful management of the Oregon Secular Union. Mrs. Smith is a bright little woman, young and active, earnest and eager in the cause. She lectures every Sunday evening in the city of Portland, where she has already organized the "First Secular church of Portland." It has now a good membership, and she is favored by a large audience every Sunday evening. Several suggestions were made for the better success of our cause in Oregon, and as the Union is in good hands, supported by willing hearts, the Liberals of Oregon should support them and give them something substantial to work upon. My lectures here were well received and received a highly complimentary notice in the local press. Mr. Barlow, the father of this little thriving town, is an outspoken Freethinker, and attended each of my meetings. There are lots of Freethinkers upon this Western coast, and with proper care and judicious management they could be made a power in the state.

My lectures in Barlow being finished, I boarded the cars again for Silverton, where I had to lecture the next day. Dr. J. W. McClure, president of the Silverton Secular Union, and Mr. Fitzgerald, the treasurer, met me at the depot, and took me to comfortable quarters at the Wolfard Hotel.

I soon found out that I had come in contact with a bed-rock of infidelity. A large hall looming up on the corner of the principal street in the city, with the motto of "Universal Mental Liberty" painted in large letters, speaks volumes for the trend of thought that predominates in this town. The church has made some hard fights in this place, but they might as well try to get to heaven as to overthrow the power that our cause has established here. The three lectures were favored with crowded houses. Several Christians were in attendance, and listened very attentively through the lecture. Two preachers were present the first night, and although they were earnestly invited to take the platform at the close of my address, they manifested an ominous silence, and as is usual with the generality of them, they kept their place whilst I was there. But like a roaring lion they try to devour me when I am gone; then, of course, they remark, How easy it is.

The Silverton Secular Union is a good one, a strong one, and a brave one. Unflinchingly they face the fire of the supernaturalist, and many is the time that the orthodox have felt the force of their weapon—argument. Many a lance has been broken here, and the steed of the enemies of freedom has been laid in the dust every time. Long may the battle wage, frequent may be the shouts of victory, may honor come to those in the fight. Freethought is rapidly gaining ground. In many places now it occupies the position once held by the enemies of Freedom, and still held by them to a considerable extent throughout our land—the control of power. The most prominent and the most respected people in town are Freethinkers. Among them are Dr. J. W. McClure, Mr. Wolfard, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Hammond, the Allen family, all of whom are Freethinkers, but too numerous to name; Mr. Downs, Mr. Wolf, and several others.

On my way to Ashland, Ore., I have to wait several hours at Woodburn Junction, where I soon make the acquaintance of Dr. Guiss and William Klein, two well-known Liberals. Dr. and Mrs. Guiss entertain me very nicely while I stay here, but as I must leave the same night in order to reach my next appointment in time for the lecture, I am compelled by the pressure of circumstances to decline their hearty invitation to stay over for a few days.

The great "iron horse" of the Oregon & California railroad steams along in due time, and in a few minutes I am flying over the hills and plains of Oregon once more. I arrive in Ashland next morning, and W. N. Luckey is at the depot to meet me.

There are quite a number of Liberals here, though they are outnumbered by their orthodox neighbors. The churches were alive with excitement over my coming. Special services were arranged and attractions secured to draw the people away from my meetings, for fear they should, by some means or other, become tainted with heterodoxy, so hideous and devilish to the parsons. They know which side their bread is buttered on, and they like it buttered on both sides if they can get it. They had imported a lady missionary, who went round the town buttonholing every man she saw, telling him that he must come to her meeting, as she was to give a talk to men only, as though she, a woman, could say anything to men that she could not say with other women present. The dodge was to get the people to her meeting and then the preachers to jump in and hold them. But the trick was a miserable failure. I had a larger audience, despite their opposition, than the combined attendance at their churches. Granite Hall was well filled with an intelligent audience and my first lecture was greeted with a grand success. I had challenged the preachers to a debate, or to discuss the subject of the lecture with me, but, like the girl waiting for her lover, "He cometh not, she said."

The next night the audience was larger than ever and good attention was given throughout. A Baptist and a Congregational preacher were present upon this occasion, and though strenuously invited to speak they kept silent as usual. A large number of church people were in attendance this time and, from general observations, their faith has been seriously shaken. These lectures were successful indeed, exceeding the anticipations of our friends, who were jubilant over the result of them. W. N. Luckey and wife, A. Bish and wife, O. Coolidge, Job Tosier, Colonel Bowdidge, Captain McCall, Dr. R. Mills, Mrs. De Pete, John Hutchings and wife—these form the vanguard of Liberty's army here, and all of them are never found wanting when there is work to be done. In addition to the above I should mention I. W. Burris, who sends $5 for two years' subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Since my last letter to the press I have received several more lists of names for membership in the Federation. Our ranks are continually swelling. I have received the following sums of money for our treasury: L. Magenheimer, San Jose, Cal., $2; R. H. Schwartz, San Jose, Cal., $1; Miss Geneva Coffin, Deadwood, S. D., $1; Jas. R. Allen, Cincinnati, O., $1.25; David L. Evans, Goshen, Utah, $1. Total, $6.25.

Nathan Richardson, mayor of Little Falls, Minn., sent us another nice letter of encouragement and accompanied it with a petition on the World's Fair Sunday opening containing three hundred names.

Thos. W. Fisher, of Red Lodge, Mont., writes for information concerning our objects and principles, as also does H. O. Irish, of Philo, Cal. Mr. Josephs, of Pittsburgh, sends us congratulations and a lengthy petition. With this work, combined with lecturing and traveling, I am kept very busy indeed. But still we push along, we keep forging ahead, until the sun of success crowns our labors with the glorious light of freedom, dispelling the mists of darkness that prevent men from seeing far enough ahead to discern the true path of righteousness. The mists that rise from the marshes of artificial belief, from the marshes wherein dead creeds are engulfed—they stretch but a little way, and soon with the Sun of Science pursuing its slow and passionless labor, the mist shall disappear and vanish like a frost in June. We are working for human liberty, for man, not for Gods, by deeds and not by creeds, and to carry on this noble cause I once more appeal to our friends to assist us all they are able.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

The Cause in Washington.

The following extracts from leading daily newspapers tell of the fierce persistence and despairing energy of the clergy.

From the Tacoma Daily Ledger, Feb. 21, 1893:

WAR OF EXTERMINATION.

SPOKANE, Feb. 20.—At a meeting of the Ministerial Alliance to-day, the Rev. Mr. Willett presented a report stating that variety theaters and saloons are running in full blast every Sunday, contrary to law, and stated that the city authorities are in league with the lawbreakers. After a stormy discussion it was decided to begin war now and fight until every variety theater or every minister is driven from Spokane.

A committee was appointed to raise $5,000 for use in the city election this spring, and an equal amount to prosecute the owners of theaters and saloons. An independent ticket will be put in the field at the spring election, and a secret committee of ministers has been appointed to plan the campaign.

A $5,000 corruption fund to carry the spring election in a small city, to be used by a secret committee of ministers, and a like amount to hire and bribe witnesses, judge, jurors, etc.!

The clergy have decided to make a fight to have every place closed on Sundays except churches. They did permit us to enter the burying-ground, but realizing that spring is approaching and that all sensible people would prefer to go to the graveyard as the more lively place of the two, the Ministerial Alliance has issued its edict, "No more funerals on Sunday." They interfere with attendance at church, and hereafter ministers will not officiate, and as far as possible will prevent burying-grounds and cemeteries being open, on Sundays.

THE INFAMOUS EXEMPTION LAW.

The great tax-dodgers of the nation are vigilant and persistent. From the Tacoma Daily News, Feb. 23, 1893:

In the senate petitions containing thousands of signatures were presented from residents of King, Pierce, Whitman, Walla Walla, and other counties, praying exemption of all church property from taxation.

I have attended at Olympia, presented a large number of petitions, and done all that was possible, until the committee on revenue and taxation make their report.

I have mailed to every senator and representative at Olympia a copy of the cartoon, "Taxed and Untaxed," by Watson Heston, with letter calling attention to the fact that any exemption of church property from taxation is a direct and palpable violation of our state constitution.

It will be a hard fight, but we shall win, although the clergy are using every possible effort to secure entire exemption from taxation for all church property or church institutions. C. B. REYNOLDS,

Sec. Washington Secular Union.

Tacoma, Wash.

"Design" and Digits.

Among the arguments formerly adduced in support of the theory of an intelligent and purposive creation by an all-wise creator, none had so much weight with most people as that founded upon the observation of the adaptation of organs and parts of animal bodies to the work they had to perform. In conversation with a Christian gentleman a few years ago, he brought up that argument and mentioned as an illustration that the Lord made the horse with only one toe on each foot, and this was a great advantage to the animal, making his feet lighter, stronger, more compact, and so insuring his nimbleness and speed. The gentleman could hardly have selected a more unfortunate example to prove his case, as I think he soon perceived. In the first place, it is admitted the Lord did not make the present generation of horses, for these are descended from a remote ancestry. Now, the geologists have been through the graveyards of the ancient horses from which our present stock have descended, have dug up their remains in great abundance, and have made some remarkable discoveries concerning them. It is well known that on each side of the lower part of the leg of the horse there is a "splint" concealed under the skin. The immediate ancestors of our horses possessed these splints, but somewhat larger, and in the ancestors of those horses the splints become larger as we go back in time till finally they are true toes. The horse was then a three-toed animal. This was in the lower Pliocene period, a matter of probably ten or twelve million years ago. Tracing this history still further back, the geologists came to horses with three toes, and a splint on the foreleg where a fourth one should be. Further back still the splint is a true toe, and the horse is four-toed in front and three-toed behind. Further back still, in the Green river basin in southwestern Colorado, in the formations belonging to the Eocene period, probably not less than twenty million years old, were discovered remains of the most ancient ancestor of the horse yet found in America. This animal had in front four good toes, and a fifth rudimentary, unserviceable one that did not touch the ground, and on his hind feet he had three. Now, if this ancient horse be assumed to be the one that was made by the creator, in view of the admitted fact that a single toe is better for a horse than any greater number, it is evident that he did not know the best way to make a horse and made him wrong, and some sort of influence has been at work on the horse ever since, gradually ridding him of his extra toes and thus correcting the original blunder that gave him too many. The process by which this result has been brought about receives no explanation whatever from theology, but is perfectly clear as explained by evolution. The horse, when chased by his natural enemies, the dog, wolf, etc., ran away on his tiptoes (instead of coming down on his heels as we do), thus adding to the length of his legs and so attaining greater speed. In that position the middle toe (or finger) necessarily received more use than those on the sides, and so it grew to greater size and strength, till finally in the course of many generations its length prevented the outside digits, one after another, from touching the ground. Then they were worse than useless and a positive disadvantage. An organ that is not used gradually shrinks and becomes reduced, and so in course of time these superfluous toes became reduced to splints one after another, and finally all disappeared except two.

Such aborted and functionless organs are called rudiments. There has not been a horse since Eocene times that has not been more or less hampered by these useless rudiments. According to the law of natural selection the animal least burdened with these remnants, other things equal, would stand the best chance of escaping when pursued by beasts of prey, and so would survive to transmit his advantage to posterity. Thus each generation would make some headway in the elimination of these remnants in a perfectly natural way, and the race would gradually become better adapted to its environment through the action of that environment upon it. The earliest horse mentioned above is named the Eohippus. Although he was the true ancestor by blood of the present horse, it is plain that he must have been a very different-looking animal. The difference made by his feet was accompanied by others in his head, body, limbs, jaws, teeth, and especially his brain, making him, on the whole, a greatly inferior animal to his descendant of to-day. Notwithstanding this, his ancestors, considered as horses, were much inferior to himself. I assume that he had ancestors, for I do not think anyone would insist that an intelligent creator would be likely to make the animal with that useless toe hanging on to his forefoot. Evidently, the near ancestors of the Eohippus had five serviceable toes on the forefoot, and his remote ancestors had five toes all around. Five digits are better than one for animals under some conditions, and no doubt the ancestors of the horse lived under such conditions at first, and when these conditions changed they began to work corresponding alterations in the animal. We must conclude, then, that the horse is a direct lineal descendant from an animal so different that he would not be called a horse at all if we could see him. In other words, the horse was never made, but has been altered over from another animal by the slow action of its environment.

The presence of rudiments in any animal is proof positive that the animal having them has been derived from an ancestor that possessed organs that its descendants could not use. It is proof that the animal had an ancestry, and therefore was not made—by hand.

Probably no animal is destitute of rudiments. Many others besides the horse are mutilated in their feet. The ox walks on two toes and has two others dangling behind, too short to touch the ground. The pig's foot is in much the same condition. The dog has a rudimentary toe that does not reach the ground, etc.

If we could trace back the genealogy of these animals we should come at last to a common ancestor having five toes on each foot and placing the whole foot on the ground in walking just as the bear and man do yet.

But most of the grazing animals had to run to save their lives and so did the carnivorous animals—the salvation of the former depending on their escaping, and that of the latter on their catching the fugitives—and so both kinds raised their heels from the ground and ran on their toes.

The ancient five-toed ancestor of these races was as unlike his descendants of to-day as they are unlike each other. He was in fact an animal very much like a reptile, as can be satisfactorily proved. His five toes were no doubt derived from the spines of the fins of his fish-like ancestors. He himself was in the water half the time and a web still extended from digit to digit, making his foot a compromise between that of a land animal and the fin of a fish. Some of his descendants to this day preserve the five-toed webbed foot because they have remained in an environment very much like his, and live both on land and in the water. But their cousins that live wholly on land have had habits imposed upon them that have in the course of ages completely made them over—evidently without the slightest assistance or interference from any creator.

J. B. A.

The Bacon-Shakspeare Question.

BROTHER MACDONALD: You say editorially that Colonel Ingersoll's lecture on Shakspeare is "calculated to pain friend Burr somewhat." The pain that Burr has suffered by any utterance of Ingersoll is almost insensible. Burr differs from Ingersoll on the Bacon-Shakspeare question. As yet the Baconians are a small minority. But Burr's estimate of the intellectual character of Bacon accords with the consensus of the competent, while Ingersoll knows that he stands almost alone in depreciating the talents of "the brightest, wisest (noblest) of mankind." Shakspeare must go. BURR.

Liberal Societies.

At the meeting of the Newark Liberal League held last Sunday, Mr. Henry Rowley, of Brooklyn, lectured on "Freethought and Its Relation to Society and Morals." Mr. Henry Bird presided as usual. In beginning his lecture Mr. Rowley said he had frequently been asked the question, "What are you going to give us in place of Christianity, which you are trying to destroy?" He said he would answer it in the same manner that Voltaire did: "When you kill a wild beast, no one ever asks what you are going to put in its place." The lecturer then dwelt on the many obloquious names that Freethinkers have to put up with, especially from the "good, meek, and charitable Christians." "Because a man holds opinions that differ from those held by churchmen the theologians will abuse the man; they seldom attack, never successfully, his opinions." On the other hand, Freethinkers always distinguish between the man and his opinions. A Freethinker will win respect for his claims because he recognizes the rights of all men, and because he does not refuse that which he demands from others. And now what is Freethought? In a general sense it is neither a school, party, ism, or dogma; as Mr. Bird says, the man who joins a Freethought society does not subscribe to any creed. Freethought is a method. It is the untrammelled exercise of the mind upon all questions. There is nothing that is too sacred for human investigation. There are many theologians who claim they are Freethinkers. They are in political matters perhaps. There are politicians who are Freethinkers in matters of art. But anyone who surrounds the human mind with any artificial limitations whatsoever, is not a Freethinker; he is a dogmatist, and is a stumbling-block in the way of mental advancement.

Mr. Rowley then compared the state of society of the present day when religion is losing its grasp on the minds of the people with that of four hundred years ago, when the church held undivided sway. "What was the theory of nature then? It was held that nature was the product of an almighty creator; that the earth was the center and chief spot in the universe; that heaven was up and hell was down; that the stars were lights hung up in the heavens for man's guidance, etc. And what was, and is, the theory of man? That he is a lost son of Adam; that he was born in sin and shaped in iniquity; that he is only a pilgrim here, and that the pursuit of worldly happiness will only jeopardize his eternal warfare. Now, what is the theory born of science—the greatest triumph of Freethought? We learn that nature is not a product, but is the eternal source and tomb of all things. We learn that the earth is not the center of the universe, but is a speck of dust floating amid unfathomable depths of space; we learn that the universe has neither center nor circumference; that hell is not down nor is heaven up, and furthermore that both these places are theological fancies. Here is a complete reversal of the so-called divine order of things. Now, if God made Adam perfect, and no one has received the benefits of his perfection, because he ate some fruit, then the efforts of heaven were wasted, and if I had been there, I would have advised God to begin all over again. 'Try, try again,' you know." (Laughter.) The lecturer then spoke on the morality of Freethinkers in general. "Freethought makes happiness on earth the chief consideration of men. It would teach them to beautify their homes instead of adorning the temples of the Gods."

Among those who spoke were Mr. Morris, Mrs. Todd, Mr. Bird, Mrs. Smith, Mr. Walker, Mrs. Smith, Mr. Brill, and Mr. Ackerman. Next Sunday Mr. Eidemann will lecture on the "Russian Treaty."

Mr. Louis R. Ehrich, of Los Angeles, Cal., lectured before the Ethical Society in Chickering Hall last Sunday morning. Mr. Ehrich is well known throughout the country by his lectures and magazine articles. He spoke at some length on the resemblance between Christianity and Buddhism, Confucianism, etc. "In Christianity we have a religion which we may divide into one hundred parts. One part may be attributed to Jesus Christ; ninety to St. Augustine; four to fable, and five to St. Paul." In speaking of the good work done by the Ethical Society Mr. Ehrich made especial mention of Professor Adler's work. He said that he thought future ages would regard Professor Adler much in the same light that Socrates is regarded to-day. "The Ethical Society is the first that has attempted to correct the state of society of the present day—a society that has at one end multimillionaires and at the other starvation and poverty. This is the time that we need a Christ." Next Sunday Dr. Stanton Hoyte will lecture on "Creed and Deed."

Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture on "Microbes, Good and Bad," last Sunday at the Brooklyn Philosophical Association. The doctor illustrated his lecture with several diagrams, drawn on a blackboard temporarily erected. He told of the progress of the study of microbes from 1675, when Leewenhoek discovered them, up to the present day. It was not until 1850 that a systematic study of the subject was begun and now the market is overcrowded with literature on the subject. Among the critics were Mr. Elwell, Mrs. Beckwith, Dr. Barker, and Mrs. Louise. Next Sunday H. A. Powell will lecture on "The Irrepressible Conflict Between Capital and Labor."

"Coöperativ Farming" was the subject of W. Aldrich's lecture at the Manhattan Liberal Club last Friday evening. Dr. Gunn being absent, Mr. T. B. Wakeman took the chair. Mr. Aldrich proposed to form a company of farmers, who would themselves send their produce to the city, where they would have a store, the object being to do away with the commission merchant. The critics were Mr. Wakeman, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Prigsley, and Mrs. Donlevy. Mr. Wakeman put some "posers" regarding the scheme to the lecturer which, either on account of disinclination or inability, were not answered.

The second meeting of the Young Men's Debating Club of Newark was held Saturday evening, March 11th. Mr. Henry Bird read an interesting and scholarly essay on "Flowers and Their Use." Although there are few scientific subjects that Mr. Bird cannot lecture on in an interesting manner, yet it is in botanical subjects that he is particularly at home. Among those who spoke were Messrs. Walker, Gillen, and Newung. At the next meeting, to be held on March 25th, Mr. Gillen will read an essay on the money question.

The Same Thing Over Again.

A hide-bound intolerant class will pursue
The same thing over again;
And freemen must yield to a narrow-brained crew
The same thing over again
In years gone by they'd torture and fry us,
They'd burn us and force us by law to be pious,
Now freedom of conscience they mean to deny us—
The same thing over again.

To boss the World's Fair every Puritan itches—
The same thing over again;
For love of the Sabbath they'd burn us like witches—
The same thing over again.
Their Sunday Blue laws would curtail a man's life,
In fact he'd be punished for kissing his wife;
If he dared to insist there'd be war to the knife—
The same way over again.

'Tis a positiv truth that Sabbathites think
The same thing over again;
To down us they've joined in with dealers in drink—
The same thing over again.
So rum and religion have formed an alliance
To battle with truth, art, invention, and science,
And to all common sense they're bidding defiance—
The same way over again.

Those rumsellers, bigots, and thugs now propose
The same thing over again.
They're determined to lead us about by the nose
The same way over again
On Sunday they swear none shall go to the Fair,
For the devil a bit of religion is there.
'Tis best to imbibe a good whisky and prayer
The same way over again.

In closing the Fair they're mighty uncivil,
The same thing over again.
They claim if it's open we'll go the devil,
The same way over again.
So in grogshops and churches we've got to be jammed,
With musty old dogma we've got to be crammed,
We must mix it with whisky or we will be damned
The same way over again.

Shall we see every right of conscience profaned
The same way over again?
Shall we see our loved Goddess of Liberty chained
The same way over again?
Shall we yield to a power that would freedom destroy
Which is bound e'er to veto each innocent joy,
And which if permitted the sword would employ
The same way over again?

Shall they saddle us ever and ride us so clever
The same way over again?
Oh, shall we allow them to do so forever,
The same way over again?
Shall freedom be brought by bigots to naught—
That blessing for which our brave forefathers fought?
Shall they be allowed to crush freedom of thought
The same way over again?

Oh, let freemen stand firm to repel imposition—
The same way over again!

If we don't they'll build for us a cursed Inquisition
The same way over again.
From the throne of the free let usurpers be hurled,
Let on Sunday our Fair open wide to the world,
For the banner of liberty shall be unfurled
The same way over again.

Belvidere, Ill., Feb. 20, 1893.

ROBERT SWAIL.

Spelling Reform in the Air.

It is indeed; and but few persons are aware to what an extent it exists in the intellectual atmosphere. It is only when we are startled by such a paragraph as the following that we realize it. This one is taken from the Pansy, one of the excellent juvenile magazines published by D. Lathrop Company, Boston, Mass.

SPELLING REFORM.

Present way.	Proposed change.
Liabie.	Liabl.
Know.	No.
Heart.	Hart.
Earth.	Erth.
Incense.	Incens.
Through.	Thru.
Though.	Tho.
Love.	Luv.

What will the teachers say to this? If they are wise, they will accept the situation and deal honestly with the children. They will tell them that to learn the current spelling is at present a necessity, but what is called good spelling is in reality bad spelling, that it is bad spelling because it is unreasonable and not amenable to law, that they are very sorry so much time has to be spent in mastering it, and that they hope and believe that gradually the useless, silent letters will be dropped and after a while that spelling will be made easy and reasonable, as arithmetic is. Arithmetic is reasonable because a figure always has the same value, and two and two always make four, etc. But spelling is unreasonable because the letters of the alphabet have no certain value. A child wastes time and mental energy which could be employed in useful studies, while it is memorizing t-i-e tie, e-y-e eye, n-i-g-h night, c-r-y cry, g-u-y guy, and when called upon to spell by, the poor child is utterly at a loss whether to spell b-y-e, or b-u-y, or b-i-g-h, or b-y.

The greater part of early school-life is given to learning to read and spell, and after leaving school it is only by constant practice in writing that the ability to spell according to the dictionary is retained. If our letters had regular and unvarying sounds, but little time would be required for spelling: the art would be acquired in a few months while learning to read, and the ability to spell correctly would never be lost. Other languages than the English are phonetic. For instance, in Spanish and German the letters always have the same sounds when in the same position. Therefore, foreign children learn to read their own languages with very little teaching, and no special spelling lessons are required.

The most eminent educators and philologists have declared in favor of bringing English orthography to rule and reason, and a hundred years ago that apostle of common sense, Benjamin Franklin, declared that "Sooner or later it must be done."

ELIZA B. BURNZ.

Showing What "God's Justice" Is.

And yet men can be found to say there is no hell. If no hell, there can be no heaven, no God of justice, and the world is all a chance, a delusion, and a dream.—Paris, Tex., Advocate, Jan. 28.

The above remarks have reference to Henry Smith, burnt for violating a babe. They are strictly orthodox. But, my dear sir, with all due respect for you and those who believe like you, they do not strike the Agnostic as perfectly logical. There may be a "God of justice," but if so, godly justice and human justice must be of a diametrically opposite nature. God knew the intent of Smith when he took this child in his arms! He witnessed the little one's struggles, and heard its cries of distress. He knows where the villain is now concealed! If a man knew Smith's design, saw the fiend perpetrate the act, and is now aware of his hiding-place, yet moved no hand or tongue to save the babe from outrage and death, neither gives he any sign where the guilty wretch may be found—would such a being be regarded as a just man? Most assuredly he would not. Thus you see there is no analogy between human justice and divine justice! Religiously speaking, then, the term "justice" has no conceivable meaning; hence the Agnostic refuses to employ it in this absurd way. To him it is a mere mockery of language, a mere juggle with words!

PERSIUS.

Bound Volumes of The Truth Seeker.

We have a few bound volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year just closed (1892) which will be sent on receipt of $4. We also have a few of previous years which can be sold for $3. Readers desirous of keeping files as received weekly can obtain the File Binder for $1.

Letters of Friends.

Welcomes a Contributor.

GRINNEL, I.A., Jan. 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad to hear that Geo. E. Macdonald is again going to write for our paper. I missed him so much when he quit and went West. W. T. LEINS.

We, and the Readers of Our Literature, Thank You.

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH., Feb. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is $5—$3 for renewal for THE TRUTH SEEKER, $1 for you to use as you see fit for the cause of Freethought, and $1 for a new work by Arthur B. Moss, author of the "Bible and Evolution," entitled "Christianity and Evolution." C. T. LUDWIG.

Age Devoted to the Truth.

EAST MIDDLEBURY, VT., Feb. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I will try to do a little more than pay for my own paper, and now send one new subscriber. I am an old man eighty-four years old, and have not been able to read my paper for a month or more, but am in hopes to be able to soon. Hoping you may be able to go on with your good work for many years, I am, Yours very truly, R. D. FARR.

Yes, a Good Scheme.

GIBBON, NEB., Feb. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Would it not be a good idea to have a pamphlet printed containing in the first half the wise and beneficent sayings of pagan philosophers and prominent Infidels, and in the second half the driveling inanities and detestable and harmful sentiments expressed by prominent Christians from Jehovah down to Comstock? It would be a good propaganda work, and the antithesis would be so striking as to spread terror among the saints. I will give $1 for a starter, and then will buy $1 worth of the compilation. What say you? And what say our friends? Respectfully, etc., C. PUTNAM.

Has an Awkward Way of Having Infidel Literature Lying Around.

GERMANTOWN, TENN., Jan. 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have not time these later years to read half the numbers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, but I do not like to break a good habit. Then I have an awkward way of having them around occasionally where the casual eye may light on them.

I am becoming reconciled to Heston. As a cartoonist some of his conceptions entitle him to fame. By the way, an article from him, such as the history and mission of the cartoon, might be opportune. At any rate, I venture the suggestion that THE TRUTH SEEKER constituency would appreciate almost any expression from him, on the principle that they want to see him in print.

With earnest well wishes for the intellectual freedom of humanity the world over, I am, Yours truly, J. H. COMPTON.

Commendable Desire for a Freethought Library.

MODESTO, CAL., Jan. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find draft for $5 to apply as follows: Renewal of subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER one year (would not be without it as long as I could raise the amount) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" (cloth), $4; "Infidel Deathbeds," by G. W. Foote, twenty-five cents; "Rights of Man" (if you have it bound in cloth I would like it, as I would like to get a small, substantial Freethought library together); "The Christian Religion," by an old farmer, fifteen cents; D. M. Bennett's "An Hour With the Devil," ten cents, and his "Epistle to the Truth Seekers," ten cents; "An Open Letter to Christ," five cents.

I purchased the draft yesterday and now wish it was larger, as I want more. You will hear from me soon again with another order. Please send me some specimen pages of the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book," and oblige, E. H. BEMIS.

Miscellaneous.

WATERLOO, IND., Jan. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written to you for two years, I thought perhaps you would like to know what we are doing for progress and common sense in this neck o' woods.

Well, we have just had two lectures by Prof. W. S. Bell. He is a very able speaker, and a gentleman also. I can recommend him. He did not give it quite strong enough to suit some of them, but I was very much pleased with him myself. There was a vein of humor running through his discourse which made it very interesting.

Since last I wrote to you we have lost by death one of our staunchest Liberals, Mr. Josiah Brysland, aged seventy-two. He was struck by the fast train and killed Dec. 25, 1892. He was a man of good morals, upright and honest, and with no enemies.

I send you with this an order for $5 to carry me along two years longer on my subscription. I shall have to be very hard up indeed when I give up THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Good luck to Heston. He is a genius. Without the cartoons THE TRUTH SEEKER would lose half its value to me. I think almost as much of the cartoons as I do of the reading-matter.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty,
JACOB SALTSMAN.

What Christians Should Exhibit at the Fair.

TRENTON, MO., Feb. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I want to make a few suggestions to the sky-pilots:

1. That they put on exhibition at the Columbian Exposition all their saviors in the United States at the present time, including the following (Editor TRUTH SEEKER, please enumerate them).

2. To produce their books and show how many souls they have saved in the last four hundred years in America, and the cost of same to each soul, and how many dividends they have paid, if any.

3. To have on exhibition statistics showing number of insane persons in the United States at present caused by reading the Holy Book of Enigmas and attending revivals. Also statistics showing number of witches they have put to death in this country and how many their pious ancestors killed before them; and furnish at the expense of the government printed pamphlets giving therein instructions in their art of detecting witches, so that all the common people may become proficient in witch hunting.

4. The number of preachers that have fallen from grace in four hundred years to be given; also how far they have to fall before they lose grace, and what becomes of the grace.

I think this would be an interesting exhibit for our orthodox friends to view.

Yours very truly, B. A. SHAW.

A Limited Mentality Imputed to a Judge.

SAVANNAH, MO., Jan. 27, E.M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find draft for $5, for which please send to me all of the Iron-Clad and Manna Series, as advertised on last page of THE TRUTH SEEKER for Jan. 21, 1893, except "Philosophy of Spiritualism" and "Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural." I do not want to read any "Spiritualism" of any kind. It is too absurd and silly for anybody to read who has a thimbleful of brains. Also send $1 worth of "Hard Knocks at Christianity," by R. Wheeler, and "My Religious Experience," by S. P. Putnam, one copy, and two copies of "Twenty Crimes and Vices," by Remsburg, if the money holds out, and if there is any left use it as you please.

At church—a protracted meeting in our town—the pastor made a statement about Chief-Justice Chase, and if you know anything of it I want you to inform me. He said that the chief-justice went to church in Washington, and when an invitation was given to come to the mercy-seat the chief-justice arose and walked boldly forward, but being a very humble man, as all great men are, he did not go clear up to the downy and cushioned place to kneel, but knelt back a way on the carpet, but no one seemed to notice him except the pastor, who walked up to him and said, "How is it, chief-justice—are you accepted of the Lord?" "No, not yet, but I shall be, as I am now using the means provided by the savior himself." And when he arose from his knees he arose an accepted and a saved man, rejoicing in the love of a redeemer.

He also stated that Mr. Chase was a great constitutional lawyer, and that he said that he never had fairly understood the law till he had thoroughly studied God's law, the Bible, and there he found the gist and germ of all law. This last, of course, I take to be all poppycock. But in regard to the church episode, it may be so, and perhaps you can inform me whether it is or not. WM. COOK.

Laws of Nature—Limits of Explanation—Dogmatizing.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please insert the following criticism of J. F. Lawrence's article on "Spiritualism" in this week's issue?

The Spiritualist will look long for the truths which philosophical and modern Materialism may contain before he will find them in the article of J. F. Lawrence on Spiritualism in reply to A. H. Frank. Though accepting Materialism as a hypothesis (and it is nothing more), I can not like Mr. Lawrence dogmatize upon it, as there is a vast realm of the unknown (the Spencerian school says, also the unknowable), which is not open to our knowledge. Mr. Lawrence says that science has shown that "all things in the universe are governed by an unintermittible and consistent law, and the rational philosopher regards no causes but such as are reducible to this natural law." Is the "rational philosopher" so irrational? Will Mr. Lawrence attempt to prove his postulate that all things are governed by a law? It cannot even be said that the phenomena of nature are governed by laws, though this is the way some other irrational, though more rational, philosophers write. Instead of the phenomena of nature being determined or governed by laws, it is the laws that are determined by the phenomena. Laws of nature are subjective abstractions. This is well put by G. H. Lewes in his "Problems of Life and Mind." Laws then are, as stated by Darwin, but the ascertained sequence of events. The sequence of many events has been shown and their laws thus determined. This it has been the province of science to do, and very well it has done its work. But there are many events which have not been determined and their sequences shown. Thus we have theories, and among them the Materialist theory and the Spiritualist theory. Materialism seems the logical outcome of modern knowledge, but remembering how much we do not know, we should surely be on the watch against dogmatizing. Mr. Lawrence makes an assertion which on his own statement is tainted with superstition, where he says that "Science has . . . revealed the marvelous features which no skill may interpret." Can the "rational philosopher" not reduce these to his law? I would advise Mr. Lawrence to read, if he has not already done so, Samuel Laing's "Problems of the Future" and Professor Huxley's "Essays on Some Controverted Questions." He will, I hope, learn that the true philosopher keeps away from dogmatizing on many questions in the present state of our knowledge or ignorance. "ECLECTIC."

Christians Stealing Infidel Literature.

GRATTON, N. D., Jan. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: With the greatest pleasure I am reading your valuable paper, and I think that Watson Heston is the best artist on our globe. We have certainly two great men now living, and I don't know which has done the most good—Col. R. G. Ingersoll and Watson Heston. They have enlightened the world more than churches have ever done in all their existence. I wish they could live forever to enlighten mankind.

Though so far north under a cold temperature and long winters, there is a dawn of Freethought glimmering here which promises in time to be a harvest, and the churches feel it already, as ministers make it a special duty time and again to preach against Freethought, but it only seems to have a good effect.

Liberal papers are now in more demand, especially THE TRUTH SEEKER, so I am inclined to believe what little seed there has been sown here—THE TRUTH SEEKER and "Old Testament Stories" and other Secular books and papers—will in time bear a rich crop.

My family, which consists of nine, are all of my belief, and like THE TRUTH SEEKER. And one fact I have to record—that I can never leave a Secular book or paper in my office (which is daily visited by from seventy-five to one hundred) for five minutes without its getting lost. A good sign, isn't it? The latest in that way was, I got of a friend as a New Year present the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book." But a traveling man from Chicago—I think a church deacon—stole the book, as he was the last seen to read it.

A man by the name of Anderson, who through me subscribed for THE TRUTH SEEKER, lost the last number of the paper, and came a distance of seven miles to get mine, but unfortunately for him, mine was already making its round amongst the farmers.

I intended to visit Charlesworth when he was at Crookston lecturing, but on account of sickness had to stay at home. I wish we could have Putnam or Charlesworth or Ingersoll. I suppose we would not be able to get up here as much money as we should wish. A friend made the remark the other day that if we had three lectures of Ingersoll the churches here would afterward be empty.

With best wishes for the Freethought cause, and Colonel Ingersoll, Watson Heston, THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Liberal paper and worker,

Yours for Freethought and Reform,

JNO. ILDSTAD,

Proprietor Merchants' Hotel.

P.S.—Inclosed please find $2.50, for which send one copy of the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book," to replace the one stolen from me, by first mail.

Two Stories of Superstition in Texas.

DIXIE, TEX., Jan. 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I will give you herewith two saint stories, which I warrant to be genuine, as one happened to me and the other to a friend of mine. Last summer was here in west Texas very dry. Roaring thunderclouds approached from all sides, but all the rain was discharged near the Sierra del Burro in Mexico. It is to be understood that the would-be city of Dixie is only one and one-half miles from the Rio Grande, and we in Texas got nothing but dust. I kept a little country store. Two years' failure of crops in my vicinity froze me completely out, and, as usual, when customers came the talk was about the rain we did not get. One day one Dona Maria, one of my customers, came to talk, naturally, about heat and dry weather. "Hm, hm," said she, "I know what's the matter. Dona Ramona [another neighbor of mine] is at the bottom of all of that." Well, that interested me, and I wanted to know why, expecting some fun. After speaking to her earnestly and in as sweet Spanish as I could afford, I finally got her, though reluctantly, to tell me the story. By the by, the two ladies frequently came and bought candles, and I did not know what the deuce they were doing with them. Dona Maria finally began: "I have a saint consecrated by a priest in Mexico, and whenever I make him an offering of four candles he surely brings rain; but Dona Ramona is afraid of thunder and lightning, and she has a saint consecrated by a bishop in Mexico, and when she makes him an offering of six candles he drives the thunderclouds away. You see, he is consecrated by a bishop and is more powerful than mine. That is the reason we never get rain here."

This I told one day to Mr. T. F., a Hebrew of rather Liberal views, and he said: "You know the 'Guate'?" (nickname for twin?) "Certainly I do; what about him?" "Well, when we had those hot days his wife got disgusted with their saint and hung him out in the broiling sun, so that he should experience the influence of the mid-day sun's rays (plus 110° F.). Self-understanding Mr. Saint, especially as he was made from tin, began to feel the heat of the sun's rays under latitude north 29°. Not long after, a heavy thunderstorm struck their place. The roof of Guate's, not being constructed for rainy seasons, began to leak, and water was pouring down into the shanty so that it was flooded inside. At once Guate's wife cried out, 'O Lord! our saint, he got mad because we put him out in the hot sun and now he is punishing us—trying to flood us out of the house.' And the poor woman went out to get her saint in a dry place."

After seeing such things a man earnestly asks himself, Does humanity improve in matters of religion or are we going back to the times of Gregory VII.?

The only consolation for a man of Liberal views is to compare the time of the Reformation with the present, then a difference is visible. Otherwise it would appear that we went back to the Dark Ages.

ALBERT TURPE.

The Difference Between a Christian Debater and a Freethought One.

SEATTLE, WASH., Feb. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. John R. Charlesworth has just closed a six nights' debate in Seattle with the notorious Clark Braden. If Freethought ever won a victory over superstition, if a man ever exposed a pretender, then I say, score a whole million for Charlesworth! It is not to be wondered at Mr. Putnam and others refusing to have a public discussion with the "Rev." Clark Braden. It would be putting it very mild indeed to say Clark Braden is not a gentleman. After hearing the "Rev." Christian apologist for a whole week, I say he is the greatest wholesale liar I ever listened to.

The "arguments" (so-called) of Clark Braden are not worthy of serious or respectful consideration. He is a pretender, a hypocrite, a mountebank, and a most consummate falsifier of facts. He has no desire to know the truth, nor any fear to have his audience believe a lie. I say once for all, Clark Braden is worse than a dog, and he merits the scorn and supreme contempt of all honest men.

The "reverend" gentleman (?) began his personalities against Mr. Charlesworth by hissing at one of his unanswerable affirmations.

Throughout the debate Braden never made a logical or satisfactory answer to any of Mr. Charlesworth's questions. On the contrary, he would ignore, evade, or else intentionally falsify the statements made by Mr. Charlesworth, and then proceed in a most bombastic and pompous way to "knock out" his "man of straw."

Talk about consistency, I say, Consistency thou art not only a jewel but thou art a whole ocean-steamer-load of jewels when one has to listen to the illogical and sentimental slush of the "Rev." Clark Braden.

Among other things he affirmed that Stephen Girard was a Christian, that Thos. Paine was a Christian and a believer in the Bible God, also that he (Paine) died a drunkard; that he (Braden) would prove the existence of God if Mr. Charlesworth would prove the existence of electricity, so when Mr. Charlesworth brought a battery on the rostrum and asked Braden to take hold of the handles so he could prove the existence of electricity by the sense of touch, Braden refused to hold the handles, nor did he say anything more about proving God's existence. And so it was all the way through the debate—Braden assumed almost everything and really proved nothing. He seemed to think his mere assertion of the existence of the supernatural was proof sufficient. But in this he was very much mistaken, for that audience was not one of Christian credulity. On the contrary, it was one of scientific inquiry, and demanded scientific evidence. Braden knows, or should know, that we know his infinit, omnipotent God is deaf, dumb, blind, and dead. This I affirm before all the evil in the world: Were there an infinit, omnipotent, righteous power "doing all things well," then there could be no injustice in the world. Evil exists, iniquity exists, error exists, and all these go to prove that an "infinit, omnipotent, righteous power," or "God," does not exist. I hold that after all the evil, injustice, suffering, and want are eradicated from the world, and righteousness reigns supreme, then it will be time enough to talk about or worship God. Such stuff to-day will not do. It is not in accordance with the facts, but is a doctrine of superstition, hence we refuse it and oppose it. Thus it is that no priest or preacher can convert a real scientific man or woman—they cannot produce the evidence.

Such assertions as these made by Braden in the debate will surely make more Freethinkers, more Liberals, and more skeptics. He said that Freethinkers are uncharitable; that they gave nothing for schools, colleges, asylums, or hospitals; that they were a class of gamblers, drunkards, and saloonkeepers; that as a class they were ignorant and coarse in manners; that they were not refined; that they were very ignorant, and neither Mr. Charlesworth nor Robt. G. Ingersoll knew enough to enable him to get a certificate or diploma to teach a common school. Such were his remarks. What do you think of them? Here is what I think: It should be considered an honor to be slandered by such a "fellow," and I hope to meet better men in "hell." I would prefer a "hell" of honest men to a paradise of angelic shams. Clark Braden is the most colossal, the most gigantic, Jumbo of a liar I ever heard speak. He has taken the premium, the bakery is his. But after all it might be well to thank the "reverend" gentleman (?) for the negativ good he has done the cause of Freethought in this debate, for to my mind the cause has been immensely benefited by the discussion, even though the "reverend" professor and "master of arts" did read his composition direct from manuscript. That was his method of debating—he came on the stage and read a composition. Mr. Charlesworth did not read a composition, but affirmed and declaimed the grand doctrines of Secularism with a precision and accuracy that at once showed the proficiency of a master. I do not think the people of Seattle can ever pay the debt of positiv good and positiv gratitude they owe to Mr. Charlesworth. I say to the Liberals throughout the land, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, all over the world, that Mr. John R. Charlesworth is one of the best advocates we have. His exposition of modern Secularism—or modern thought if you like—is superlativ. He is radical, refined, and refreshing. Employ him whenever possible to down the monster Superstition. (Let there be more scientific light! Drive away the clouds of priestcraft!) And, last but not least, treat him well, and he will do you good.

For Universal Mental Liberty,

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN.

On the Proper Rearing of Children, and Other Topics.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL., Feb. 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and made personal acquaintance with Mr. Putnam during his sojourn here last fall, and I must say, as a great many others do, that it was a treat never to be forgotten. I am sorry that this valley is so isolated from the outside world, which necessarily prevents a man like Mr. Putnam from being with us very often. But I believe that during the short time that he was here he did more in putting people to thinking for themselves than all the preacher's prayers will avail in asking God to let them (the preachers) think for them, for the next ten years.

There are a good many whole-souled Liberals here, but several are hypocrites. Some, through policy's sake, cater to the demands of Christ's pets; while others go to church for the same reason that most preachers go for—that is, the company of pretty women—only the preachers fare better, for they draw a salary and all that foolish people are willing to give them. So far as my individual self is concerned, I have given my last mite to the cause of religion; for I consider an intelligent minister of the gospel as much of an impostor as the Jews did J. Christ, and those that are not intelligent are more to be pitied than blamed. They are superstitious fanatics, and the people ought not to trust in God as to what harm they might accomplish, but take them in charge as the law requires and place them where other insane persons are kept. If God will not take care of such fanatics mankind ought to, because I never heard of God interceding in behalf of preachers and preventing them from committing crime, so that they would not be subject to the punishments inflicted by man.

I have a family with two girls, eleven and thirteen, and would sooner any time give them twenty-five cents to go fishing on Sunday than one nickel to go to Sunday-school and give the heathen. The Sunday recreation gives them physical strength and better prepares them for their week's school, whereas the Sunday-school fills their heads so full of nonsensical hobgoblin myths that Jesus and their geography are liable to get mixed, so that they wouldn't know whether Chicago was in heaven, or hell was in New York city. Great heavens! why don't the religious people buy some bankrupt country and manufacture saints to order? Transfer all the heathen to it. It would certainly be cheaper. Then the corporations that control the system of the conversion of heathen could utilize them as slaves and get a profit from them. It would then be immaterial to those whose cries are for a place in heaven for the poor heathen whether they got to heaven or not, for they do not work for the souls of heathen near so much as they do for their own stomach's sake. I never heard from heaven and do not know whether Chinese, Africans, Indians, and Anglo-Saxons all change the color of skin and all become one color, and whether that color will be white, black, yellow, or red. I fancy what a general "kick" there would be if the negro retains his color and odor and some rabid old Democrat, who wouldn't have anything to do with an African only to get his vote on election day in this world, was to be called to Abraham's bosom at the same time.

I rather think that old Abe of biblical fame would have as much trouble or his hands in keeping peace as Uncle Abe of our late war had in the same cause; human nature being selfish, which shows out plainer in religion than in any other thing, for no sectarian organization gives entrance into heaven only through their own gates, and would sooner see people burnt at the stake than have them try to enter heaven from any other direction than their own. No doubt the same system would prevail in heaven that did in the South before the war, and in the times of the Bible and histories too numerous to mention; and perhaps not being able to decide which race should predominate, God, the devil, Abraham, and the Ghosts would make servants out of all of them. That seems to have been their principal business, making slaves out of all that were subduable, killing off the balance for not being obedient, and it seems to me that by force of habit they are likely to continue, and they will move heaven and hell, or else move the walls of heaven to some inland place and move hell-fire to where no one can bother their Sunday. I worked all day to try and get a roof on my stable in order to keep my cow and horse from the inclemency of the weather, but the inclemency of the weather got here first. The result was that we four animals got the worst of it. The cow, calf, and horse got baptized for about thirty-six hours—worse than a Baptist immersion—and I was taken sick that night with a severe chill which lasted about two hours. All alone, my folks being absent, I could not send for a doctor until daylight approached. I did not pray for daylight, for I learned in my young days that I never did get what I prayed for. If I wanted skates, I would perhaps get a Rollo book; and if I prayed for a nice painted sled on Christmas, I would have to be satisfied with a rough board affair, which I would have to either build myself or bother an older brother to make for me—no iron on the bottom, and perhaps the grain of the runners running in the wrong direction, it sliding about as well up hill as down, myself and sled both an object of ridicule by the more fortunate ones whose parents had money to pay for more beautiful coasters and did not have to pray to God for them. So far as not being able to provide the luxuries I most desired, I blame no one. But I do blame my parents a little bit, who lived their whole lives in the Methodist Episcopal church—and many a hard-earned penny went for its support—for deceiving me at that early age into exerting myself to my utmost in my infant endeavors to have desires fulfilled—never going into anything more extravagant than a nice red sled, so that I would not be a laughing-stock of all the boys. Of course other boys fared worse than I did, not even getting a rough board sled, and when asked where their sled was saying that they wouldn't have a sled; but you could see them trading all of their surplus gum, candy, raisins, and marbles, and one-half interest in all of their walnuts, hickory and hazel nuts, to get a few rides down hill, maybe yielding up their last slate pencil, and going and telling their parents that some big boy took it from them, and getting boxed on their ears. Why don't parents tell their children the whys and wherefores and reasons that they can't have certain things, and not force them to lose confidence in their parents for deceiving them, telling them to pray to God for health, that is prayed for and never comes—pray for things that we could not keep from coming if we wanted to, and not one prayer granted in a billion that anyone knows of? This is my prayer:

Rain-clouds that are up on high,
Pour out thy contents on earth when dry,
That all creation and every nation
Will produce subsistence bountifully.
We do not beg our daily bread,
But desire our health to gain it;
We do not wish to sin against,
Nor have others sin against us.
If temptation lurks in the path of right,
Crush it as you would an adder,
For that will give us power and glory
For ever and everybody! Hurrah!

Not quite so poetical as the popular Lord's prayer, but will have just as much force. Neither is it much on the rhythmical order.

No, fellow-sinners, I did not pray, send for any preacher or Christian Scientist, but lay all night with a burning fever, my breath as hot as the smoke of hades, and I did not see any devil with a hand-blast either, counting away the dragging hours, sleepless, my body full of pain. Then, when morning came, the first individual I saw I invited to go for a doctor as soon as God would let him. God did not interfere with the messenger's speed, and the dispenser of pills was on time. After taking his medicine I was recommended to sit by the fire and sweat. I won't be as selfish as the few who have located all the available space in heaven, but if anyone gets left out in the cold I give them a special invitation to come down where we have fires, for I find fires are useful as well as comfortable. I followed the doctor's advice, and read all of THE TRUTH SEEKERS that had accumulated for six weeks, during an absence in San Francisco and other places on the west side of the Sierra Nevada mountains, and believe that I am doing as well as though I had put in my time praying to —.

The doctor himself is somewhat Liberal in religion. Of course, if you ever have any dealings with doctors and lawyers you know their prices vary as much as the different church creeds, or the preachers on the Bible, only when you see a lawyer or doctor you know what you get or don't get for the fee, but when you see a preacher you don't get anything visible for the outlay.

The doctor's wife is also a practicing physician but a rabid church-member. They were divorced a short time ago—too much religion on one side and not enough on the other. She is a pretty smart woman, but I know that the old man has to be called in when the case is unusual. He trusts in his own exertions and what science has developed, and she trusts too much in Jesus. Science will get away with Jesus yet.

It is funny that Jesus (great physician that he was), powerful to accomplish anything beyond the knowledge of man and the discoveries made by scientific investigations, should humiliate his advance agents so much as to permit another, who worships no other spirits but an occasional glass from behind the bar, to come and complete a job that the agent and Christ both could not get away with. I know how it was with me when I was learning my trade. I would be working on a job that I was not doing just up to the standard and the boss would snatch the work from me and proceed to finish it up. I felt mad, and it was only his size that kept my mouth shut—he weighed two hundred and sixty pounds, I weighed one hundred and forty pounds—too much "heft" against science there, as well as religion and the World's Fair.

WM. F. MATLACK.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Nutch Lullaby.

Wynken, Blynken, and Nod one night
Sailed off in a wooden shoe—
Sailed on a river of crystal light,
Into a sea of dew;
"Where are you going, and what do you wish?"
The old moon asked the three;
"We have come to fish for the herring-fish
That live in this beautiful sea;
Nets of silver and gold have we!"
Said Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.
The old moon laughed and sang a song,
As they rocked in the wooden shoe,
And the wind that sped them all night long
Ruffled the waves of dew.
The little stars were the herring-fish
That lived in the beautiful sea;
"Now cast your nets wherever you wish—Never afear'd are we;"
So cried the stars to the fishermen three;
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.
All night long their nets they threw
To the stars in the twinkling foam—
Then down from the skies came the wooden shoe,
Bringing the fishermen home;
'Twas all so pretty a sail it seemed
As if it could not be,
And some folks thought 'twas a dream they dreamed
Of sailing that beautiful sea;
But I shall name you the fishermen three;
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.
Wynken and Blynken are two little eyes,
And Nod is a little head.
And the wooden shoe that sailed the skies
Is a wee one's trundle-bed.
So shut your eyes while mother sings
Of wonderful sights that be,
And you shall see the beautiful things
As you rock in the misty sea
Where the old shoe rocked the fishermen three:
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

—Eugene Field.

The Cliff-Dwellers.

When North America was discovered the European people called it the New World, thinking they had found a country in which man did not exist; or, at least, not civilized man; but they did not then know of the cliff-dwellers, the remains of whose habitations indicate that they possessed about the same degree of civilization as was possessed by the Europeans of the same centuries.

When the mounds of the mound-builders were discovered they were thought to be the greatest works of the primitive man in America, but their works and relics fade away into insignificance before the grandeur of the works left by the cliff-dwellers.

Among the ruins of the cliff-dwellers is found one building about the size of the Patent Office at Washington—its ground measurement being four hundred and twenty-five by eighty feet. The building was four stories high and contained five hundred rooms, or room enough for the accommodation of about one thousand people. Such massive remains show that the cliff-dwellers were once a very numerous and powerful people, for otherwise they would never have undertaken and been able to erect such a massive building.

The principal ruins of the cliff-dwellers are found in the mountainous regions of southern Colorado and northern New Mexico and Arizona. The area in which the ruins are found is several thousand miles in extent.

The ruins have but recently been found, as the country in which they are located is a wild and desolate place, which, until recently, was never explored by the white men, which fact accounts for our very meager knowledge of this once powerful race which erewhile flourished, but is now an almost forgotten race.

The dwellings of the cliff-dwellers are built in caves, which have been hollowed out in the side of the cliff by themselves or nature—no one can now tell which. The dwellings, as a rule, are built about one hundred feet from the top of the cliff, which would seem to indicate that they, and not nature, had hollowed out the caves in which their dwellings were built.

How they reached their dwellings is also a disputed question—some explorers claim they descended from above, while others claim they ascended from below; the ruins are at present inaccessible from either position, without the aid of ropes, hooks, and ladders.

The houses were built of blocks of sandstone, stuck together by a mortar made of mud; the inside of the walls are plastered with some white substance resembling chalk. The floors of the second stories are of red cedar covered with the same white substance as the walls.

In the ruins of the dwellings are found remains of their cooking utensils, implements of war, the products of their looms, their pipes, and strings of beads evidently worn by the belles of these people—it seems that in most of the early races the women folks always tried by ornaments to improve on their appearance and were probably a little vain, just as the women of to-day are. These people it would seem were the most advanced in the art of weaving, for some of their cloth which was found in ruins is soft and pliable and is smooth and carefully woven. The cloth made by them compares very favorably with the cloth made by our grandmothers. They were skilled in the art of making pottery. A number of pieces have been found which are painted in a number of different colors, and some pieces are found which have the ornamented work raised. Their implements of war, of which a goodly number have been found, would indicate that they, no less than their Christian brothers, indulged in the Christian pastime of killing their neighbors and destroying their homes. A further evidence of their warlike character is shown by the fact that most of their houses contain portholes. Brave indeed must have been the enemy who dared to attack these people in their strongholds, which were situated so advantageously for defense.

The cliff-dwellers were evidently an agricultural people, as remains are found of reservoirs and irrigating ditches, from which they obtained the water to irrigate their crops. That they raised corn is known from the fact that corn cobs are found among the ruins of nearly all the houses. They are also supposed to have known the art of bread-baking, as large ovens are found near most of the houses.

The mummies which have been found show that the cliff-dwellers were a rather large and athletic people, closely resembling the red men of to-day. The number of years since their dwellings were inhabited is variously estimated from five hundred to one thousand years; in either event they all perished from some unknown cause many years before the advent of the Europeans.

WILLIAM L. PALM.

Denver, Col., Feb. 3, 1893.

Correspondence.

Feb. 20, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is the first letter of mine to the Corner. I am nine years old. I go to school. I study reading, spelling, physiology, and arithmetic. Papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and I like to read the Children's Corner. If this escapes the waste-basket I will write again. I will close for this time.

From your Liberal friend,
MAGGIE LOCHBAUM.

[We hope to hear from Maggie again. She must take pains with her spelling and punctuation.—Ed. C. C.]

VERA CRUZ, Mo., Feb. 17, 1893.

FRIEND MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. And I hope it will not be the last. I want to correspond with my friends who write to this Corner. I have been reading some of their letters, and thought I would write a few lines to-day. While I was at a Baptist revival I was disgusted, and still felt sorry for some of them. They would roll around like a horse with the colic, and some were hauled home like a dead hog, almost insensible. I think preachers that will excite people's minds in that way ought to be put in jail, or made to quit preaching such nonsense to the people. I hope to live to help enlighten the minds of the people and get that superstition out of their minds of an imaginary God and devil. I will close for this time.

Your Liberal friend, O. B. DAVIS.

[A very sensible letter. Our friend adds strength to the Liberal cause.—Ed. C. C.]

CLEONE, CAL., Feb. 15, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Seeing my letter in print gave me courage to write again. I will tell you about the storm we had here. It demolished a church and threw one off its foundation, leaving the saloons unharmed. That shows how much their God cares for their church. A friend gave me a book at Christmas, called "Rock of Ages." I suppose she was trying to convert me, but I am beyond conversion, and always intend to be. There are some people I know that are Liberals and are afraid to say so, but I'm not. There was a woman taken from a neighboring village to an insane asylum. She became insane over religion. She was always speaking of ascending to heaven. I will close now, as I'm afraid I'll take up too much space and will tire you with my letter. I remain,

A friend of THE TRUTH SEEKER,

OLGA FRITSCHIE.

P.S.—If some of the boys and girls will write to me, I will answer. O. F.

MUNCIE, IND., Feb. 17, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Esteemed Friend: This evening finds me pen in hand endeavoring to pen you a few lines.

I am still interested in the cause of freedom from superstition. I am living in the city of Muncie at present. Muncie is a thriving young city. The only trouble I can see is, it is like many other places in having too many churches. I have been in Muncie six months, and I can truthfully say I have been inside of but one church since I have been here, and I went there through curiosity, not for the love of the churches or their people. Muncie is awake to Freethought, but the people are afraid to open their mouths.

My cousin, J. E. Remsburg, is to give a lecture at Daleville, March 6th. I would like to attend, but do not know whether I can or not.

Papa is going to move to Muncie as soon as he can sell out at home.

Well, as time is precious, since I am away from home, I will have to close. Wishing you ever so much success, I remain,
Your Freethinking Friend,
ROSA REMSBURG.

SUGAR RUN, WARREN CO., PA.,

Feb. 16, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND YOUNG FOLKS OF THE CORNER: It has been a long time indeed since my name has appeared in the Corner, but I have not by any means forgotten the same. I never fail to read all communications and articles in this department. Sister Fanny has written a number of letters to the Corner, but for some reason or other has not felt inclined to write any lately. We were speaking about this last evening, and I told her I thought we should renew our acquaintance with the Corner and friends by a letter now and then, as perhaps others were entertained by our letters as we are with those we read of others.

I have not noticed any mention lately among the Cornerites concerning the Columbian Exposition. I presume though, nevertheless, each is making every calculation on being there. It will be a grand educator. This will be one chance in a lifetime perhaps, for many, and ought to be made the most of by those who are fortunate enough to attend. Here, instead of having to start out and travel the world over in order to become acquainted with that which we desire to see, all is to be brought to us. It will surely be a dazzling sight to those of us who have never had such a scene presented to our eyes before. I attended the Exposition of 1876, held in Philadelphia, but was too small to derive any benefit from it. But I intend to go to this great Exposition, see all there is to be seen, and derive knowledge therefrom. Boys and girls, one and all, make up your minds to attend this great Exposition, and let us go with the intention of learning all that we can.

Below us two miles and a half, at the little village of Kinzua, quite an excitement has prevailed for the last week owing to the appearance of one whom they call "the cowboy evangelist." A friend of mine who has heard him tells me that he has given the town a regular stirring-up. In his talks to the people he deplored the morals of the town, gave the preachers advice, and endeavored to stimulate the people to think a little for themselves. The Methodist divine, hearing he had a crowded house each night, and seeming to have fears for the ideas he might introduce, denounced him all the way around, and among other hard names, called him a "tramp." This the cowboy did not like. The next night after he heard he had been called this by the reverend gentleman he referred to it during his lecture, saying: "I am not a tramp."

I have never been given this name before. I have a wife and children in the West and I support them well and honestly. Any man who cares to can write on to my town and find out all about me, and he will find nothing to my discredit. If that man [referring to the minister] repeats in my hearing what he has said of me I'll take his scalp!"

I did not like some of the language I was told he used, such as the last of the above, but I think he was sufficiently provoked. Surely he is not any more of a tramp than most ministers. He asks no one to give toward the collection raised after each lecture who is not amply able. He has devoted his evenings to lectures, and in the afternoon has appeared in Western costume, showing how they use the lasso—this mainly for the entertainment of the children. In this town I speak of they are church-poor. They have a Methodist and an Episcopal church to support and are preparing to rebuild the Baptist edifice, which was burnt some time ago. All this in a town of some five hundred inhabitants.

I would like very much to have some good Liberal speaker come here again and give the people something new to listen to. They have been fed so long on the musty mouthings of eighteen hundred years ago that they have no idea, it would seem, that anything of more recent date has been prepared for listening ears. They go to church to be popular, because their mothers and fathers did, and to have some place to go, more than anything else, I think. I dare say no one of these church-goers has ever read the Bible through carefully. Had they, they might bring their reason to bear on the book and see that it was never written by any other than a designing, low people.

My letter grows long, I see; I must bring it to a close.

Miss Wixson and young folks of the Corner, accept my heartiest wishes for a bright and prosperous year.

MAUDE MONTAGU MORRISON.

[Thanks for interesting letter and renewed interest in the Corner, which, we trust, will never be lost. It is an encouraging fact to know that some of our brightest and stanchest young ladies and gentlemen have grown up, as it were, in this Corner of THE TRUTH SEEKER.—Ed. C. C.]

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impatched; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK. Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

Exposure

by

Ridicule.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts
Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page
Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

News of the Week.

MISS SADIE SPIELMAN, of Freeport, Ill., has lain for a week in a trance into which she fell in the excitement of a revival. Her recovery is doubtful.

At Cincinnati last Sunday a whole theatrical company was arrested for presuming to offer an entertainment in competition with the churches.

At Caldwell, Tex., a cyclone demolished the Methodist church. In Mississippi a similar storm blew a cow a mile and hurled her into a church through the roof.

At Berlin, Germany, Elise Bohndorff, a baker's wife, murdered her ten-year old son in a fit of religious mania. She says, "Evil spirits came and told me to do it, so I killed him."

PENNSYLVANIA has signified that it wishes to retain its Blue laws. On the 8th a bill legalizing the printing, sale, and delivery of Sunday newspapers was reported negatively from a legislative committee.

LEIGNITZ, Germany, which has always been a stronghold of Freethought, has elected Herr Jungfer, the Freethinking candidate, by a vote of 12,000 against 7,449 for the candidate of the anti-Semites.

Those who disfavor annexation of Canada are crying to the annexationists that they are following a course which will with scarce a doubt "involve Great Britain and the United States in one of the bloodiest wars in their history."

IN Ohio the elections are characterized by a rampant sectarian hostility between Catholics and Protestants. The latter have a strong organization, the American Protective Association, and are gaining the day. Sermons exposing Catholicism are numerous preached.

ROME is thronged with embassies from every part of the world to the pope's jubilee. There are special missions not only from the Catholic sovereigns, but also from Protestant rulers such as Emperor William of Germany and Queen Victoria, while the sultan of Turkey, the shah of Persia, the emperors of China and Japan, and a number of the maharajahs of India have sent envoys with costly gifts.

One thing deterring the local directory of the World's Fair from opening that exhibition with prayer is the difficulty of selecting a minister agreeable to all churches. Then, according to Director Lawrence, "prayers are not necessary." "We will open the Exposition," said he, "just as a store or bank is opened for business, and nobody ever heard of a store being opened for business with prayer."

IN Boston the annual report of the assessors shows that the total valuation of real property is nearly $1,100,000,000, of which $136,271,377 is exempt from taxation. A petition has been presented before the legislative committee for the taxation of church property. The statement of the assessors that the houses and land thus exempt represent a total of $14,757,800 was the cause of this agitation, which is to come again before the house in a few days.

TYNDALL, the famous scientist and champion of Freethought, says of Home Rule and its leader Gladstone: "A great political party, submerging its own judgment, follows an aged and erring man far more abjectly than pious Catholics follow the pope of Rome. He has had his years of sanity; he has dug his Suez canal; he has gone on to his Panama, but instead of wrecking himself upon the enterprise he is bent upon wrecking his country. An individual may go mad, but the wonder and amazement of the present situation is the faith-madness of a whole party. Argument is lost upon them. History is valueless. Experience goes for naught."

A MONTREAL dispatch says: "There are twenty thousand Orangemen in Canada who are actively, though secretly, preparing to help their brethren in Ulster should the Irish Home Rule bill pass. Orangemen here thoroughly believe that trouble from Catholic tyranny will occur in Ireland if the measure becomes law, and a prominent member of the Orange order in Quebec states that Orangemen are prepared to assist Ulster with money or with men if necessary. The different lodges all over the Dominion are in active correspondence, and a large sum of money is already subscribed. Negotiations have been opened with Australia, where there is a very large body of Ulster Protestants, and a contingent is promised from there to go to Ireland. One of the steamship companies here has been asked for rates for several thousand men. The Orange official who gave the information is employed on the Canadian Pacific railroad, and he says there are hundreds of men on that road eager to strike work and go to Ireland."

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page
Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND
OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Church Robbing the People.
Thanksgiving.
Sabbath Laws.
Children and the Church.
Woman and the Church.
The Church and Thomas Paine.
Studies in Natural History.
The Bible and Science.
The Clergy and Their Flocks.
Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
The Atonement Scheme.
The Lord and His Works.
Prayer.
The Creeds.
Christians and Mohammedans.

represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
Missionaries.
The Lord's Instruments.
Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
The Church and Slavery.
Priests and Politics.
Ireland and the Church.
Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Uses of the Cross.
Unkind Reflections on the Church.
Persecutions of the Church.
Some Allegories.
Heaven.
Hell.
Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
- 3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood. 25
- 4 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
- 5 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 15
- 6 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
- 7 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 10
- 8 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
- 9 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural and Portra. 25
- 10 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
- 11 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 12 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 13 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 14 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
- 15 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
- 16 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 17 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
- 18 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
- 19 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
- 20 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
- 21 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
- 22 Christianity. Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
- 23 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 24 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
- 25 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
- 26 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 27 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 28 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
- 29 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. C. Watts. 10
- 30 Science and Bible Antagonism. C. Watts. 5
- 31 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 5
- 32 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
- 33 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 10

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
- 2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 3 201 Questions Without Answers. 5
- 4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
- 5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
- 6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
- 7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
- 8 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
- 9 New Life of Jacob. 5
- 10 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
- 11 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
- 12 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H. 10
- 13 Lucicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
- 14 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 15 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 16 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 17 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 18 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 19 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.
One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of O. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for "blasphemy." Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERATION.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents.

CIVIL RIGHTS SPEECH.

With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE. A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9 x 13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22 x 28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN.

(A home picture.) 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 18 x 24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7½ x 13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT.

An Interview on their Comparative Merits and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents.

INGERSOLL ON MCGLYNN.

Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED. Paper, 3 cents. BIBLE IDOLATRY. Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1883. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE.

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1892. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Union at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings.

This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,357 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This is, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly calendered, and richly tinted; the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it. As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "tributes" that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Eliza Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Besides these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help to serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In the more elegant styles of binding it is eminently suited for presentation purposes, for any season or occasion.

Prices.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. E. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50.

For sale at THIS OFFICE.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN;

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as ever George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentation of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.]

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing." In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

DID JESUS RISE FROM THE DEAD?

The evidence for the resurrection is in this book carefully considered, and found wanting. It ought to convince every Christian of the untruthfulness of this alleged miracle, for it is certainly one of the best essays ever written on the subject. In paper, 25 cents.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attitudes at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for $30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinker's Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. 10 cents

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—

1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature: A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Mommie; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtree; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Olcott; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Miller; Signals with Mars: A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 83 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. 10 cents

Gems of Thought.

I WOULD rather die than be eternally tormented by the dread of losing my liberty upon the most trifling complaint.—Voltaire.

THE human body is a modified animal form; the soul of man is but an animal soul, raised by involution to a certain power.—Burmeister.

VOLTAIRE gave the best years of his wondrous life to succor the oppressed, to shield the defenseless, to reverse infamous decrees, to rescue the innocent, to reform the laws of France, to do away with torture, to soften the hearts of priests, to enlighten judges, to instruct kings, to civilize the people, and to banish from the heart of man the love and lust of war.—Ingersoll.

MAN has no absolute superiority over the brute; all his advantages are more or less of a mere comparative nature. There is no intellectual capacity which belongs solely and exclusively to man; it is only the greater strength and the higher development of these capacities which give him his great and marvelous superiority over the brute. But the reason why these capacities are greater and more developed in man is to be sought partly in the higher and more perfect development of his organ of thought, and partly in the absolute change wrought in the conditions of life by his erect posture, in the different way in which he uses his fore-limbs, and in the fact of his possessing articulate speech. But just as it is possible to show in the physical development of the organ of thought an uninterrupted scale of gradual development from the lowest animal to the highest human being, so a similar ascent of psychical and mental properties in ever-rising development may be found in him. Neither morphology, nor chemistry, nor macroscopy, nor microscopy is capable of discovering an essential difference between human and animal brains; great though the differences may be, they are after all but differences of degree.—Büchner.

THE history which I have traced in the present chapter naturally leads to some reflections on the ultimate consequences of the Rationalistic method of investigation as distinguished from the system of coercion. The question, What is truth? has certainly no prospect of obtaining a speedy answer; but the question, What is the spirit of truth? may be discussed with much greater prospect of agreement. By the spirit of truth, I mean that frame of mind in which men who acknowledge their fallibility, and who desire above all things to discover what is true, should adjudicate between conflicting arguments. As soon as they have distinctly perceived that reason, and reason alone, should determine their opinions, that they never can be legitimately certain of the truth of what they have been taught till they have both examined its evidence and heard what can be said against it, and that any influence that introduces a bias of the will is necessarily an impediment to inquiry, the whole theory of persecution falls at once to the ground. For the object of the persecutor is to suppress one portion of the elements of discussion; it is to determine the judgment by an influence other than reason; it is to prevent that freedom of inquiry which is the sole method we possess of arriving at truth.—Lecky.

EVOLUTION is strongly supported by observation of the development of separate organs of the body. Thus the present horse is proved to have developed from a five-toed animal. As far back as we can go we find animal forms changing by slow degrees. Analogy teaches that this has always been the order of nature. By these evidences from fossils, Huxley declares: "The evolution of many existing forms of animal life from their predecessors is no longer an hypothesis, but an historical fact." The horse has changed the structure of his feet to conform to altered circumstances that make it desirable for him to possess speed. By natural selection and the survival of the fittest, the variations toward the present hoof have been preserved. All the organs of the body are traced upward in gradual stages from the simplest beginnings. A favorite appeal for the special-creation theory is to point to the marvelous structure of the human eye. But the eye, brain, heart, lungs, limbs, and digestive organs are found in different animals in conditions that show a gradual ascent in structure, from the merest suggestion of the organ to its most perfect form. From the air-bladder of the fish to the lungs of man we have an ascending series of forms, and in the mud-fish, that spends half the year in dry mud and half the year in water, we find the transition from the bladder to the lung—another "missing link." Scales and feathers are developments of the skin, and in the penguin can be seen the intermediate forms, half scale and half feather.—Adams.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JAMES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE: How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system; the nature of mind. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY: Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state; development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKELTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY: Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS: How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JAMES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JAMES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archaeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the Pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELTON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetishism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS. development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKELTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wages system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUNG: The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker. Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY, No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMIRA DRAKE SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Do Your Own PRINTING.

Card Press $3. Size for circulars or small newspaper $22. Saves you money and makes money printing for neighbors. Full printed instructions. Send stamp for catalogue of presses, type, cards, etc., to the factory. KELSEY & CO., Meriden, Connecticut.

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc. Get a profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also Lanterns for Home Amusements. 26 page Catalogue free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and reports free. Prompt attention. Send drawing and description to T. RAGAN & CO., Attys. Washington, D.C.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N.J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABLETS.

THE TENDER MERCIES OF THE LORD.

And I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.—Jere. xix, 9.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's
ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

INFIDEL
DEATH-BEDS.

By
G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Oloetz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabalais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.
By John R. Kelso, A.M.
12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.25.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

VALUABLE ENGLISH
PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Zoological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John W. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshipped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 895 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Landaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

HAND-BOOK
OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.25.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 12. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 25, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

CHRISTIANITY AND SOME OF HER STOLEN RUBBISH.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernst Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cells, Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.
CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism I. peached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique of Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.
Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. Gould. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.
Price, 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.
By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."
Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.
Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.
By EDGAR C. BEALL.
Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.
Unanswerable. Price, $1.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.
By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.
Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.
A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.
Price, 10 cents.

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK. Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

Exposure

by

Ridicule.

By WATSON HESTON.

Exposure

by

Facts.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts
Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page
Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFUL-
NESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFIT-CENT INSTITUTION, AND RE-VEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page
Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND OPINIONS OF SCHOL-ARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF
THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF
THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

26 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
3 " The Church Robbing the People.
3 " Thanksgiving.
3 " Sabbath Laws.
34 " Children and the Church.
30 " Woman and the Church.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
4 " Studies in Natural History.
2 " The Bible and Science.
15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4 " The Atonement Scheme.
4 " The Lord and His Works.
3 " Prayer.
10 " The Creeds.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
5 " Missionaries.
1 " The Lord's Instruments.
25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1 " The Church and Slavery.
2 " Priests and Politics.
4 " Ireland and the Church.
1 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
4 " The Uses of the Cross.
1 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9 " Persecutions of the Church.
3 " Some Allegories.
6 " Heaven.
7 " Hell.
7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker

New Publications.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, ---- $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

INFIDEL DEATH- BEDS.

By
G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian legends upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Doleat, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendreau, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. 5
4 Underwood. 25
5 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
6 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 15
7 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
8 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 10
9 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
10 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait. 25
11 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
12 I and Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
13 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
14 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
15 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
16 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
17 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
18 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
19 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
20 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
21 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
22 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
23 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
24 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
25 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
26 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
27 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
28 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
29 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
30 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts. 10
31 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 5
32 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
33 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
3 209 Questions Without Answers. 5
4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
8 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
9 New Life of Jacob. 5
10 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
11 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
12 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H. 10
13 Luridous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
14 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
15 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
16 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
17 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
18 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
19 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

Orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 12. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 25, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - MARCH 25, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Christianity and Meteorology.

A brief history of the relations between Christianity and the science of meteorology may prove instructive. The relations between Christianity and one of the matters dealt with by meteorological science, namely comets, we not long ago recounted; omitting that, we will now treat the connection between that religion and the other subject-matters of meteorology, or the science of the phenomena of the air, viz., rain and absence of rain, wind, thunder and lightning, and to some degree heat and cold.

Previous to the rise of Christianity, in the civilizations of Greece and Rome, a scientific view of the phenomena of the air had taken birth. In Greece, philosophers of the Ionic school made many essays to explain them on lines of observation and natural law. Of these rational theorists, Plato and Aristotle are the most eminent. In Rome, Lucretius, Pliny, Seneca, and others did suggestive and germinant work in the same line.

But these beneficent labors were terminated by the overthrow of the ancient civilization by Christianity. This baneful religion, gaining the aid of the governmental power, suppressed the ancient schools and doctrines, and substituted therefor a "sacred science" derived from scripture. Into the task of building this sacred science the early fathers, the founders of the Christian church, threw themselves with zeal. Tertullian, proceeding upon the authority of several scriptural texts, as interpreted by him, laid down, as to the nature of lightning, that it is identical with hell-fire. This opinion was held in reverence for centuries, being further fortified by the sulphurous smell noticed during some thunderstorms. St. Hilarion distinguished himself by his inquiries into the nature of the "firmament." This thing called "the firmament" was a great shell or screen supposed by the biblically instructed to overlie the earth and its atmosphere. It was composed of some firm substance, and supported the waters which when occasionally gushing through constituted rain. In this great roof the stars were conceived to be stuck, and their motion was probably caused by its turning. The view of St. Hilarion on this contrivance was that it was situated at a considerable distance below heaven, the residence of God. And to this valuable intelligence he added that its use was not only that of upbearing the waters, but of tempering our atmosphere. St. Ambrose, by the help of that volume which, we all know from the assurances of preachers, we should study day and night, arrived at the conclusion that the winds breaking through this solid vault are what cause thunder; quoting from the prophet Amos the language (not in our version) respecting "Him that establisheth the thunders." In setting forth the distance of the heavens from this firmament, as well as some other particulars regarding those localities, he calls in St. Paul's epistle to the Corinthians, and Psalm cxlviii. Sundry wights having taken it into their heads to inquire why the waters don't slide off the spherical upper side of the firmament, especially if it revolves, he reminds them that we do not know that the upper side is spherical. He adds that if it does revolve the water is just what is wanted to cool and lubricate its axis. Next enters St. Jerome, his intelligent eye fixed upon Ezek. i, 22, about some crystal or other being stretched above cherubim. This crystal stretched over these plumpy creatures Jerome says is one of two bodies of water that God established, being the upper layer, which, that it might remain firm, the Lord froze into ice.

The germinal principle in accordance with which all these theories were developed, was clearly proclaimed to the world by St. Augustine in that famous deliverance, "Nothing is to be accepted save on the authority of scripture, since greater is that authority than all the powers of the human mind." No treatise was safe thereafter which did not breathe the spirit and conform to the letter of this maxim. So says Ex-president A. D. White of Cornell University in his valuable treatise on "The Warfare of Science" in the Popular Science Monthly. From this writer, Professor White, we will quote another sentence, worth marking by our readers: "Following this precept, St. Augustine developed, in every field, theological views of science which hav never led mankind to a single truth—which, without exception, have forced mankind away from the truth, and have caused Christendom to stumble for centuries into abysses of error and sorrow."

Coming to the sixth century, we find the theological conception of the heavens and their ongoings still further elaborated by Cosmas Indicopleustes. Grounding on the ninth chapter of Hebrews, he affirms the earth to be flat, and possessed of walls at the edges which rise and upbear the roof or firmament. He finds in the reference to the firmament in Genesis, and the allusion in Ps. cxlviii, 4, to "the waters that be above the heavens," evidence that over the earth rise solid arches bearing a vault, closing in the earth, and supporting a vast cistern which contains the waters. From the expression in Gen. vii, 11, regarding "the windows of heaven" he discovers that rain is produced by angels opening certain windows in the firmament. In describing the extensive reception which this view gained, we will turn again to the language of Andrew D. White: "This was accepted by the universal church as a vast contribution to thought; for over a thousand years it was the orthodox doctrine; and various leaders in theology devoted themselves to developing and supplementing it."

The next notable addition to biblical meteorology is that of Isidore, bishop of Seville. This prelate was accounted the ablest of his age, and was after death made a saint. He objects to the prevailing view as to the situation of "the waters above the firmament." These much-debated fluids must, he contends, though lower than the uppermost heaven, be higher than the lower heaven, for in Ps. cxlviii they are mentioned, though after the "heaven of heavens," yet before the terrestrial elements.

Upon their purpose, he modestly refrains from pronouncing whether they were stored by God for use at Noah's flood, or designed to temper the heat of the heavenly bodies. And scriptural science, sad to say, loses much also through his inability to decide whether the firmament envelops the earth "like an eggshell," or is spread over it "like a curtain;" as the passage in Ps. civ may be taken to indicate either.

About a century later there appeared another of the most famous of the theological men of science. This was the Venerable Bede. He conceives the firmament to be spherical, of a fine and fiery mettle. The upper heavens, containing the angels, have been tempered with ice, that the lower elements may not be inflamed thereby. On the waters above the firmament he delivers the so precious view: "Some declare that they were stored there for the deluge, but others, more correctly, that they are intended to temper the fire of the stars." Whosoever at the present day wishes, as a good Christian, thoroughly to discipline himself in the teachings of the originators of his religion, will hail with joy a discovery made by this Bede regarding the air. He finds that there are two kinds of air. He has marked the seventh and eighth verses of Ps. cxlviii, where "fire and hail, snow and vapors and stormy winds," are enjoined to praise the Lord from the earth. This makes it clear that the air with which we are conversant, full of these coarse exhalations and disturbances, comes from the earth; while as it is not supposable that God with his angels and angelets dwell in any but the very choicest and purest air, it is evident that in the heavens there exists a kind of air of a quality different altogether. A further contribution of Bede to science, for which all not wedded to the modern profane and heretical science will express obligations, is the doctrine that the firmament is made of ice. This view rests for proof upon that book which clergymen so often assure us is the source of all our civilization and science, for saith not Job xxvi, 8: "He bindeth up the waters in his thick cloud, and the cloud is not rent under them?"

In a pamphlet published after the time of this Venerable—or unvenerable—Bede, and falsely ascribed to him, an endeavor is made to get new light on the source of the waters above the heavens, the chief scriptural text made use of being that describing the sheaf containing the animals let down from heaven, in the vision of St. Peter (Acts x, 11, 12).

Of the hosts of laborers in this work of deducing a system of science from the Bible, the next who merits special mention is Rabanus Maurus, archbishop of Mayence. He starts from the first chapter of Genesis; in reviewing the ancient philosophers scrupulously avoids everything not in accord with scripture; follows particularly Isidore and Bede, and gives especial pains to confirming Bede's teaching that the firmament is given strength enough to hold up "the waters above the heavens" by being made of ice.

These three theological scientists, Isidore, Bede, and Maurus, were unquestioned authorities for centuries. By means of innumerable catechisms and manuals their notions were implanted in the minds of the European people.

The development of scripture-founded meteorological science continued under the labors of John of San Geminiano, Albert the Great, Vincent of Beauvais, Bartholomew of Glanville, and William of Conches, with a multitude of minor monkish encyclopedists.

At this period the writings of Aristotle had become very popular, and it is interesting to witness the embarrassment of the theologians in their desire to reconcile the scripture with the expressions of this really great Grecian scientific thinker. In the case of the rainbow, for instance, Aristotle, proceeding upon observation and reasoning alone, had produced a theory very nearly the one of today; and the Christians who were now growing so to admire him in the revival of his works wished to follow him, but here they were met plump by the antagonistic scriptural statement that God created the rainbow as a sign to Noah that there should not be another flood. They were brought to a standstill and prevented from embracing the truth. Even the bold-thinking cardinal Pierre d'Ailly, by whose speculations upon the shape of the earth Columbus was afterward stimulated, was forced to halt in his research before this plain declaration of scripture, admitting that God alone could explain the seeming contradiction; but he could not leave the subject without suggesting that possibly never before the deluge had a cloud been permitted to take such a position toward the sun as to occasion a rainbow.

In these learned explanations, earthquakes were not forgotten. These phenomena, it was expounded, are caused by winds issuing from the earth; this view being sapiently based on Ps. cxxxv, 7: "He bringeth the wind out of his treasures."

Of this sort were the meteorological theories built by theological writers, in accord with scriptural texts, for nearly fourteen centuries. Such were the rubbishy and crazy notions on which the youth of each generation during this period were directed to concentrate their mental efforts, to the exclusion of the real knowledge of which they stood in need, and of which we yet so stand in need, for the preservation and comfort of life. Such were the puerilities and imbecilities to suppress rivalry with which every clear-seeing searcher for the truth, and proclaimer of it, was persecuted or destroyed. We now gaze on the frantic endeavors of our clergy to subject all other systems of thought and teaching to their own system derived from the Bible, and we surmise that had they the power for which they so wildly strive they would by force silence all other teachings and fill the world with their worthless own; in the account which we have given, then, we see them when they actually did have that power, and did crush out the would-be teachers of the true ideas, and did fill and confuse and bedevil the world with their own. Abominable is the scene, grievous the consequence, and great the need that we now fight their efforts to repeat it.

But this is only a beginning of the subject. We have reprobated the waste of mental effort which the false teaching entailed, and the persecution of the true investigators; but we have yet to consider another branch of the matter—the application in individual cases of the doctrine that the phenomena of the weather are caused by supernatural means. Each particular feature of the weather in every neighborhood, as storm, wind, heat, or drouth, was attributed either to God, or to Satan and his agents. Ascriptions of them to God, caused what was comparatively but a moderate amount of harm; but ascriptions of them to Satan and his agents bred persecutions of the persons fancied to be these agents, and under the designation of witches, wizards, sorcerers, hundreds of thousands upon hundreds of thousands of innocent beings perished by deaths almost too horrible for description. To induce belief that we do not exaggerate, we will proffer the dictum of the before-mentioned Ex-president White of Cornell University, a gentleman of profound learning and balanced judgment: "Never, perhaps, in the modern world has there been a dogma more prolific of physical, mental, and moral agony throughout whole nations and during whole centuries."

This will form the subject of an article in our next issue.

Mrs. Mattie Krekel desires to hear from people and societies in Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana in regard to lectures during the spring months. Her address is care L. M. Parry, 1101 Charlotte street, Kansas City, Mo.

Public Opinion Can Force Open the Fair Gates Sundays.

If the opinion of the majority of our people, which we know is for opening the World's Fair Sundays, be strongly manifested, it will effect that opening despite the legislation that has been secured by the minority of bigots. There is considerable talk of going ahead and opening the Exposition regardless of that legislation. The bringing of suit thereupon by the national Congress would be qualified, or prevented altogether, by popular sentiment. The Congressmen do not seem disposed to continue farther in this case their pandering to the pietists.

Then, a bill has been introduced in the Illinois legislature to open on Sunday the building of that state in the Exposition. This bill is undoubtedly within the competency of that body to enact. Supposing that the bill passes, it will be necessary that the gates of the Fair shall be opened on Sunday in order to make the Illinois building accessible. The Exposition company, as an Illinois corporation, is bound to obey the laws of the state. When it has opened the gates the Fair will not be closed to the public, and it will be legally a matter of no consequence whether or not the buildings are opened to the public, for the condition imposed by Congress will already have been violated. What is Congress going to do about it? The United States, as we have said, might perhaps sue the company either for the recovery of the amount of the appropriation or for the return of the specific half dollars issued in aid of the Fair. But apparently it would be a complete defense to such a suit for the company to answer that it was prevented by the laws of the state from which it derived its charter from carrying out the will of Congress and closing the Fair on Sunday. In that case, the United States would be left without remedy, unless it might be against the state of Illinois. As a matter of fact it is not likely that a suit would be brought.

It is clearly evident that if Freethought possessed the faculty of prompt and efficient action which its numbers would lead one to expect, the execrable Sunday closing could even now be surely prevented. As it is, let us all do what we can.

Russia Is Holy Enough, But Not Just Enough, for the United States.

Our government is considering the ratification of an extradition treaty with Russia. That land of Christianity and barbarism, of tyranny and famine, proposes that among the classes of fugitive criminals which shall be made returnable by our authorities there shall be included the class of perpetrators of violence against the governing power. There are, however, special reasons why we should be cautious about turning over to the Russian government persons who may be charged with attempting the life of its sovereign.

We have learned much in the last few years as to what accusations by the Russian government against its own subjects may mean and by what kind of processes they may be supported. Under the Russian penal code any person giving shelter to those guilty of conspiracy against the czar, or knowing of their designs and failing to report them, is subject to the same penalty. Under Russian law and the method of administering it that prevails, almost anything in the way of political agitation hostile to the existing government may be constructed as an attempt upon the life of the czar. Suppose a demand should be made for the surrender of a person charged with this offense. The case upon which the demand was based would be made by the Russian government as the result of a preliminary inquest, after the manner of that country in dealing with persons charged with that particular crime. It might rest upon the testimony of police agents, and the proceedings might be conducted in secret, with none of the forms and safeguards of what we are wont to regard as judicial procedure. It is safe to say that no reliance could be placed upon the evidence presented, and that a prima facie case of attempt upon the life of the czar might be made out against a man whose real offense was purely political, even if it was what in this country could be regarded as any offense at all. Precedents cited by the Russian-American League in its protest tend to show that there would be no assurance that the accused would receive any trial at all, or that he would not be condemned upon charges wholly different from those upon which extradition was secured.

A country which honors George Washington should not take part in chastising patriotic resisters of a tyranny a hundred times more outrageous than that against which he rebelled.

At a late meeting in New York city to protest against the treaty, Colonel Ingersoll was announced to speak, but was unable to appear. His words of censure of Russian despotism are well known. John Swinton at this meeting referred to the treaty as between those two nations "the infernal Russia and the more or less infernal United States." The treaty, he declared, "is un-American in principle and purpose—it is the handiwork of the czar. And who is this czar? A tyrant who belongs in the category of monsters. And yet with his character so well known he has his defenders in this country, as Nero and Caligula have found defenders. The chief of these is a long-necked, lantern-jawed hypocrite of Brooklyn—T. DeWitt Talmage. He went all the way to Russia, and came back to tell what a good time he had. He had a good time with the czar and comes back to stick up for his dear friend." Thaddeus B. Wakeman said that the treaty was a disgrace to American civilization. If the czar should be assassinated, he said, the man who did the deed should "take his place in the pantheon of liberty."

No, Holy Russia is not on such a level of civilization and justice that she is a compatible party in an extradition treaty with the United States. The land of devotion, prayer, saint, shrine, relic, and religious compulsion would not be a meet partner for this country which is, as is so often deplored, so sunk in the horrid slough and mire of degraded infidelity.

The lecture of Colonel Ingersoll on Shakspeare two weeks ago was marked by a pleasing incident. The concluding portion of the oration was what in other speakers would be a "peroration," with him just a little longer-continued shower of gems of speech, a veritable rainfall of verbal diamonds. The close found the audience listening intently, unconscious of anything but the orator's thought. The colonel had closed and disappeared from the stage before they drew breath. When they realized that the speech was done, they broke into applause. Those who had recovered quicker and got up from their seats paused in putting on their coats and joined. The big crowd insisted on seeing the speaker again, and not until he came out and waved a good-night to them would they leave the theater. It was a charming tribute. They had forgotten to applaud at the proper time so breathlessly did they follow the orator, but they wouldn't be cheated out of the chance to show their appreciation.

It gives us malicious pleasure to say what follows this inquiry:

"ANDOVER, KAN., March 12, 1893.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER, Dear Sir: Have ———, of Chicago, the right to publish what is called 'Great Speeches of Ingersoll Complete?' Please answer in THE TRUTH SEEKER if convenient.

"Yours with kind regards, J. AND A. M. WOLF."

They have no more right—moral or legal—to publish them than they have to take money from Colonel Ingersoll's pocket. Mr. Ingersoll's books are copyrighted; he has selected his publisher, Mr. C. P. Farrell; they are the product of his own genius, and belong to him to do with as he sees fit. And the illicit publication is an outrage in more than a pecuniary sense. To evade the copyright, the lectures are reprinted from imperfect newspaper reports, full of errors, misleading in general and particulars, full of reporter's blunders—failures to catch sentences and to comprehend meanings—a butchered, bastard edition which in no way represents or does justice to the author. Colonel Ingersoll's friends should never buy them, on this account, if on no other. They are piratical plunder.

In the Sunny South.

News and Notes.

On the banks of the Indian river—and a lovely view extends for leagues away. The broad sheet of water is four miles wide, and the far banks are luminous in the gorgeous morning light. Groves of palmetto, oak, and hickory stretch on either shore. For seventy-five miles this river is straight as an arrow, and as you speed along its bosom the most beautiful sceneries succeed, soft and enchanting. It is like a vast smooth floor; there is nothing rugged, no hills or mountains are seen, no towering rocks or wild, precipitous valleys. It is entirely different from the great West, with its immense and wonderful pictures of high and dale. Vast level spaces roll afar with great expanses of water, delightful and bloomy woods, the golden orange twinkling in the green depths. The cloudless blue spreads above, or thin flakes of mighty brightness float over its shining dome. The cyclone thunders far away and the drifted snow covers the pathways of the North, but here it is like summer's march. The gay boats dash up and down the river, merry visitors throng the arching groves, wandering in fragrant shadows along the banks of the glittering stream.

I am at Sebastian, the home of Capt. R. A. Hardee, away down the river, on the outskirts of civilization, where a little while ago it was a wilderness, and the panther and the deer roamed where now the garden blooms and the schoolhouse is filled with the music of children. I am having a good rest, with a jolly pioneer company, on the verge of still untraveled wastes.

Yesterday I sailed away in the beautiful yacht Rosalind, with its owner, Robert W. Hardee, over to the peninsula and Pelican island. The Rosalind is a famous craft and has won many a prize for speed, and is indeed a beauty, and answers to the wind with buoyant grace and sweeps over the water faster than any river steamer. We land at the ranch of Captain Spratt, and here I partake of ripe tomatoes, ready for the market. The raising of tomatoes and beans for the early season is quite a remunerative industry in this section. From $300 to $400 an acre is sometimes cleared. You wouldn't think that this white, sandy soil would produce anything, but it proves on cultivation to be quite productive. Lands which one wouldn't have taken as a gift a few years ago are now worth hundreds of dollars an acre. The pine-apple is produced abundantly, and those who started in a few years ago with hardly any capital, except these apparently barren lands, have now an income of from $10,000 to $15,000 per annum. For any man who is willing to work there is a chance still. The pine-apple, orange, and lemon are sources of wealth to one who puts brain and muscle into his work. But it won't do for a lazy or ignorant man to try his luck. Even "saints' perseverance" would not do. It must be downright human toil—and the less prayers the better. You must get down on your knees sure, but to pick tomatoes and beans, and not to beg or thank God.

Captain Spratt guided us through a wild devious trail of a mile or more in length, beneath the tall palmettos and spreading oaks, to the ocean on the other side, and as we came out of the vast forest upon the shining beach a most magnificent view burst upon our dazzled eyes. The illimitable ocean—the Atlantic, blue and calm as a lake in the mountains—spread along the sky, and in the far circling horizon sea and sky mingled in silvery splendor; while for miles along the smooth beach the white breakers dashed in mellow music, and with ever advancing and retreating ranks.

Through the beautiful winding pathway we return to the banks of Indian river, and then in a small boat journey over to wild desolate Pelican island, wild and desolate and strange from the standpoint of man, but wonderfully alive, indeed a regular metropolis, from the pelican point of view. This is the city of the pelicans, a weird and wondrous city. All over the island flock the pelicans, battalions in the sky, circling far around, battalions on the water, a regiment I should think—battalions on the island, on the trees and rocks. We landed and roamed amidst these ten thousand voracious birds, who swallow a fish whole and digest him with ease; who carry fish in paunches along their necks; who can eat anything, it seems. They look as if they were formed merely to be an eating machine with their enormous mouths, long necks, and bodies like india-rubber, that could stretch to any capacity and take in a shark almost at one fell swoop. I never was in such a company before. They looked at me with strange solemn gaze. They assumed all sorts of grotesque attitudes. There were the eggs just hatching. There were the little pelicans hardly able to move, no bigger than a chicken, and not a feather on them, skin as bare as a pebble. Then there were the young pelicans, who could walk in most awkward fashion, but could not fly. Then there were the old pelicans, with colored necks, who floated majestically through the air. On the side of the island where we landed were small stunted trees, and on every tree there were from four to a dozen pelicans. On the other side of the island was a broad smooth space. This was like the parade-ground in the midst of a camp of soldiers; and here it seemed as if a whole brigade were in battle array, surging in serried ranks, while the neighboring waters were covered as with a fleet. I shall not soon forget my visit to this unique island. To be the companion of ten thousand pelicans at once is a rare experience. And the pelican is such a curiosity, and it is a wonder how such a bird ever came into existence. He is such an absurd bird, all mouth and all stomach, mounted on a pair of long legs, with long wings. He is made for nothing else but to swallow. Nature must have been in an awfully funny humor when she concocted the pelican. To think of an infinitely wise God making the pelican is something that I couldn't swallow even if I had the mouth of a pelican. Come to think of it, I guess the pelican is nature's symbolic caricature for the theologian. The theologian can swallow anything, so can the pelican. Nature, foreseeing the folly of humanity, made the pelican to match the theologian. To see this bird sitting upon a tree with bowed beak, closed eyes, and folded wings, reminds one very much in its utter solemnity of a clergyman. Clothed in pontifical robes, the pelican would make a first-class priest.

Since writing my last "News and Notes" I have lectured at Titusville, Rockledge, and Sebastian, and have had somewhat varied experiences. I had a fine audience in the Opera House at my second lecture at Titusville, Wednesday, March 8th—more than double what I had on the first evening. On Thursday Captain Hardee and myself take the cars for Rockledge. We are welcomed to the hospitable home of Senator Hardee, the captain's brother. This is a lovely place in the midst of palmetto and oak trees, fronting the river, which glitters through the spacious branches as you sit in the cool of the evening on the wide veranda, while the music of the piano pleasantly fills the air. Senator Hardee is a famous orange-grower. He ships about ten thousand boxes a year of the finest oranges in the market. It is quite a sight to watch the gathering and the grading and the sorting of the fruit so that oranges of the same quality and size are put into the same box. They use 1 to bundle oranges all together, good, bad, and indifferent. But now they are most carefully selected and packed so that the buyer can pay his money and take his choice. Most of this selecting is done by an ingenious contrivance. The oranges are rolled along by machinery.

At a certain point they drop into a receptacle, if of smaller size. If larger they keep rolling and dropping, until five different sizes are thus selected, ranging from ninety-six to two hundred oranges to a box. This is a busy season for the orange-growers, and during this fair weather they are rushing things lively.

Rockledge is a brilliant place; wealth and fashion congregate here. The hotels are elegant and crowded to the utmost capacity. Bands of music are playing. People wander in the gaily lighted groves. It is not much of a place for a Freethought lecture though. These people are rich and come here to enjoy life, and in a formal way are generally Christians; or if they are not Christians they have too much money and pleasure on hand to do any hard thinking. I find one good Liberal, however, among these luxurious crowds, D. A. Blodgett, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who attends the lecture, does his best to advertise it, and generously aids. I have a pretty good audience, but had hoped for more, seeing that there were nearly a thousand visitors from the North.

Friday morning with Captain Hardee I take a drive over the country. The roads are dreadful—sandy, sandy, sandy—and you can only walk the horse for miles. When you get off from the river the land is pretty wild and waste. Most of the traveling in this country is done by boats and the residences are along the river, and the highways in the backwoods are not kept in very good condition. About noon we strike the river road and here the journey is delightful, between the water and the groves. Our destination is Faber's, and this is a handsome place fronting the river, with orange groves about it. Lawrence Faber is an old resident, and sturdy Liberal all the time. He and Captain Hardee were the only ones a few years ago to openly stand for Freethought, but now Liberals can be counted by the dozen. Faber came here in 1866—almost the first one on the river. Since then he has seen a wonderful growth and has made for himself and family—all Liberals—an attractive home. His brother came with him at the same time and is also in our ranks.

Returning from Faber's we take boat at Cocoa, a mile this side of Rockledge, for Sebastian, where we arrive at 1 o'clock on Saturday morning, and here I have been up to date.

The Methodists heard that the Infidel was coming and arranged at once for a protracted meeting, with three services on Sunday. I was to be here morning, afternoon, and evening, besides every week-day evening. The plan was to shut out the Infidel altogether and give him no chance. I met the clergyman—a slim young fellow dressed in clerical costume—at Hardee's store. I was introduced to him. He turned somewhat pale. Captain Hardee immediately tackled him to arrange for a kind of union meeting. But the minister objected to this. He couldn't join hands with an Infidel. Finally, it was arranged that I should speak in the hall at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, after the minister had finished his 3 o'clock service. After a while, the "brethren," having consulted together, decided that this wasn't just the thing, and informed Captain Hardee that I had better speak in the schoolhouse. Now, the minister heretofore had declared that the schoolhouse was not good enough for him, being a rude log shanty. But of course it was good enough for the Infidel. Captain Hardee said that Jesus had been in worse places than the schoolhouse and undoubtedly the Infidel could speak in it, even if the Christian could not; but as he had secured the use of the hall after 3 o'clock, we would take the hall. Out of good nature Captain Hardee and myself and other Liberals attended the morning and afternoon services, hoping that the Christians would extend to us a like courtesy. But the very moment the minister pronounced the benediction for the afternoon services and Captain Hardee introduced me as the Freethought lecturer, how the Christians did hustle for the door. The minister was the first to strike it, I think, and he disappeared with lightning-like rapidity and his flock tumbled after, as if the devil was upon them. They evidently felt that they must flee from the wrath to come. Not one remained to consider the other side. My subject was "Common Sense," but they didn't want common sense at all. Their faith might be shattered. I lectured on Monday evening also and had twice as many present in the schoolhouse as the minister had in the hall. So the "protracted meeting" became a rather "distracted" meeting before it closed. In fact, the minister was sick on Sunday night and couldn't preach.

I lecture to-morrow (Wednesday, March 15th) at Cocoa. Mr. C. W. Wells and other Liberal friends of Tampa have given me a cordial invitation to come to that city, but my limited time forbids. My short experience in Florida has convinced me that I should find a good welcome throughout this state, and I hope to return and spend a longer time in this sunny land.

Dr. Wilson, Stephen Geiger, Robert Morrow, and Captain Penny are among the friends at Titusville who have not been afraid to lend a hand.

Besides the Faber brothers at Rockledge and vicinity and Senator Hardee are Allen Hardee, Charlie Schoonemaker, Frank Wooten, Captain Stewart, Mr. Patterson, and others who stand by the colors.

Captain Hardee, at Cocoa, gave bills announcing the lecture to a young man of his acquaintance to distribute. He promised to do so. When we arrived it was found that not a single bill had been given out. The young fellow in excuse said to Captain Hardee: "Uncle Bob, I thought it was a sin to distribute those bills and so I didn't do it." What a conscience the Christian has. It was no sin to break his promise and violate friendship. But it was a sin to give people a chance to attend a Liberal lecture. What mean tricks Christians can do for the glory of God.

R. G. Hardee, Captain Hardee's son, Henry Wilson, John Harris, Charlie and Henry Park, the Creigel brothers, Ed. Holmes, D. P. Gibson, Henry Howard, make up the Liberal and sturdy host of Sebastian among whom I have spent these days of rest and pleasure—a good frontier band. A campaign with them is sure of success.

Mrs. Emma Hardee, the captain's wife, is a thorough Liberal, and gives pleasant hospitality to the Pilgrim of Freethought, and so this visit to the Indian river country has been a most delightful one indeed.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Sebastian, March 14, 1893.

Science and Progress.

The Ghoul Census.

The anti-French faction of Spain is trying to demonstrate that the ancient Iberians, the aborigines of the peninsula, had nothing in common with the Celts, but formed a branch of a distinct race represented by the modern Basques. There may not be many Gauls in Spain, but it is a sad fact there are still some 320,000 tonsured ghouls, and that the country population continues to hug the hideous bloodsuckers.

Mother Saga.

A century seems sufficient to shroud the heroes of history in a mantle of myths. Near Matsuma, on the island of Yesso, Japan, Professor Eberlein came across a fireside orator who, among other marvels of the past, mentioned the career of the Paladin Napoleon, his wonderful success in slaying ogers and tyrants, and his still more miraculous end, when his enemies tried to chain him to a rock and the sea-nymphs snatched him away and carried him in triumph to their marine fairy-castle. The abbé Genlis, indeed, predicted that future generations would doubt the existence of the marvelous Corsican altogether and attempt to identify his biography with the myth of the sun-god Apollo, who likewise was born on a Mediterranean island and ends his career of glory in the far west of the Atlantic ocean.

A Fair Compromise.

The holy father still howls for the restitution of his territorial rights. How would it do to reestablish his court on the island of Sicily, and let the poison-mongers of Jesuitism and the assassins of the Mafia try their tricks on each other?

The Impending Crusade.

Chancellor Caprivi pretends to believe that the religious conflict of the present age is narrowing down to a struggle between Christianity and Atheism. Does it never occur to the official defenders of the faith that their creed is doomed to a much more desperate scuffle, as soon as the champions of deism get their eyes opened to the fact that the Christian dogmas of renunciation, anti-naturalism, and earth-despising pessimism are the most colossal blasphemies ever uttered against the belief in a benevolent creator? The panta kala kar—"Behold it was very good"—is Jehovah's own commentary on the success of his work; can we suppose to please that paternal Demiurgos by informing him that his world does not begin to be good enough for us and that we long to depart and commune in Cloudeuckoodom with the ghost of a Buddhist crank, who pretended to cure the ailments of temporal existence by denying its value, and got nailed—lie and all—in western Asia some eighteen hundred years ago?

A Frank Barbarian.

A Soudanese chieftain whom Professor Hagenbeck, the German Barnum, had brought to Berlin was introduced to some representatives of the Ethnological Society, who asked him how he had enjoyed his trip and which of the wonders of the Prussian metropolis had impressed him the most. "What surprises me most," said the candid savage, "is how you can move the enormous freight-cars on your railway tracks, and how you can manage to swallow the horrible drinks sold in your restaurants."

Natural Reversion.

Animals, restored to a state of freedom, gradually revert to the original type of the species, and it would be interesting to know if the liberty of the New World will not exert an analogous effect upon the religious status of its colonists. In spite of papal intrigues and evangelical revival efforts, there are, indeed, signs of the times indicating a gradual decline of supernaturalism and the growth of a more and more exclusive reliance on secular education and crime-restricting laws. There is, indeed, no fact in history proved by more incontrovertible evidence than the existence of prosperous and intelligent nations without anything resembling the modern conception of a state religion. The Greeks and Romans permitted the public representation of comedies ridiculing the foibles of the Olympian gods, and entrusted offices of great responsibility to representatives of such sects as that of Zeno and Pythagoras, whose tenets controverted nearly all the essential dogmas of the popular polytheism.

Corpus Christi.

The celebration of festivals intended to symbolize the mystery of resurrection is older than the dawn of authentic history. In ancient Greece the fate of Adonis was bewailed with orgies of mourning which, on the third day, wound up with a hymn of exultation; and in Syria thousands of women used to assemble, at a certain time of the year, on the banks of a stream "reddened with the blood of Thamuz," i. e., with the red earth dissolved by spring rains. A clearing of the stream was the signal for a thanksgiving procession to celebrate the resurrection of the popular god.

Infanticide.

Theft is punished much more severely among semi-barbarous nations than in any country of Christendom, but the same Rhadamantus who would hang a fraudulent banker considers child-murder a rather venial offense. In Siam poor parents, overblest with babies, are permitted to anticipate the effects of famine as soon as the increase of their families threatens to become a burden to the community. In China infanticide, though not directly encouraged, is tolerated as a lesser evil, and the natives of Abyssinia merely require the owners of supernumerary babies to avoid public scandal in choosing this method for the abatement of the affliction. Near Abu Ras, on the Bhar-el-Gazul, or Blue Nile, the traveler Wenteroth saw two little corpses floating about in a pile of driftwood, and was just going to notify a neighboring emir, when his ferryman came up with a long pole and pushed the corpora delicti into the current of the stream. "Such brutes," said he; "couldn't they go a mile below this landing? They ought to be fined for their laziness." The ancient Spartans exposed superfluous youngsters on a river island of the Eurotas, where childless parents had a chance to rescue the little waif, provided its doom was not sealed by a serious physical imperfection; but the natives of the Solomon islands go much further, and boycott families who straiten the food-resources of the archipelago by permitting their progeny to increase beyond a certain number.

Minimum Evils.

Chemists agree that "poison" and "stimulant" are interchangeable terms, and the natives of Kamtschatka seem to have recognized the economic significance of that fact. Instead of paying rum-sellers' profits, cigardealers' profits, and government license expenses they fuddle with the juice of agaricus maculatus, or fly-toadstool, that grows abundantly in the fire-woods of the higher latitudes, and can be gathered free in quantities sufficient to intoxicate all the troopers of the Russian army. From similar motives of thrift the Semitic nations dispense with saints and Holy Ghosts and limit their worship to a unitary, childless Jehovah. Among the economical Yankees, too, Unitarianism is getting more and more popular.

Earthquake-proof Buildings.

An American building firm of Lima, Peru, constructs houses in a way that greatly lessens, and almost obviates, the risk from earthquake shocks. Broad iron girders encircle the building near the middle of each story, while vertical bars connect the basement with the roof in a manner to prevent the collapse of the structure, even if it should be tilted forward like a ship in a storm. Insurance offices encourage the invention, but the priests probably denounce it as they denounced the lightning-rod of the Freethinker Franklin, as a godless innovation, calculated to circumscribe the privileges of their thunder-god—as well as their own boodle prospects, and opportunities for pointing out the consequences of unbelief.

F. L. OSWALD.

Would you like to have your boy follow the beautiful example of Jesus—never have a home, never marry, never leave a descendant to bear his name, but wander over the earth like a vagabond, followed by half a dozen Marys and Marthas, and be laughed at by a great commonwealth?

For the benefit of half-and-half "Liberals," who do not see any very objectionable feature in a union of church and state, we call attention to the following little incident which took place at Oberfeldrecht, Germany: A poor peasant on whom the duty fell to carry the minister to the church had the audacity to do so in a common light wagon in place of a buggy. The highly offended clergyman had the peasant brought before court, where he was fined six marks.

On Dec. 25, 1892, the monument which marks the tomb of the late Belgian scientist and Freethinker, César de Paepe, and Désiré Brismée, the valiant Freethought lecturer, was unveiled in the presence of several thousand people. The National Federation and all the individual Freethought groups were represented. The monument is surmounted by the bust of Dr. de Paepe, and on the middle of the column is seen a medallion picture of Brismée. Speeches were delivered by the most eminent Belgian Freethinkers.

The True Genesis of Christianity.

Here are five books* on our table from THE TRUTH SEEKER, by authors as different as they well can be, and yet showing clearly that Evolution has brought us the solution of that great enigma of History—the True Origin of Christianity. This is indeed a very great if not the greatest achievement of modern historical science, and of the first importance. It is idle to say that it concerns an old question of eighteen hundred years ago. True; but that solution underlies the whole of our civilization. "What think ye of Christ?" is the question, the answer to which still influences, if it does not chiefly determine, the daily conduct of millions, including the readers of the Liberal papers, who may at first the least suspect it. What, then, are the principal stages of this solution to which we should direct our attention and our reading?

We take for granted that the five important books above referred to will be surely consulted, and we suggest in following up the subject that the following are the main conclusions to which evolution leads in solving the genesis of Christ and Christianity.

1. The Messianic Period. This is the starting-point and the foundation of the whole evolution of Christ and Christianity. The Hebrew tribes for four or five hundred years had been trying to consolidate into a Union or Nation of some kind, but had been prevented by Persian, Assyrian, Egyptian, Greek, and Roman and other conquerors. At the eastern end of the Mediterranean they were in the pathway of all of the powerful peoples of that time, and were in turn trampled upon and made captives by them all. But during all these years, and especially under the Maccabean Rulers, they stubbornly maintained their tribal religion, language, traditions, and mode of hierarchical government, of which the Messiah, the anointed Joshua, or Son of David as deliverer, i. e., the Jesus, "the Christ," as it would read in Greek—was the very center, the only hope. Now if we look at the general laws of Sociology, which as Evolutionists we are bound to do, we find that there is nothing strange about this Messiah expectation and craze of these tribal Hebrews. The tribal stage of Evolution, in which they were, always has its Messiahs. Read the article on "Messiah" in the Encyclopedia Britannica, and see what numbers of them came to the Hebrews before and after the Christian era. We have the same thing in the Semitic Tribes from Mahomet before and down to the present Mahdi in the Soudan. Nor are the tribes of the North American Indians less free from the Ghost and Messiah dances, visions, and rebellions which excite the Indians to give employment to our little United States Army! In Palestine eighteen hundred years ago the Messiahs of the Hebrews similarly bothered their Roman conquerors and despoilers. Professor Allen, of Harvard, in his "Early History of Christianity" tells us that some fifty of these hopefuls were put to death by the Romans before the fall of Jerusalem, A.D. 70. Note that they were simply "hopefuls," they never in fact became Messiahs, or deliverers of the people, for the very good reason that the Romans made the end of them just as they reached the attempt. Thus death always prevented the existence of a real Hebrew temporal Messiah, and none such ever was. The Jews have, therefore, been compelled to lead a cuckoo life with other nations. They have never been able to achieve a Flag, or a Savior. But as Josephus well puts it, the belief that one would come, and by aid of Jahveh, put an end to those accursed Romans, as Joshua of old did to the people of Jericho,—that belief, disappointed from year to year, yet nerved the Jews to a most stubborn resistance, and finally created the frenzy—the ecstatic craze, which led to the next stage in the evolution of "The Christ," and which stage was,

2. The Apocalyptic period. In those days there was no Science, and the supernatural was the normal. Seeing was believing—and believing,

* Christianity and Evolution. By Arthur B. Moss. Preface by Joseph Mazzini Wheeler. Published by Watts & Co., Fleet street, London. Price, $1.

A Short History of the Bible, being a popular account of the development of the Canon, etc., by Bronson D. Keeler. Price, 75 cents.

Revelations of Antichrist, proving that Jesus Christ did not exist, etc., etc. Pp. 446. Revised edition. Price, $1.50.

The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion, contrasted with Ancient Myths and Miracles as factors in Human Evolution, etc., by Thomas Ellwood Longshore, Member of the Society of Friends. Published by the Truth Seeker Company, No. 28 Lafayette place. Price, $1.

The Bible of To-Day. A course of Lectures by John W. Chadwick. New edition. (Putnam & Sons.) Price, $1.50.

All the above for sale by the Truth Seeker Company.

when intense enough, was also seeing. The objective and subjectiv were convertible. There was no test of truth. Their Prophets said, their God said, "Their Messiah would appear, with a forerunner to announce him." So they believed. Accordingly he was daily foretold and he finally "appeared" and was materialized, much as is now done in our "Spiritual" séances. Our Liberal scientists have not given sufficient emphasis to this visional, or apparitional, or revelational stage, which was the real birth, or rather epiphany, of "Jesus, the Christ."

Inquirers should begin the study of this visional period by reading the article on Apocalyptic Literature in the Encyclopedia Britannica, then the "Revelation" or Apocalypse at the end of the New Testament, remembering that it is really the only book of this earliest stage of Christianity in the New Testament (A.D. 69), and the only specimen of a whole submerged literature that, like the "Book of Enoch" and very many others, really picture the true ecstasies by which Christ was seen. Then read the "materialized" appearance of the full-grown Jesus in Mark, at his baptism, then on the lake, then at the transfiguration, then at the temptation; and at the ascension in the other gospels. Remember that ghosts and angels were then natural, that to those Hebrews there was no Copernican Astronomy, no immortality of the soul; only a heaven and a Jahveh just above the clouds, from whence they expected this, his Christ, and his "kingdom of heaven" to descend: Thus they prayed, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven"—that is, instead of the will of those impious Romans. From that heaven would appear—that is, be revealed, or in Greek be apocalyptized, the Joshua, i. e., Jesus, the Christ, the anointed of Israel, who as the "son of God" and "son of Man," would sweep those Romans into the sea with the besom of destruction, by his divine and supernatural power. That was prophesied and certainly would be done, and that too, within the lives of those then seeing and hearing these visions. Thus John, Peter, Stephen, and the "disciples" saw and heard, and finally Paul also saw and heard, though privately and differently from the rest. This apparitional and temporary nature of original Christianity must be recalled and realized, if we are ever to really understand it. Here is to be found the true genesis of Christianity, and of all the Christ there ever was. Liberals make a mistake who go to hunting up the origin of Christianity in the Chrishna of India or any Mythology of India or Egypt. The additions to Christianity from those sources were indeed many, but of a later date. Read the article on the "Revelation" in the Encyclopedia Britannica and see how it clears up that otherwise crazy work, and with it the beginning of Christianity too, and thus leads to its next stage:

3. The Spiritualizing and Epistolary period. The Jesus had certainly "appeared," for had they not seen him? He had promised he would bring the "New Jerusalem" and the kingdom of heaven on earth, but he must come in the hearts of the people first. This visional Christ gave the key-note of his new era, and of all Christianity, in the heart-changing words: "Repent! for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The word meta-noeite, here translated Repent, really meant not repent, but "Think ye with me," "change your minds off from this world to me," "be converted to me." Then and thus the process of spiritual conversion began; that was the turning of the heart to "Christ, the Spirit," who had appeared as such. For we must never forget that Spirits, Angels, Gods, and Ghosts were realities in those days, but not now, except to those who are similarly behind our age. In this new spiritual life, in expectation of the speedy appearance of the new kingdom of heaven, these ghost-seeing disciples turned away from this bad world and dreamed, and longed, and prayed! Then the persecuting Saul was by a similar vision or apocalypse "converted" unto the ecstatic Paul. He never pretended to have seen Jesus "in the flesh," nor to learn or know anything about him, except in and by these visions, in which he even went to the "third heaven" and became well informed as to the future that was so soon to be realized, but which his followers are still awaiting—that last day (that burden of eschatology) which never comes. But he did two things of awful importance to the rest of the world. He insisted that the Gentiles, as well as the Hebrews, were to be included in this coming kingdom of heaven; and then, secondly, he differed from these other visionaries, who only knew the Aramaic dialect, in having a smattering of Greek, and he went to letter-writing his visions with a vengeance, and in a style which proves his ecstasy. These letters are after the Apocalypse, the next, i. e., the second part of the New Testament, in the order of evolution, and the only parts that were written by the person whose name they bear. It seems quite certain that Paul did write some of the epistles attributed to him, but by no means all—but all, except the epistle to the Hebrews, were written by or for him, and in his spirit and purpose, and for his propaganda. These visions, labors, travels, and letters of Paul were the effective foundation of Christianity. The former visions of Peter and the others became gradually absorbed into his gospel and propaganda, and would probably have been lost as many similar Hebrew visions were, but for the final reconciliation with his Gentile expansion by which he carried or sent the new hope around the Mediterranean. But in doing this the next stage in the genesis of Christianity was necessitated, viz.:

4. The Gospel, or historic period

This period began as soon as it was necessary, for Peter, and afterward Paul, to convince the people who had not seen Christ in their visions or who did not believe that Christ did exist, or had really come on earth and promised and foretold the things they had seen in their visions. Then and not until then, did they begin to repeat "the prophecies" foretelling Christ's coming, and to gather the facts which their fulfillment required. Thus the gospel or historical substratum of Christianity began to grow, and some thirty "gospels" were the result, of which four are called canonical, true, and authoritative by the church of Rome, and our other churches have also tried to say so too, but with wry faces of late. The fact is that the same style of romancing about a supposed "Life of Christ" has gone on from that day to this—until the last and most absurdly unhistorical fiction has been reached in Gen. Lew. Wallace's "Ben Hur." The simple truth is that they are all of equal historic value, and that is of none at all. The beginnings of these attempts to put a substratum of facts under the visions were probably in Aramaic Hebrew, and have been lost. The first we have is that "attributed" to Mark, with which "Matthew" and "Luke" are side versions, much enlarged and "improved." The "John" gospel is a latter attempt to sustain the logos, or new metaphysical element, by a similar process of verification. These gospels are all romances put together out of the traditions of what those "Messiahs" who were slain by the Romans, had done, said, and suffered, plus the appropriate literature of the Essenes and others of that time. Thus they are useful indications of the life, times, and manners of that period. Similarly the woof of Scott's novels gives us much good information about the times of which he writes, but the warp is not history. So in these gospels there is no warp. They have no real biography or consecutive story. They are driftwood, not written at one time nor by one person—not in fact composed at all, but collected from imagination and hearsay and afterward thrown together in paragraphs, so that even now in the "revised" Greek Testament, the spaces between the paragraphs show plainly that they were and are separate "books," or pieces of traditional driftwood. This paragraphing is an eye-opener which shows how and why these fragments came together. Read as to this stage also, "The gospels" in the Encyclopedia Britannica; Solomon's "Jesus Identified," the Apocryphal gospels, and hear, if possible, John E. Remsburg's lecture on the One hundred flaws in Christ's credentials. It will become clear that Jesus was not mentioned by Josephus nor any contemporary because he did not exist. Remember that the true order of the "books" of the New Testament is the Apocalypse, then the Epistles, then the Gospels commencing with "Mark," and to be continued down to our modern Romancers, such as Renan, Beecher, and last and weakest, wildest and absurdest, of all, "Ben Hur." The gospels lead to the next stage, viz.:

5. The Deifying or Logos period.

5. The Deifying or Logos period. When this Spiritual Christ had been manifested on the earth and sustained by the supposed facts of the gospels, it was in the theocratic Hebrew sense, which made him the embodiment of the Hebrew tribes. As Daniel puts it, the "Son of Man" is Israel (Dan. vii, 13). But this "Israel" was also the "Son of God," and this phrase was, therefore, actually added to the first verse of Mark, but as the older manuscripts have it not, the "Revisers" have thrown it into the margin. But in the other gospels these words—the "son of God"—are found of course, for Israel was always the son of God, and therefore the son of man (or Israel) was the son of God. But who went further and put into his mouth the words, "I and my Father are one?" The answer is that this was done by the Neo-Platonists of Greece and Alexandria, who inspired, if they did not write, the Logos—gospel of "John." Christ "the spirit," Christ "the son of man and of God," was also the Logos—"was God." Thus the unity of God required by their philosophy was forced by making the three one—the ghost, the man-son, and the Logos-father, one—yet in and of itself each was also complete God! Thus strange things evolve when mankind consolidate their visions, their fancies, and their logic. The Council of Nice, A.D. 325, ratified this conclusion, and the birth of The Christ was then and there for the first and only time completed. The Council of Chalcedon, A.D. 451 (following that of Ephesus, 431), made all this clear to them by this luminous definition, but all those who understood it seem to have died?

“We teach that Jesus Christ is perfect as respects Godhood and perfect as respects Manhood—that he is truly God, and truly a man consisting of a natural soul and body. He was begotten of the Father before creation as to his deity, but in these last days he was born of Mary the Mother of God, as to his humanity. He is one Christ existing in two natures—without mixture, without change, without division, without separation—the diversity of the two natures not being at all destroyed by their union in one person, but the peculiar properties of each nature being preserved, and concurring in one person and one substance.”

Fortunately, in order to escape eternal damnation, it is not necessary to understand this definition, it is only necessary to believe it! And yet is there not another way out? This brings us to the final stage, viz : A Christ who saves because we can believe and understand what the word means :—

6. The Modern Idealizing period. The Scientific Positiv schools are all gifted in this idealizing direction. While, like Frederic Harrison, in his "Meaning of History," they admit, for the reasons aforesaid and others, that under Science Jesus Christ, as a definit man, disappears from history, they are very ready to bring the idea forward in a new guise, not as a man nor as a God, but as an Ideal, impersonating their true MAN, Humanity—that is, the coöperating and converging life and power of the whole human race. Pascal said that the whole human race must be considered as one mighty immortal individual—one grand chain, growing from generation to generation, ever learning and ever progressing. Now, this "grand man," or the race in its continuity and solidarity, is ever dying in order to redeem the future, reconcile it to the past, and make heaven on earth possible. The tribal stage in which the "son of man" represented and was Israel was extended by Paul to the gentiles of the Roman empire, but now the nations of the world are becoming one in a grander sense than Paul ever conceived. The "Son of Man" has evolved and is not now Israel, but Humanity. The Ideal Christ is the figure by which we may thus impersonate as a reality the greatest collectiv power and organism known to us, the human race itself! The triple Godhead is translated thus: The Ultimate of Being—the World, stands as the Father God. The Christ is the son of Man and of God, through whom alone we can come to the Father—that is, by heredity and human aid, get some chance of knowing and living by and out of Nature. The true Spirit and Comforter—the only Holy Ghost, is human life and love, the most sacred of all things, the sustainer and the "Comforter" of all! Thus the visions and illusions of the past may help us to grasp the higher truths of the present, and really bring to some heaven on earth. T. B. WAKEMAN.

All About Mr. Harman's Case.

FRIEND MACDONALD: Replying to your kind inquiry in regard to my late imprisonment and release therefrom I will say that on the 21st of June last I was incarcerated in the state prison at Lansing, Kan., on an order from Henry C. Caldwell, United States circuit judge, pursuant to an affirmation by him—on appeal—of the sentence previously passed upon me by Judge Phillips of the United States district court, which sentence was for four months at hard labor on each of three counts for an alleged violation of the United States postal laws; said offense being the mailing of copies of Lucifer containing an article by Dr. R. V. O'Neill, and published at Valley Falls, Kan., Feb. 14, 1890.

On Feb. 19, 1893, eight months, lacking two days, from the date of my incarceration, I was released by virtue of an order of which the following is an exact copy taken from the record now in the office of the clerk of the United States circuit court at Topeka, Kan.:

United States of America, ss.:

United States of America, ss.:
In the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas.

In re Ex Parte Moses Harman,
Petitioner. } Petition for Habeas Corpus.

Order of Discharge.

Order of Discharge.
In the matter of the application for discharge of Moses Harman, Ex Parte, the formal issuance of the writ of habeas corpus in said cause having by agreement between the counsel for Petitioner and the United States District

Attorney been waived; and the parties having stipulated that the Court might determine the merits of the case upon the petition for the writ. Now the cause of the imprisonment of said Petitioner having been inquired into by this Court and Counsel having been heretofore heard on behalf of the United States and said Petitioner, and due consideration having been had;

It is hereby ordered and adjudged that the further imprisonment of said Moses Harman, Petitioner, under the sentence and judgment of the District Court of the United States for the District of Kansas, which sentence and judgment was affirmed by the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas; and which sentence and judgment is set out in the petition, is without authority of law, and that the said Moses Harman is entitled to his liberty.

Whereupon it is hereby ordered and adjudged that the said Moses Harman be, and he is hereby discharged from the said imprisonment set forth in his said petition.

Feb. 16, 1893.

HENRY C. CALDWELL,
U. S. Circuit Judge for the Eighth District.

This "order of discharge" was based upon the following legal opinion, copied by myself from the above-named official record:

In the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas.

In the matter of Ex Parte } Petition for Moses Harman, } Habeas Corpus.
Petitioner. }

Caldwell, Circuit Judge.

OPINION.

The petitioner was indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced in the District Court of the United States for the District of Kansas, for the offense of depositing non-mailable matter in the United States mails; from the sentence and judgment in that case the petitioner, Harman, sued out a writ of error to the Circuit Court, which affirmed the judgment of the District Court, and directed the sentence and judgment of that Court to be carried into execution, and the petitioner, Harman, was thereupon committed to the Penitentiary in execution of the sentence.

The sentence, as imposed by the District Court, and affirmed by the Circuit Court, reads as follows:

"It is further ordered, considered and adjudged that said Moses Harman, the defendant below, be adjudged guilty of the first, second and fourth counts of the indictment herein; and that he be imprisoned in the State penitentiary for four months on each of said counts, at hard labor."

The petitioner having been imprisoned for four months under this sentence, now asks to be released from further imprisonment, upon the ground that as the sentence does not specify the order in which the several terms of imprisonment are to run, and does not specify that they are to run concurrently, that the sentences do therefore necessarily run concurrently, or that if this be not so they must necessarily be held void for uncertainty, beyond a single term of four months, and that when he has served a term of four months he cannot be lawfully imprisoned under said sentences.

This precise question came before Mr. Justice Bradley on the Circuit and he sustained the contention, made by the learned counsel for the petitioner in this case, in a learned opinion in the reasoning of which I fully concur. It would serve no useful purpose to repeat here the reasoning of the learned Justice.

The case is reported.

U. S. vs. Patterson, 29 Fed. Rep., 775.

On the authority of that case, the petitioner, having served a term of four months, is entitled to be discharged from further imprisonment under the said sentence and judgment and it is so ordered.

Thus it is seen, by the terms of the opinion and order of the United States circuit court, that the last four months served by me in the state prison was "without authority of law."

While imprisoned at Lansing I was the recipient of many favors and privileges not accorded to the average convict, the warden frequently saying that he wished to grant me all the privileges possible without giving cause of complaint on the score of partiality. I was not shaved at all during the whole eight months, and when my hair was clipped the officer told the barber to cut it as I wanted it. Exception was made in my favor in the matter of visitors. The common rule is that a prisoner can see the same visitor but once in three months. Some of my friends and relatives were admitted to visit me monthly, and oftener if desired. Friends who had no special business were in a few instances denied admission, partly because of bother to the officers and partly because, to use their own language, "If we admit everybody that wants to see the old man, he will have no time to work."

During my term of service just closed I worked in the printing office of the Prison Trusty, a weekly paper printed, edited, and chiefly filled with matter written by the prisoners themselves.

Since my release I have received quite as much attention and appreciative welcome from friends as I had any reason to expect, both at Topeka and at my old home, Valley Falls. In reporting the case the papers of Topeka and of Kansas have, with rare exceptions, evinced a spirit of fairness. The Populist (Topeka), an organ of the People's party—"stalwarts"—republished, unsolicited by us, a two-column article from Lucifer giving an account of my release and present status. The Daily Press (city), an organ of the Fusion Democracy and People's party, of March 2d contained the following:

MOSES HARMAN FREE.

Moses Harman, editor of the Lucifer, is out of the penitentiary, where he had been incarcerated for eight months for the alleged publication of obscene literature.

There were three counts against him, and he was sentenced to four months' imprisonment on each count, making in all twelve months. Judge Caldwell decided that when he had served one sentence of four months it covered the whole thing, so that Mr. Harman thinks he has been wrongfully imprisoned. The case grew out of the publication of the Markland letter three years ago, for which Harman was sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary. He served about four months, when, owing to an error in the sentence which did not provide for hard labor, he was set free.

The case of the Markland letter will come up before the next term of the district court. David Overmyer, his attorney, is of the opinion that the court has exhausted its jurisdiction in the case, and that Harman must be discharged.

With one or two exceptions Mr. Harman was treated with the greatest kindness and consideration while in the penitentiary.

The Jeffersonian (Lawrence), People's party, has this to say in its issue of the 2d:

Moses Harman, editor of Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, of Topeka, a radical reform paper, has just been released from the state penitentiary by order of Judge Caldwell, after eight months' imprisonment, on the ground that he was held without warrant of law, or, in other words, that his sentence was illegal. Mr. Harman had previously been released after serving four months in the pen under a previous sentence, for exactly the same reason. The sentences in both cases were by United States District Judge Foster, and in the opinion of attorneys and others competent to judge, these sentences were given because Mr. Harman had got the better of Judge Foster in a legal argument on the points of law involved in the case, and because Mr. Harman had not been sufficiently awed by the high and mighty dignity of Judge Foster's official position.

The original charge against Mr. Harman was made seven years ago under the infamous Comstock law, of using the United States mails contrary to law, and was instigated by a banker in Valley Falls, where Mr. Harman lived, for the purpose of suppressing a reform paper. Mr. Harman's offense consisted in publishing a letter from an outraged wife protesting against the theory that wives have no right to protect their own health, but the evidence utterly failed to sustain the charge. And Mr. Harman has no redress under the law.

On Tuesday evening, March 7th, in Topeka, a somewhat informal reception was tendered the returning prisoner, under the auspices of the Kansas State Freethinkers' Association. The chair was occupied by Henry Hiatt, of Twin Mound, Kan., one of the "old guard" of Kansas Freethinkers and reformers, a faithful friend and defender of D. M. Bennett and THE TRUTH SEEKER. Though seventy-seven years old, and notwithstanding the day and night were the stormiest for many weeks, the white-haired veteran came from his home in an adjoining county on purpose to attend this meeting. The opening address was made by W. H. T. Wakefield, editor of the Jeffersonian, and one of the pioneer Freethinkers of Kansas, he having been associated with Governor Robinson and others in the contest that made Kansas a free state. In 1884 he was selected by the United Labor party at its convention in Cincinnati as its candidate for president.

Other speakers were Editor Pike, of Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. L. M. Holmes, of Chicago; Mrs. L. D. White, of Halstead, Kan.; John Bradford, of Horton, Kan.; Mrs. M. E. Davis, Messrs. Huling, Wotherspoon, Bullard, and Rice, of Topeka; and N. H. Harman, of Valley Falls.

Alden S. Huling offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, MOSES HARMAN, a man in whose honesty of purpose and purity of intention we have the utmost confidence, has, by an outrageous abuse of law and justice, been imprisoned for a term in the penitentiary of the state of Kansas; and

WHEREAS, he has been released therefrom for a time—we trust for all time—and is permitted to resume his chosen work, and is again with us—

Resolved, That we extend to Mr. Harman our hearty congratulations on his restoration to freedom.

Resolved, That we condemn the spirit which manifested itself in his persecution and imprisonment.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to exert every effort in our power at all times to prevent the recurrence of such outrages as that from which Mr. Harman has suffered by promulgating and defending the doctrine of untrammelled freedom of speech and of press on all subjects of human interest.

The speaking was in line with these resolutions.

Having already occupied too much of your valuable space I close by thanking you and the patrons of the noble old TRUTH SEEKER for the many words of sympathy and deeds of coöperative aid, uttered and done by you and by them in behalf of human liberty and justice outraged in and by the illegal prosecutions against yours sincerely and gratefully,

MOSES HARMAN.

P. S.—The five years' judgment and sentence of Judge Foster, under which I served four months three years ago this coming summer, and which sentence was declared illegal by the superior court, has been sent back to the lower court to be "dealt with according to law." This remanded case will probably be called up for further disposition next month.

Topeka, Kan.

International Congress of Freethinkers

TO BE HELD IN CHICAGO DURING THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

It has been resolved that 1893 shall mark an epoch in the history of Freethought. During the early autumn in Chicago will be witnessed the greatest assemblage of Freethinkers that the world has ever seen. The movement was formally inaugurated last month, as shown by the following:

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF FREETHINKERS.

It is proposed to hold in Chicago during the Columbian Exposition a great International Congress of Freethought. At an informal meeting of Freethinkers held in New York February 18th I was delegated to select a committee to carry through this project. I have named as this committee the following:

C. B. Waite, president American Secular Union, Chicago, Ill., chairman.

S. P. Putnam, president Freethought Federation of America, Washington, D. C., secretary.

Robert C. Adams, president Canadian Secular Union, Montreal, Que.

E. M. Macdonald, editor TRUTH SEEKER, New York.

L. K. Washburn, editor Boston Investigator, Boston, Mass.

Julie Monroe Power, editor Ironclad Age, Indianapolis, Ind.

H. D. Shaw, editor Independent Pulpit, Waco, Tex.

H. L. Green, editor Freethinkers' Magazine, Buffalo, N. Y.

J. Spencer Ellis, editor Secular Thought, Toronto, Ont.

Susan H. Wixon, editor "Children's Corner" TRUTH SEEKER, Fall River, Mass.

J. E. REMSBURG.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22, 1893.

Seven members of the above-named committee have already consented to serve and the enterprise is an assured success. Judge Waite writes as follows:

CHICAGO, Feb. 23, 1893.

J. E. REMSBURG, Esq., My Dear Sir: Your valued favor of the 23d inst., informing me of the formation of a committee to carry through the project of holding in Chicago during the Columbian Exposition an International Congress of Freethought, and of my selection as chairman of the committee, is just received.

Thanking you for the honor conferred, I accept the appointment, and shall do all in my power to make the movement a success.

Yours very truly,

C. B. WAITE.

President Putnam of the Federation, who crossed the continent four times last year, and who is acquainted with nearly all the Freethinkers between the Atlantic and Pacific, will do valiant work for the Congress.

Captain Adams, in his letter of acceptance, says: "I shall be pleased and proud to be on the committee of the International Congress of Freethought, and thank you for the compliment. I will gladly do anything in my power to help the cause."

Mr. Macdonald, of THE TRUTH SEEKER; Mr. Washburn, of the Investigator; Mrs. Power, of the Ironclad Age, and Mr. Shaw, of the Independent Pulpit, all favor the project, and with the support of the great Freethought journals it cannot be a failure.

Mr. Green gives it his hearty indorsement, but urges that his advanced age, frail health, and the arduous labors attending the publication of his magazine, make it inexpedient for him to serve on the committee. The other members will, I think, appreciate the circumstances that prompt Brother Green's declination and will excuse him from active service on the committee. At the same time he has had so much experience in organizing and managing conventions—his name is so intimately associated with the great Freethought conventions of the past—that they will look for and welcome some words of encouragement and advice in the pages of his magazine.

Mr. Ellis, being absent from Toronto at the time his appointment was sent, has not been heard from yet, but it is confidently expected that he will consent to serve, as well as Miss Wixon, whose name has just been added to the list of members originally selected.

The committee cannot do this work alone. It must have the coöperation of all friends of Freethought. Every loyal Freethinker in the land then will assist in carrying forward this laudable undertaking to a glorious consummation.

J. E. REMSBURG.

Liberal Societies.

Mr. Wilson Macdonald lectured at the Manhattan Liberal Club Friday evening, March 17th. The lecture was followed by one of the most interesting and spirited discussions that the members of the club have had the pleasure of hearing in some time. The subject was "Do Man's Spiritual Energies Survive Death?" In opening, Mr. Macdonald dwelt at some length on that part of man which he called the spiritual, ideal, or psychical. He defined it as "that higher sense of the mind which perceives those finer qualities of the soul or spirit which are superior to the physical, and which we perceive with the fine senses. It is that mental quality by and with which we are cognizant of the ideal. It is that something within that becomes conscious of the beautiful in music, poetry, painting, and sculpture. It is that quality of ourselves that comprehends the loftiest sentiments of love and friendship, and appreciates forgiveness and charity. It is that ecstasy we feel in contemplating the beautiful in nature and art. One may have a belief in the dogmas of sectarians and pose as a Christian, a Mohammedan, or a Jew and still not have one spark of spirituality or ideality. Human beings of delicate, refined, and intellectual organization, as orators, painters, musicians, poets, and litterateurs generally, have the quality of spirituality or ideality." The lecturer then spoke of the rapid rise of Spiritualism. He remembered the time when there were only a few thousand Spiritualists in the world; "there are now ten million." Many incidents were told illustrating the power of spirits to remove pianos, trinkets, etc.

The critics were Dr. Foote, Mr. Wakeman, Dr. Weeks, Mr. Bunce, and Dr. Gunn. Mr. Wakeman said that the people who thought they saw spirits were laboring under a delusion; very often they were hypnotized, and Mr. Bunce also told how he had received messages from the other world in the form of rappings, written notes, etc. Dr. Gunn's material way of dealing with the spirits caused considerable laughter. He said that if ever a person who was visited by spirits would take twenty grains of bromide of potassium three times a day, for a few weeks, he had no doubt but that the visitations would become less and less, and finally stop altogether. He advised Mr. Macdonald to take several doses of bromide of potassium. Next Friday evening T. B. Wakeman will lecture on "The Genesis of Christianity." Mr. Wakeman will reply at some length to some of Mr. Macdonald's statements.

"Deed and Creed" was the subject of Dr. Coyt's lecture before the Ethical Society last Sunday. The motto of the society, "Deed, not Creed," is fundamentally wrong, the doctor declared, because there can be no unanimity regarding the deed where there is not an accepted creed. "The Ethical Society is the most radical of movements; for when it declares that creed is a matter of private concern to agree about which is not absolutely necessary, it stamps the creed as insignificant; and things that are insignificant we have no use for." Dr. Coyt thought that a more appropriate motto would be "Deed and the Creed of Deed." With the creed of deed unanimously accepted as their creed, the members could not differ about the deed. "But one-tenth of the creed of Christianity is a creed of deed. The other nine-tenths is a creed concerning the origin of the world, the birth of Jesus Christ, etc., etc." The lecturer said he regretted greatly the lack of knowledge among members about the leaders of the different ethical sects. On the other hand you will find very few Methodists who are not acquainted with the writings of John Wesley. The doctor closed by exhorting his hearers, especially the female part, to make themselves better acquainted with the writings of Emanuel Kant, Herbert Spencer, etc., and to do more to build up and disseminate the creed of deed.

Next Sunday Professor Adler will lecture, his subject being "Shall Russian Refugees Be Executed Like Assassins?"

A very interesting lecture on "The Conflict Between Labor and Capital" was delivered before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association last Sunday afternoon by Dr. Powell. Although the lecturer did not regard the introduction of machinery as being directly harmful to workmen, still he thought that it increased the antagonism between the laborer and the capitalist. Considerable applause greeted the remark that many of the heads of the labor movement are doing more to curse than to help the cause. Among the critics were Mr. Neville, Mr. Bellows, Mrs. Lovise, and Mr. Elewell. Mr. Neville thought a tax on land was the panacea by which the trouble would be settled.

Next Sunday Henry Rowley will lecture on "Secular Ethics vs. Christian Ethics."

Speech in Liberal League Hall, Newark, N. J.,

BY MRS. MARY ANN SMITH.

Liberals, when I am dead each give a penny
To hire a wagon and buy an empty box;
Friends and mourners will not be many,
For I have no bank accounts, bonds, nor stocks.

I want no minister or priest to preach a sermon
Or waste his breath by beseeching a revengeful God
To have pity on me, to save me from burning
At sea-level, where the devil is a prisoner down in quod;

Nor bury me in a churchyard, where roses grow,
Or in consecrated ground blessed by priests cursed by God;

But plant me in Potter's Field, where gentle zephyrs blow,
Where rank weeds, thorns, and thistles grow from out the sod.

I don't want a headstone to mark my lonely grave;
For I don't want to rise before old Gabriel blows his horn.

"In my father's house there are many mansions," Jesus said,
But not for Mary Ann Smith on resurrection morn.

Feb. 25, 1893. (Written by W. W. MORRIS.)

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The German Freethought congress will this year be held in Karlsruhe during the month of May.

The Freereligious Society at Berlin, Germany, is publishing and distributing a small pamphlet in which people are urged to leave the state church.

The Italian minister of justice has introduced into the house of deputies a measure whereby civil marriage is made to take precedence of the religious ceremony.

In most Holy Russia there are eight hundred and seventy-five prisons which contain nine hundred and fifty thousand prisoners. Let us thank the Lord for his mercy.

The Christmas bazar held in Sveateatern, Stockholm, by the Stockholm Freethinkers, brought in two thousand crowns net. Eighty persons were kept busy attending to the wants of the public.

Dr. Phil. Knut Wicksell and Victor E. Lennstrand were both elected to the Swedish people's congress by 13,817 and 13,750 votes respectively. We congratulate our Swedish brethren on the great victory won.

Le Comité D'Etudes Morales (the committee on moral laws), President Jean Paul Cée, has published the result of its last year's work, an "Essay on Secular Education." We will in a later number of THE TRUTH SEEKER give a review of the same.

The Christians of Calcutta, India, are very angry. They petitioned the government to make Sunday a Puritan Sabbath day. The government, strange to relate, refused to do so, stating that it would be a violation of the constitution and an insult and injustice to Hindoos and Mohammedans.

In spite of the opposition of the state (Catholic) church in Spain, the Protestant joss house in Madrid has been opened. But to minimize the evil effects of Protestant services, Roman Catholic ladies have resolved to buy the adjoining buildings and turn the same into Roman Catholic schools. "What fools these mortals be."

We are more than pleased to state that the yearly report of the Belgian Freethought Federation is very encouraging. Never before in the history of the Federation has a year been so productive of good work, growth, and practical enthusiasm as 1892. The Belgians are waking up. Our greeting and congratulations to our Belgian brethren.

The over-procurator of the holy Russian synod, M. Pobedonoszeff, has written a letter to the Roman Catholic prelate, Vanutelli, in which he expresses his sorrow over the inactivity of the church in Western Europe. "The Russian and Roman Catholic church ought to forget their differences and unite their forces to a war of extermination of unbelief and Freethought."

Mr. Paul de Jaer, the Freethinker, and mayor of Saint-Gillis, is dead. He was one of the most prominent Belgian Freethinkers. His funeral, which was strictly Secular, was attended by a great multitude of people. Besides the various Freethought societies, there were present the governor and provincial councillors and the municipal authorities of Saint-Gillis and neighboring cities.

The students of the university of Barcelona, Spain, have organized a Liberal society and joined the Spanish Freethought Federation. At the first meeting, which was held in the Theater Calvo-Vuo, standing-room was at a premium. That is right. Freethought must begin from above. Mankind are yet addicted to hero-worship and following those who are above them in learning and social standing. Our greeting to the Spanish students.

The church could not down our friend, Victor E. Lennstrand, even when she called the state in to assist her, but exterminated he must be. Last month Mr. Lennstrand received a kind of religious White Cap letter from persons "who have sworn to kill him." This "Christian" letter says, among other things: "Your enemies will not rest until either you are dead or the association has ceased to exist. Money works wonders." We suppose it is unnecessary to state that the Swedish Freethought champion will continue his work as usual.

The French Freethinkers are very prompt to renew their subscriptions. During the first half of January, 1893, the Bulletin Mensuel de la Fédération Française took in nearly eight hundred francs in renewals. Our French brethren realize the fact that to carry on a successful war three things are necessary: money, money, and money. Friends, renew, and send in new subscribers.

In Austria the church people have been greatly shocked. The well-known hotel-owner Bauer, of Wr.-Neustadt near Vienna, declared on his death-bed that he was a Freethinker, and following him, T. Vernalehen, the ex-principal of the Vienna normal school, has informed the police that he has left the church for good, and entered the Freereligious Society at Vienna—the president of which is our venerable friend, the ex-priest Edward Schwella.

Let us look out for our public schools, and by all means keep the clergy out. If we do not, we must expect that our children will be taught the same nonsense as was taught in 1873 to the children in the gymnasium at Schweren. The teacher of religion in that school, Minister Von Stark, informed the children that there was no such thing as electricity. The lightning was produced by the angels, who sat in the clouds. And those who prayed and attended church would never be struck by it.

Freethinkers who have friends or acquaintances among our Swedish fellow-citizens may send their names and post-office addresses, stating the number of copies wished, together with cost of transportation, to Fritänkaren, Engelbrechtsgatan 43 B, Stockholm, Sweden. The papers are to be distributed among such Swedish-Americans as cannot read English. If you have friends that can master the English language, send for copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, the greatest Freethought paper on earth, and distribute them.

"The church has a good stomach," Goethe has his Faust exclaim, and we are sure our readers will agree with the "great pagan" when they have read the figures here quoted. These figures, which are official, represent the cost in cash of the church in France:

1803.....	4,000,000 fr.	1829.....	35,000,000 fr.
1805.....	12,000,000 "	1847.....	39,000,000 "
1813.....	13,000,000 "	1851.....	41,000,000 "
1815.....	19,000,000 "	1854.....	44,000,000 "
1817.....	20,000,000 "	1856.....	50,000,000 "
1820.....	24,000,000 "	1871.....	55,000,000 "
1826.....	30,000,000 "	1889.....	43,000,000 "

The tax value of 39,000 churches and 31,000 ecclesiastical residences given free to the church is 245,000,000 francs; the actual value, 2 milliards.

If Christians would spend less time telling lies about the great and grand men whom the truth of science has made Infidels, and in trying to hide the sins of the old patriarchs by attributing them to God, the world would be a much better residence-quarter than either hell or heaven.

There are but few characters mentioned in the Bible who would not nowadays be found guilty of murder in the first degree, even if tried by the most ignorant jury who could be empaneled in the United States. In California they would not be accorded the delay of a trial.

Letters of Friends.

A Good Way to Talk.

LIVERMORE, Feb. 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see my time is up on the paper, but I cannot raise the money just yet but will in the course of a month or two. I never will be without it as long as I can raise the subscription.

Yours respectfully, CHAS. GINGER.

Mistress Columbia's Reprehensible Flirtation.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The picture in this week's TRUTH SEEKER, "A Dangerous Amusement, Columbia Flirting with Roman Catholicism," is one of the best pictures ever produced by Heston. It tells the whole story of the intrigue of the church of Rome while the Americans remain asleep.

S. R. THORNE.

Liberals; Wear Badges to the Fair.

HENNEPIN, ILL., Feb. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Let me mention again, Would it not be a good idea if all the Liberals who attend the World's Fair would put on some color for a badge—say a small piece of ribbon? I for one would like to get acquainted with all Freethinkers.

JOHN M. STAUFFER.

Religion a Product of the Imagination.

CORNING, March 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: We are overrun with reading-matter and cannot read all that presents itself to our table, but when THE TRUTH SEEKER arrives it is never passed by without a few minutes devoted to its contents. And that man Heston is a miracle if ever there was one. Doesn't he show up the product of imagination to the horror of the Christians! (Is not religion the product of the imagination?)

DANIEL LEONARD.

Upholds Peck Against God.

MINNESOTA LAKE, MINN., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Brother Peck strikes very heavy. I say, give more such good sense. Bless your hearts, if "God" cannot defend himself he cannot find any favor here. Brother Peck's views coincide with mine, but the difference is that I cannot express mine in such good language. I felt God's kindness a year ago, when my only child was left motherless seven weeks old. Did Christ help me? No!

I say the Bible's teaching is immoral. Men and women, read that book. Study carefully what is in it—fraud, murder, crime.

E. S. GLICK.

A Preacher Unhorsed.

LISLE, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I would like very much to send some new subscribers. And thought I was going to succeed, but the sky-pilots carry too heavy guns for me in that respect. They are holding one of their annual powwows in our little village now. The two churches combine.

I was in the post-office the other evening and the Methodist minister gave me an invitation to go over to church with him. I said I would if he would answer a few questions I would like to ask him so the few hearers could understand them. The second question unhorsed him and he gamboled off for the church with lots of merriment behind him and without giving me a second invitation to go with him.

Yours for the freedom of mankind,
R. H. GLOVER.

One Advantage of Being an Infidel—Spared from Grasshoppers.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Feb. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Some years ago there were grasshoppers that destroyed the whole crop of my neighbors, while mine was about only one-fourth destroyed. This happened twice. My farm is only thirty rods wide, and we are four French families all in line. I am the only Infidel in the neighborhood, and the only one whose crop was saved. I was telling this to a Salvationist. He said God did it to try my neighbors, but me he knew it was of no use to try. So that ended the argument.

I read to a neighbor the "Reply to the Theist" by Mr. Charles Laperche. He said, "That man does not believe in anything." I told him that he did, but in facts.

An old lady neighbor who is a French Catholic, said she did not believe in hell. I told her that she was not a true Catholic if she did not. She thinks it is too wicked. She said, "I could not be happy in heaven and mother in hell." So you see even the Roman Catholics begin to think. I asked her some questions regarding resurrection, but she seems very ignorant on religion.

Yours for truth,

CHARLES LAMBERT.

Pleasant Items from Boston.

BOSTON, MASS., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Though in the home of the good old Investigator, I nevertheless regularly receive or buy the best Liberal paper out, to my mind, THE TRUTH SEEKER. Its "Letters from Friends" are always agreeable reading. I am trying to work the scheme mentioned by Mr. Butler in your issue of the 11th ult., but have been refused by two dealers. They said it would hurt their trade. I shall keep on trying, however.

New England is very conservative. Not a theater is open on Sunday in this city, whereas in St. Louis and other Western towns the playhouses do a big business, having a matinee and evening performance on the "Lord's day." However, I heard the Rev. Mr. Lorimer, of Tremont Temple, Boston's big gospel shop, say recently in a sermon, that he did not believe Joshua ever made the sun and moon stand still; that the book referred to was not an inspired one, and further that the language was simply figurative. He is a Baptist, but water will not save him if he keeps that kind of sermonizing up.

The editorial, "One of Christianity's Disgraces," is a gem, echoing, as I believe it does, the sentiments of every true Liberal.

We should all do our best to help THE TRUTH SEEKER along. If everyone who can would buy it at news-stands, thereby creating a regular demand for it, its sale would greatly increase.

Respectfully, ELLIS FAREWELL.

Information Wanted.

WOODFORDS, ME., March 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: If some of our good Christian brothers would kindly give me an explanation of the following extract from their Book of Books, I should feel myself to be under personal obligations to them.

Matthew, in the first chapter of his gospel, gives us a genealogy of Christ through Joseph, and makes twenty-eight generations from Christ to David. Luke does the same thing in the third chapter of his gospel, but makes forty-three generations, and no two names in the two tables are the same, except those of Joseph and David. However, let that pass without comment, although it seems to me to be a contradiction of the first water.

What I want explained is this—if Christ was really the son of God, as that Book says he was, he could not by any possibility have been the son of Joseph, or any blood relation whatever of his.

If he was descended from David at all, it must have been through Mary, his mother.

If your Bible be inspired, my Christian friends, how will you explain to me this inspired blunder?

It begins to appear as if the God of the Jews, so far from being, as he is styled, the Great Architect, was utterly incapable of doing a thorough, finished job in anything he undertook.

Hoping you will allow this to appear in the columns of your excellent paper, which I already admire for its plain, matter-of-fact way of dealing with superstitions, showing up fraud and error and being in fact all which its name implies, I remain,

Yours for truth,

FRED IRISH.

Piercing Reproof to Our Legislators.

BREATHEDSVILLE, MD., March 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER has expired, and I have not found a new subscriber, I herewith send you a $5 express money-order for two years' subscription. I hope it will not be very long until subscribers will be more easily obtained than now, while many who really wish to read the paper, and wish success to the cause it advocates, are afraid of the church influence. According to my idea, the church is now booming itself into the last Waterloo. Light, the grand light of Reason and Science, is getting stronger and able to scatter the darkness of superstition wherever it meets it in our land.

Our quarantine laws are the effect of Freethought, as well as all other humanitarian laws, notwithstanding contrary to the church.

As to the Columbian exhibition, where reason, science, and humanity seem to have been worsted, I cannot believe it to be a fact. Congressmen are sworn, as well as the president, to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States to the best of their ability; therefore it is plain there cannot be a law, or any part of a law, passed that is directly prohibited without perjury, and such law must of necessity be null and void.

The Constitution gives us the right of petition, yet it seems to me a crime to ask or petition Congress to do that very thing which the Constitution says they shall not do, just as much as it is a crime for me to ask, influence, or bribe a witness or jurymen to do as I wish above all other considerations. I cannot see how an informed, honest man can sign such a petition. This is a matter beyond a petition, therefore I signed no petition against it.

With best wishes to you, our Liberal brethren, and our cause, I remain, Yours, JOHN M. GROH.

Talmage, His God, and Many Christians, All Vile.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Jan. 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The prince of mountebanks, De Witt Talmage, has been here, and his performance in the role of a lecturer proved the worst disappointment and the most disgusting "sell" inflicted on the gullible orthodox masses in a long time. Sam Jones's big Tabernacle was crowded to the galleries, at a big fee, by those who were anxious to hear the "great preacher." But when Talmage read his wishy-washy ideas in a tame way from manuscript, it fell on the audience like a cold, wet blanket in November. The mystery is, how does this old theological fraud manage to gull the people the way he does? It is amusing to see how reticent and mum the orthodox have been ever since they were so badly victimized. The many who saw and heard Talmage ask the question: "Is he honest?" In my opinion no man can take a good look at his foxy mug without concluding that he is a dishonest old hypocrite, unless a great mistake was made in putting the finishing touches on that telltale face of his. But then the Bible God may have created Talmage, and if he did the work exactly corresponds to the character of the workman, as the Bible God outranks all devils, big and little, for hate, cruelty, perfidy, and infernal meanness.

I have just read in the daily press about a good Christian missionary and his wife, who had spent several years traveling through the Chinese empire preaching to the celestials the beauties of "innate depravity" and "Jesus paid it all," and in all the heathen cities and villages which they visited they were offered no indignity or insult. They returned to our dear Christian country and held a meeting one night last week in the city of Omaha, with its one hundred churches and two hundred armed policemen on duty day and night to keep the peace and prevent Christians from depredating on each other's rights of life and property. When their meeting was over, on their way to their hotel these two unsuspecting missionaries, forgetting they were not in China, were both sandbagged and robbed. Without police protection they were safe in heathen cities, but an army of policemen could not save them from violence in a Christian city where the detestable, man-degrading doctrines of "innate villainess" and "eleventh-hour repentance" strengthen the hand of the evil-doer in perpetrating his schemes of plunder and murder.

WARREN SMITH.

Wants Literature Supplied.

OSWEGO, N. Y., March 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to call the attention of your readers to Brother L. R. Titus's letter in your issue of February 11th. He suggests just what I have been wishing to see for many months—that some rich Liberal would supply some poor devil who has the courage but no money with distributing matter, including pamphlets, tracts, and the World's Fair leaflets. A few dollars expended in that way would do more educating than five times the amount expended in public lectures. I have tested that way in Oswego. I have found that strong church-members are not offended by having the strongest Infidel literature thrown into their shops, stores, and offices. They will read it. The same ones would not go near a public lecture. And it makes more of a lasting impression. I have had just cause to censure and blame rich Infidels, both in Oswego and elsewhere. I have found to my disappointment that they do not average one in a hundred that has the courage to do any missionary work. There are many cities, towns, and hamlets the distributing of such literature from time to time in which would be the source of converting many hundreds from the church teachings that could not be educated by public lectures at a much greater expense. I hope this plan will be carried out by some few Liberals in the near future. If it should be, remember me as one that wants a good supply of the fighting material.

I am very much pleased with Brother John W. Abbott's reply to the Hon. John Davis and Senator Pepper. I have been a leader and a representative on the electoral ticket of the People's party, but I must say I never would become a member of a Farmers' Alliance club that would open its meetings with prayer. I offer my best wishes and blessings to Mayor Washburne of Chicago. He presented a very able argument before the Congressional committee at Washington for an open Sunday. It is an address of which I wish millions of copies could be distributed broadcast. He asked what justice there would be to legislate in favor of ten million Sunday-closing bigots and debar fifty million citizens of their constitutional rights and privileges of free-born people. His appeal in behalf of the laboring class of our citizens was noble and grand. I have thought, Do the closing church bigots stop and think of the many millions of sailors and soldiers that know no Sunday in their professional duty? Their sympathy for the employees at the World's Fair buildings, wishing to give them a rest-day, is not needed, for there are many thousands wishing and starving for that amount of employment. But I think I have said my share for the World's Fair opening.

From one that demands justice,
JASPER J. BROWN.

[We have supplied Mr. Brown with a bundle of tracts and TRUTH SEEKERS and hope he will stir up his town with them. It is a good work, and those who will do it should be encouraged.—ED. T. S.]

A Future Life?

ROCHESTER, MICH., Feb. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $5 for another two years' subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am becoming an old man, now nearly seventy-six. I may not be here to read it so long, but will venture to take the chances. I have taken the paper from the start, and want to continue it as long as my eyesight holds out at least.

On the whole, I like the old TRUTH SEEKER very much; its communications, correspondence, bright, suggestive "Children's Corner," and all. In reading I skip none of it, hardly the advertisements.

The editorials seem in the right place, for I almost always read them first, and the direct, clear-cut, incisive manner in which you write, and the spirit you manifest toward opponents, pleases me. The Liberalism you also show in printing both sides of discussions seems quite admirable.

The discussions in your columns regarding a future life have much interested me. Some of your correspondents seem quite positiv that mind, soul, or spirit does not exist independent of a human brain, that it in fact is only a result or process of brain-action. Others, again, as firmly believe that mind may and does exist after it has left the brain-tenement, and claim that there are a multitude of well-attested facts to sustain their belief.

Nature seems to have brought us into being with a wonderful attachment to life here, and also placed down deep within us—or most of us—a lifelong hope for an existence hereafter. If she shall meet this demand of her own planting, granting us another life, with more and possibly better opportunities for its enjoyment, very well! If not, how is she going to avoid the charge of being finally bankrupt? It was a wonderful work getting us started here. Has that herculean labor, think you, exhausted all her resources?

Occasionally a writer of yours expresses himself as well pleased with the prospect before him of an eternal dreamless sleep. It is going to be such a peaceful rest after earth's turmoil! Yet we do not hear of anyone congratulating himself upon the enjoyment of the long sleep he had before his birth, back in the beginningless past. But why not, if the thought of future annihilation is such a restful, pleasant one?

By the way, it would seem that Ingersoll—a name that we Liberals are always ready to swear by—is not so very far from a belief, or, if you please, a firm hope, in a future life. Let us read from him: "I thank him for the brave words he has said on the subject of death. Since he has lived death is less fearful than it was before, and thousands and millions will walk down into the dark valley of the shadow holding Walt Whitman by the hand, long after we are dead. The brave words that he has spoken will sound like trumpets to the dying." And here are a few of them:

Do you suspect death? If I were to suspect death I should die now;
Do you think I would walk well pleased toward annihilation?
Pleasantly and well suited I walk;
Whither I walk I cannot define, but I know it is good.
I feel like one that has done his work, I progress on;
The unknown sphere more real than I dreamed, more direct, darts awakening rays upon me.
So I pass a little time, vocal, visible, contrary;
Afterward, a melodious echo, death making me undying.

The question now occurs to me, can these sentences of Walt Whitman, by any adroit handling in a Materialistic refining crucible, or by some literary legerdemain, have the idea of personal immortality fairly eliminated from them? If not, and if Robert Ingersoll was, at the time of delivering that incomparable funeral address, absolutely, through and through, an Agnostic, then it would certainly seem that he was left to speak a great deal better than he didn't know.

Bear with me a few words more. The Editor of this paper, and the men and women who have written for it—some of you a goodly number of years—I want to thank you all most heartily for the opportunity you have afforded me of reading your many valuable thoughts, so ably expressed and on such a variety of subjects. To me it has been an education, and done me otherwise a world of good. In fact, the names of many of you seem so familiar to me in connection with your writings that I find myself almost counting you as personal friends, and often wish I could meet you, if only to exchange a few words.

If the lease of life holds good for us, over into the great somewhere, beyond, I hope yet to make your personal acquaintance. And as this may be my last word here, let me not forget to pay my respects to the inimitable Heston, who, with those terrible, pitiless cartoons, has been and yet is hitting with such stunning effect some of the worst shams in this wide world.

C. H. GREENE.

Women Must Be Developed Before Enfranchised.

CONCORDIA, KAN., Feb. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please to allow me a little space in THE TRUTH SEEKER for the purpose of congratulating Albert Sandberg upon his excellent, common-sense views regarding woman's suffrage, as disclosed in your issue of February 8th. When he says, "Liberals surely must be aware that nearly all preachers and very religious people desire the women to vote," he strikes a note which ought to force those Liberals to take heed as to where they are rushing.

Of course the "dear pastor" wants his sweet, lovable, pious feminine flock to vote, for he knows that when they do so his advice will be followed to the letter, with loving glances and trustful giggles. He prefers that they shall not know too much, and they would rather, much rather, read novels and go begging for the church and sell their kisses promiscuously at church fairs than tire themselves out over "nasty old politics." What do you think would be the state of the churches if there should be a law enacted prohibiting women from attending church and from having anything to do with church matters? I think that Christianity would collapse, evaporate, dematerialize; it would become a dream of the past; and those thousands of untaxed spire-tipped edifices would be turned into horse stables or something else useful; and perhaps then the homeless street "kids" would sometimes find shelter within them without being advised to "move on." And yet Liberals who are old enough to know better are anxious that the women who sustain those churches shall vote honest, Freethinking men and women into outer darkness and their putty Jew God into the Constitution. O sweet consistency, do sparkle a little! It has seemed to me for a long time as if Liberals are trying to bite off their own noses just to see what a grotesque appearance their faces will present after the painful experiment.

I freely confess that I am willing to forego the exquisite fun of voting, rather than to see our republic go to the "bow-wows," as it certainly will do if women, in their present benighted condition, politically, are given the ballot. Any person who has wasted time over the various political issues of the day and has dabbled a little in the study of civil government, political economy, and such trash, cannot fail to feel a trifle nervous about seeing an overwhelming mass of home-grown ignorance, in addition to the vast supplies imported from Europe, heaped upon the more than enough already on hand controlling affairs of state.

It may be remembered that our amiable and gallant legislature a few years ago tendered to the women of this lively commonwealth the rights of municipal suffrage. Kansas legislators are not addicted to the bad habit of following the ancient and worm-eaten customs of anybody's ancestors, as the recent carnival at our state capital goes to prove. If they are not sufficiently original in one way, why, their successors take more striking and even shooting methods. Municipal suffrage to women was one way, and if anyone who has stemmed the storm since that mistake went into effect has the hardihood to say that the political condition of the state is better than before, or that the towns are cleaner and better governed, or that there are fewer places of low morality, let him consult a brain specialist at once—delays are dangerous.

Being a woman, I have many opportunities for finding out the mental status of the sweet spring voter from which brave masculinity is debarred, and I have had experiences the remembrance of which always causes a smile and then a tear. I will relate one incident, just to show how well prepared one woman was to take upon herself the affairs of state.

In the summer of 1888, when the Republican convention was making things lively and the question as to what man would be nominated filled the very air, I happened to be at the house of an acquaintance, a member of the church, a voter, and the mother of two youngsters, both of whom may have the blessed privilege at some future date of breaking down doors in legislative halls. Upon the piano lay piles of illustrated papers telling all about the convention and near them, face down, a dog-eared novel. While I was there, the husband came in with a fresh supply of papers and a radiant face, and I said,

"Hurrah for —?" and he shouted "Harrison!" Mrs. Blank then became somewhat interested and said, "Who is going to be president next time, dear?" As if in echo of himself, he repeated, "Harrison." "Oh, is he?" said she. "I didn't know. I heard somebody say that they were going to appoint Cleveland again."

I am not given to pitying men, for they seem strong enough, as a rule, to take care of themselves; but I did feel sorry for that fellow and disguised my amusement perfectly. Do not imagine for one moment that Mrs. Blank was an ignorant woman. She could read and she did read nearly all the time, and she knew "just lots." She could have told you, to within the sixteenth of a palp, just how many palpitations Alphonso's active heart made while he held in his loving arms the fainting but angelic form of his adored Celestia and showered passionate kisses upon her marble brow just subsequent to her giving an affirmative reply to a very stale question, as set forth in the above-named novel; and she was as well capacitated to vote as nine-tenths of the women are.

I did intend to tell you how the "women folks" of this town voted the Bible into school, but if I do so I fear you will be frightened at the length of this and give instructions to have it thrown into the broken-type receptacle—a thing that seems to hold its own in printing offices in spite of all revisions. I will add, however, that it would be better for Liberals to labor for these poor, creed-bound women than to waste energy in gaining for them the rights of suffrage. I do all that I can in a small way for that object, and almost enjoy the abuse that I sometimes get for my pains. Let us wait until the harvest is ripe and avoid mildew. There is plenty of useful work ready for our hands.

RETTA S. ANDERSON.

Women Will Vote As Intelligently As Men.

PORTLAND, KAN., March 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see in a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER, dated February 18th, an article from Albert Sandberg, of Nunach, Cal., which I would like the privilege of answering. The title of this article is "Women Will Abolish What Little Liberty We Have."

It will be apparent at once that I do not agree with Mr. Sandberg's statements, and am therefore appearing on the defensive.

In the first place he says: "Now that the Freethought Federation of America is an established fact it behooves us as intelligent electors to closely examine, from more than one standpoint, whether our sisters, mothers, and wives should share with the men that greatest of responsibilities, the ballot."

He goes on to say that women are not educated properly to be able to vote intelligently. They must be aroused to their position by being made to feel the littleness of dress, novel-reading, gossip, etc.

I wish to ask how Mr. Sandberg proposes to bring about this reform. Does he think that by posing as the wisest of God's creatures, and setting his feet (figuratively speaking) squarely across the necks of the "dear creatures," by and by they will step forth perfect political graduates?

Furthermore I ask, how true is Mr. Sandberg's statement where he says: "Liberals surely must be aware that nearly all preachers and very religious people desire the women to vote?" I assert that this is not true, for if it were women would long ago have held the ballot. For the different religions in one form or another comprise a vast majority. Show one instance where the people of any religious faith (orthodox so called) were ever the first to advocate any reform. How was it with the question of slavery? The churches held that slavery was right long after it became an agitated question in the land. Just so with nearly all of the great questions of reform—we find the churches among the last to fall in with the plan. Hence I say that Mr. Sandberg is wrong when he says that the clergy has an eye for its own gains in urging the franchise for women. The preachers, it is true, are now beginning to give their sanction to this reform, but they were not the first, by any means, to advocate it.

I would be ashamed to class myself with the Liberals if I wished to deny to men the free use of the ballot. No doubt Mr. Sandberg will be filled with holy horror to think that a woman would dare to question man's, lordly man's right to the ballot. But nevertheless I do affirm, and I believe on a logical basis, that women as a class, frivolous and giddy as the writer tries to picture them, are as well qualified to-day to cast an intelligent vote as are the men. How many men, think you, are there that know and understand the principles of the party for which they are voting? I will venture to say that not more than one in ten knows what the word tariff means. They could not tell the true meaning of the term free trade. Yet every man (in years) has a legal right to vote for or against these things.

Talk about women reforming before they can vote. The question most important to consider is to educate the men as well as the women. But as we already have given men the ballot regardless of intelligence or even principle, I ask, how much worse can we make matters by giving women an equal chance—which is theirs by right anyway?

Again, he says: "Think of the danger to our treasured freedom of conscience if the fanatical Woman's Christian Temperance Union, led by that very able female suffragist, Miss Frances Willard, were turned at large with the ballot in their hands." Now the Temperance question is a broad one, and one that cannot be passed over with one sweeping statement, and especially with the one that Mr. Sandberg makes. Just look at him as he draws himself up with such dignity as he says: "Think of the danger to our treasured freedom of conscience," etc. I do not doubt, judging from his language, that his freedom of conscience is very treasured. It must be kept even at the expense of other people's happiness and comfort. How is freedom, in its true sense, to be granted if liquor is allowed a place where it can drive its slaves over the hearts and consciences of others? It is an impossibility to be free with liquor, because before very long you are liquor's slave instead of making it serve you. No one can deny that liquor is an evil, and no one should have a right to force evil of any kind upon another just for the sake of his or her "treasured freedom of conscience."

The idea of the writer calling himself a Liberal when he is trying to prohibit people from making Sunday laws! Why not have laws? Law regarding Sunday is what we need, but let us educate our men and women so that they will make the right kind of laws. By the right kind of laws I mean intelligent laws, laws to govern but not to fetter. The idea of a great many concerning Liberalism is to do as we please, every man for himself regardless of others. Such ideas are anarchism and ought not to be tolerated. We must be governed by laws in order to enjoy. If there were no laws the weak would suffer at the hands of the strong; and no one could enjoy as much as when he is protected in right and checked from wrong.

Lastly I wish to mention the language of Mr. Sandberg. On second thought, I think, he would hesitate before using it again. It shows uncharity for those who do not agree with him, as well as a hasty impulse, together with an effort to show off. In my opinion no well-bred gentleman would use such language.

According to his belief all readers of his article must suffer and put up with his offensive language to keep from treading on his "treasured freedom of conscience."

Then if the Freethought Federation means Anarchism, a right to trample on others, and the exclusion of the ballot to women, whose intelligence often exceeds that of the present voters, the sooner it is banished from the land the better.

But in my opinion this is not so. The Freethought Federation, instead, as I understand it, upholds law and order, helping good along and suppressing evil; and the question uppermost should be to find out the real good and real evil. When this is reached we will have approached perfection.

LAURA KNOX.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Bessie's Opinion.

Bessie went to church that morning;
She had never been before,
"But she's old enough," said mamma;
"Three years old, and almost four."

She had promised to be quiet;
"No, indeed, she wouldn't cry!"
Holding tight to papa's finger,
Off she went with sparkling eye.

Wonderingly she saw the people,
Saw the flowers and the rest,
Gazed up at the lofty arches,
But the music pleased her best.

When it ceased and came the sermon,
Bessie frowned and fidgeted.
"Sh, be quiet, Bess!" said mamma.
But she shook her little head,

Stood up on the red pew-cushion,
Waved her hand in queenly way
Toward the preacher, toward the organ—
"Man, be quiet! Band, you play!"

—M. Helen Frazer Lovett in the Churchman.

Musings.

I saw not long since an article headed "A Plea for the Dullard," which brought vividly to mind my early school experience, as I then, tenaciously, held the foot of the dunce class, and, as far as scholarship is concerned, I am like the Irishman who said, "When I came to this country I was all rags, and I have held my own remarkably well ever since."

Talleyrand in speaking of the act of a contemporary said, "It is worse than a crime, it is a blunder." And thus I would characterize the act of anyone who would say or do anything to discourage a child, for I know the harm thus done cannot well be estimated. Such a course chills and deadens the sensibilities, and leaves a sting behind to rankle, no less potent because in the breast of a child, for childhood has no defense against our grown-up assumption, but must perforce remain dumb before our vaunted wisdom. "Our wisdom!" Most of our cruelty comes from want of perception; and I much fear that if we should carefully analyze our own acquirements, we should find ourselves the veriest jejune babies. And besides, it is not brave to wantonly injure the feelings of anyone, and absolute cowardice to do so to a child who feels and recoils, but does not understand. I hold with Dr. Johnson, who said, "Sir, a man has no more right to say an uncivil thing than to act one, no more right to say a rude thing to another than to knock him down." And I believe that we have yet to reach a stage of civilization in which we shall realize that a stab from pen or tongue is as much a crime as a shot from a pistol.

In the morning of life the mind is like the germ in spring-time—struggling for florescence. We are first objectiv, then subjectiv. Then let us not forget our own derelictions in childhood; and they were not always willful. Emerson has well said that "In my dealing with my child, my Latin and my Greek, my accomplishments and my money, stand me nothing. They are all lost on him; but as much soul as I have avails. If I am merely willful, he gives me a Roland for an Oliver, sets his will against mine, one for one, and leaves me, if I please, the degradation of beating him by my superiority of strength. But if I renounce my will and act from the soul, setting that up as umpire between us two, out of his young eyes looks the same soul; he reveres and loves with me; for the soul is the perceiver and revealer of truth." And here the words of Leigh Hunt are apt—"Even power itself hath not one-half the might of gentleness."

The teaching that shall direct the thought of the twentieth century, will not be by the ferule, threats, or debasement; neither will the lessons be the "juiceless dogmas, dry argument and theories, of the past, however closely knit." But it will be by development of the whole entity—the physical, mental, and moral nature, which are but as hands and feet to the soul; the means by which it makes itself manifest. It would seem not to be so much the duty of the teacher to cram the mind of the child with the thoughts of others, as it is to direct him how to think; for the modern mind cannot be permanently satisfied with the superstitions that have prevailed, nor confined in the petty circles of old traditions, for it is self-asserting. It says, "I have thoughts of my own, as well as Socrates, Plato, or Dante, Caesar, or St. Chrysostom—and why should I not use them? The same fountain at which they slaked their thirst for knowledge exists now; and it is free to all; therefore it rests with me, at first hand, to drain or refuse the cup, beaded and sparkling with immortal thoughts."

Yes, "the gods have pondered, and a new era has arisen." Meteoric splendors no longer terrify us. It is no longer a crime to believe ex cathedra. Geology has shown our vaporings about creation to be but figments of the brain. The spade of the archaeologist has thrown light upon the dark places of history. Electricity discounts time and space. We have given up hunting for a vessel to hold a universal solvent; for chemistry has dissolved alchemy. Astronomy has throttled astrology, and the planets and stars now mind their own business. Our mental vision is "widening with the process of the suns." What if we are startled out of our old and defunct propensities? Our faces are toward the morning and we no longer want men and women trained to think to order; for we would rather—now and then—be terrified, as was the public when Dickens wrote his "Do-the-boys Hall," or when Thackeray produced his "Becky Sharp," or still better when Helen Gardener's "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" appeared.

There are times in every life when the heart is opened and lets in a sunbeam of our better nature. Then the overflow of our inner consciousness is sweet and lyrical. It seems to me that every sermon, essay, and address, every expressed thought, should be a perfect transcript—a photograph of the soul. Then our teaching from pulpit, press, and rostrum would cease to be one-sided, cease to be a travesty. Then we should no longer be compelled to listen to the voice and echo of the paid attorney, but instead thereof our public utterances would become a vitalizing influence and react on society, clearing away the cobwebs of conventionality, winnowing the chaff from the wheat, purging the gold of its dross, and bringing to view the untarnished intellectual coin of the ages. And why should we fear innovation? Remember that we have, nor can we have, but one moment of time, and that is the ever-recurring Now, which is all there is of eternity; and that in the intellectual and ethical, as well as in the physical world, the cradle is always rocked on the grave; and that the new of to-day will be the old of to-morrow; that we are begirt with spiritual as well as physical laws that execute themselves; and that "the things we now esteem fixed shall one by one detach themselves like ripened fruit from our experience and fall."

But to return from my digression. "Who goes slow, goes long and goes far," says the Italian proverb; and equally true is the Welsh saying, that "Failures are but pillars of success." To verify these sayings let us look at the lives of those who have been foremost in the world's advance; their names are legion, but we will give a few: Dryden was a dull boy both at school and at college, and necessity drove him to embark on the sea of letters. Grant stood low in his class, but became general of the army, and president. Pestalozzi was unsuccessful at school. Goldsmith was especially stupid, and was declared indolent and a blockhead, and only became an author by compulsion. Cowper was nearly thirty-five before he knew his own powers. Whitfield hated instruction, was a young thief, and called "utterly wicked." Buffon was by no means a prodigy in youth. The illustrious Diderot was early called the scapegrace of his family. Dumas, Balzac, and John Howard the philanthropist, were idlers in boyhood and "made haste slowly" at school. Even the brilliant Sheridan was pronounced by his mother to be one of the most impenetrable dunces. The elder Isambard Brunel had no taste for the classics, and was noways remarkable in youth; but he was a close observer, and when a common sailor, by watching the shipworm, as it made its way through the timber, varnishing the top and sides as a shield, he learned how to construct his famous tunnel under the river Thames. Lord Cockburn, of Scotland, when at the high school "exhibited no indications of extraordinary ability," but says of himself, "I was thrashed into stupidity by my teachers"—which reminds me of that ugly factor of school life, corporal punishment.

The Greeks did not allow the use of the ferule or the rod, holding that their use destroyed the finer sensibility of the child, "though it should be the first care and labor of the preceptor to increase it; that to beat the body was to debase the mind, that nothing so soon or so totally abolished the sense of shame, and yet that sense is at once the best preservative of virtue;" and virtue with them was synonymous with bravery and honor; and nobility of thought and action appears all through their literature, urging to noble deeds and high enterprise. Take but one example among the many—Hector's speech to Ajax as they are to contend before the walls of Troy:

But open be our fight, and bold each blow;
I steal no conquest from a noble foe.

And after the battle—

But let us, on this memorable day,
Exchange some gift: that Greece and Troy may say
Not hate, but glory, made these chiefs contend;
And each brave foe was in his soul a friend.

It is beautiful that childhood should question, and that age should teach; but it is a shame to crush and damp the young ardor of the soul by punishment, overshadowing the budding life with fear; and I am constrained to say, Speed the day when corporal punishment—that relic of barbarism—shall be banished from our schools and hearthstones. Punishment—that word should be expunged from our vocabulary. I speak not against a proper and loving restraint; but it is more than doubtful as to the feasibility of punishment at all, for disguise it how you will, our punishments are but revenge, and it would not be hard to demonstrate that "moral defects and physical diseases are correlated;" hence both must be left to the unwritten law of nature, whose decrees are inexorable and always destructive of ignorance.

We pity the physical defects of our children and try to cure them of such ailments, whether they are hereditary or acquired; but instead of compassion for their moral deformity, we punish with stripes, forgetting that the brain is a palimpsest written all over, scrawl upon scrawl, with heredity and environment, so that the destiny of many [yes, all, Ed.] is practically determined, even before birth; and by careful analysis of parentage and surroundings, we see how some are vile and some are saints; and how, by a law, criminals are fabricated; or in other words we are conscious of cause and effect; and we may well ask, "What is wickedness?" Have we any right to expect virtue in a child born and reared in an atmosphere of crime and curses? Has he any choice but to become wicked? Yes, but it is the minimum, and only the recording angel can strike the balance of such a life; and Burns was right when he said:

What's done we partly may compute;
But know not what's resisted.
And yet the law of inheritance hands down our virtues as well as our vices; and the hope, the glory of our race lies in the fact that virtue is progressive and aggressive; it is a vital force and can be safely trusted to combat error. The history of man—written and unwritten—shows its potency. Evolution is a principle that has come to stay. It teaches that humanity has traveled a long and weary road from savagery to barbarism, and from thence to civilization. It shows that all divine wisdom is not located in the past; that the golden age is before, not behind us; that the star in the East is perpetual, and that the children yet to be born shall have a better birth, a better environment, a better development, a better life, and that the voice of God is a continual call, and Pascal was right when he said, "The whole succession of mankind during the long course of centuries must be considered as that of one man forever existing and forever learning something new." Yes, every age shows man to himself as a more wonderful creation; and as civilization advances, morality goes hand in hand with intelligence, for

The eternal course by God ordained
Is upward, onward still;
From dark to light, from wrong to right—
Evolving good from ill.

Perish the thought that children are totally depraved and that their moral aberrations are instigated by an infernal power. Let us remember that the good or evil we see in them is in exact proportion to the good or evil in ourselves, and that if we give them a fair chance and proper training their lives shall be a joy to the world and as radiant as the morning. Let us meet them with love and respect in

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phoenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

our own hearts and they shall give us measure for measure, for "With whatsoever measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," is a universal law of nature.

But I have dogmatized sufficiently and will close by an extract from a report made one hundred years ago by Condorcet to the French legislative, on education:

"If the indefinite improvement of our species is, as I believe, a general law of nature, man ought no longer to regard himself as a being limited to a transitory and isolated existence, destined to vanish after an alternative of happiness or of misery for himself and of good and evil for those whom chance has placed near him; but he becomes an active part of the grand whole, and a fellow-laborer in work that is eternal. In an existence of a moment, and upon a point in space, he can by his works compass all space and continue to act long centuries after his memory has disappeared from the earth. . . .

For a long time I have considered these views as dreams which were to be realized only in an indefinite future and for a world where I should not exist. A happy event has suddenly opened an immense career to the hopes of the human race; a single instant has put a century of distance between the man of to-day and him of to-morrow. . . . Public authority can not establish a body of doctrine which is to be exclusively taught. No public power ought to have the authority or even the permission to prevent the development of new truths or the teaching of theories contrary to its particular policy or to its momentary interests." A. J. STACKPOLE.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicereigns of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Mother of Harlots; a Synopsis of Popery, as It Was and as It Is. By William Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. The object of this book is to expose popery, acquaint the people of the country with the dangerous machinations of the church in the United States, and warn them against giving it any countenance or support. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH'S WORKS.

THEOLOGICAL ESSAYS.

In two volumes. Vol. I.—Heresy: Its Morality and Utility; Is There a God? Has Man a Soul? Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Who was Jesus? What Did Jesus Teach? The Atonement; Life of Abraham; Life of Jacob; Life of Moses; Life of David; Life of Jonah; The Twelve Apostles; When Were Our Gospels Written? A Plea for Atheism. Price, $1. Vol. II.—Humanity's Gain From Unbelief; Notes on Christian Evidences. In Reply to the Oxford House Papers; A Cardinal's Broken Oath; Supernatural and Rational Morality; Mr. Gladstone's Reply to Colonel Ingersoll on Christianity; A Few Words About the Devil; Has Man a Soul? Two Nights' Debate at Burnley with the Rev. W. M. Westoby; Secularism Unphilosophical, Unsocial, and Immoral. Three nights' Debate in London with the Rev. Dr. McCann. Price, $1.

THE FREETHINKERS' TEXT-BOOK. Part 1.

Man; Whence and How? Or, Revealed and Real Science in Conflict. Religion: What and Why? Or, God—X. Price, $1.25.

HUMANITY'S GAIN FROM UNBELIEF.

His North American Review article reprinted. 10 cents.

HERESY: ITS UTILITY AND MORALITY.

A Plea and a Justification. Third edition. Price, 25 cents.

WHEN WERE OUR GOSPELS WRITTEN?

Fourth Edition. Price, 25 cents.

NOTES ON CHRISTIAN EVIDENCES.

Being Criticisms on the "Oxford House Papers," with Replies by their authors. Price, 25 cents.

TRACTS.

Land Question, 5 cents; Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? 5 cents; Why Do Men Starve? 5 cents; A Plea for Atheism, 5 cents; Is There a God? 5 cents; Labor's Prayer, 5 cents; Poverty, Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People, 5 cents; New Life of David, 5 cents; New Life of Jonah, 5 cents; A Few Words About the Devil, 5 cents; New Life of Jacob, 5 cents; Twelve Apostles, 5 cents; Who Was Jesus Christ? 5 cents; What Did Jesus Teach? 5 cents; New Life of Abraham, 5 cents; New Life of Moses, 5 cents. On orders for these Tracts we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3; and $10 worth for $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 80c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths or Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York

Christianity a Fiction.

THE

Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL.

Price, 25 cents.

News of the Week.

JAS. VAN BLARCOM, of Oakland, N. J., who uttered profanity on the highway for twenty minutes continuously, has been sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment.

MRS. JANE HAYDEN, of Elizabeth, N. J., found on her doorstep a babe with an envelope inclosing a $5 bill and the information that the child's father had deserted the mother because of religious differences, and the latter could not support it alone.

THE London school board has decided that while instruction in the dogmas of any sect shall not be allowed, it is not advisable to limit religious instruction to reading selections of holy writ without comment or explanation. The board has voted that teachers shall give such explanations of the Bible as are suited to the capabilities of the children.

At Roubaix, France, last Sunday, Socialists attacked a Catholic meeting, reaching it by breaking in doors. They spit on and shattered the crucifix. The priests to allay their rage began to intone anthems. The Socialists knocked them down and then carried them to the doors and threw them out. When police arrived the assailants had driven every Catholic from the hall and smashed all the furniture.

THE ballot of the Presbyterian ministers on the Briggs and Smith heresy cases and on the doctrine of biblical inerrancy, begun some time ago by the Cincinnati Post, is practically complete, and the opinion is against Professors Briggs and Smith. The Bible is indorsed as a book practically without error, containing the true message of God to man. Higher criticism, as explained by Professor Briggs, is condemned as destructive and as aid to infidelity.

THE Protestants of Ulster province, Ireland, have organized an "Ulster Defense Union," to defend themselves by arms against the Catholic tyranny which they expect to attend Home Rule. This Union will have a council of six hundred members, an executive board of forty, and an elaborate machinery of defense. The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in Ireland has declared its solemn belief that under a Dublin parliament there will be no safety for property, person, or religious creed.

It is now said of Secretary of State Gresham: "He is not an unbeliever, and he is never offensive to church people. An intimate friend defines his position thus: 'He believes in a future life and in the existence of a supreme being, but probably he would not wish to be put on the stand for a rigid cross-examination as to what he believes and what he disbelieves, and would find it pretty difficult to make a categorical statement on the subject. He inherits his religion from his mother and preserves it through his wife.'"

AN Anabaptist preacher has been arrested in Latrig, government of Saratoff, Russia, for having murdered a girl of fourteen years. He had been preaching before a roomful of people in a private house concerning his power to raise the dead. At the end of his sermon he strangled the girl, with the consent of her parents, in order that he might demonstrate his ability to bring her back to life. After his prayers and exhortations had continued two hours the parents of the girl became convinced that he was an impostor and complained to the authorities, who locked him up.

CHRISTIAN journals are expressing much satisfaction with the closing passage of President Cleveland's inaugural address, which was as follows: "Above all, I know there is a Supreme Being who rules the affairs of men, and whose goodness and mercy have always followed the American people; and I know that He will not turn from us now if we humbly and reverently seek His powerful aid." The Roman Catholic Freeman's Journal, for instance, says that "the president has started out in a manner befitting the chief magistrate of a Christian republic where 'men are men, and not as yet ashamed to speak of heaven.'"

PROFESSOR TOTTEN announces, from study of the Bible prophecies, what is positively the final date for the opening of the millennium. He says: "There is but one consenting voice in the exegesis of prophecy, to wit, that we are absolutely at the midnight hour, and that its tenth stroke is sounding. That tenth stroke will end at the coming March equinox, the eleventh in June, and the twelfth and final stroke is the September equinox of the current year. After that none of the virgins need be in any further doubt as to the time or as to what or who is at hand. The motion in the religious world is already too apparent to be mistaken. It is the long-predicted awakening."

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Fifth, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confession and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25; cloth, gilt, $1.50.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for "blasphemy." Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERATION.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE.

A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9x13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

" " " COLONEL INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN. (A home picture.) 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 18 x 24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7 1/2 x 13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents. INGERSOLL ON McGLYNN. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED.

Paper, 3 cents. BIBLE IDOLATRY. Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE,

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1892. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Reunion at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings.

This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,357 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This is, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly colored, and richly tinted, the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it. As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "Tributes" that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Eliza Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Besides these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In the more elegant styles of binding it is eminently suited for presentation purposes, for any season or occasion.

PRICES.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50.

For sale at THIS OFFICE.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book. Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as ever George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.]

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF

ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

DID JESUS RISE FROM THE DEAD?

The evidence for the resurrection in this book carefully considered, and found wanting. It ought to convince every Christian of the untruthfulness of this alleged miracle, for it is certainly one of the best essays ever written on the subject. In paper, 25 cents.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIOAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continence even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it, is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinker's Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. 10 cents

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—

1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature, A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Momerie; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtree; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Miller; Signals with Mars: A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong. Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Acclaimed. $1.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. 10 cents

Gems of Thought.

THE flame of the fagot does not enlighten the mind.—Ingersoll.

A GOOD man cares not for the abuse of bad men.—Democritus.

To err is human, but only a fool will persist in error.—Cicero.

How can death be an evil, as it is never felt when it is death?—Diogenes.

I BELIEVE neither in chance nor in miracle, but only in phenomena regulated by laws.—Jouvenel.

I AM quite at my ease with a true man,—one who has in his heart and his head the love of the human race.—Voltaire.

THE most philosophical desire is, that life should consist in a succession of pleasing emotions, and death be considered an event neither to be coveted nor feared.—Epicurus.

I KNOW of many systems of religion esteemed heathenish whose precepts fill the reader with shame, and provoke him to new endeavors, though it be to the performance of rites merely.—Thoreau.

I ONCE asked a distinguished judge of New York what he had learned by sitting thirty years upon the bench. He answered promptly, "The difficulty of arriving at truth through human testimony."—Parton.

Is there any one maxim by which a man may regulate his whole life? It is simply to act toward others as we would desire they should act toward us. We need but this rule alone; it is the foundation and the principle of all our duties.—Confucius.

No educated man who has acquired but the most superficial knowledge of nature, still less a man proficient in science, can at this day believe in a miracle or in the possibility of anything happening in opposition to the recognized laws of nature.—Büchner.

Now, to summarize the evidences [of Evolution] previously alluded to, we find: 1. The Nebular Hypothesis—the formation of worlds from the moving "star dust"—agrees with all known facts concerning the solar system, and is accepted as the best explanation of the universe. 2. All the orders of the animal world show a connection, more or less complete, by which an ascending tree of life spreads out from a common root. 3. All the classes of the vegetable kingdom are likewise allied by a continuous succession of forms. 4. Animal and vegetable life meet in the lowest forms and suggest a common origin. 7. Animals and plants have rudiments of organs, which are useless and in some cases disappear in adult life. This can only be explained by the supposition that these forms are inherited from ancestors who possessed them fully developed. 8. Change of surroundings causes change in the organs of animals, in consequence of the survival of those who possess any peculiarity that makes them better fitted to endure the changes, and these peculiarities become fixed in their descendants. 12. The study of fossil remains of plants and animals reveals links between orders so separate that they have been regarded as special creations. But these intermediate forms show the transition from one species to another. 13. In the oldest rocks the lowest forms of life are found, and higher forms appear successively in later deposits, the highest creature—man—being found in the latest strata, proving that the series of forms that we now observe in existing life have been gradually developed in the same ascending series during the vast periods of the past. 14. The development of mind is traced upward from the lowest instincts, as truly as is the development of organic forms from simpler organisms, showing no need for the theory of the special creation of man's reasoning powers. 15. The study of languages reveals an orderly, gradual development of speech, corresponding to the growth of forms of life. 16. Moral sentiments have unfolded in animals and man by a process of development, similar to what is observed in organic forms. 17. There is no evidence that anything has suddenly come into existence in a completely developed form of varied structure. It is probable that the lowest and simplest form of life is the result of the combination of particles of matter by their own inherent energy, and that all subsequent developments have arisen from progressive changes that occurred in accordance with the same laws of nature that surround us to-day. 18. Finally, one of the principal causes of these progressive changes is observed to be the struggle for existence, which secures the survival of the fittest, or Natural Selection.—Robt. C. Adams.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JAMES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE: How does life begin? The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system; the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state; development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILLTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JAMES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOR J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JAMES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archaeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene, paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANLAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetishism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS. development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILLTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. FENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUNG. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by

J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr Fellows is an Infidel.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
R'PANS TABULET

JERRY HAS TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS.

Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the Lord.—Jere. xx, 2.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.25.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of it: "It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the
Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,
34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

6m12

SEND FOR BOOK OF MEDIUM WE.

Direct Medium We, 2,801 28th and Grace streets, Richmond, Va. Everybody should commune with spirit direct.

Should be developed in one hundred sphere, and not be entranced. The whole world cannot revolve in a continued control, not in a conscious condition. Truth that no philosopher, no professor of any science, no medium other than Medium We, ever gave to the world.

1t12

CUTTER.

Custom cutter and practical tailor, 38; 12 years' experience as cutter, with best city references; thorough knowledge of the trade in the South and Eastern states; seeks position in city or country; speaks English, German, and Swedish; salary moderate. Answer to N. N. 38, care of TRUTH SEEKER office, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

4t9

FOUNTAIN PEN, 10c.

COMET FOUNTAIN PEN

A splendid writing instrument. Hard Rubber Holder, patent continuous feed, durable gold pen, perfect finish, writes 10 pages at one filling. To advertise our line of two necessary articles we send sample pen with large catalogue post-paid for 10c., 3 for 25c. BIG BARGAIN VALUE! Catalogue free. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO. 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City. Steow12

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

NOW READY—ZOLA'S LATEST STORY.

MODERN MARRIAGE.

By EMILE ZOLA.

Price, 15 cents. At all bookellers and news-stands, or mailed, postpaid, by the translator and publisher, BENJ. R. TUCKER, 1612 120 Liberty st., New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

- | | Price. |
|---|--------|
| 1. Truth Seeker Annual, 1891..... | $0 26 |
| 2. Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner..... | 50 |
| 3. The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated..... | 25 |
| 4. Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett..... | 25 |
| 5. Christian Absurdities. John Peck..... | 20 |
| 6. Victor Hugo's Orat on on Voltaire..... | 10 |
| 7. The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated..... | 40 |
| 8. Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg..... | 25 |
| 9. Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams..... | 25 |
| 10. Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller..... | 25 |
| 11. My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam..... | 25 |
| 12. The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore..... | 50 |

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

- | | |
|--|----|
| 13. Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote..... | 25 |
| 14. Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated..... | 40 |
| 15. Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower..... | 10 |
| 16. Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner..... | 10 |
| 17. Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg..... | 25 |
| 18. Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk..... | 50 |
| 19. Pocket Theology. Voltaire..... | 25 |
| 20. Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock..... | 10 |
| 21. Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll..... | 25 |
| 22. Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor..... | 15 |
| 23. Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart..... | 40 |
| 24. The Holy Bible Abridged..... | 30 |
| 25. False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg..... | 10 |

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

- | | |
|---|----|
| 26. Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll..... | 15 |
| 27. The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann..... | 50 |
| 28. Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings..... | 25 |
| 29. Resurrection of Jesus..... | 50 |
- During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
- Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
- Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Men to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshipped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 395 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 999 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 13. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 1, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

DEGRADING THE AMERICAN EAGLE TO OBLIGE THE CHURCH.

GROVER CLEVELAND: "Now you set! It is my purpose to please the church, and it is their purpose that you shall become only a Puritanical old hen!"

AMERICAN WATCH AND CHAIN. PRICE, $1.50.

DUST-PROOF GOLD-PLATED CASE.

American Lever Movement, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Patent Winding and Setting Attachment Requiring no Key, 240 Beats to Minute; Hour, Minute, and Second Hands.

THE CHEAPEST GENUINE AMERICAN WATCH EVER SOLD. TIMED, TESTED, AND REGULATED. EVERY WATCH GUARANTEED.

The case is strong and tight, of solid composition metal used the world over as a substitute for Gold, with an elegant Gold-Plated Chain. Packed in a neat box and mailed to any address for $1.50 each; 3 for $4.00 by Express; One Dozen for $15.00 by Express.

FULLY GUARANTEED TO KEEP ACCURATE TIME.

It is fully as durable as the most expensive watch, and with fair usage will keep good time for Ten Years. This watch is being manufactured in lots of 100,000 at the rate of 1,000 per Day by the largest watch manufacturing concern in the world. This constitutes the sole reason for its low price. It is a practical illustration of what may be done in this country by machinery and skilled operators when an article can be sold in large quantities. Its parts are not made by hand by "Pauper European labor" as are most of the cheap watches now sold, which never run long and can never be repaired. Automatic machinery does everything on this watch and every part is as true as a die can make it. The movement is the same as in all American watches and is readily understood and repaired by any jeweler.

Every Watch Timed, Tested, and Regulated before leaving our hands, and carefully packed with chain.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS FOR YOU TO READ. WE HAVE THEM FROM EVERY STATE.

GENTLEMEN: I am much pleased with the Watch you sent me, and I will say it keeps right up on time. It has not varied any as yet. Most truly yours, WEBB CITY, Jan. 9, 1893. DR. ANDERSON.

GENTLEMEN: I take pleasure in saying the Watch you sent me gave perfect satisfaction. It is a good time-keeper and all you recommend it to be. You will be favored with an order from me soon. Yours truly, CATO, MASS., Jan. 6, 1893. W. G. DONN LL.

SIRS: I received your Watch and found it to be as represented in the Twentieth Century advertisement. It would be hard to improve on its time-keeping qualities. Yours truly, CALDWELL, Jan. 3, 1893. MOST S HINCHCLIFFE.

R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., Room 133, 65 Cortlandt street, New York. Kind Sirs: It is a standing rule of mine when I see an admirable trait in any character, or a marked excellence in anything, to express appreciation either in public or in private. Taffy is better than epitaph. Post-mortem praises do the dead no good. The corpse smells no flowers on its casket. Hence I want to say that I am delighted with your Watch—a little gem. I keep it on my typewriter desk during week-days, right before my eyes, and it keeps splendid time. Faithfully yours, FORT WAYNE, IND. STEPHEN A. NORTHEOP.

R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., Sole Mfrs., Room 133, 65 Cortlandt st., New York.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND
OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

26 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 27 " The Church Robbing the People.
 28 " Thanksgiving.
 29 " Sabbath Laws.
 30 " Children and the Church.
 31 " Woman and the Church.
 32 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
 33 " Studies in Natural History.
 34 " The Bible and Science.
 35 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 36 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 37 " The Atonement Scheme.
 38 " The Lord and His Works.
 39 " Prayer.
 40 " The Creeds.
 41 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 3 " Missionaries.
 4 " The Lord's Instruments.
 5 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 6 " The Church and Slavery.
 7 " Priests and Politics.
 8 " Ireland and the Church.
 9 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
 10 " The Uses of the Cross.
 11 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 12 " Persecutions of the Church.
 13 " Some Allegories.
 14 " Heaven.
 15 " Hell.
 16 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

New Publications.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers: "Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, --- $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo., 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 13. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, April 1, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - APRIL 1, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Christianity and Meteorology.

We will continue our history of the relations between Christianity and the science which deals with the phenomena of the air and weather.

From the rise of the Christian church, till the present scientific era, and to some extent even in this, that institution has taught that the workings of the atmosphere are produced by direct supernatural agency, either divine or diabolical. We will first notice instances of the ascription of these phenomena to divine agency.

In the writings of the early fathers, the founders of the church, we continually find the wrath of God assigned as the cause of lightning, hailstorms, hurricanes, and the like. Thence onward through the Middle Ages we find this way of thinking continuing, the belief indeed becoming a mere truism. On its course it was gradually developed into a system specifying the particular sins thus punished, with their most appropriate mode of chastisement. In the twelfth century the Florentine historian Villani ascribed the floods and fires to the "too great pride of the city of Florence and the ingratitude of the citizens toward God." This pride and ingratitude, says a late historian, Trollope, in his "History of Florence," of course "meant their insufficient attention to the ceremonies of religion." One of those who did the most to establish the belief through central Europe was the Cistercian monk, Cæsar of Heisterbach. He compiled an ample collection of anecdotes for the illustration of religious truths, which was the favorite recreative reading in the convents for three centuries, and operated powerfully in forming thought; and in this collection he gives a number of instances of lightning being employed as an agent by the almighty. In one case it was used for rescue; the steward of this monk's own monastery was seized by a robber, whereupon he prayed to God and was answered by a clap of thunder bursting suddenly from a clear sky and scaring the evil-doer away. Then, in a Saxon theater twenty men were struck by lightning, while a priest in their midst stood scathless, not because he was not sinning like the rest but because the thunderbolt had respect for his profession. As centuries passed this method of interpreting aerial happenings became more and more minutely elaborated and firmly fixed. Protestants were devoted to the work equally with Catholics. Among the Protestant reformers of England, Tyndale in an exposition of the subject quotes 1 Sam. xiii, showing that when God gave Israel a king it rained and thundered. Archbishop Whitgift and Bishop Pilkington joined in proclaiming the doctrine. Bishop Bale equally distinguished himself, citing as proof Job xxxviii, Ecclesiasticus xiii, and Rev. viii. In Protestant Germany, Plie-ninger published a volume of "Brief Reflections" to the effect that a certain edict of Pope Gregory, altering the calendar, had received marks of the divine displeasure in the shape of violent storms and fatal floods. In southern Italy, early in the seventeenth century, Bishop Majoli, of Voltoraria, produced a work of monstrous size, "Dies Canicularii." This for over a century remained a favorite encyclopedia in Catholic lands. Thunder and lightning he calls bombs hurled against the wicked. The thunderbolt is "an exhalation condensed and cooked into stone." It is, he says, "not to be doubted that, of all the instruments of God's vengeance, the thunderbolt is the chief." By means of it Sennacherib and his army were consumed (2 Chron. xxxii, 21, 22). Luther, continues this Catholic bishop, was struck by lightning in his youth to admonish him against straying from the Catholic faith. Blasphemy and Sabbath-breaking are the sins to which this punishment is especially assigned, as we see in part from Num. xvi, 1-35. The next important treatise is that of the Jesuit Stengel, fifty years later. Stengel elaborates the theme in six thick quartos crammed with instances of judgments of God. The thunderbolt is the finger of God, which rarely strikes a man save for his sins. A minute schedule for the use of preachers in their sermons through the entire year is furnished. A few years afterward, in Protestant Swabia, the preacher George Nuber issues a volume of "weather sermons." All elemental disturbances, such as storms, floods, drouths, lightning, and hail, are sent directly by God against human sins. Lightning and hail are affixed as punishments especially to a number of particular sins, such as impenitence, incredulity, neglect to repair churches, and fraud in the payment of tithes to the clergy; and these points he supports by plentiful passages from scripture. Handbooks of prayers against bad weather were issued. Among them one of the most popular was the "Spiritual Thunder and Storm Booklet." This was written in 1731. Its three or four hundred pages are packed with preventives of elemental violences. These consist not only of prayers and songs but of means of all sorts of natures, "sighs for use when it lightens fearfully," and "cries of anguish when the hailstorm is drawing on." The preface to this valuable book is furnished by Professor Dillherr, pastor of the great church of St. Sebald at Nuremberg, who with his learning, and the remarkable common sense which we know distinguishes all preachers, contributes largely to the important truths of the volume. Among other things, he adds to the three purposes which God had been known to have in storms, a fourth one. To the three motives of a wish on the part of the creator to manifest his power, to display his anger, and to drive sinners to repentance, he adds the fourth one of a desire to show us "with what sort of a storm-bell he will one day ring in the last judgment."

About 1725 we find, in Switzerland, even the professor of mathematics Scheuchzer, an eminent man and one very rational on other subjects, issuing a "Physica Sacra" grounded throughout on the Bible, and holding that the elements, in the most literal sense, utter the voice of God. In New England the same superstition is found continuing. Increase Mather's sermons on "The Voice of God in Stormy Winds" are instances. He cites as proof Job xxxviii, 1, where God speaks to Job out of the whirlwind; and Ps. cxlviii, about the "stormy wind fulfilling his word." He teaches, "When there are great tempests, the angels oftentimes have a hand therein, . . . yea, and sometimes evil angels." He instances several blasphemers struck by lightning, and carefully gives us the sage warning, "Nothing can be more dangerous for mortals than to condemn dreadful providences, and in particular dreadful tempests."

Having traced up to a modern date the course of the belief that God directly causes many of the weather-happenings, we will now begin again at the rise of Christianity and similarly follow up the notion that the devil and his agents cause the remaining portion.

Belief in the existence of these characters, the devil and numerous agents, was particularly strong and controlling during the Christian centuries. The Jewish religion, and all others upon which Christianity was founded, had always taught the existence of evil spirits; and the ranks of these creatures upon the rise of the Christian faith received notable reinforcements, for that religion, it was held, had in dethroning the gods of all the pagan beliefs driven these chagrined deities into a course of rancorous vengeance against their former adorers who had now traitorously turned to the altars of Christ. The former gods had become evil spirits. The new God was admitted to be supreme, but the old ones were not supposed extinct or powerless. The miracles of the new God were not more believed in than those of the old gods, the only difference being that the former were reckoned beneficent and irresistible, while the latter were malevolent and sometimes thwartable. Jupiter and Odin, and all the other uncrowned divinities, were conceived to have become ministers of Satan, "the prince of the power of the air."

Now, as to the particular field in which it seemed natural to the people to expect the works of these rebel spirits, that field came to be the atmospheric phenomena; a strong reason being that these phenomena were of all others the ones in which the sway of the ancient deities had been most manifest. The Roman had ever heard Jupiter, and the Teuton, Thor, in the thunder; what more likely, then, than that Satan, to the foot of whose throne those gods had been driven by the rise of Jehovah, should employ these personages and their subordinates in their old province of meteorological dominion, to vex the apostate sons of men? What more natural than that the populace who thought sunshine and rain answers to their prayers sent by a good spirit, should consider storm and drouth persecutions inflicted by evil spirits?

The fathers of the church deduced this doctrine from scripture. St. Jerome taught that the air is swarming with devils, supporting his doctrine by various texts in Isaiah and in the epistle to the Ephesians. In this latter book, the text, "Our battle is not with flesh and blood" (iii, 6), he says clearly means the devils in the air. St. Augustine laid down that this view is beyond question. As the centuries passed this doctrine branched and grew. The Venerable Bede sanctioned it, adding corroborative anecdotes. The powerful Catholic authority, St. Thomas Aquinas, said in his revered "Summa": "Rains and winds . . . can be caused by demons. . . . It is a dogma of faith that the demons can produce wind, storms, and rain of fire from heaven." To this notion Albert the Great lent his influential name, and showed in himself a high degree of Catholic intelligence by relating that a certain salve thrown in a spring produced whirlwinds. Another pillar of the Catholic church who set his seal on this teaching was St. Bonaventura, whose labors in theology were esteemed so valuable as to merit one of the highest places in the church, and to whom Dante awards especial place in paradise. The doctrine was set down throughout the chronicles of the Middle Ages; and we find the lives of the saints pervaded with it. It was set by poetry in frames of fancy and sentiment; Dante in his verse enriched it with his imagination and cadences. Painting gave it body; in a grand picture by Bordone, still to be seen at Venice, a shipload of demons is seen approaching Venetian shores in a storm of their hellish raising, but St. Mark, St. George, and St. Nicholas attack and scatter the fiendish crew and its weapon of foul weather. The popes repeatedly sanctioned the doctrine. It was worked up into various local superstitions, monkish imaginations, and attractive arguments, to take with the general populace. The eccentricities of lightning were held to be peculiarly salient evidence of an intelligent aim at certain objects. The phenomena of the thunderbolt were treated with great detail by the Carmelite, Matthias Farinator, of Vienna, each peculiarity being shown to convey some spiritual significance. The volume embodying this exposition of Farinator was got up at the solicitation of the pope. In the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries the doctrine bloomed forth in a multitude of treatises. These were written by the most distinguished and learned Catholic and Protestant divines. At the Reformation period, and for two centuries thenceforward, Catholics and Protestants pressed forward in hot rivalry of each other in this work of detecting the authors of bad weather in Satan and his human emissaries such as witches and magicians. John Eck, the great opponent of Luther, in his annotated edition of Aristotle's "Physics," which was so long authoritative in German universities, in his woodcut picturing the atmosphere represents the devils who there hold dominion. Luther upheld the belief with exceptional strenuousness, affirming that the winds themselves are but spirits good and evil, and alleging that he had personally calmed more than twenty storms raised by the devil. Next appeared a great work which was welcomed alike by Catholics and by Protestants. This was by the prelate Delrio. He first points out that the holy scriptures prove the dominion of devils over the elements, for those writings "show that Satan brought fire down from heaven to consume the servants and flocks of Job, and that he stirred up a violent wind, which overwhelmed in ruin the sons and daughters of Job at their feasting." He notes that the hail with which the Egyptians were punished was fetched by evil angels (Ps. lxxviii, 47-49). Turning to Revelation, he cites the four angels standing at the four corners of the earth holding back the winds from working great scath to human beings (Rev. vii, 1). He calls attention to the fact that the devil is called by the Apostle a "prince of the power of the air" (Eph. ii, 2). The second part of Delrio's work is devoted to showing the concurrence in his tenets of the church fathers, Clement, Jerome, Augustine, Aquinas, etc.

To combat these devil-directed winds, storms, and all such manifestations of weather, prayer and exorcism and the ringing of blessed bells were the means resorted to in these ages of churchly wisdom. Saints, reformers, men eminent for devoutness or learning, and all the like persons notable in the medieval churches, are chronicled to have used these supernatural means with the highest success. The best compendium of these operations is Brewer's "Dictionary of Miracles." In it we find tempests stilled not only by St. Giles and his coevals, but even by John Wesley of our modern days. An exorcism that was widely used, and is ascribed to Pope Gregory XIII., reads: "I, a priest of Christ, . . . do command ye, most foul spirits, who do stir up these clouds, . . . that ye depart from them, and disperse yourselves into wild and untilled places, that ye may be no longer able to harm men or animals or fruits or herbs or whatsoever is designed for human use." Another exorcismal ritual reads: "All the people shall rise, and the priest, turning toward the clouds, shall pronounce these words: 'I exorcise ye, accursed demons, who have dared to use, for the accomplishment of your iniquity, those powers of nature by which God in divers ways worketh good to mortals; who stir up winds, gather vapors, form clouds, and condense them into hail. . . . I exorcise ye, . . . that ye relinquish the work ye have begun, dissolve the hail, scatter the clouds, disperse the vapors, and restrain the winds.'" Of the manuals of exorcism that became abundant, some were large quartos, and some handbooks. Of the latter, the most widely used was that by the Italian priest Locatelli, "Exorcisms most Powerful and Efficacious for the Dispelling of Aerial Tempests, whether raised by Demons at their own Instance or at the Beck of some Servant of the Devil." The income derived by Pope Urban V. from the manufacture and sale of Agnus Dei's prepared to ward off storms, was enormous. These articles were pieces of wax stamped to represent the "lamb of God," and blessed by the pope's own hand. In the ceremony of blessing them, he stood uncovered and prayed: "O God, . . . we humbly beseech thee that thou wilt bless these waxen forms, figured with the image of an innocent lamb, . . . that, at the touch and sight of them, the faithful may break forth into praises, and that the crash of hailstorms, the blast of hurricanes, the violence of tempests, the fury of winds, and the malice of thunderbolts may be tempered, and evil spirits flee and tremble before the standard of thy holy cross, which is graven upon them." It is to be borne in mind that the Protestant church was as completely devoted to the doctrine of the supernatural sway of the weather as the Catholic. For instance, Luther, as before noted, energetically supported it, and prescribed especially the first chapter of John as of unfailing efficacy against thunder and lightning. He declared that he had frequently put storms to flight merely by the sign of the cross and the text, "The word was made flesh."

In our last issue we sketched the course of the doctrine that weather-happenings are not caused by natural agencies, but are due to supernatural beings. In the present number we have noted just what supernatural beings the phenomena were thus ascribed to; and mentioned some of the measures used in remedy. In our next and concluding paper we will relate the unfortunate fate of the multitudes of persons suspected of being agents of Satan in the production of bad weather.

Items from Canada.

In Canada M. Filiatrault, the editor whose fight with the ecclesiastical authorities we related a short time ago, has issued a pamphlet which if not suppressed will stir up a great tumult in Quebec. It contains three hundred pages, and is entitled "Clerical Ruin." The work is from the pens of Canada's most brilliant of younger French-Canadian writers, among whom are Sanvalle, of La Patrie, and this Filiatrault, of the Canada Review. One of the articles is devoted to the Jesuits. Another, which is sensational, is entitled "Mysticism and Chastity." In it reference is made to the recent clerical scandals. Another chapter is on the harshness of the church in treating with the weak and fallen. "We are charged with immorality," says M. Filiatrault, "with undue influence over the crowd, with schemes for our own enrichment. Let us try the same charges on the priests." And he proceeds to describe the immoralities, the intrigues, and the avarice of the clergy, who have driven liberty out of Quebec. In an article entitled "The Priest and His Money," he says: "We are rich, but our wealth is hidden in the churches and convents. Englishmen and Americans build banks; we build chapels. Hence we are beggars, while they revel in affluence. Our children leave us for the States in order to escape this unnatural taxation that eats the fruit of our labor. Who will deliver us from it? Who will dare attempt to kill it?"

The question of mixed marriages has once more been brought to the front, a mandement of the archbishop having just been issued. The Rev.

Curé Sentenne, of the church of Notre Dame, commenting on this mandement, declared that, according to the doctrine of the Roman Catholic church, in the event of two Catholics getting married by a Protestant minister the marriage is null and void. If one of the contracting parties is a Catholic and the other a Protestant, the marriage ceremony performed by a Protestant clergyman is valid, but the Catholic thus contracting marriage commits a grievous sin. The Catholic church did not want mixed marriages at all, but when they were allowed, it was only on two conditions: First, that the Catholic party contracting will always be allowed the free exercise of his or her religion, and, secondly, that all the children will be brought up in the Catholic church. In view of the fact that mixed marriages are very common in Montreal, the unfortunate folk are greatly exercised in their minds over the proclamation.

Another bone of contention between certain Roman Catholics and their ecclesiastical superiors is the right claimed by the latter to divide and create new parishes in the province as they see fit. This entails heavier burdens on the people, for the more parishes there are the more tithes they have to pay to erect churches and ecclesiastical institutions and support the additional priests required. Some of the poor fellows, toil-crushed and starved, find it impossible to contain their pitiful complaints.

Vast are the regions oppressed and scourged by the greedy, lying priest. The work of enlightening all of the countless communities as deep sunk in slavery to the church as that described above, truly seems endless. The labor has been urged on by the sensible and courageous men of the world for centuries, yet to-day what prospects meet our eye everywhere on this continent! When, when will Protestant United States and Catholic Quebec be clothed and in their sound mind?

Ingersoll on Two Judicial Decisions.

Colonel Ingersoll last Sunday expressed to a reporter some sentiments on the late judicial decisions forbidding labor unions to quit work in certain cases. Of these decisions, the first was delivered by Judge Ricks. It enjoined railway employees from refusing to handle freight-cars of the Ann Arbor road; enjoined Grand Chief Arthur of the Locomotive Engineers' Brotherhood from ordering men thus to refuse, and enjoined Arthur to produce in court the rule of the Brotherhood requiring such refusal. The second of the decisions was issued at New Orleans. Judge Billings, in an elaborate opinion, in a suit brought by the United States against the Workingman's Amalgamated Council of New Orleans, held that the labor leaders in causing a stoppage of the commerce of the city offended against the statutes governing interstate commerce. These two decisions have excited high interest, and their outcome is anxiously awaited. Colonel Ingersoll thinks: "As a rule men have a right to quit work at any time unless there is some provision to the contrary in their contracts. They have not the right to prevent other men taking their places. Of course, I do not mean by this that strikers may not use persuasion and argument to prevent other men filling their places. All black-listing and refusing to work with other men is also illegal and punishable. Of course men may conspire to quit work, but how is it to be proved? One man can quit or five hundred can quit together and nothing can prevent them. While I have not read either Judge Billings's or Judge Ricks's decision carefully, I believe in a general way that they are in acknowledgment at least of the principle of public control or regulation of railroads and of commerce generally. The railroads, while run for private profits, are public carriers, and the public has a vested interest in them as such. The same principle applies to the commerce of the country, and can be dealt with by the courts in the same way. I don't think, however, that the decision will have any lasting effect upon organized labor. You can't enforce law against such vast numbers of people, especially when they have the general sympathy, as is the case here. Of course most strikes have been illegal, but the numbers involved make the courts powerless."

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

It appears that one argument heretofore used against Sunday closing of the World's Fair, namely that the workingman would be excluded, will no longer be available. For on the 20th ult. it was practically settled that, whatever the fate of Sunday closing, the rule week-days will be late closing. Chief Engineer Shankland says: "The electrical exhibit is the finest thing on the grounds. The people will want to see it and they will have a chance. This means that the gates will be kept open until 11 o'clock." Without dwelling on the minor point that a few hours evenings will not be so suitable a time for the worker to see the Fair as a whole day on Sunday, we will remark that the argument for opening based on the ground that the state should not lend itself to any particular religion, still remains. The favoring by the state of the holy day of a particular religion, which amounts to nothing more nor less than the establishment, in part, of that religion, still remains as unsafe and disgraceful a thing as ever.

The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga., in a late issue, under the head of "Editorial Comment," says: "According to recent ecclesiastical decisions, to believe what has been proven is heresy. It is orthodox to believe what cannot be demonstrated."

The World's Fair From a Freethinker's Standpoint.

In May we shall begin the publication of a series of letters which will be of great interest and beauty. Samuel P. Putnam will write them from Chicago, and they will be about the World's great Fair, which opens in that lively and booming town on May 1st. Mr. Putnam's description—as everyone who knows him knows—will not be the commonplace matter of the geniusless boiler-plate correspondent, but the impressions made upon a cosmopolitan poet by the aggregation of samples of the world's progress in mechanics, art, literature, knowledge. The letters will undoubtedly be big and broad, wide and deep—a picture and a panorama, a history of human advance from "that man in the dug-out" to the racial subjugation of the forces of nature—so far as these forces are subdued. The letters will be essentially a Freethinker's view of the Fair, what it shows, and what it foreshadows, and we venture to say that among the hundreds of correspondents at the Fair, and the thousands of letters to be written by them, there will be none like the writer of the Freethought views and his descriptions. Readers of his "News and Notes" will agree with us in this estimate, we know.

We shall be obliged to our friends if they will call the attention of their friends to this announcement and suggest to them that a six months' subscription will insure them the receipt of these letters, which will alone be worth many times the cost of the paper.

In the Sunny South.News and Notes.

If by accident the steamers on the Indian river are delayed the traveler is sure to get left, for he can neither walk nor ride. Roads are impassable, or in such a condition that it takes both time and money to traverse the sandy way. So when on Tuesday morning the steamer Sebastian on which Captain Hardee and myself depended to get to Cocoa, and also the mail boat, were grounded a few miles above Captain Hardee's, the prospect of meeting my appointment was rather slim. The only chance was to hail some passing craft—but toward evening the wind abated and it was almost a calm. Even a sailing vessel would be a very uncertain means of transportation. However, Captain Sam Brown and his ship happened along. Hardee mounted the bulkhead and swung a white towel, which attracted the mariner's attention. The ship slowly swung round and a boat was sent ashore—and we thanked our stars that at least we could go somewhat on our journey. We piled in our baggage, and prepared to take a night's rest on the soft side of a board, for there were no chairs and no beds in the vessel. It was built for freight, and not for passengers. With a fair wind we might reach Cocoa in the morning.

We scarcely moved, so faint was the breeze—but we did manage to creep along about two miles an hour I guess. I enjoyed the tardy voyage, drifting into the night, the stars shining softly, the vague shores stretching away into the infinit gloom. Beautiful phosphorescent light quivered in the wake of the vessel; and the fishes as they leaped from the water made spangles of fire, so that you might imagine that the bosom of the river was a rolling flame. The breeze seemed to increase about midnight, and we bowled along quite finely; I found it much pleasanter to watch the sparkling river, and the receding shores, and the great dome above, than to sleep on my hard bed. About 1 o'clock the lights of Melbourne flashed to view, and a steamer was coming in, and the whistle was a welcome sound, for if we could make that steamer all our troubles would be at an end. With gay illuminations, making brilliant the gloom, she rounded to the dock. We were still two miles off and slowly we neared the goal, but all our prayers wouldn't make the wind give a single extra puff. Finally, we swept within a quarter of a mile of the dock, and we could hear the music of the loading and unloading of the cargo. But we heard with dismay the plashing of the wheels. Only five minutes and we would be all right, but it was a fatal five minutes. We didn't get there. Right before our eyes the steamer swung into the stream, passed in front of us, and voyaged out of our longing vision, and we were left with the uncertain winds, which seemed to take delight in shifting to every quarter. So I lay down on my bare couch and tried to dream the hours away until the sunny morning burst upon our view, and then the wind was howling from the north square in our teeth and we couldn't make a mile an hour. At this rate we wouldn't get to Cocoa in another twenty four hours. There was one stray fish on board and some bacon and hominy, and this with a cup of coffee made a royal breakfast, for I was hungry as a bear and could eat almost anything. Up till about noon the wind roared like a tempest in our faces and the ship tacked and struggled fitfully forward amidst the tumbling billows. Then the wind changed in our favor, just enough to keep us on a straight course, and we landed about 4 o'clock in the afternoon at Cocoa. I lectured the same evening. D. A. Blodgett and friends were present. The Fabers and others came by boat, and a larger audience greeted me than at Rockledge the week before. Mr. Blodgett put off a business engagement to be with us and help. With such good assistance these pioneer lectures have opened the way for future work. Next year there will be a better outlook.

Early on Thursday morning I bid good-bye to Indian river. I met Dr. Wilson, Mr. Giger, Mr. Goldsmith, and other friends at Titusville, where I remain until noon, and then I journey to Green Cove Springs. This is the end of my tour with Captain Hardee. He was with me during all the ups and downs and cross-currents and head-winds of the campaign, and his courage and good nature and stanch Liberalism enabled me to meet every drawback and ill fortune with a cheerful mien. Besides contributing mainly to the funds, he was heart and hand in every movement from the time I struck Titusville until my return, and it is with regret that I bid good-bye to so genial a comrade and to all the other friends who have so generously stood by me in this new and untried field.

Judge Greer and Captain Garner, with a few others, give me a very appreciative audience at Green Cove Springs. I am sure that a much larger number will be present when I again visit this favored spot. Geo. R. Davis and J. A. Lovelace enroll themselves in THE TRUTH SEEKER ranks and can be counted on every time for freedom and progress. I must thank Captain Garner for his manly assistance. He introduced me at the lecture with a short address and in every way has been a right-hand supporter in this work.

Early on Friday morning I voyage to Jacksonville. The friends at this point were unable to procure a hall, and I did not lecture as I hoped to do. I also received word that nothing could be done this time at Ocala. Geo. B. Tyler did his level best, and with a few more like him success would be sure. I was sorry not to visit more places in Florida, but a beginning has been made, and I have bright hopes of what may be accomplished in the days to come.

Captain Rhoads, James Douglass, and other friends at Jacksonville make my last day in the land of flowers a pleasant one indeed. Friday evening I leave for the North. I have a few minutes Saturday morning with Sam Cherry at Savannah. I haven't time to see other friends. I hope Savannah will wheel into line, even if only a few are bold enough to stand for Freethought. Sunday morning I am in Washington, and as usual find cheerful entertainment with Mr. and Mrs. Burr. These friends are Liberal in every sense of the word, and in the arduous work of the winter have given me aid and hospitality. Mr. Burr's library is a restful place for the Secular Pilgrim. Books and papers are there in abundance, and in my moments of leisure I had these treasures at hand; besides Mr. Burr's own stores of information, which are of great help to the radical student.

Monday evening I arrive at New York and pen these "Notes" in the sanctum of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and after I have finished them I must hurry away to the Northland, and after that comes work for the great International Congress, as will be seen in the announcement of Mr. Remsburg. I believe that we can make this Congress of lasting benefit to Freethought everywhere, and by harmonious action, which is now assured, take the greatest step in advance of all the century.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

To My Liberal Friends.

I propose to publish a pamphlet, the opening part of which will appear in THE TRUTH SEEKER next week, entitled, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I consider that we are drifting into a most dangerous religious tyranny and war. It is not simply church and theology that we must oppose, but it is religion at the root of these, which is what I have defined it to be. We must understand religion, and for the safety of the race we must destroy religion. I want this book to be widely read. It is important. Religion as the foe of humanity is not sufficiently understood. We do not realize its terrific nature. I have written this book because I feel the necessity of speaking the plain truth. I challenge contradiction of my statements. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for this book. Circulate it. Price, 25 cents per copy.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Business Announcements.

Those of our readers who have ordered "Crimes of Preachers" ought to receive them about the same time they get this issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Future orders will be filled promptly.

Mr. John C. Sprang writes that he would like to see the articles on Design which have recently appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER in book form. We shall comply with his wish by making a ten-cent pamphlet of the series, to be issued in a few weeks.

It is a dangerous thing to recommend medicines, and we cannot do it in any case, but we can call attention to our friend Perry's advertisement in another column and leave our readers to judge of the merits of the water from his spring. Mr. Perry praises it highly, as perhaps is natural, and claims for it great efficacy as a healing agent. As this applies to the addition of material elements to the bodies of the sick it may be well for those needing such help to give it their thought in preference to drug remedies.

Mr. R. J. Fraser, of Dinuba, Cal., has sent here a box of figs which the children pronounced (we use the past tense advisedly), in the language of young America, "out of sight." Mr. Fraser says he has a few hundred pounds which he will sell, and we believe we can rely upon the judgment of the little folks and say that anyone desiring that dainty luxury will do exceedingly well to buy of him.

Communications.

Reply to Otto Wettstein.

DEAR SIR: In your communication of March 11th you catechise me pretty thoroughly; and to answer all your questions fully through THE TRUTH SEEKER would tax the indulgence of that much-enduring sheet to the utmost to accord me sufficient space in which to do the subjects justice. Such is my unbounded confidence, however, in the inexhaustible good nature of Freethinkers generally and the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER in particular, that I am going nevertheless to make the attempt, though in order not to impose unduly upon good nature, my answers must be necessarily brief and incomplete.

When we contemplate existence, not only the world without but the yet greater world within, and with our limited capacity endeavor to grasp the breadth of thought, to measure the heights and depths of feeling, the vastness of the field of investigation that lies yet unexplored before us, the colossal proportions and countless number of ideas that throng upon us, and the lightning speed with which they flash across the plane of conscious perception, it seems strange indeed that an intelligent mind can question the existence or reality of that inner, mental world, though it may elude the efforts of "Infidel" telescopes to locate it in space, and chemist and anatomist alike fail to find a trace of it among the debris of their laboratories. And when we contrast our knowledge, together with the aggregate of science, with the boundless realm of the unknown and unknowable, with which it compares in extent about as our earth does with the whole boundless universe, does not dogmatic assumption either on the positive or negative side of any question look very much like presumption? And are we not forced to the conclusion that the true scientific attitude is that of investigation and respectful inquiry rather than of confident assertion or reckless denial of the unknown?—that in order to be truly wise we must indeed become as little children, humbly acknowledging that we have everything to learn?

It is in this spirit that I shall endeavor to answer your questions; and you will pardon me, I hope, if the enforced brevity of some of my replies may cause them to appear somewhat dogmatic in their manner of statement.

Viewed from your standpoint it certainly is not reasonable to suppose "that a single, living, breathing, gigantic [material] being can exist within the interstellar spaces and survive;" and I could no more attempt to force such an absurdity upon your mind than I could accept it for my own. Both of us being rational human beings, we should both instinctively reject it. But the difficulty with you, my friend, a difficulty shared by all Materialistic reasoners, is that you fail to perceive the vast and radical difference in the essential nature of spirit and matter, and have not yet learned to think spiritually, except in unguarded moments; and in all your reasonings are hampered by ideas of time and space which are pure accidents of matter of which the mind takes no practical cognizance when left to its natural, instinctive workings, as a little reflection and observation will convince you.

For some good examples of spiritual thinking I refer you to the recent address of Colonel Ingersoll in THE TRUTH SEEKER for February 25th. The colonel, like all earnest, thoughtful men, has his sublime moments, and when in these exalted states of thought and feeling he is more or less inspired and like other inspired men gives utterance, consciously or unconsciously, to vital, spiritual truths of which I can here pause to note but one or two.

In all your arguments you persistently identify personality with physique. When Mr. Ingersoll declares that "Lincoln was an immense personality," did he have any reference to the number of inches or ounces of solids, fluids, and gases that made up the towering frame through which that genial personality was manifested for a few years to the outer world? In all the masterly analysis of that grand personality that follows, there is no allusion to flesh and blood, to bone and sinew, as being any essential part of the man who having parted with both is still revered and loved—who being dead yet speaketh.

"This is absolutely true," says Ingersoll, that "Liberty can be retained, can be enjoyed, only by giving it to others." This is true of no material possession whatsoever. Liberty clearly then is not material; but if not material it is nothing, you say! How then can it be given or withheld? And have not untold myriads bled and died in its defense? Would not you do the same? Do men give their lives for nothing?

Again: "People separated only by distance are much nearer than those divided by the walls of caste." This is instinctively felt to be true although it ignores all idea of space as we know it materially. Of a similar nature is that other significant statement that Lincoln "wore no official robes either on his body or his soul." Mere figurative language you say. But what is figurative language, friend? Does not the very use of a figure imply something to be presented as well as represented by it? And which is the more real, the figure or that which is expressed by it?—the portrait or the original?—the word or the idea conveyed by it?

And now for your questions. Here is the first group. (1) Of what nature is the God you worship? (2) Where is He? (3) What is His outline? (4) What are his characteristics? To which I must reply briefly: (1) God is a Spirit. (2) God is in the Temple of His Holiness, i. e. His Divine Humanity in which alone He is apprehensible to human minds. (3) In the heavens He appears as a Sun: to human thought and affection he presents Himself in the human form. (4) Infinite Love, Infinite Wisdom, and Infinite Power constitute the Divine Trinity whence are derived the qualities of omniscience, omnipotence, and omnipresence.

Since God is a Spirit it is in the spiritual, not the material, world that we can most readily find Him, though traces of His presence and operations are clearly discernible in both worlds to those who know how to read the signs. I have not discarded the God of my fathers or a faith in the Bible, though I am far from being orthodox in my understanding of either. The basis of my faith in God, spirit, or the Bible is the same in substance as the basis of my belief in my own nature or existence, as far as I know anything about either, viz., conscious perception, observation, reason, reflection, and the inferences thence deduced.

My French professor used to tell us that Parisians have a saying to this effect: "The English pretend that they understand each other, but we know better." To them the English language was but senseless gibberish. So, I dare say that much that I have just advanced seems to you to be mere transcendental nonsense. Not many years ago German was but meaningless gabble to me; in all the utterances of German oratory I could not discover a word of sense. But having served an apprenticeship to that rich and rugged tongue, I can now see wealth of idea, vigor of expression, and beauty of thought and diction where I formerly heard but a meaningless jumble of, for the most part, unmusical sounds. So the only way to convince you of the force or value of my ideas is by inducing you, if possible, to learn my language. If you can be induced to think spiritually you will have no difficulty in understanding my meaning.

You are quite safe in promising me a pound of gold for every grain of inert matter I can bring you. Since Life is everywhere present and operative, absolutely inert matter can have no existence. Yet relative inertia exists to a sufficient degree to impress itself upon the attention of scientists as one of the properties of matter that must be taken into account in dealing with it, though it has no more absolute existence than the imaginary line and point of the mathematician which yet serve as the basis of all mathematical calculations.

Now for another budget of questions. "Would animal life cease to evolve from inorganic matter without your God?" Most certainly.

"Would bodies cease to fall, fluid forms in space cease to assume a globular form, in a soulless universe?" Yes.

"Would fire cease to burn, powder not explode, poison not kill, or water run uphill, without a God?" Poison certainly could not kill where everything was dead, and water would neither run uphill nor down—it would not run at all.

"Would cosmic phenomena come to an end and eternal chaos exist in space?" Not only all phenomena but all matter would cease to be, and with it all space, which is dependent upon it, leaving no room for eternal chaos or anything else but blank nothingness—if you can imagine such a thing.

"If phenomena necessitate a Creator, infinite simultaneous phenomena necessitate an infinite number of Creators!" Let us state the proposition in this way. If a certain class of phenomena necessitates a law of gravitation to account for it, infinite simultaneous phenomena of the same class necessitate an infinite number of laws of gravitation! How does that strike you?

"How does your God make them?" Natural science can answer that question better than I can, my friend. Nature is the Almighty's workshop, and her laws are but his methods of operation.

I have pondered much and long on the nature of the Divinity in whom I believe. I do not realize that the attributes of wisdom, love, and omnipo-tence necessitate physical being, because I find that the activities of my own spirit are in a large measure independent of my physical body, which, being but a feeble one, is often more of a hindrance than a help to its manifestations. I think and reason, love and hate, remember and anticipate, enjoy and suffer, hope and fear—usually in the inverse ratio to my physical activities—whether my body be sick or well, asleep or awake, in fullest perception of and participation in the visible things of the outer world, or when, with the links of conscious apprehension temporarily broken by injury, it has lain senseless and apparently lifeless. I have a deep-seated conviction, an instinctive intuition, that the integrity of my personal existence will be no more impaired by the mere act of laying aside my physical body than is the existence of that body by the putting off at night of the garments I have worn during the day. I shall undoubtedly still inhabit an organized body—existence being scarcely conceivable without it—but it will be a spiritual body, formed of spiritual substances, and as such, no longer subject to the material laws of time and space, chance and change, decay and death.

Your arguments to demonstrate the impossibility and absurdity of the Divine Omnipresence remind me of those offered by the sturdy backwoodsman to prove the equal impossibility and absurdity of the, to him, novel and preposterous theory of the rotundity and rotation of the earth. He insisted that if the earth turned upside down every night, as these wiseacres pretended, his porridge pot, hung over the fire every evening, would inevitably be upset in the ashes, while he and his wife would be tumbled out of bed onto the floor or the ceiling, I have forgotten which, for the final catastrophe was lost in the laughter of an audience who having learned to think scientifically were not troubled by any such difficulties. So when my good friend has learned to think spiritually, he will have no difficulty in reconciling all the apparent inconsistencies his vivid imagination and materialistic reasoning have conjured up. Undoubtedly "in Him we live and move and have our being," but without the "terrible turmoil" you apprehend.

You speak of analyzing my idea. Now, Materialist, I have thee on the hip! Is my idea something or nothing? If nothing, how can it be analyzed? If something, it must be matter according to your logic. If matter, it must possess the properties of matter, one of which is impenetrability. It must occupy space. Now what is its shape and size? Where did you find it to analyze it? Is it in my printed letter? That occupies several columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER, sure enough; but the closest scrutiny shows only parallel lines of black marks interspersed with blank spaces of white paper. Where is the idea? Chemical analysis fails to show the slightest trace of anything but paper and ink or their elements. Is it in the letters and words? If so, how did it get in without displacing something? For printed words require space—ideas, if material, must likewise require space. How can two things occupy the same space at the same time? Moreover, a little different arrangement of the same letters and words will convey quite a different or even an opposite idea, while yet another arrangement gives us—no idea at all! Strange, is it not?

But when all these difficulties are overcome, the mystery is not yet at an end. For I solemnly declare that the idea that you have found in my letter and propose to analyze, is still in my brain intact, and what is more I can prove it. And if your memory is good and you have correctly grasped it, the same idea may be found lodged in your own brain, after your copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER is mislaid or destroyed. And the same may be true of any or all of the other readers of that paper. So we see that ideas may be ubiquitous if the deity is not, and ideas are something—or nothing—which? We know they move the world. Can nothing do that? And when we consider the multitude of facts and ideas the human brain can contain at one and the same time without displacing an atom of its gray matter, tightly as it is packed within the skull, are we not reminded of Goldsmith's village schoolmaster and the lines:

And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew
That one small head should carry all he knew.

It is indeed a mystery—one of those things that no Materialistic fellow can find out.

I should be most happy to comply with your request to guide you through the realm of spirits, to the best of my ability, were it not that I am met at the very outset by a difficulty which I can best describe in some such way as this. Suppose you came to me desiring to be initiated into the beauties and delights of music. I, having devoted many years of my life to the pursuit of that delightful art, would readily undertake the pleasing task. But suppose that while confessing that you had no ear for music, and could not tell one tune from another, you insisted that our investigations into this science should begin with the assumption that no such thing as a musical tone could exist—an assumption that must be disproved to your satisfaction—before you would consent to take the first step. And suppose that you insisted further that the only textbooks that should be used in our musical studies should be treatises on chemistry and astronomy; and because in these you found no mention made of key relationship, major and minor intervals, construction and progression of chords, resolution of discords, cadence or rhythm, should hastily conclude that music was madness, the Tone World an insane delusion, melody a myth, harmony a humbug, and I an impostor attempting to foist upon credulity a pretended science which could not be logically proved to a deaf ear or demonstrated on chemical or astronomical principles! Whose would be the fault if you failed to make very rapid progress toward practical attainments under such conditions? Would not my best efforts and intentions in your behalf be frustrated at the outset by your own unreasonable demands?

And seriously, friend, do you think you are much more reasonable when you insist that your investigations into the nature of spiritual and divine things must begin with the assumption that spirit does not and cannot exist, and that the God idea can be effectually disposed of by a simple, emphatic denial? Or when you further insist that all evidence of such nature and existence must be limited to that material plane where by the very nature of things they cannot be perceived? Is it not rationally clear that if we wish to learn music we must study music—not mathematics; that the way to understand spirit is to investigate spirit, not matter; and that the best method of comprehending the nature and operations of mind and soul is not to ignore psychology and confine our researches to the realm of chemistry or anatomy? For it is evident that musical truths must be musically discerned, optical truths must be optically discerned, mathematical truths mathematically discerned, and moral truths morally discerned. So spiritual truths must be spiritually discerned. There is no other way. And seeing is believing in each case, whether the vision be that of the body or of the soul.

And now for brief replies to the third and last of your series of questions and I am done, though much that I started out to say must be left unsaid for lack of room. (1) "What are they [spirits] composed of?"—Of spiritual substances much more real, substantial, and alive than matter. (2) "Where was your spirit or mine a hundred years ago?"—Nowhere. (3) "If not in existence before the physical body, how can it survive when the latter exists no more?"—As easily as your body can survive the removal or destruction of its clothing. (4) "If the body is a necessity to originate and continue the spirit during life, is it not a necessity during eternity?"—No more than the egg is a necessity to the full-fledged bird. (5) "Is not the human mind you call spirit simply the function of the living, physical organism, created or generated from the animal body, its heat, electricity, magnetism, etc.?"—No, heat can never be sublimated into affection, electricity transmuted into intelligence, or magnetism be metamorphosed into mind. (6) "Are body and mind not cause and effect?"—Yes, but in the reverse order. As saith the poet:

Of the soul the body form doth take,
For soul is form and doth the body make.

(7) "Is the effect ever known without the cause?"—Never; but the cause, while ever present in the effect, is prior to and independent of it. (8) "What is this surviving spirit?"—The real man or woman with every manly power and womanly grace not only intact but intensified, having lost nothing but the material body which it misses no more than you would miss a pair of worn-out, cast-off boots. (9) "What is inside of this spirit which causes it to resemble man?"—Every human attribute of mind and thought, desire or will. (10) "Is there another spirit body within the body you believe in?"—Something analogous to it—the internal and external mind. (11) "How can it resemble man without physical organism?"—By means of a spiritual organism exactly corresponding to it. (12) "How can it live without blood and circulating organs, breathe without lungs, see without eyes, and think without a brain and nervous system?"—It neither can nor does do anything of the sort, but the spiritual eye is keener than the material, and so with every other organ of the soul. (13) "How can this most delicate organism, while still in the grosser body, survive decapitation, electro-cution, or a dynamite explosion?"—Because spirit, when disassociated from the body, takes no more cognizance of material phenomena than matter does of spirit. If you doubt this, just analyze the state of your own mind and its relation to outward things during abstract thought or in vivid dreams. (14) "And last, by what law of nature is it exempt from the general order of nature which decrees that all forms which begin, from the tiniest to the grandest sun in the universe, must sooner or later come to an end?"—How do you know that? When was this "general order" issued, and on whose authority? Be assured, friend, that what nature cannot create she is equally powerless to destroy, and naught but antecedent Mind can create mind. If Mind be not discernible in Nature, then she cannot be its creator. All life is the product of antecedent Life; and Life, not Death, presides over the destinies of the universe.

These questions are all perfectly legitimate and fully warranted by your standpoint. I can only regret that lack of space will not permit me to answer them more fully and satisfactorily. I trust, however, that we shall have an opportunity to discuss these interesting topics further. Having been a teacher all my life, it seems the most natural thing in the world for me to ask or answer questions; and it is always a pleasure to me to come in contact with a vigorous mind fairly bristling with interrogation points. So proceed with your questions, brother, the more the better, and with the kind permission of Mr. Macdonald I will endeavor to answer them.

A. AUGUSTA CHAPMAN.

Baltimore, Md., March 20, 1893.

Deacon Snique on Sunday Closing.

"Grand, gloomy, peculiar," and quite unique Among men stands Deacon Adoniram Snique; It may be declared of this precious man, As said Byron of Brinsley Sheridan, That he of his kind is the first and last, Nature breaking the mold when he was cast. You cannot pronounce him handsome, because His style of beauty's too full of flaws. His visage, indeed, makes people shiver; His mouth's like a gash in a piece of liver, Incased in as scraggly gray a beard As was ever permitted to go unshaved; His watery eye has a stalwart squint, And what heart he has is as hard as flint. He knows he's not pretty, but oh, how he Does pride himself on his piety!

The question of closing the great World's Fair On the day devoted to rest and prayer, Robbing toilers of their sole chance of the week, Is rasping the soul of good Deacon Snique— Is rasping it hard; and this is the way He held self-communion the other day:

"Oh, horrible thought, that men should profane The Sabbath for pleasure or for gain! When I think how wicked some persons are Who have wandered away from the fold afar, I rejoice, with eyes, saint-like, rolled toward the sky, That a pious, God-fearing man am I! For a Christian more punctual at church Than I, you the earth will vainly search. All the drips of the sanctuary divine I catch, and the loudest amens are mine. The way I enrich the collection plate None but a Croesus could emulate; My dollars flow—a financial spa— For the heathen of Borrioboola-Gha, For I rave, e'en as Mrs. Jellyby raved, O'er those distant, benighted souls unsaved, Though I give to the famished that wan-faced come To my door many tracts, but never a crumb. Some gracious soaps, for this world unfit, Have hinted that I am a hypocrite— Am an object-lesson of high degree In the devious ways of the Pharisee. Well, the mice undisturbed in my closet play While I go to the marketplace to pray, And never yet from my lips has man Heard the fearful words of the publican: 'O God! have mercy on me a sinner!' But you can bet I'm as sure a winner In the race for heaven as any nag; See these spots on my knees where my breeches bag? To a distant city I may hie, Where a stranger to everyone am I, Where my bent for a frolic there's naught to curb, Where the tiger invites, and the rum's superb, And at the elephant take a peep, And company not the choicest keep; The widow and orphan may find in me A shaky description of trustee; In chicane I may give the devil some points, And buildings rent for the toughest joints; I may sprain veracity, bilk my neighbor, And for none but my grasping self may labor. But for me there is waiting a great reward, For oh, with what ardor I love the Lord!

"Let the gates of the Fair, spite the ribald gang, On Sunday close with a mighty bang! What boots it if thereby trebly thrives The traffic of pestilential dives? If the workman hungers for recreation, Let him bathe in the river of salvation That freely is flowing for me and you And all the well-dressed who can buy a pew. The Sunday-openers, I insist, Are on a par with the Atheist And other irreverent men who look

With sneers on belief in the Pentateuch. We must jealously guard our institutions From secularity's foul pollutions. It is, be it understood, no matter How a man may live if he keeps up a clatter 'Gainst an open Fair on the Sabbath day, Unswayed by what godless people say. The proper shibboleth to be raised Is this: 'Shut the gates, and the Lord be praised!'

L'ENVOI.

Thus, humble as Heep and as Moses meek, With himself communed Deacon Adoniram Snique.

JOHN TALMAN.

The Freethought Federation of America.

[Headquarters, 345 West Randolph street, Chicago, Ill. S. P. Putnam, president; John R. Charlesworth, secretary; George L. Robertson, treasurer.]

I left Ashland, Ore., on Sunday morning, February 19th, feeling good after the result of my lectures in that town, and now commenced my journey into the Golden state. Thick clouds hung around the mountains, which obscured their tops from view, but as the sun neared its zenith the clouds were dispelled, as orthodoxy will be ere long before the sun of science, of nature, and truth. The borders of Oregon are crossed, and in a few hours Mount Shasta, one of the giant hills of this country, looms up in sight. It is covered with snow, which even the rays of a scorching summer sun cannot melt. Here we dine, right at the very foot of the mountains, and to wash down the meal we take a drink of the famous Shasta mineral water. This is obtained from a basin which is fed by two immense geysers, one of which throws up the water to a height of sixty feet. The wind catches it and sends the spray around for quite a distance. The train stops at the springs and the passengers alight, many of whom carry small tin cups with them, and dipping them into the water they drink thereof to their heart's content. It is a magnificent soda water, as beautifully flavored as any to be purchased in a drugstore. The scenery around here is grand and beautiful. We are now in the Sacramento valley and winding through the mountain passes, running for hours side by side with the Sacramento river. I arrive at Gridley about 2 o'clock Monday morning, where I had been announced for three lectures. I soon found out what few Freethinkers there were in this little place, and learned to my regret that the orthodox party had secured possession of the halls and we could obtain a place to speak in for neither love nor money. Nevertheless, as I had been announced to lecture to a Gridley audience I was determined to do so in some way or another, even if I should have to set up a stand in the public streets. This would not have been a very difficult task, for the weather was beautiful and warm. Revival services were being held by an itinerant preacher of the Campbellite church, by the name of B. J. Dillon. He had a young man with him as a singer; they together were doing the Moody and Sankey business upon a small scale. He had been somewhat coarse in his language toward the resident Freethinkers, and had stated his willingness to debate with any or all Freethinkers. So I requested our friends to approach him upon the question of a debate with me. He refused at first, but a few hours afterward he came and asserted his readiness to do so. So it was then arranged that we should debate for four nights, the propositions being somewhat similar to those which I debated with Braden upon, though the result in this case was different, for here I had to succumb to brute force—the overwhelming power of numbers. It was perhaps impolitic upon my part to break in upon his meetings which were in progress at the time, for the people were all under the excitement of religious frenzy and were "full of the spirit," and some of them were full of the spiriti fermenti. The audience at least numbered five or six hundred people, and out of that crowd I did not have more than twenty sympathizers—not more than twenty friendly faces in that vast crowd. In order to swamp me they drummed up the country for a radius of sixty miles to bring in the Campbellites and shout me down. Every time I got up to speak the Christian fanatics yelled, hissed, and hooted at me, telling me to "shut up," "sit down," and using other Christianlike ejaculations. My opponent was a pretty shrewd man, for he took pretty good care not to handle the subject-matter that I presented, and fell to exhorting the people instead. He was not quite so scurrilous in debate as the one who has been designated the "striped animal," but he was not so smart or tricky.

Gridley is entirely under church rule and priestly tyranny. Like leeches upon the community they suck the very life's-blood from the town and stop the very pulse-beat of their civilization. Large sums of money are spent upon, and given to, the churches instead of being devoted to town improvements. As a consequence they have neither gas nor electric lights; they have no waterworks, and the roads leading from the town to the neighboring colonies and settlements are in a wretched condition. They are broken with pools of standing water, which, in an Eastern town, or in any town of its size in Oregon, Washington, or other Western states, would have been bridged over. But having seven churches to support, which drains them of every spare dollar they have, these improvements cannot be entered into, because the people could not afford to pay the tax that would have to be levied upon them. If they would only drop the churches for one year and spend the money it costs to keep them in this direction the people of Gridley would soon feel a decided advantage. Our few friends were not very jubilant over the debate, but it would have required a tremendous power by one man to overthrow this load of ignorance, prejudice, and bigotry. I was heavily handicapped from the start, for I had three preachers against me instead of one, and the only chairman we could get was the principal of the school, and he was a red-hot Presbyterian, and he only ruled once in my favor upon an appeal. No doubt he would not have done it then only the point of order raised was too glaring for him to escape it. There are only about four well-known Freethinkers in the town. L. P. Denny, who, together with his wife, entertained me right royally during my stay here in spite of the imprecations heaped upon me by the other women in the town, many of whom declared they "would rather die than cook a meal for me"—a true example of Christian charity—(The local physician declared that such a man as myself "ought to be put in jail and kept there," and I have no doubt there are many that would like to do it—if they could), Mr. and Mrs. Heniker, Mr. Carus and his family, Mr. Baker, and Mr. Niles are about the only friends of freedom to be found in this hot-bed of fanaticism. Mr. Pearney, though not an avowed Freethinker, gave me his sympathy and support on account of the storm of intolerance and opposition that had been raised against me. These, together with Mr. White, who came from the neighboring town of Biggs, were the only ones that gave me any assistance and encouragement in this unequal fight. I am by no means through with Gridley though, for I will visit this town at all hazards upon my next trip through the state and renew the fight for freedom and take up afresh the battle for progress.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

The Cause in the State of Washington.

Bigotry and cupidity have triumphed. The petition of the churches has been granted by our state legislature, and all church property is entirely exempt from taxation.

To me the saddest part of the fight was the apathy of the majority of the Liberals throughout the state.

To the few generous, staunch, and true, who responded by active work, words of encouragement, and financial aid, I take this opportunity to express my gratitude and esteem. Had the majority done one-tenth as much, I should be sending out tidings of grand victory instead of deploring defeat.

No efforts were spared by the Washington Secular Union officers. After exhausting all contributions, I drew on my own scant funds, sent out two thousand petitions and over five thousand printed letters throughout the state, and paid postage on over two hundred and fifty letters that were signed and returned to me to mail to senators and representatives. I sent a copy of the large cartoon by Heston, "Taxed and Untaxed," to every member of the senate and house of representatives at Olympia, with printed matter, "Words of Wisdom," and a letter calling attention to our state constitution and clearly proving that exemption from taxation of church property was in palpable violation alike of its letter and spirit. I paid able and efficient persons to watch and work to defeat any underhand subtle schemes of the Ministerial Alliances and their hirelings at Olympia, made three trips there myself, and when the fight in the house proved vain and the church secured the victory, I at once prepared and served a protest on Governor McGraw, giving reasons, legal and otherwise, and asking him to veto the exemption clause. I worked night and day, but was defeated because so greatly overmatched.

Until Liberals learn to disregard the shibboleth of party and vote only for men of principle as representatives and law-makers, men whose interests are with the people, and not creatures who are eager to sell themselves or their own mothers for pelf, or who can be scared out of doing right by threats of ministers to use church influence against them at the next election, we can expect only defeat.

Among senators, as well as representatives, the church found pliant, blatant demagogues ready to do any dirty work required in return for promised help and influence.

The just demands of the farmers and wage-workers, the producers and the mechanics, were ignored or treated with derision. It was not a question of right, justice, and the good of the state, but, "What is there in it for me?" "What shall I gain by voting for it?"

The church-members and their friends did not fail to write personal letters and mail them to senators and representatives, promising help or threatening to use every influence against them in the future.

Liberals, with few noble exceptions, were indifferent. They did not realize the importance, the great need, of effort and prompt action. If priest and parson of every denomination had to call in person and collect the amount of their church exemption, although each one demanded but a few cents, how energetic would have been the so dunned to secure repeal of the infamous law permitting such extortion. But because it is not a direct "stand-and-deliver," "your-money-or-your-life" robbery, but the state legislature not alone exempts church property from paying, but virtually pays a collector so as to save the church any disagreeable duty in the matter, Liberals were apathetic, and the church has scored a big victory over right and justice.

This success of the Ministerial Alliances of the state will prompt them to greater aggressions and further attacks upon our rights and liberties. We must arouse, buckle on our armor anew, and zealously, unitedly battle for entire divorce of church and state. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." No great advancement has been gained without encountering some repulses, calling for additional devotion and self-sacrifice.

We are defeated, but not in the least dismayed.

C. B. REYNOLDS,

Sec. Washington Secular Union.

Tacoma, Wash.

Liberal Societies.

Professor Adler was never heard to better advantage than he was on last Sunday, when he lectured on the proposed extradition treaty between the government of this country and that of Russia. He was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic applause. Among other things he said:

"There is a mutual feeling of good will between the people of this country and the people of Russia. The Russian people are like ourselves, a people in the making. They have before them the same task that we have, that of subduing a continent. The growth and development of so large a country as Russia is likely to exert a vast influence on mankind. But whatever may be our feelings toward the people, we must distinguish between the people and its government.

"By the terms of the treaty in question, persons who have attempted the life of the czar are not to be deemed political offenders—that is, they shall be extraditable. To understand this treaty one must understand the government with whom it is made. Of all the states in Christian Europe Russia alone is an absolute monarchy. In reality it has no representative bodies corresponding to our legislature. The council of the empire is allowed to discuss laws, but it can do no more than give advice. The opinion of the minority as well as the opinion of the majority is sent to the emperor; he may reject either one, or he may, as he generally does, reject both. The members of this body are appointed by the emperor; they are usually ex-office-holders and would-be office-holders. What power can they have?

"The government of Russia is a kind of paternalism, carried to an almost absurd extent. The people are little children, and the emperor is their father. They cannot leave the country, they can not read certain books, they cannot found schools or even a bed in a hospital, without the permission of their father, the czar.

"A people cannot be strong unless it is free. The czar wanted his people to be strong. Universities and schools were founded, but what was offered by one hand was snatched up again by the other. The precautions and regulations drove the Russian students to desperation. The powers of an autocrat when united in the hand of an honest fanatic are ten times more hurtful than when in the hands of a less honest man. Russian Nihilism is born of Russian autocracy. To judge it fairly one must be acquainted with the circumstances. At first the Nihilists were a peaceful people, and it was only after they had tried other methods that they met violence with violence.

"It is the accepted maxim of all nations that all political crimes are not extraditable. In Russia, where the czar is the government, the person who attempts to take his life is guilty of a political crime only. But it is inhuman, you say. But shall we see this inhumanity of the poor, desperate boy of the university, and yet forget the infinitely greater inhumanity that goaded him on? Shall we forget the flogging of cultured men and women? We stand by with bleeding hearts and eyes suffused with useless tears, but we cannot help; it is illegitimate to interfere.

"Autocracy and Nihilism are engaged in a life-and-death duel. If the czar can apprehend those who with murderous weapons are fighting a murderous despotism, well and good. But if these escape it is not for us to agree to return them. Russian Nihilists have repeatedly said that they will lay down their arms if the czar will grant a representative government. We are told by the authorities at Washington that before a Russian refugee will be turned over to Russian authorities sufficient evidence to warrant such proceedings must be produced in an American court of law. But the evidence produced need only be enough to justify, in the opinion of the magistrate, commitment, and not conviction. Very little evidence is necessary for commitment, in comparison with the evidence necessary for conviction. But commitment and extradition would be fair if followed by a fair trial. But can a man be said to be tried fairly who is not tried by jury, who is not confronted with the witnesses, who is denied the sacred right of appeal?"

Professor Adler said he had heard people remark that it was too late to protest; but he thought if the American people would only declare themselves the abominable treaty would not be ratified. Next Sunday the professor will lecture on "The Glad Tidings of Easter."

The third meeting of the Young Men's Debating Club was held Saturday evening, March 25th. The discussion was on money. Mr. Gillen read a very interesting essay in which he dwelt at some length on the history of banking. The Grecian bankers (trapezitai) and Roman bankers (argentarii); the rise of modern banking in Florence; the nature of the business done by the Medici, the Acciajuoli, the Peruzzi, and the Bardi; the establishment of the bank of Venice in 1510; of the bank of Amsterdam, 1609; bank of Hamburg, 1619; bank of England, 1694; bank of Ireland, 1783; bank of Scotland, 1783—all of these subjects were spoken of by the lecturer. Coming down to the present day, Mr. Gillen said he thought that property, not metal, should be the basis of currency. He also spoke of the different objects that early peoples and barbarous nations of the present day have used as a circulating medium. Thus in the sixth book of the Iliad oxen are mentioned as a medium of commerce; in Rome, Latium, Umbria, and most of the states in early Italy, sheep and oxen; in some parts of Norway at the present day corn is used, etc., etc. In the discussion that followed Messrs. Bird, Walker, and Avery made some interesting remarks. At the next meeting Mr. Walker will read an essay on "The Mystery of Life."

Mr. A. K. Owen addressed a large audience in the rooms of the Newark Liberal League last Sunday on the proposed town "Sinaloa," to be built in Mexico. Mr. Owen spoke first on the growth of corporations in this country, and the foolhardiness of individuals who try to combat with companies. "Ninety-nine per cent of you who are fighting the battle of life alone will fail. Why? Because you do not combine. I have noticed that nearly all the extreme poverty of the world is among the unincorporated, and on the other hand all the luxury is among the incorporated." Sinaloa, the lecturer said, would when finished be the ideal city. It would be owned by a corporation but every citizen would be a stockholder in that corporation. The products of the labor of the city's citizens would be bought by the corporation at a price agreed upon before the work was begun, and sold again to the citizens at the lowest possible figure. Quite a large number of those present thought that the plan would prove unsuccessful because of its non-practicability; the majority, however, received the plan avec effusion. Mr. Bird said he thought the simple fact that no churches would be built in the town ought to guarantee the success of the project. Next Sunday T. B. Wakeman will lecture.

"The True Genesis of Christianity" was the subject of T. B. Wakeman's lecture at the Manhattan Liberal League last Friday evening. The lecture was an exposition of Mr. Wakeman's article in the last number of THE TRUTH SEEKER. The critics were Mr. Wilson Macdonald, Mrs. Dunlevy, and Dr. Clark Bell.

Mr. Henry Rowley lectured before the Brooklyn Philosophical Society last Sunday on "Freethought and Its Relation to Society." A synopsis of Mr. Rowley's lecture was published in our issue of March 18th.

Hell-Fire and Damnation.

The following item recently appeared in the press dispatches of the San Francisco Chronicle:

Mrs. William Wilbur, of Rowan, Ia., has been judged insane and sent to the insane asylum. The immediate cause of her mania was a graphic pulpit picture of hell-fire, drawn in a sermon by her pastor. The preacher's description of the torments of the damned made such a vivid impression upon Mrs. Wilbur's mind, that her reason was overthrown, and it is feared that she is hopelessly insane.

So the "good work" goes on, and the "glad tidings of great joy" are promulgated to dethrone reason and destroy domestic happiness. One more victim of the most damnable religion that priestcraft ever invented to curse the human race! Another sensitiv mind ruined by baseless tales of fear and falsehood, invented to avoid manual labor and gain control of the credulous masses. And yet this sacred superstition is taught and perpetuated in every civilized community, as a moral necessity and an indispensable adjunct to civilization itself, and we are frequently informed, as the readers of the leading daily journal of this city were to day, how dark and gloomy would be this world and how hopeless this life, were it not for the blessed religion of Jesus Christ. The "blessed religion" of this ancient myth, if properly termed would be cursed religion; for it is the only one that ever invented or conceived of eternal torture and endless damnation. The human mind never before or since conjured up such an outrageous and improbable system of religion as that of Christianity, and its whole influence, wherever felt, for nearly nineteen hundred years has been detrimental to human happiness, peace, prosperity, and progress. It has never failed to detract from the joys of life; and has, like an incubus, depressed the minds of untold millions, while in others it has incited strife and hatred that nothing could appease. There is nothing "blessed" about such a contemptible fraud and imposition, about such a horrid, unreasonable, and repulsive religion. It is an abomination pure and simple, and deserves nothing but the contempt and execration of all mankind. If there is anything that would bestow incalculable benefit upon the world, it is the destruction and total annihilation of this hell-fire and damnation doctrine known as Christianity; and if such persistent and perpetual efforts were not everywhere made to force it into the minds of babes and children, it would not be long dying; for developed reason and mature judgment reject it as ancient mythology is rejected. Christianity cannot survive long when it is not taught to children, and the Catholic and Protestant church both know it; so they work to enslave the young and manufacture mental slaves, who, being told the exercise of reason is a Christian crime, seldom dare to think their way out of bondage.

It is said by some that the hell-fire doctrine is not much taught in these days, and "the love of Jesus" is the harp with a single string on which the preachers play; but with few exceptions this is not true, and hell-fire is just as much a stock in trade as it ever was. Language has been modified, however (barring the back towns), so it does not grate so harshly on the nerves; but when told to "flee from the wrath to come" and "be saved through the Lord Jesus Christ," it means to dodge the same old hell that Calvin and Jonathan Edwards shook the people over. Without this hell there is nothing to be saved from, and Jesus ceases to be a savior; so while Christianity exists the whole stock in trade must remain intact, or the system will inevitably perish by passing into Universalism, thence through Unitarianism to complete Infidelity. Christian salvation can have but one meaning—salvation from hell-fire and damnation—and when the clergy become sufficiently humanized to reject hell-fire they really have no further business with the religion of Jesus. The preacher who dethroned Mrs. Wilbur's reason and wrecked the domestic happiness of that family was a true Christian; and those who want the Simon-pure article must listen to just such hell-ranters as he; for hell is a fact if Christianity is true, so nothing can be more important than to make it generally known; therefore, gentlemen with the black coats, give the people hell until the insane asylums are full, or reason is so shocked by such horrid teachings that it rises in open rebellion, and common sense so spreads that your salary no longer materializes, which would produce one certain result—no more preaching. Speed that happy day, and let the human mind be freed from priestcraft. C. SEVERANCE.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 5, 1893.

Don't Be a Hypocrit.

Let us all strive to be what we seem to be, and seem to be what we are; but always for truth, justice, and right, that the world may be a better place to live in, and life worth living.

There is so much of false pretense,
So hollow, so deceiving,
We need a life's experience.
To learn the art of living
Among the various faiths and creeds
That seek our acceptance,
His creed is best whose daily deeds
Merit our approbation.

Priestcraft from time immemorial has sought to control the thoughts and actions of mankind, assuming to do so for the benefit of humanity in this life and the life to come. But as a class the clergy are not, and never have been, more exempt from the faults and foibles common to humanity than men of other professions.

By assuming that they derive information and authority from a supernatural and higher power than those in other professions, they have obtained a stronger hold on the credulity of the people, and are enabled to mold them to their wish and will, for their own personal aggrandizement, that they may live and fatten on the labor of those who in the various occupations of productive industry "have to earn before they eat," thus filching from honest toil a subsistence that they are not entitled to, because they assume to teach mysterious unknown and unknowable things that neither they nor others can learn.

Webster says a hypocrite is one who feigns to be other and better than he really is; one who assumes an appearance of piety and virtue, etc. The word hypocrite is synonymous with dissembler, deceiver, pretender, and cheat.

In the remote past, on account of the ignorance of the people generally, and at present, the credulous and uneducated are held in subjection by the priesthood, not only on matters pertaining to religion, but on all things pertaining to beliefs, political, social; and acts in the business of every-day life. But at present, in our nation especially, the growing intelligence of the masses gives them the stamina and independence that enable them in a measure to unbind the chains and throw off the yoke with which the clergy have so long held them in bondage.

Now the current of educated popular opinion is so strong that the clergy are unable to stem the tide in many things, and are trying to trim their sails to the popular breeze. Old and well-established doctrines and dogmas are in peril, and how to revise the Bible and the oldtime creeds is a problem that is hard to solve. In proof of this, witness the present trials of Rev. Briggs and Smith for heresy. The old Calvinistic doctrine of election, predestination, foreordination, and damnation, so sound and popular from fifty to one hundred years ago, has lost its prestige, the current of popular opinion is opposed to it, and what to do is a problem that even the wiles of priestcraft can not solve. The old Calvinistic doctrine is in the Bible, sound and solid, and will not down, for it is the chief corner-stone of the Book.

All the hypocrisy, dissembling, and cunning wiles so familiar to the clergy will not blot it out, and it looks as though the infallible Bible inspiration of that book is doomed.

No important matter in modern times illustrates the hypocrisy and deceit so prevalent better than the course pursued to secure the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday. This emanates from and is engineered mostly by Christians, who claim to be more truthful, moral, and just than others, and assume to be teachers in that line that hand out and pass around models and patterns which all good people should follow in order that our nation may be exalted above others and our people set an example of wisdom and goodness.

This practice of deceit and untruthfulness is the legitimate result of the teachings of St. Paul, the most learned and eloquent of Bible writers, who said: "If the truth has more abounded through my lie, then why am I adjudged a sinner?" and also, "Being crafty, I caught you with guile."

As a legitimate result of such teachings we need not wonder at the course pursued to induce Congress to close the Fair on Sunday. It is said on good authority that those Christian organizations have sent petitions to Congress from several states containing more names than the whole number of inhabitants in those states according to the census of 1890. And this is only one of many dishonorable ways resorted to by those self-righteous people.

The prevailing tendency of this inconsistent, unmanly, and wrong manner of controlling important public events is plainly illustrated in passing the act, at the last session of Congress, appropriating $2,500,000 for the World's Fair, with the proviso that it be closed on Sunday. When the bill was returned from the Senate to the House containing the amendment and proviso and the vote taken on its passage, more than one-third of the whole number of members composing that body were either paired or absent, thus practically dodging the question. It is seldom that we find a more plain and practical illustration of the fear of Mrs. Grundy. An important election was then pending and many members feared to put themselves on record, as they hoped to be again elected and they did not dare to commit themselves by voting.

All just and Liberal-minded people should favor free speech, free press, and free Sunday, as a holiday on which all may be free to go to church or seek rest and recreation in any lawful, moral way they choose.

This may be the last I shall send you. A desire that it may be so will sometimes come to me. I have been an invalid shut in nearly twenty-two years. Sight is failing—one eye is gone, the other dim—but I cannot help thinking, and here you have a few thoughts, with a hope that they may be a little help in freeing the world from the bondage of priestcraft.

CONVERSE CLOSE.

Grattan, Mich.

Shall We Become the Guardians of the Czar?

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at a large meeting of the Manhattan Liberal Club, of New York city, at its weekly meeting, at No. 220 East 15th street, on Friday evening, March 3, 1893, and a committee was appointed to further the object stated in them:

Resolved, That we learn with great surprise that a treaty has been negotiated and ratified between the officials of the United States and the czar of Russia, without the knowledge or consent of our people, containing a provision for the extradition of persons charged with attempts against the life of the czar or members of the imperial family; and that such treaty is now awaiting signature and delivery by our president.

Resolved, That we most earnestly protest against this treaty, or any treaty, containing any clause for the extradition of any person for any such, or for any offense which may be in any way of a political character. That the offenses referred to are in Russia inevitably political offenses, inasmuch as the czar and the imperial family exist there only as political rulers and despots, and are not citizens or individuals in any usual or proper sense of the words. That we, therefore, declare the mutuality of this clause of that treaty which associates our president with the czar as needing similar extradition protection, as an insult to the free people of America, and their freely elected executive, who is not, in fact or theory, a despot or a tyrant, but the highest servant of the people, thoroughly responsible to them during and at the close of his short term of office.

Resolved, That we have no confidence in the justice, reliability, or good faith of charges of this or of any nature made by the police or spies of the Russian czar, and we earnestly protest against any person being dragged from American soil upon any charges or pretenses whatsoever from that source until a full trial or examination has been had before a competent American tribunal and jury.

Resolved, That we feel personally humiliated by this treaty, for it makes every American citizen the guardian of the safety of the despots of Europe against the righteous indignation of the people longing and struggling for freedom. We insist, therefore, that our president shall withhold his signature from this or any treaty that could in any way be used for the repression, or give, or be used to give, that belief to peoples aspiring for liberty in any part of the world.

In various parts of the globe peoples are continually being discovered who have no Christianity, or often no religion at all, and who at the same time possess morality in a degree far above Christian nations. Such a people are the Eskimo, as described by a member of the late Greenland expeditions: "All the time aboard the ship they were smiling and laughing. These people have never had any Christian teachings, and almost the only white men they ever see are the whalers. Yet they are scrupulously and perfectly honest. In trucking or trading with them members of the expedition passed around among them needles, knives, and many articles as precious to them as diamonds to an American. Everything was returned."

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Montreal,	April 2, 9	Harwich, Mass.,	April 13
Osterville, Mass.,	" 11	Worcester, "	" 16
Cotuit,	" 12	Cincinnati, Ill.,	" 23

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH's lecture appointments are:

Trinidad, Col.	Mar. 30, 31	Denver, Col.	April 8, 9
" "	April 1, 2	Boulder, "	" 10-12
Canon City, "	" 5, 6	Ellsworth, Kan.	" 18-20

Letters of Friends.

Encouraging Peck to Persecute God.

ELMIRA, N. Y., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have waited for last week's TRUTH SEEKER somewhat impatiently since you previously announced John Peck's "What I Know About God." The paper reached here last Sunday, and I must confess "What I Know About God" is a "corker." I have just written Mr. Peck my praises. Yours always,
L. DE WITT GRISWOLD.

A Recruit Drummed Up.

ST. THOMAS, ONT., March 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed $3 for my subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER for 1893, and one subscriber on trial for three months, with every prospect to be continued. I am trying to do the best I can to circulate your paper, but it is uphill work. However, I will keep on trying with hopes of success.

We take great delight in THE TRUTH SEEKER and admire the writings of Ingersoll and Peck and especially Heston's pictures.

Wishing you success in your good work, I remain,
Yours truly,
MALCOLM MCGREGOR.

Praise for Heston and Ingersoll.

GRANT CITY, MO., March 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Within find draft for $6, which please credit on my subscription and oblige one who has passed the three-score line, but whose heart loves the many truths advanced by the many good writers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. I derive more satisfaction from reading your valuable paper than any other paper I take. I enjoy the picture scenes of Heston's and think he portrays more forcibly than anyone could describe. Every picture drawn seems to me a good lesson for thoughtful persons to weigh—and if they do so without prejudice, they will certainly admit the truths he so comically sets forth. I am also a great admirer of Colonel Ingersoll and love his style. A noble man who stands aloft and dares to do right though the world seems set against him. Long may he live to edify and teach erring humanity.
B. PRUGH.

P.S.—Open the World's Fair on Sunday.
B. P.

A Christian Scapegrace.

EL MONTE, CAL., March 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Charlesworth, the boy infidel, has shaken old orthodoxy until its most ardent supporters are sinking into the background, and when they return will take better ground for their assertions.

I have to announce the death of Mr. A. C. Yeary, a pioneer both in California and in Liberalism. Of the latter he was an ardent supporter. He fearlessly met his death, knowing the world was better for his life having been spent usefully instead of worshipping vanishing superstition.

Mr. Charlesworth met a champion of the Bible, who after the lecture attempted to defend the holy word of God. The man is a representative Christian, who beats his wife and children (he wore a beautiful pair of black eyes he had received as a prize for beating one of his daughters unmercifully the day before Brother Charlesworth's arrival), and speaks every time occasion offers in the church, and is known by all to cheat everyone when he can. After his making some assertions, Mr. Charlesworth offered him $50 to bring proof, which he could not, and the audience cheered him off the platform. He exposed his mental caliber as a parting shot: "I am not ashamed to read any part of the Bible to my family." The Liberals join in Hurrah for the boy infidel!

WILL H. BAKER.

That "God" and "Gods" Contradiction.

BARRE, MASS., Feb. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Thanks to D. P. Barry for coming to my rescue in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 18th. But I was "greatly amused" by his mistake at the outset, for Ella E. Gibson is no "little heroin," but a woman five feet nine inches in height, in the seventy-second year of her age, forty of these years having been spent in an anti-biblical discussion on the platform and with her pen.

I did not attempt to reply to Mr. Thorne (see THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sept. 17, 1892, and Jan. 21, 1893) to display my learning, but to show that the Hebrew plural noun, Elohim, was translated into the English singular noun God, instead of Gods, and that the plural English pronouns, us and our, were used instead of the singular, which caused the confusion of which Mr. Thorne complained; and further to show that the whole Bible was not translated any more correctly.

I know I did it in a very bungling way, for I am a distressed invalid, but did I not make out my case when I said "If the first verse of the Bible was translated correctly, it would read 'In the beginning the Gods created the heaven and the earth;' and 'this one God talking to himself, should have said 'I will make man in my image,' etc., etc.?"

Anyway, it called out Mr. Barry's elaborate explanation (and we are promised more), so some good was done, after all, by the poor, sick
OLD WOMAN.

Join the Secular Church of Humanity, Liberty, Education, and Prosperity.

PORTLAND, ORE., March 14, E.M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: We have the pleasure of having lectures delivered here by Mrs. Katie Kehm Smith at the Secular church, northwest corner of Second and Salmon streets (upstairs); the first lecture delivered on Thomas Paine's birthday, 29th day of January, this year; every Sunday since, and will be every Sunday, commencing at 7:45 P.M., to come this spring and next summer, I hope. It stirs the people up here. Christians come sometimes to this church, but they are surprised by hearing a genuine good Liberal speech from a lady which no preacher can answer by argument. One fanatic once tried to defend Christianity, but he made a fool of himself, because he showed by his quotations out of the Bible different from Mrs. Smith's that there are contradictions in the holy book. I was astonished. I hope the big army of unbelievers will not attend the orthodox churches any more, but join the Secular church of humanity, Liberty, education, prosperity for all. If every person has a chance to make a good, honest, comfortable living, then we shall have a good time; then the people can enjoy life. We want a reform, and I think this America is the best place to start a rich country. A united brotherhood. No more war. No more preachers with their Gods and superstition to rule the people. We must not rest till the people on the whole earth are one united brotherhood.

I will try my best to get subscribers. I will try my best and do all I can for you. Please send THE TRUTH SEEKER to the person whose address I append. I think he will subscribe soon when he has money. If you have some TRUTH SEEKERS to spare, please send some more, if old ones.

W. WEDEKEN.

"Ta-ra-ra-boom-ter-ay" Better Than "Hail the Power of Jesus's Name."

OSWEGO, ORE., Feb. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The Methodist church of this town has just closed a series of revival meetings, and fortunately no one was regenerated. The sky-pilot who conducted the would-be revival was one of the old "orthodox hell-fire, believe-or-be-damned" species. I would like to give an account of it in detail, but space forbids.

In the first place, he told his audience, which consisted chiefly of the members of the church, to pray for the sinners that were away from Christ. Three times every night for nine nights he told the Lord with a loud voice what to do. But the Lord heeded not. Surely his ears are defective, or too far away, or he thought he knew without being told what to do.

Among the amusing remarks were these: "There is good and bad literature. There's the 'Pilgrim's Progress,' which fills the soul and body with life; and there's Tom Paine's 'Age of Reason,' which poisons the soul, and yet, strange to say, it is being circulated all over the world, and surely this should not be the case." But the following is a corker: "There is no true music unless there's Jesus in it. All other is mere bosh and foolishness." These are the identical phrases he used. I was surprised when I saw the first copy of the "Age of Reason," it was so small. I read it through in two evenings. I wondered how the little work could have caused so much controversy. Yet it is the case. Is it poison? Yes, to orthodoxy, miracles, witchcraft, revelations, and inspirations. To the creeds of Calvin it is as leprosy. But to reason, justice, and mental liberty it is the great physician.

I have no doubt but that he spoke his honest conviction when he uttered the above about music.

A mind filled with the thoughts of a literal hell, and the weeping and gnashing of teeth, could not be expected to grasp anything more, aspiring than the orthodox "Old Hundred." I would rather hear one inch of "Ta-ra-ra-boom-ter-ay" than four miles of "All hail the power of Jesus's name."

Freethinkers are not very plentiful here, the majority being of the indifferent type, and caring more for the dollar than they do for the cause of education.

The cartoon representing the theological extension was excellent.

You may look for some new subscribers from me in the near future. "Let the light shine."
E. L. DAVIDSON.

A Typical Time-Serving Politician Dissected.

NEW CAMBRIA, KAN., Feb. 20, 293.

MR. EDITOR: I find that the Hon. John Davis has set up many false premises and made many unjust claims for the position he has taken in regard to the World's Fair, as shown in his article in the issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 11th as sent in by me. It is so dense and compact I cannot imagine how he could get so many illogical and untenable statements into so small a space—unless on the ground that he is an ex-editor—as he has done. And so it requires considerable reviewing, study, and space to answer all he has said. Mr. Davis says, "I claim that the rights of labor and the laboring people must be considered and granted." Now, the question arises, How much has Mr. Davis done to get "the right of labor" "considered and granted?" Notwithstanding that he emphatically says their rights "must be considered and granted," simply nothing at all. He voted for the closing of the World's Fair willfully and unconditionally. Does not such a course smack of hypocrisy and dishonesty; and that, too, viewed from his own premises; when he never lifted as much as his little finger in opposition to it, as the records will show? What was to hinder him from offering an amendment to the bill embodying his views, and if his amendment was not accepted would it not have been his duty to oppose the original bill, when he says "the rights of labor" "must be considered and granted?" He talks very determinedly, but acts right to the reverse. O consistency, thou art a jewel!

Mr. Davis is no doubt one of the number that would be in favor of repealing the Sherman act in regard to the purchasing of silver if they would substitute the free and unlimited coinage of silver on a certain basis to gold, but would he vote for repeal without some such provision? Nay, not much. Then we find him more determined in the latter case than the former, while he could not have said anything near as pointed in the last case as in the first, and so we are forced to conclude that he has nothing to offer the laborer, and that large and "so intelligent" class, but flattery, taffy, and hypocrisy. By their acts ye shall know them.

Mr. Davis, after giving us his plan, closes by saying, "In my opinion, this is the more Liberal and the better policy," while I say, "Honesty is the best policy," which of course includes impartiality and justice, which coincide with the Constitution; but you will find legislators will be partial to the strongest organization, the Constitution to the contrary notwithstanding, as long as it means popularity and more votes. And if Liberals would act on the principle that the name implies, viz., persons without prejudice, why, you could make honest men out of our legislators. And you have the weapon right at hand—the Freethought Federation of America, an organization that asks nothing of you only what is fair. It does not ask of you to leave your party, but it asks of you to sit down on a man in your party, or out, that infringes on your rights or the Constitution. And you have plenty of precedents to be guarded on this point. "We should take alarm at the least encroachments upon our liberties." "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Such arguments as Mr. Davis has used may deceive the unthinking, but they can not be made in good faith by intelligent men. Now, Liberals, you have it in your power to make these men honest by swinging from one party to another and defeating the man that does you an act of injustice by the least encroachment upon your liberties. If you cannot do this you had better go over to the orthodox party where you belong. Of course it is best to make a firm resolve while no campaign is on, if you are going to act on the former plan or on the principles of the American Federation, because the party whip will be brought into requisition and it will take more than an average man to withstand its pressure—which is nothing more than appealing to the lowest and basest passions, such as hatred, prejudice, and animosity. Now, if we will, we can hold the balance of power in almost all legislative districts, either state or national. If you cannot do this, how much less orthodox are you than the Christian on things that are your hobbies? But if you can, it will give us an immense advantage on account of our Liberal and pliable tendency, and our being an unknown quantity gives us another immense advantage. JOHN W. ABBOTT.

Thinks Woman an Excelling Sex; and Thinks the World Growing Better.

ANTRIM, N. H., March 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading Brother Paine's writings, and while reading of course I took into consideration many things that in my opinion should be seriously considered by everyone, and weighed in the scales of reason and common sense. Now, why does Mr. Paine speak of God as "he?" I will tell you what I think is the reason. It is because they all want to make out that man is a great thing in the creation, and of course God must be of a male nature in order to perform such a great work as making a world. But if man would only let woman have as good a chance as he enjoys himself she would far excel him every time.

Now, as to the creation, if there ever was a first beginning it was on the Darwinian theory—as far as I can learn from hearsay about his works, as I myself have not ever read any of them. But as far as my experience and observation go, I have come to the conclusion that when this world was first started the people were, like the brute, mighty slim things, but have been improving ever since. The products in the arts of every imaginable kind on this earth to-day are no more like the things of past ages than chalk is like cheese. And now if you will only take the whole matter into consideration, you will see at once that while mankind have been improving on things that they have to use something has been improving on man, for better or worse, as the case may be, for mankind are more cunning to-day by far than they were four thousand years ago. For you will readily see, if you but stop to think, that every age produces its big men and women; Voltaire and Paine, with a thousand of others equally as smart, were produced years ago, and as time rolls on the same process is producing the same kind over and over again, only making an improvement at every generation. I consider Brother Ingersoll one of our smartest men at the present time; I also consider and think that at some future time there will be men and women produced that will be smart enough to place before their fellow-beings such truth that all of such a class as there is on the globe at the present time calling themselves divines will be then considered as they should be, the scum of the earth, and not worthy of the notice of anyone in regard to their teachings.

And now in conclusion I will say that I have thought for many years that, while the old fools, as you might call them, are fast passing from this world and more schoolhouses are being built and the rising generation are becoming more wise and thoughtful, yet in all this you must take into consideration that this same old devil, the Church, is raising his head at the same time. For friends in his house he has hypocrites of the worst kind, and their actions show them to be the children of what they themselves call the devil.

And last, if you would win woman over to the truth, just lay the facts before her eyes and when she is given a chance with men give her the praise that rightfully belongs to her and then she will appreciate it, and all of the slick devils on the earth cannot get her into their coils and destroy her life and happiness.

Yours truly, H. B. RALEIGH.

Rejected Communication.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Feb. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: A few days ago I sent the following communication to the daily Picayune, this city:

PNEUMATIC TUBE MAIL TRANSIT.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Jan. 20, 1893.

Editor "Vox Populi," Daily Picayune: In your edition of Sunday, the 19th inst., is given an account of the successful trial with the pneumatic tube at the Philadelphia post-office some time last week. The first package, it states, sent by Postmaster-General Wanamaker, was a Bible, wrapped up in an American flag, and a message which read: "First use of the first pneumatic postal-tube in the United States is to send through it a copy of the holy scripture, the greatest message ever given to the world."

I am at loss to understand Mr. Wanamaker. I cannot understand, even, why the Bible is allowed to pass through the United States mails at all, as there is a law prohibiting the mailing of any immoral and indecent literature—and who is better aware of that than Wanamaker, Comstock, etc.? I am satisfied that any fair-minded and liberal person, who reads the Bible without prejudice, will agree with me not only that it contains more indecent, immoral, and inhumane literature than probably any other book ever written, but that it is a most blasphemous book and a downright insult to a wise and just God—if there be one at all. The Bible, no doubt, contains some good reading-matter, but what is that in comparison to the bulky columns which are unfit to be read and unworthy of publication, the teaching of which is demoralizing to our rising generation? And until it has been purged of all its immoral and indecent contents it should not be allowed to pass through the mails, but should be dealt with according to law as all other literature of a similar character.

Furthermore, does not Postmaster-General Wanamaker's action make him appear as favoring a union of state and church? Should it ever come that far, then good-bye Free Republic. The "Land of the Free" would be a thing of the past. The faithful and over-pious will then not be satisfied with such outrageous persecutions as are of late being practiced again in Tennessee, where, owing to a difference of belief, some Christians are persecuting others, causing them to be sentenced to work in chains as common criminals on the public highways, but they will soon revive the practice of religious persecution of the Dark Ages, when thumbscrew, rack, and stake were the methods and tools of reform and persuasion. Therefore, ye servants of the people—

Be not led into temptation,
But save us from such combination.

ERWIN AUFFURTH.

Same correspondence being rejected, I sent the following reply:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Feb. 23, 1893.

Editor "Vox Populi," Daily Picayune, Dear Sir: I beg leave to acknowledge receipt of my communication, without giving any cause of rejecting same. As I was of the opinion that the columns of Vox Populi were open to everyone's views, the correspondents being responsible for their own opinion, thus freeing the editor from all blame, I entertained hopes of your being kind and liberal enough to grant me the same privilege, but regret having been mistaken. As already stated, my correspondence was returned without giving the cause of its rejection; but the old saying is, "No answer is also an answer," in consequence of which I conclude your answer to be, that you admit the truth of my statement, but that even though you may yourself have outgrown more or less the doctrines of these superstitious creeds, you do not wish to publish anything so contrary to the views of the great majority of your patrons. But it is a consolation to know, that among those who have passed from theology to reason and from blood-stained Christianity to humanity, we find some of the most intelligent and enlightened journalists and editors, whose columns are open to everyone's views and opinions, be he Jew, Christian, Infidel, or what not, for the purpose of discussing, investigating, searching for truth, etc., in order to enlighten and better the conditions of mankind. And to one of these journals I shall send my correspondence, rejected by you, and mail you a copy when published.

Very respectfully yours for mental freedom and the emancipation of the human mind from the thralldom of superstition,
ERWIN AUFFURTH.

Description of Savannah; and Some Sentiments on Providence, and on Holy Days vs. Holidays.

SAVANNAH, GA., March 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I want to tell you what sort of a town Savannah is. Last Wednesday and Thursday nights Mr. Putnam was with us. He gave us two good lectures—Wednesday night, "The Bible and Modern Thought," and on Thursday night "The American Republic—Its Perils and Its Principles." Those who heard him—or a great portion of them—were delighted. He told them a great number of truths which they did not know, and confirmed a great deal in their minds which they were constrained to believe from observation and hearsay. Still the enthusiasm was not forthcoming, nor fifth coming; in fact, it did not seem to hit any number with any sort of a driving lick. The wedge, you might say, is only started. But I believe that by constant hammering the petrified idea that "all is well" can be cracked sufficiently to enter the wedge of thought, and when that is accomplished you can safely rely on old Savannah for a good and substantial following. For it is a fact that Savannah never does things by halves, to be candid and honest with you. This city, of all the cities that I have visited and of which I am fully acquainted, stands at the head of the list as "non-sensational." Why, even Sam Jones, Sam Small, the Rev. Dr. Pearson, and the great Munhall, all signally failed to frighten and intimidate, enthuse or exasperate this staid and sturdy old City by the Sea. They came, they saw, but they failed to conquer. They preached and they prayed, as long as they staid, and when they were paid—they departed, "and they never came back," with Bible or tract, to give us a whack, since they started. So you see it is not to be wondered at that Mr. Putnam was not more enthusiastically received. But we hold to the old axiom that "a poor beginning makes a good ending," and adding to this the fact that the people of Savannah are just a little bit more humane and generous than the same number of people in any other spot on the globe, we feel satisfied, even encouraged, to work quietly on; go to church, when it is best, and let the good Christian people see and know that we are not vile, dangerous, nor even aggressive in our deportment, however much in our zeal. And I must say that I often see things to condemn in the would-be Liberal ranks. So many seem to lose sight of the fact that they were once Christian believers, and it is much harder for one to disbelieve than to accept the Christian faith, since we have all been taught these simple ideas, even from the cradle. I cannot forget how hard it was for me to disbelieve in the real necessity and existence of a God. I was many years arriving at present conclusions. And even now, if the Christians were content with their creed, "only to believe and be saved," I tell you candidly I would never pen these lines of attack on their "happy religion." But when I see, as I most certainly do, the cunning and combined efforts of their most aggressive skill aimed at, not my own, but the liberty of posterity, I cannot and will not keep silent.

They tell us that God is love; that the religion of Christ is all that is needed to civilize and enlighten the world. Then it is that I ask, "Why do you invoke the moral law to aid you in chaining the mind and muscle of a fellow-being?" The moral law is fully able to stand alone, but it has never been allowed to walk out by itself. That is just what I want to see. I want the constitutional moral law to untie from the apron-string of religion, and go out and weed its own patch.

This weeding-patch sentence reminds me of "slavery days." An old darkey on the place was hoeing his potatoes (sweet potatoes) on Sunday. When asked why he was working on "the Lord's day," he replied, "Got no udder time to work him, boss." "Oh, well," was the rejoinder, "you could find some other time to work your potatoes. Trust in providence for a time." At this the old man straightened up, and looking his Christian friend square in the eye, replied, "Why, boss, you tell me 'bout trus' in providens! Providens is de laziest nigger on de place—he won't work he own patch." And that is just what is the case with the Christians of to-day. They preach providence, and then pray for the good moral law to take his place. "We cannot enforce our Sabbath without your moral aid. We have neither brain- nor muscle-food in our churches to offer the enlightened of to-day. We can offer them only spiritual blessings." Well, when the Christians themselves deny the spiritual existence anywhere outside the Bible, the man of modern mind begins to think for himself, and finally comes to the belief that happiness is the only good. And he seeks happiness in all the walks of life. He finds happiness most in making others happy. He turns the holy day into a holiday; he takes his friends, his wife and children, and they go out for a change of scenery, to listen to the birds, to gather the sweet flowers, and to view nature in all its wonderful beauties. There is no superstition in the woods. There is no day half so good as a happy day. Truth lurks in every blossom. Happiness walks hand in hand with knowledge, and he is blind indeed who will not try in some feeble way to raise the clod of sordid superstition from the brain of his fellow-mortal.

SAVANNAH.

A Waggish Tale.

CHRYSTOVAL, ARIZ., Feb. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5 to pay my subscription for one year. Use the balance for the cause of truth in any way you think best.

Your cartoons are worth more than the subscription, to say nothing of the valuable reading matter.

I inclose you an amusing account of the alleged conversion to Catholicism of that fearless denouncer of "the pope and the pope's Irish," Frank Pixley, editor of the Argonaut. It is worth reading if you have time, as the miracle leading up to the conversion is of the usual stereotyped sort.

O. F. THORNTON.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

"Oh, to Tophet with the pope!"

This exclamation was made by one of a group of men standing and talking on the corner of California and Montgomery streets yesterday afternoon.

A portly gentleman with gray side-whiskers, an aquiline nose, and a piercing eye who was passing, stopped instantly and said sternly:

"How dare you, sir, speak thus of his holiness the supreme pontiff? Are you not afraid that the heavens will open and consuming fire descend upon you for such blasphemy? It is infamous that such language should be used upon the streets of a civilized, a Christian city!"

The speaker was Frank M. Pixley, editor of the Argonaut.

"You are astonished, gentlemen," said Mr. James McCue, ex-candidate for Congress, who was by the shocked journalist's side, "to hear my friend Pixley lift his voice in behalf of the pope. He's been converted, and henceforward is a child of light. Already a bill is on the way to Sacramento authorizing him to change his name to Phelim O'Pixley."

"'Tis a marvelous change!" cried the rebuked one.

"Marvelous? Miraculous," replied Mr. McCue, "and I'm happy to say that I was the humble instrument in the hands of providence by which the great change was wrought. Let's go into Collins's and have a drink, and I'll tell the whole wondrous story. You'll stand the drinks for the glory of God, won't you, Phelim?"

Mr. Pixley nodded, and with his pious elbow on the bar, Mr. McCue gave the following narrative:

"Pix and I have adjoining ranches up at Corte Madera. The railroad track divides 'em. His is on the hill and mine's on the flat below. You know how we grangers were suffering for the want of rain a few weeks ago. Well, Archbishop Riordan, who's a friend of industry and wants to see the state developed, issued orders to the clergy of his diocese to remind providence of its duty and pray for rain. The prayers were said, but somehow the rain didn't come. I've been in politics long enough to know that if you want influence you can't get it for nothing; so a week ago Tuesday I harnessed up my old roan mare, hitched her to my blue wagon, and started round among the ranches and spoke my little piece. Says I to 'm, If you want rain, why, dern you, show it. There's Father Largan down at San Rafael, who has the pull, and we've got to make it an object for him to exert it. You can't expect a man to go on praying night and day at a time like this, just to oblige a lot of fellows who have neither piety nor appreciation. Make a contribution, and I'll take down a wagonload of stuff to the padre, and if he don't fetch rain in forty-eight hours, why we'll report him to the archbishop and scratch his ticket henceforward and join the Methodists in a body.

"The business took. Murphy gave me three sacks of potatoes. Hoolahan chucked in a ham and a box of honey, Ryan chipped a quarter of beef, Malloy threw on a sheep and a bushel of onions. By the time I got round to Pixley here, the blue wagon was full and running over. I didn't want truck from him but coin. I spoke my piece, and asked him for $40. He refused."

"Yes, God forgiv me," murmured Mr. Pixley, crossing himself, though rather awkwardly.

"He not only refused," continued Mr. McCue, "but he was guilty of sacrilege. He called me a blanked fool, and asked if I thought he was idiot enough to give $40 to the Romish church, whose superstitions and mummeries—those were his words—he hated. 'Do you suppose,' he said, 'that any sensible man believes in the efficacy of prayer for rain? Do you think that God can be induced to change his mind at the solicitation of priests. You can bet, Jim, that if the almighty has planned to dry us out this year he won't alter his resolution to oblige Father Largan, or even Archbishop Riordan.' That's what he said; didn't you, Phelim?"

"Yes; may the saints pardon me," assented Mr. Pixley, humbly.

"Well, boys, I dumped the load on Father Largan, and told him to sail in and squeeze the clouds. To spur him up, I reported what Pixley had said, and I could see the fire flash from his reverence's eyes. It made him roll up his spiritual sleeves and spit on his spiritual hands like, which was just what I wanted.

"That same night, about 11 o'clock, I woke up and knew that I had done the business. The water was just pouring down and dancing on the roof. I rolled over with a chuckle and fell asleep again. About 8 A.M. I was awakened by a terrible hammering on my door. Up I jumped and flung it open. There stood Pixley, pale as a ghost, and wet to the skin.

"'Jim,' he gasps—I give you my word, gentlemen, I never saw a worse scared man—'Jim,' says Pixley, 'let me in, I beg of you—let me in under a Christian roof. Oh, will you?"

"'Why, hell, of course I will,' says I; 'but what's the matter?"

"'The matter,' says he, 'the matter, McCue?' and he drags me over to the west window. 'Just look out there, McCue, and see for yourself.'

"Gentlemen," said Mr. McCue, lifting his hat and placing his hand upon his breast, "I give you my word as a Christian man that my heart stood still as I stared out of that window. The rain was pouring down on my ranch, Hoolahan's to the south was drenched, Ryan's to the north was deluged, and Malloy's to the east was running like a river. But Pixley's was dry as a bone. While everybody around him was getting soaked, nary a drop had fallen on his ranch. More'n that, there was an opening in the clouds overhead showing the clear blue sky, and the edges of that opening followed exactly the boundaries of Pixley's property. It was the most awful, the goosefleshiest thing I ever beheld in my life.

"'Pixley,' says I, in a hoarse whisper, 'get down on your knees and pray.'

"'All right,' says he, 'but before I do I wish you'd take this and give it to that godly man, Father Largan, at your earliest convenience,' and he handed me two twenties.

"After we'd prayed, we drove into San Rafael, and when we rattled up to Father Largan's door there was his reverence waiting for us, and when he caught sight of Phelim here there was a twinkle in his eye and a grin on his sacred countenance that was excusable under the circumstances. We fixed things with the padre, and that night the opening in the clouds was closed, and Pixley got his rain like the rest of us. Now, gentlemen, push your glasses over to the barkeeper and have another round with me."

"No; with me," cried Mr. Pixley, firmly; and as the liquor was served he laid his hat on the bar and said solemnly:

"Gentlemen, a toast: I offer you The Pope. And," he added, after a slight struggle, "the Pope's Irish."

Children's Corner.

Edited by Miss Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

March.

Oh, March is a tricky fellow—
A tricky, troublesome sprite;
He will be as mild as a lamb by day
And fierce as a lion at night.
He rushes about with a clatter and bang
And makes the echoes ring,
And lays his mouth to the doors of the flowers
And roars, "Come out! I am Spring!"

But the flowers, they know better;
They smile and wink in the dark,
And nudge each other and whisper low:
"He is trying to cheat us. Hark!
How he shakes the ground with his heavy tread
And croaks as he tries to sing.
We know better, don't we, dears,
The voice of the real spring?"

We know April's lulling music,
Mild as the wood-dove's catches,
And the sound of her dainty finger-tips
Fumbling upon our latches.
And May—the dear, delicious May—
When we hear her laughter,
Quickly we jump and out we troop
In gay procession after.

But this obstreperous fellow,
This noisy, mischievous thing,
Need not think he is going to take us in
By leaving his card as 'Spring.'
Lie down again, violets, darlings,
And crocuses, you keep quiet;
Spring may come with a serenade,
But never with a riot."

—By Susan Coolidge in Boston Journal.

Useful Hints.

It is never wise to be too sanguine of success. The best endeavors sometimes fail of the mark. It is better to be thorough, though slow.

Do not jump at conclusions. Seek evidence and weigh it well. Caution, if not excess, is always in order.

Be careful of your signature, how it is affixed to business documents. Read papers carefully and thoroughly understand them, before signing.

Make contracts in writing. See that they are duly attested, and that they cover all the ground you desire. Unwitnessed verbal contracts will not stand in law.

It is better to be honorable under all circumstances. A man whose word is as good as his bond is superior to a god who promises but does not fulfill.

S. H. W.

A Query.

The newspapers of this city say that it is very probable that the king-boy of Spain, Don Alphonse (which means the son of the Bear), will probably be the personage who by touching an electric button in connection with the transatlantic cable and the World's Fair, will put in motion all the machinery on the 1st of May next.

Now, Miss Wixon, would it not be better for Mr. Cleveland to let his little daughter Ruth do that?

King Alphonse, merely a boy, has already caused the death of its nurse. I say this, because whether they are monarchs, kings, emperors, czars, or sharks, presidents, etc., when I know positively that they were ferocious animals in their origin, but have now the human shape, I cannot make use of the pronoun his. They continue killing now the same victims of their previous lives.

JOSEPH FELIX GONZALEZ.

New York, March 13, 1893.

[Yes, it would be very appropriate for our president's little daughter to do that, and especially so as this is the Woman's Era.—Ed. C. C.]

Correspondence.

BRONSTON, KY., March 5, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter, and, as "brevity is the soul of wit," I will be brief.

I live in a brick house near the Cumberland river and in sight of the Cincinnati Southern railway. We have a very fine view. I can stand in our door and see steamboats and trains passing at the same time. I am very proud of my home. We have rather a mild climate here, although December and January were very cold. The soil is very fertile, especially in the river bottoms. We have plenty of beautiful flowers, such as grow in the South.

I liked the letter written by J. E. Craft very much. I would like to know him personally.

Freethought is not spreading much in this neighborhood, but there are a few who are not afraid to think. May THE TRUTH SEEKER ever prosper, and may Freethought spread over the land like a tidal wave.

J. B. BROWN.

[An excellent letter.—Ed. C. C.]

BRONSTON, KY., Feb. 22, 1893.

DEAR EDITOR AND FRIEND: For fear you all will forget me I will write again, as it has been a long while since I wrote my first letter. And I like THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Corner as well as ever. I have four sisters, and we all get recitations out of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and our teachers and pupils all wonder where we get such nice pieces. We live on a high point on Cumberland river. We can see several miles, and for this reason we have named our place "Long View." Success to THE TRUTH SEEKER and friends.

MATTIE STIGALL.

DEEP RIVER, CONN., March 13, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write a few lines for the Children's Corner, as I have nothing to do at present. I am fifteen years old, and this is my first letter to the Corner. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and I enjoy reading it very much.

The people in Deep River are almost all against this paper. They say there is no truth in it, but I tell them there is more truth in it than in the Bible. People try to discourage my reading it, but I believe in it and always shall.

Hoping to see this in print, I remain,
Your true friend,

LOTTIE M. LEIGHTSINGER.

[A brave little lady.—Ed. C. C.]

BRONSTON, KY., Feb. 22, 1893.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE CORNER: I will write my second letter to the Corner, as it has been so long since I wrote.

We have had one of the coldest winters we ever had—the river was frozen over and wagons and teams went across. Our school is out, but I am going this spring. I will send you my composition on fruit and if you can find space in the Corner you can print it. Our schoolteacher gave us a card when we stood head of the class five days. I got seventeen cards.

I will close with my best wishes for the Corner.
Your little Freethinker,
GERTRUDE H. STIGALL.

[The composition will be printed.—Ed. C. C.]

CROOKSTON, MINN., Feb. 23, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I will now take the pleasure of writing a letter to the Children's Corner. My father has been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER for three years and values it very highly.

This is a tough winter; it storms most of the time, and not long ago a blizzard came along and fixed a minister in bad shape. He was going out in the country to tune up some church cranks, and he had to stay in an old shed all night without fire or food, as he couldn't find people anywhere.

The Crookston Freethinker Lodge meets every Saturday night.

When John R. Charlesworth was in Crookston he turned a lot of Christians into solid Freethinkers.

People will go to church one day and pray to God, making believe they are Christians, and next day gamble, get drunk, cheat, lie, and do many other bad things, women as well as men, especially the Catholics. Hoping to see it in print, I am yours truly,

C. C. MOORE.

BENJAMIN, UTAH, Feb. 27, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I take pleasure in writing a few lines to you, hoping to find you well as this leaves me at present. I like to look at the paper. I go to Sunday-school, but I do not believe what they teach. I go to Presbyterian school. The teacher is kind to her students. I like to go to school. I have not been to school much this winter, for I have been sick. I cannot go to school till it is finer weather. I want summer to come, for I like to work among the bees. I am in the Third Reader. I study reading, grammar, arithmetic, and geography. The teacher is a nice lady. She is very religious, but she is a good teacher. I will tell you her name—Miss Alice M. Peck. I often look at the Bible Picture Book. I like to look at the pictures in the book. I will tell you my brothers' and sisters' names and ages: One is Thomas Hone, he is twenty-four; the other is Will Hone, he is eighteen; the other is Lawrence Hone, he is nine. Eliza Hone is twenty-five; Louie Hone, she is fifteen; Lilly Hone is thirteen; Rosella Hone, she is twelve the 4th of March. I like to read the Children's Corner. Yours truly, ROSELLA HONE.

SWEETLAND, IA., Feb. 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first attempt to write for the Corner. I am a girl nine years old. I go to school; I study reading, history, arithmetic, language, and geography. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for about thirteen years. I think the pictures are really comical. I read the Children's Corner. I have one brother and one sister. My brother is twenty-two years old, my sister is sixteen. I have been to Sunday-schools of many different denominations, but the Unitarian suits me best. We attended Mr. Copeland's church and Sunday-school when we lived in Tacoma, Wash. Mrs. Copeland was my teacher. While there we heard Mr. C. B. Reynolds lecture. I love to see and hear him. Mr. Remsburg lectured there twice and he took tea with us once. I like to hear him also. I am afraid I will tire you, but I must tell you I have "The Story Hour," and know it almost by heart. I will close for this time.

A. PEARL NEWMAN.

[Write again, Pearl, and tell us about lovely Sweetland.—Ed. C. C.]

YORK, NEB., Feb. 23, 1893.

DEAR MISS EDITOR: This is the first time I have ever written to the paper. My father takes the paper and takes very much interest in it. He dropped it for a while, but he soon took it up again. He gets it of a newsdealer in our town. The town I live in has nine churches. I went to hear an evangelist preach not long ago. I know he was not telling the truth all the time, because he said quite a number of things about Mr. Ingersoll I know were not true.

Our superintendent comes in nearly every morning and uses up our time, that we ought to have for study, in praying and having us repeat psalms. I and a friend of mine are about the only ones that do not help along. I was fourteen years old this month. I am next to the high school, and have nine studies, which use all our time without the superintendent coming in and using half of it for foolishness. If all the people would take THE TRUTH SEEKER and get some common sense, the world would grow better.

From your friend, WALTER BAER.

[Walter is quite right in his conclusions.—Ed. C. C.]

McMINNVILLE, ORE., March 6, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON AND LITTLE CORNER FRIENDS: As this is such a lovely day I will endeavor to write to the Corner again. We are having such nice warm weather, it is almost like summer, although there is considerable snow in places. Where the snow is gone the flowers and plants are all beginning to grow, the tiny blades of grass are creeping forth through the old dead grass and the warm ground.

I am very glad that spring is coming, when we can go to school—gather the leaves and flowers for bouquets, and then hurry along to school, where we commence our day's work of daily study. I like to study hard at school and try to improve every minute, for the time to learn is while we are young. Don't you think so?

Our school will commence the 3d of April, and our teacher's name is Miss Gertrude Pound.

There has been church at the schoolhouse two or three times lately, but I did not go. I'd rather stay at home, and read THE TRUTH SEEKER—there's lots more benefit in it, I think.

I used to go to church almost every Sunday, but I just went because the other young folks went!

There are some people around here who are Freethinkers when they are with a Freethinker and Christians when they are with a Christian. I say, be one or the other. Some are afraid to say what they believe. I am not, and never shall be.

I will never belong to any church and be bound down by their false teachings. We have lived here five years, and when we first came here the girls were nearly all religious, and now they have all gone back on their religion and gone to dancing, and enjoy themselves much better.

I have never read the Bible any yet, but I am going to read it through when I get time, not that I believe a word in it, for I think it is all false.

I don't believe there were ever many preachers but that would lie or steal if they should get a chance. There are some that I know of who would. I think by the help of Ingersoll, Heston, Remsburg, Putnam, Wettstein, Miss Wixon, and Miss Gardener and many others, we can make our mark in the world.

We have one of Miss Gardener's books. It is "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle." I think it is very nice. I have been wanting to get some of your books for a long time, but have failed to get them.

I also have "Infidel Deathbeds," by G. W. Foote.

The Children's Corner is improving all the time, and I hope it will grow into a young folk's Liberal paper.

There are some very nice letters in the Corner of late.

I like George Remsburg's letters very much. They are always interesting, also Ida A. Ballou's.

We have very large forests in the mountains. I will give the names of some of the timber that grows in Oregon.

The small trees are ash, alder, maple, willow, and white oak.

The largest of the trees are the fir. There are cedar, yew, and hemlock. Those are all evergreen trees.

We raise many kinds of fruit here, such as apples, pears, plums, apricots, and cherries, and many kinds of berries.

There are the largest tame strawberries raised here I ever saw.

There are many thousand bushels of wheat raised here in this Willamette valley. It is one hundred miles long and sixty miles wide, and it is very level. The Willamette river is the largest river in this valley.

There are a great many China pheasants here in the summer time. When the wheat is getting ripe you can sometimes see a dozen China pheasants feeding their young ones. They are beautiful birds.

I hope the gates of the World's Fair will be left open on Sunday. I am not going! Are you?

In the issue of February 25th, the poem entitled "Dare to be True" is very good. I wish I could write one as good.

There are so many nice pieces of poetry in THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am taking the People's Home Journal. It is a pretty good story paper. We still take your paper, and think it is grand.

I live within eight miles of McMinnville. It is a very pretty town indeed, of one thousand inhabitants. It has four churches, and three schoolhouses, and three or four large dancing halls. I would rather go to a dance than to any church. All of my brothers and my sisters are dancers, and also myself. I would like to correspond with some of the boys and girls about my own age, which is fourteen.

I think Alvin J. Tanner writes splendid letters.

As my letter has grown rather lengthy, I will close. Long may THE TRUTH SEEKER wave o'er the land of the free and the homes of the brave. Hoping you will not throw this in the wastebasket, and wishing you success in all your undertakings, I remain,
Yours sincerely,

LOU VINA FARMER.

[It must be a lovely country where Vina lives, and Vina is herself a lovely girl. About visiting the World's Fair, we have made no plans as yet.—Ed. C. C.]

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
1. Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
2. Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
3. The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
4. Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
5. Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
6. Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
7. The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
8. Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
9. Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
10. Strife of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
11. My Religious Experience. Samuel F. Putnam.....	25
12. The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

13. Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
14. Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
15. Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
16. Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
17. Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
18. Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
19. Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
20. Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
21. Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
22. Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
23. Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
24. The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
25. False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

26. Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
27. The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
28. Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
29. Resurrection of Jesus.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Read's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan of Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 80c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.
A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50.

For sale at THIS OFFICE.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentation of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.]

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.
A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

DID JESUS RISE FROM THE DEAD?

The evidence for the resurrection is in this book carefully considered, and found wanting. It ought to convince every Christian of the untruthfulness of this alleged miracle, for it is certainly one of the best essays ever written on the subject.

In paper, 25 cents.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Mother of Harlots; a Synopsis of Popery, as it Was and as it Is. By William Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. The object of this book is to expose popery, acquaint the people of the country with the dangerous machinations of the church in the United States, and warn them against giving it any countenance or support. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

THREE EPISODES OF MASSACHUSETTS HISTORY: The Settlement of Boston Bay; The Antinomian Controversy; A Study of Church and Town Government. By Charles Francis Adams. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Two vols.; clo., gilt tops; pp. 1068; two maps. Price $4.

The study of the early periods of this country's life has always been accounted instructive. Consideration of such points as the extraction of our ancestral stock, their temperament and aims; the circumstances that attend the settling of a new country and the subduing of nature; the institutions planted, of which ours to-day are modifications, and many other such matters, throws useful light on the problems of the present—the questions of sociology in general. Indeed, the study of life in those early periods is not only informing but fascinating. The struggle of our fathers with savage men and beasts wears the character of romance, the deeper interest of which is rippled and enlivened with many a mirth-provoking incident of the superstitious folly which we are forced to admit went to the composition of those worthies' mental make-up.

The work now before us is quite as readable as any of its class. The name of the eminent author is a guarantee of literary excellence of all needful varieties. His investigations have been painstaking. His statements are accurate and his judgments well balanced. His style is easy and attractive.

The first part, "The Settlement of Boston Bay," we will here pass over to notice matters more in the specific line of this paper. The history of the theological wranglings is profitably admonitory to us. Of these disputes, so deplorably wasting time and effort, one of the most notorious was the Antinomian controversy. In the chapters narrating it, the author remarks that "theological controversies are as a rule among the most barren of the many barren fields of historical research." Among modern writers the historian Hallam, Mr. Adams goes on to say, "had to acquaint himself with it in at least a general way; and even Hallam, who was not wont to finch at an array of books and authors, was appalled, not more by the mass than by the aridity of those devoted to this particular branch of learning." So far, says Mr. Adams, as its substance is concerned, the literature of the great New England religious controversy of 1637 is as repellent and profitless as any that frightened the stout-hearted Hallam. "Not only were the points in dispute obscure, but the discussion was carried on in a jargon which has become unintelligible." Let us here reflect that to be thus regarded as obscure or unintelligible is the fate which in the next generation must infallibly overtake those theological reasonings that in this age fill so much of our newspapers and magazines. Mr. Adams says that the Antinomian controversy is "one more example of that childish excitement over trifles by which communities everywhere and at all times are liable to be swept away from the moorings of common sense." Let, then, this example of "childish excitement over trifles" warn all excited over the theological questions of the present, which are just as truly "trifles," to have an end to their misadventures and turn their energy in rewardful directions.

In pursuing the account of this Antinomian dispute, Mr. Adams states that the people of Massachusetts existed under the rule of "an organized and firmly rooted oligarchy of theocrats." For "the early Massachusetts community was in its essence a religious organization. Church and state were one; and the church dominated the state. The franchise was an incident to church membership. The minister—the 'unworthy prophet of the Lord'—was the head of the church." The writer here dilates on that well-known fact that the Protestant reformers are not deserving of the credit for instituting religious liberty which they claim, for they aimed merely at supplanting the despotism of the pope by their own. "The Reformation of the previous century had resulted in practically substituting for a time many little popes and little bishops for the one pope and few great bishops. . . . God's word was beyond question, and it only remained to interpret it and declare its meaning in any given case; but the interpreting and the declaring were the function of the clergy." Mr. Adams proceeds to set forth the sophistry by which these clergy defended their brazen assumption of this right of interpreting, to the exclusion of the lay populace. "The casuistry," he says, "to which the early New England clergy gravely had recourse in defending the position thus assumed might have moved the admiration of a Jesuit. When earnestly adjured by brethren, more liberal as well as more logical, not to make men hypocrites by compelling an outward conformity, thus practicing that in exile which they themselves went into exile to escape—when thus adjured, they replied that they had fled from man's inventions; but there was a wide difference between man's inventions and God's institutions, and they compelled a conformity only to the latter. The institution being of God, the sin was not in the magistrate who compelled, but in his perverse will who stood in need of compulsion." We promised our readers some laughable features of Puritanism, and certainly the above piece of parsonic reasoning will not in comic capabilities be challenged by anyone. We may add that to-day the clergy retain and employ the same piece of false ratiocination; everywhere they absurdly pretend that the opponent of their institutions is an antagonist of God, instead of, as the fact really is, an antagonist of their opinions about God. The author notes: "Both priest and minister had recourse to civil persecution to compel religious conformity; and, while the fagots that consumed Servetus and Savonarola were not alike, they forever bear witness to a strong family resemblance between Romish cowl and bands of Geneva." It is declared: "Except in certain small localities like Holland, or among a few most advanced thinkers of the day, who, like Roger Williams, were looked upon as visionaries, the conception of spiritual freedom and religious toleration had no more footing in the mind of the seventeenth century than the idea of freedom in crime and immunity from its legal penalties has now." The Bible, "when once construed and its meaning ascertained by competent and recognized authority, was held by common consent to be the rule in force. It only remained to compel obedience to it, just as now obedience is compelled to the criminal law. When, therefore, Cotton argued that, while it was wrong to persecute a man against conscience, no man's conscience compelled him to reject the truth; and therefore to force the truth upon him could be no violation of conscience—when he argued in this way he uttered that which to us is foolishness. . . . The fallacy which lurked between his premises and his conclusion did not suggest itself to him."

The superstition which prevailed "is to the modern mind well-nigh inconceivable. . . . Sleeping and waking, at bed and board, in the pulpit, in the field or at the work-bench, God and his providences, the devil and his snares, were ever present. Their direct interposition was seen in events the most trivial. . . . Two unfortunate men are drowned while raking for oysters; 'it was an evident judgment of God upon them, for they were wicked persons.' The hand of God was also heavy upon those who spake 'ill of this good land and the Lord's people.' . . . A poor barber, called hastily to perform a dentist's office, and bewildered in a storm of snow between Boston and Roxbury, is found frozen to death; and presently it is remembered that he has been a theological adherent of Mrs. Hutchinson. A father, industrious or interested in his task, works one hour after Saturday's sunset [into Sunday], and the next day his little child of five years is drowned; and he sees in his misfortune only 'the righteous hand of God, for his profaning His holy day.' . . . The scriptures, and the volumes of commentary upon them, were the sole literary nutriment."

Persecution over the religious questions soon began in earnest. A synod was organized, and it "proceeded to throw out a sort of general drag-net designed to sweep up all conceivable heretical opinions. The work was thoroughly done, and soon there were spread upon the record no less than eighty-two 'opinions, some blasphemous, others erroneous, and all unsafe,' besides nine 'unwholesome expressions.'" These suspicious opinions were boiled down to three points, on which our historian says: "To appreciate the whole absurdity of the jargon, in which metaphysics lent confusion to theology, these must be stated in full: "1. That the new creature is not the person of a believer, but a body of saving graces in such a one; and that Christ, as a head, doth enliven or quicken, preserve or act the same, but Christ himself is no part of this new creature. "2. That though, in effectual calling (in which the answer of the soul is by active faith, wrought at the same instant by the spirit), justification and sanctification be all together in them; yet God doth not justify a man, before he be effectually called, and so a believer. "3. That Christ and his benefits may be offered and exhibited to a man under a covenant of works, but not in or by a covenant of works."

"It is not easy to realize now that strong, matter-of-fact, reasoning men could ever have been educated to the point of inflicting—and, what is far more curious, of enduring—persecution, banishment and torture in the propagation or in the defense of such incomprehensible formulas."

Yet banishment and torture were therefor inflicted. Succeeding chapters detail this, setting forth the lunatic notions, the perverted accusations, the unjust conduct of trials, the penalties inflicted—all the follies and wrongs that must appear in every instance when the clergy are believed and deferred to and their teachings practically observed. We reluctantly pass over this interesting matter. The next part into which the book is cast is "A Study of Church and Town Government." The titles of its valuable chapters are: Old Braintree; The Braintree North Precinct Church; Land Titles and the Town Commons; The Highways; Dwellings and Modes of Life; Population and Wealth; Social Life; The Vicious, the Poor, and the Insane; The Meeting-house; The Church and Church Discipline; The Training-field and the School-house; Intemperance and Immorality; Health, Reading, Diversions; Town-meetings; Colonial Wars and Town Contentions; The Revolutionary Epoch; Exhaustion; Recuperation; The Era of Change; The Quincy School System; The Alien Infusion; The Rebellion; Town-meetings Again; A Long Battle Won; "The King is Dead—Long Live the King!"

We will award much commendation to a booklet by Geo. W. Brown, M.D., of Rockford, Ill. It is entitled, "The Teachings of Jesus Not Adapted to Modern Civilization." This is the main theme of the book; while incidental consideration is given to "The True Character of Mary Magdalene." We believe that whoever wishes to introduce to a friend or a community some piercing truths on a matter which forms the chief support of the Christian religion, cannot do better than to buy and give out a copy or copies of this work. It attacks and destroys, in language plain and apprehensible by all, the numerous claims for exalted merit in the character of Jesus Christ. The Jehovah of the Old Testament is to a considerable degree discredited in these days; his ignorance, geogenical, geographical, and historical, and his bad morals, having largely unstated him from his former deific throne in men's minds; but Christ is still revered almost everywhere; and even those who doubt his divinity admire what they think his sublime moral character and are loath to speak against him. Hence the opportuneness of this book, which says, for instance: "No more worthless character has ever been presented for man's contemplation than this ideal hero." One point is: "All the good things ascribed to Jesus are as old as civilization, and can be traced back to times antedating the pretended birth of this Nazarene. Many of the best sayings ascribed to Jesus were the common possession of the East before his birth. There is not a single maxim, however sensible or silly, in the whole of Christ's discourses that cannot be found in the writings of pagan moralists and poets, or Jewish doctors, who flourished before him." The author quotes some valuable dicta from authorities. He cites Professor Foote as saying, "The New Testament is not history, but an arbitrary selection from a mass of early Christian tracts, of uncertain authorship, different dates, and various value." On the utterance of Christ, "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the son of man hath not where to lay his head," our critic remarks: "How came the foxes to have holes? Simply, they dug them. And the birds of the air, instead of flying over the country and telling how destitute they were, made themselves nests. If Jesus had not taught to take no thought of the morrow; had not carried out his teachings in practice; but had gone to work like an industrious carpenter and made himself a house, he would have had where to lay his head." This highly useful work, which we think Freethinkers can find pleasure in distributing, is neatly printed, bound in blue paper covers, and sells at 15 cents.

It is not often we care to call attention to business catalogs, as such. They are generally dry, stiff, and technical affairs, and have interest only for the trade. We make an exception, however, in favor of the beautiful catalog just received from the Foster Engineering Company, of Newark, N. J. In its illustrations, press-work, and whole get-up it is a model and bears the imprint of a master hand. It is evidently the work of an adept in the art of putting things—of one who understands that good taste and the best rhetoric have a place in business catalogs as well as in polite literature. When we look into it and see that Mr. I. N. Baker, formerly secretary to Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, is secretary and treasurer of this Foster Engineering Company, we know who is responsible for the catalog. We wish Mr. Baker the good fortune he deserves in his new field. If we were in the line of buying or using steam-pressure regulators for every-day purposes as we are in the business of regulating pressures on religious and humanitarian questions, we would certainly advise all our readers to send for this catalog. We are sorry to miss Mr. Baker in his old and happy relation with Colonel Ingersoll, but as he has received an imperative call to enter the business and manufacturing pulpit, we follow him with our best wishes. We know he will succeed, because there is no such word as cant in his catalog, or career.

There may be some use in the volume written by Wm. H. Van Ornum and published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago. The title of it is, "Why Government at All?" It is described on the title-page as "A Philosophical Examination of the Principles of Human Government, Involving an Analysis of the Constituents of Society, and a Consideration of the Principles and Purposes of All Human Association." It handles the Single Tax, Socialism, Marx, Bellamy, Proudhon, Social Palliatives, Reform by Political Methods, The Motive of Human Action, The Purpose and Condition of Society, Property, Liberty, Church and State, Government, Crime, Education, How Laws Are Made, Distribution of Wealth, The Remedy, The Woman Question, The Race Question, etc. Paper covers; 368 pages; price, 50 cents.

Mr. James Emerson, of Willimansett, Mass., has written and published a "Treatise Relativ to the Testing of Water-wheels and Machinery, also of Inventions, Studies, and Experiments, with Suggestions from a Life's Experience." The mechanical matters treated we are not qualified to judge; but we know that the author's face in the frontispiece is both shrewd and kindly, and that the Antichristian pieces which he has interspersed between his main articles are truthful and useful. The book's price is $1.

Possibly profit may be had by glancing through "A Critical Essay in the Philosophy of History," by Thos. Whittaker, B.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. The method of the author, however, involves continual reference to systems of philosophy and events of history with which everyone is not familiar; some persons would be better fitted with a simpler, a less technical and allusive treatise. Watts & Co., London, publish this 44-page pamphlet at 25 cents.

It is not easy, in the present state of our knowledge, to write anything illuminative, anything satisfactory and approaching demonstrativeness, on the sexual question. We will leave it to readers to decide for themselves whether Lois Waisbrooker has done anything of this sort in "The Occult Forces of Sex." What may be the price of this 129-page paper-covered book we do not know.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by
J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.
Price, $1. Order at once.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.
Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.
Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR O. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.
Unanswerable. Price, $1.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Fifth, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confusion, and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cent; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25; cloth, gilt, $1.50.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for "blasphemy." Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERANCE.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents.

CIVIL RIGHTS SPEECH.

With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE.

A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9 x 13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22 x 28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

A LAY SERMON.

On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

" " " COLONEL INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN.

(A home picture.) 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 18 x 24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7 1/2 x 13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT.

An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents.

INGERSOLL ON McGLYNN.

Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED.

Paper, 3 cents.

BIBLE IDOLATRY.

Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1883. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE,

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1882. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Reunion at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings. This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,337 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This is, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly calendered, and richly tinted, the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it.

As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "Tributes" that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Eliza Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Besides these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In the more elegant styles of binding it is eminently suited for presentation purposes, for any season or occasion.

PRICES.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

INFIDEL DEATH- BEDS.

By
G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Brissais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joaquin Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake. 5
- 3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood. 25
- 4 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller. 10
- 5 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison. 15
- 6 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
- 7 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin. 10
- 8 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin. 50
- 9 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait. 25
- 10 Essays on Miracles. David Hume. 10
- 11 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 12 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 13 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 14 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh. 10
- 15 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake. 5
- 16 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 17 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts. 5
- 18 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts. 5
- 19 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts. 5
- 20 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts. 5
- 21 Free Thought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
- 22 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts. 5
- 23 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
- 24 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake. 5
- 25 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts. 5
- 26 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 27 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 28 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H. 10
- 29 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts. 10
- 30 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts. 10
- 31 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake. 10
- 32 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh. 10

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen." 5
- 2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 3 20 Questions Without Answers. 5
- 4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin. 10
- 5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian. 10
- 6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake. 5
- 7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
- 8 A Few Words about the Devil. 5
- 9 New Life of Jacob. 5
- 10 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake. 10
- 11 Speimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake. 10
- 12 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H. 10
- 13 Lucicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
- 14 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 15 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 16 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh. 5
- 17 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 18 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh. 5
- 19 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz. 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—

1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature: A Poem, Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred Mommie; Sermons on the Mount, Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtree; Scientific Religion, R. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World, F. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars: A Poem, G. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

DROPSY

TREATED FREE. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases, called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail, DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 345 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - 10 cents.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. Rucker & Co., Attys., Washington, D.C.

DO YOUR OWN PRINTING.

Card Press $3. Size for circulars or small newspaper $22. Saves you money and makes money printing for neighbors. Full printed instructions. Send stamp for catalogue of presses, type, cards, etc., to the factory. KELSEY & CO., Meriden, Connecticut.

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc. A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also Lanterns for Home Amusements. 236 page Catalogue free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.
Dr Fellows is an Infidel.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABLETS.

JERRY SAYS HIS GOD IS DECEITFUL AND STOUTER THAN HE IS.

O Lord, thou hast deceived me, and I was deceived: thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed; I am in derision daily, every one mocketh me.—Jer. xx, 7.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.25.

Address—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the
Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterin, and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Catarrh Cured! 10 cts!

Scientific, Safe, Simple, Sure,
Perfumed, Pleasant, Perfect Cure.

CURE BEGINS AT ONCE, RELIEF IMMEDIATE.

Inclose a Dime and Self-Addressed Envelope to DR. GEO. H. BOYD, Sandusky, O.

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the most precious metal, strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regular goods of equal quality sell for 50c. to 75c.) Comprises 3 packets, which we GUARANTEE no one can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzle-making. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction Guaranteed. Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Catalogue of 1000 useful articles, 25c. 3 for 60c. 6 for $1.00, $1.50 Post. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO, 65 Cortlandt st., N. Y.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and The TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR,
Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

FRANC contributed $450,000 to the Peter's Pence—more than any other nation.

TREMONT TEMPLE, Boston, has been burnt—for the third time since it was transformed from a theater into a church.

ONE of the paintings that will draw the most attention at the World's Fair will be Herr Koppay's remarkable picture of Satan.

THE National Association of Democratic Clubs has recommended the celebration of April 13th, the birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

THROUGH worrying over the salvation of his soul, W. R. Newell, a student of the Western Theological Seminary, Allegheny, Pa., has become insane.

COL. ELLIOT SHEPARD, the pious editor of the New York Mail and Express, who daily printed a scriptural text at the head of his editorial columns, died on the 24th ult.

A DUTCH Protestant recently converted to Catholicism at the miracle-working shrine of Lourdes has presented three million francs to the bishop for completion of a church there.

AT Norfolk, Va., on Sunday, the 19th ult., steamers were not permitted to unload, stevedores attempting work were arrested, and telegraph linemen repairing broken wires shared the same fate.

ANTICHRISTIAN riots have revived in China. Many native Christians have been tortured and a few have been killed. The English missionary was attacked by a mob of fanatics and barely saved his life by flight.

IN Toronto, Can., on the 25th ult., Magistrate Baxter imposed on a driver $2 fine or ten days' imprisonment for driving a lady on Sunday. This decision will greatly inconvenience a number of persons who have been in the habit of using conveyances Sundays.

AT Bensonhurst-by-the-Sea, N. Y., a burglar's hat, dropped by him as he escaped at an alarm, had pasted in it what was evidently a picture of his patron saint, St. Rocco. This bore the inscription, Eris impete Patronus, with an accessory picture of a scriptural scene.

IN the election of school trustees at Westfield, N. J., on the 21st ult., the Junior Order of American Mechanics mustered in force to defeat Miss Emma Bridges. Miss Bridges, with some others, is opposed to the use of the Bible in schools, as it debars Catholics and Jews.

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Telegraph writes that things have gone so far in Ulster that nothing can avert bloodshed if Home Rule comes. Military leaders are seeking accommodations for bodies of troops in Belfast. Over $5,000,000 has already been subscribed to the fund for defending the Protestants from Catholic aggression.

ALBEX. H. REVELL, a member of the executive board of the Columbian Exposition, dissents from the opinion of the majority of the board that prayer should be dispensed with in the opening exercises. He grounds his argument on precedent, saying that the custom of our country should be observed, and this custom is to offer prayer on such occasions. The Fair, he adds, is not an ordinary business undertaking, and ordinary business rules cannot be urged against using prayer at an exposition destined to prove the greatest factor for education ever known.

HYATTSVILLE, Md., a town of fifteen hundred population, two years ago instituted the single-tax system of Henry George, levying on land alone. Challenge of its fairness and legality was met and overcome by a judicial decision in its favor. Now, however, the Maryland court of appeals, which is the supreme court of the state, has adjudged the system unconstitutional. Single-taxers admit that it is so under Maryland's present constitution, which provides that each citizen shall contribute "according to his actual worth in real and personal property." They advocate change in the constitution.

As King Humbert of Italy was passing through a street in Rome on the 25th ult., a man threw at him a stone, which barely missed him. Bystanders seized the assailant, and would have torn him to pieces but for the arrival of police. A multitude assembled, and, cheering the monarch, escorted him home as if with a triumphal march. The prisoner proved to be a religious zealot named Berardi. He had served seven years in Italy for murder, emigrated to America and stayed some time, and returned. His motive, he owns, was to insult and menace Humbert because that sovereign refuses to make peace with the pope and grant his demands.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 14. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 8, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE SITUATION WITH THE AVERAGE LAWMAKER AND THE CLERGY.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

Exposure

by

Ridicule.

By WATSON HESTON.

Exposure

by

Facts.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD." Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading. Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port., $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 7c.

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND
OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

26 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 1 " The Church Robbing the People.
 1 " Thanksgiving.
 1 " Sabbath Laws.
 1 " Children and the Church.
 1 " Woman and the Church.
 1 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
 1 " Studies in Natural History.
 1 " The Bible and Science.
 1 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 1 " The Atonement Scheme.
 1 " The Lord and His Works.
 1 " Prayer.
 1 " The Creeds.
 1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 5 " Missionaries.
 1 " The Lord's Instruments.
 25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 1 " The Church and Slavery.
 1 " Priests and Politics.
 4 " Ireland and the Church.
 2 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
 1 " The Uses of the Cross.
 1 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 9 " Persecutions of the Church.
 12 " Some Allegories.
 3 " Heaven.
 6 " Hell.
 7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker

New Publications.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers: "Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—Who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Landaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 14. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, April 8, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - APRIL 8, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Weather and Witchcraft.

In two previous papers we set forth the doctrines of the Christian church regarding meteorological phenomena. These doctrines were that all the workings of the weather are governed not by natural causes but by spiritual beings. In the following article we will relate the persecutions of innocent persons to which those doctrines led.

The belief that the weather may be influenced by evil spirits was held by Christendom for fifteen centuries. But it was only during the latter of these centuries that this belief greatly occupied men's minds and impelled them to act thereupon. Through the early Christian ages most of the crimes that were afterward collected by the inquisitors in the treatises on witchcraft were known; and some of them were occasionally punished. At the same time, the executions, during six centuries, were probably not as numerous as those which took place during a single decade of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. In the twelfth century, however, the subject passed into an entirely new phase. The conception of a witch, as we now figure it—that is to say, of a woman who had entered into a deliberate compact with Satan, who was endowed with the power of working miracles whenever she pleased, and who was continually transported through the air to the Witches' Sabbaths, where she paid her homage to the evil one—first appeared. The panic created by the belief advanced slowly at first, but soon after with a fearfully accelerating rapidity. Thousands of victims were sometimes burnt alive in a few years. Every country in Europe was stricken with the wildest terror. Hundreds of the ablest judges were deputed to the extirpation of the crime. A vast literature was created on the subject. And it was not until a considerable portion of the eighteenth century had passed away that the executions finally ceased.

This belief that witches exist, and injure the human race by bad weather and other afflictions, Professor A. D. White speaks of as "a theory . . . sanctioned by the church, which must forever be considered as among the fearful calamities in human history. Indeed, few errors," continues Mr. White, "have ever cost so much shedding of innocent blood over such wide territory and during so many generations." "No other class of victims," says the historian Lecky, "endured sufferings so unalloyed and so intense" as these unfortunately punished for the imaginary crime of breeding ill weather or bodily maladies. Not for these unhappy creatures, continues Lecky, "the wild fanaticism that nerves the soul against danger, and almost steels the body against torments. Not for them the assurance of a glorious eternity, that has made the martyr look with exultation on the rising flame as on the Elijah's chariot that is to bear his soul to heaven. Not for them the solace of lamenting friends, or the consciousness that their memories would be cherished and honored by posterity. They died alone, hated and unpitied. They were deemed by all mankind the worst of criminals. Their very kinsmen shrank from them as tainted and accursed. The superstitions they had imbibed in childhood, blending with the illusions of age, and with the horrors of their position, persuaded them in many cases that they were indeed the bond-slaves of Satan, and were about to exchange their torments upon earth for an agony that was as excruciating, and was eternal. And, besides all this, we have to consider the terrors which the belief must have spread through the people at large; we have to picture the anguish of the mother, as she imagined that it was in the power of one whom she had offended to blast in a moment every object of her affection; we have to conceive, above all, the awful shadow that the dread of accusation must have thrown on the enfeebled faculties of age, and the bitterness it must have added to desertion and to solitude. All these sufferings were the result of a single superstition."

In 1437 the infallible voice of Rome was heard confirming this belief, hitherto preached by the general clergy, that certain men, women, and children had secured infernal aid to produce whirlwinds, frosts, floods, and all unfavorable elemental disturbances. Pope Eugene IV., in 1437, by virtue of the teaching power believed to have been conferred on him by Christ, vested with the divine guarantee against error, issued a bull exhorting inquisitors to greater endeavors against the agents of Satan, especially against those who produced bad weather. In 1455 this pope again issued instructions and commands, making statements irreparably committing his church to the doctrine. On Dec. 7, 1484, a greater personage than Eugene, indeed one of the greatest who ever filled the papal chair, Pope Innocent VIII., sent forth to the world the famous bull Summis Desiderantes. Says Professor White: "Of all documents ever issued from Rome, imperial or papal, this has doubtless, first and last, cost the greatest shedding of innocent blood." In this communication the clergy of Germany are exhorted, with the utmost strenuousness and fervor, to leave no means untried to unearth and punish the sorcerers afflicting mankind, especially those who by evil weather blast vineyards, gardens, meadows, and all growing crops. To carry out the commands, witch-finding inquisitors were authorized to scour all Europe. For their use a manual was prepared, "The Witch-Hammer." Its precepts were based on the scriptural command, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." Their soundness was grounded on various texts, especially the famous statement in the book of Job.

When, according to the directions laid down in this manual, "The Witch-Hammer," torture was applied to thousands of women, the natural result was the production of vast bodies of evidence for the existence of the crime of witchcraft. These miserable beings writhing under their torments, frantically longing for death as a relief to their suffering, confessed to anything and everything that was suggested to them. It was needed only that the inquisitors should ask leading questions and hint satisfactory answers; the tortured, to end their misery, were sure before long to give the answer required, though aware that it would fetch them to the scaffold or the stake. Often the suspected persons, from the very iteration and pressing of the charge, and from their having been reared in an atmosphere of superstition, would themselves fall under the impression that they were possessed by fiends, or had made compacts with them or with Satan himself, and believe it as fully as the others. These confessions, by the scores of thousands, are yet remaining on the ecclesiastical and judicial records of Europe and may there be consulted. The proofs flowed in torrents, decade after decade, from all the torture-chambers of Europe. The subject was examined in scores of thousands of cases, in almost every European nation, by tribunals that included the acutest ecclesiastics and lawyers of the age, on the scene and at the time when the alleged acts had taken place, and with the assistance of innumerable sworn witnesses. For more than fifteen hundred years, it was universally believed that the Bible established, in the clearest manner, the reality of the crime, and that an amount of evidence, so varied and so ample as to preclude the very possibility of doubt, attested its continuance and its extent. The clergy denounced it with all the emphasis of authority. The legislators of almost every land enacted laws for its punishment. Acute judges, whose lives were spent in sifting evidence, investigated the question on countless occasions, and condemned the accused. Tens of thousands of victims perished by the most agonizing and protracted torments, without exciting the faintest compassion; and, as they were for the most part extremely ignorant and extremely poor, sectarianism and avarice had but little influence on the subject. Nations that were completely separated by position, by interest, and by character, on this one question were united. The only controversy was over the details of witchcraft; its existence was considered beyond doubt. The evidence was cumulative, and at last irresistible. With all our modern principles of explanation of such cases, such as ascribing some to confession to escape torture, some to ecclesiastical deceit, some to insanity, some to coincidences, and others to optical delusions, it is all that we can do to dissipate the enormous masses of evidence of the veritability of witchcraft. Says Lecky in his "History of Rationalism": "The historical evidence establishing the reality of witchcraft is so vast and varied, that it is impossible to disbelieve it without what, on other subjects, we should deem the most extraordinary rashness." The modern Christian reproaches the refusal of the Infidel to accept the alleged testimony of three or four ignorant Jews as to the existence of Christ, as unreasonable incredulity; but he himself in denying witchcraft, as in nine cases out of ten he does, rejects a body of evidence so immeasurably more extensive and credible as to be out of comparison with it.

The extreme folly of the teachings of the Christian religion on this subject of the diabolical control of the weather, and the horrible cruelty of its persecution of witches, so strikingly illustrate the evil character of that faith that we will devote another article to the conclusion of the subject.

Let Us Fix the Blame of Cholera Where It Belongs.

A European dispatch says: "The Hamburg cholera germ pays little attention to the thermometer. He is not quite so busy as he was, but he is still quite active. His spring tour of the United States is doubtless occupying his mind to some extent." The piece of information here given in so gamesome a wording, is not by any means an agreeable one. We earnestly hope that the cholera bacillus will come to regard his education as sufficiently finished without any American peregrination. As to New York city alone, that town might become a frightful sufferer should cholera enter its neighborhood; a medical commission has just reported that the presence of that epidemic in the Croton basin whence New York draws her water would diffuse the germs with fearful rapidity. The use of the Croton watershed, by the way, does now occasion numerous cases of typhoid fever every year, and many petitions that the region be bought by the city and kept uncontaminated have been made; but the Tammany-Catholic public officials have other, and to themselves more pleasant, uses for the public funds.

The disease is active in Europe. In one recent week when the thermometer was far below freezing-point, seven hundred deaths from it were reported in Russia, to say nothing of those not reported. A London dispatch says:

"Berlin has very dubious water and can hardly hope to escape serious trouble. Cholera is almost certain to be brought to England.

"We may be able to exclude the disease as we have done since 1866. That is our best chance, for once it obtains a footing we will not find ourselves in a much better position than our neighbors. London, in particular, has escaped more through good luck than good management."

Belgium is being affrighted by a revival of the cholera germs in its bounds, and a number of deaths.

The treasury department of the United States has dispatched three physicians to Europe to ward the disease from our shores if possible. But in view of the influx of visitors to the Fair, success seems dubious.

A number of persons are demanding efficient action not merely of each government but of a combination of governments in extirpating the plague. Col. Thomas T. Wright, of Nashville, Tenn., for instance, regards the existence of cholera anywhere on the globe as a reflection on modern civilization. He suggests that the enlightened nations of the earth combine to stamp it out. Further than this, Colonel Wright would have penalties assessed against and rigidly collected from all countries where filthy diseases are propagated and allowed to exist. This latter scheme perhaps is not feasible just at this stage of affairs, but the statement that the existence of cholera is a reflection on modern civilization we concur in.

However, we wish to proceed from this judgment still farther. If there be an institution which year by year breeds, not only the cholera but fiftyfold more of evil, of endlessly varying character; and this institution is not only tolerated, but lauded, and given special prerogatives over us, then is not this a disgrace to modern civilization unspeakably more black and damning? Such an institution exists; and has, as we have abundantly shown in former papers, produced our epidemics of cholera, and has produced manifold other ills and afflictions—it is religion.

Dr. Popoff calls for an international anti-cholera congress. And such an assembly, we learn, will indeed be held in Europe soon.

Sentiments looking toward such action are expressed also in a timely book, "Public Health Problems," by John Sykes. This author says:

"We should bear in mind the interdependence of the whole world. Modern statesmanship holds that where in a civilized country there is famine the government is to blame, and the day will come when a government will be held responsible for any plagues or fatal epidemics found within its domains. Tens of thousands of unfortunate creatures have died of starvation in Eastern Europe, and the most fatal of diseases has swept away many tens of thousands more, and because of an epidemic of cholera in Russia, fostered and hived there, the rest of the world is made to suffer."

This is good; but withal, it is possible to reach something still better—to carry this tracing of cause and effect, this fixing of the criminality where it belongs, back one step farther yet; and this is done by saying, "Because of" Christianity "in Russia, fostered and hived there, the rest of the world is made to suffer."

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The following card directing a change of address of THE TRUTH SEEKER tells its own pathetic story:

"ZURICH, SWITZERLAND.

"DEAR SIR: I must return to Germany to serve my thirteen months in prison for blasphemy. Be kind enough to send your paper regularly to Miss J. Altman, Berlin, S. W., Markegraten str., 83, who will personally bring it to me once a month.

"With hearty thanks fraternally yours,

"DR. VOELKEL."

Fine country, that Germany!

The controversy with Miss Chapman has branched so widely that in the interests of our other contributors we shall have to confine it to the original party in interest and Mr. Wettstein. It is impossible to print all the matter for and against the lady sent us, and to discriminate would be unfair. The government physician at St. Eustatious and others will please take notice. We are glad to have been the humble instrument by which so many have been wrought up, but there is such a thing as having too much of one thing, however good it may be.

The Michigan legislature is considering the advisability of taxing church property, and a bill to that effect has been framed. The churches are circulating petitions against its enactment, one of which concludes: "The proposed legislation would tax religion and the worship of God; tax the spirit of charity and the diffusion of knowledge, tax human misery, weakness, and misfortune; tax the devotedness and self-sacrifice of those who wish to help their fellow-men. It would put religion on the same plane as commerce; put a premium on infidelity and unbelief; put those who vote for the measure on record as the enemies of religion; charity, and enlightenment." All of which shows that it is easy to lie.

J. E. Remsburg recently returned from his Eastern tour. He was absent sixty-three days and during this time delivered sixty-two lectures, in the following towns: Louisiana, Mo.; Macon, Mo.; Nauvoo, Ill.; Chillicothe, Ill.; Reddick, Ill.; Elwood, Ill.; Chicago, Ill.; Belvidere, Ill.; Rensselaer, Ind.; Allegan, Mich.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Shepherd, Mich.; Leslie, Mich.; Detroit, Mich.; Toledo, O.; Findlay, O.; Shreve, O.; Cleveland, O.; East Otto, N. Y.; Newark, N. Y.; Constantia, N. Y.; De Ruyter, N. Y.; Glens Falls, N. Y.; Saratoga, N. Y.; Boston, Mass.; Worcester, Mass.; Cotuit, Mass.; Harwich, Mass.; Manchester, Conn.; Bristol, Conn.; New York, N. Y.; Orange, N. J.; Newark, N. J.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Washington, D. C.; Greensburg, Pa.; Butler, Pa.; Tarentum, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Tappan, O.; Cortland, O.; Vera Cruz, Ind.; Bluffton, Ind.; Muncie, Ind.; Noblesville, Ind.; Redmon, Ill.; Coles, Ill.; Highland, Ill.

Our readers will recollect that a few months ago the most foolishly ignorant of the church people thought they had struck a bonanza on Mr. J. J. Nouri, who avowed that he had been in Ararat and found Noah's ark, miraculously preserved. His account was detailed and piously romantic, and in this ark the Christians thought to sail all over the Infidels. Less importance is now attached by them to this discovery owing to the commitment to the Napa, Cal., insane asylum of the discoverer. The phase of aberration shown by Mr. Nouri is in imagining himself king of Chaldea, and a constant tendency to talk about the ark, and the geographical location of the mountain. He is just a plain religious lunatic. That's all.

In the East.

News and Notes.

I did not know exactly where to find Fort Fairfield when I started out on my journey "away down East." I supposed it was in the backwoods somewhere in the vicinity of the "jumping-off place." When I arrived in Boston Thursday morning, March 23d, I discovered that I was a whole day's journey from my point of destination. I leave the "Hub" at 9:15 A.M. and travel via Portland and Bangor to Vanceboro, New Brunswick, where I arrive in the middle of the night and change cars and wait an hour for the mixed train to Fort Fairfield, which place I reach 9:50 A.M. Friday. The snow is all over the ground and winter's face sparkles upon my view. It is quite a contrast to the semi-tropical scenes which I had only left a week ago—but a rather beautiful contrast, for the sun is shining brightly all the time, the skies are nearly cloudless, the cool weather is bracing, while the soft breath of spring is occasionally felt. What can be more delightful than this brilliant mingling of winter and of spring, the dark-green firs and pines contrasting with the gray earth and the glittering snows; while faintly luminous in the wide atmosphere is the promise of the summer that is surely coming? Every day seems to grow more genial and musical in this March of the varied year.

I passed through some wild and desolate scenes on my way to this Aroostook country. Maine stretches away with many a mile of barren land, but Aroostook county is fertile, attractive, and fruitful. The elegancies of civilization are here. Fort Fairfield is a handsome village of about 1,500 inhabitants, the town itself contains 4,000, this being one of the richest farming sections on the continent. Houlton, the county seat, with a population of 10,000, Caribou and Presque Isle, with 4,000 each, are the business centers of a flourishing people.

The great source of wealth in this country is potatoes. The land is especially adapted to potatoes, although wheat, oats, and corn, and fruit are abundantly produced. But potatoes take the cake. About $500,000 worth of potatoes are sold in Fort Fairfield every year—$6,000 and $7,000 worth per day in the busy season. Seven hundred and forty-five bushels and twenty-five pounds have been produced to the acre. This is extraordinary, only one case of this kind being on record for Fairfield township, but it beats all the records of New England, or of the world I guess, except one out West, where 900 bushels were raised on one acre. Frequently 300 and 400 bushels are produced to the acre, while the average is about 250, and the running market price is $1.75 per barrel. It will thus be seen that this county of Aroostook is one of the choice spots of the earth; and those who have a good farm are pretty sure to escape the Christian blessing of poverty.

Fort Fairfield was aforesaid the scene of military exploits, and hence its name. There is a real fort here, and there was a real war, although no blood was shed. It was during the administration of Governor Fairfield of Maine. It is known in history as "the Aroostook war." I will not swear that I ever heard of it before, although I have a dim recollection that in my school-days it was mentioned. Now I shall never forget it. John Bull and Brother Jonathan were in tremendous battle insignia. The militia were summoned from every quarter, and Fort Fairfield was alive with war's magnificently stern array. This was in 1839, and the trouble was about the boundary line, which was finally settled by treaty in 1842.

Fort Fairfield is on the Aroostook river, which flows into the St. John's at Woodstock not far away. All this country was populated long before the railroads were built, on account of easy water navigation. The railroads, however, have wonderfully improved this section, and new railroads are being built, and this county—the biggest in Maine, I think—has by no means reached the acme of its prosperity.

When I reached Fort Fairfield I found that arrangements had been made for a four nights' debate with Rev. A. J. Wheeler, of the Advent church, Concord, N. H.—not of the Seventh Day Adventists but the First Day Adventists; and between these two sects there is by no means a cordial feeling; in fact the First Day Adventists don't seem to know that there are thirty thousand Seventh Day Adventists in the country, and that they are suffering persecutions. So far as I can find out the First Day Adventists are in favor of a union of church and state equally with other orthodox bodies.

The Rev. A. J. Wheeler is a young man of considerable brightness and enthusiasm, and is an interesting speaker, who can make up for the lack of argument with nice stories and beautiful exhortations.

The following resolution was the subject of debate for the first three evenings:

Resolved, That the Bible is the divinely inspired word of God.

There is no need of going into a particular report of the proceedings, for Liberals already understand the general drift of the argument. The first speech of my opponent was devoted to proving that the Bible was an old book and a remarkable book, which assertions I did not deny. I was thus compelled, in view of the fact that my opponent had advanced nothing, to make the first assault, which I did, upon the genuineness of the Bible—that is, its authorship. I proved that nothing was known as to the authorship of most of the book—Christian scholars to-day only affirming the genuineness of twelve books in the Old Testament and four books in the New Testament. This was made the main battle-ground of the first night's debate. My opponent was evidently worsted, for on the second night he declared that he would not undertake to prove the genuineness of the Bible, but demonstrate its inspiration upon other grounds. I do not wonder that he retreated as gracefully as he did, for while he denied many of my statements, I proved them on the authority of Chambers's Encyclopedia—referring to its article on the Bible, where it plainly declares that the authorship of the books cannot be proved; that in the text both of the Old and New Testaments are errors; that there are eighty thousand variations, and that Luther rejected some books of the present Bible. Mr. Wheeler declared that he accepted every word of the Bible as it is from cover to cover as God's revelation. However, he offers Chambers's Encyclopedia as premium to the subscribers of his own magazine, the Christian Reporter, thus disseminating the seeds of infidelity and endangering the eternal welfare of his readers. I advised Christians present to subscribe for the Christian Reporter, secure the premium he offers, Chambers's Encyclopedia, and read its article on the Bible.

Having retreated from the first battle-ground, he rallied his forces on the following points: The harmony of the Bible, its moral influence, and the prophecies. Everyone knows how easy it is to prove the contradictions of the Bible, both with science and with itself, which utterly destroys its claims to harmony. As to the moral influence of the Bible, I showed that it gave degrading and therefore immoral ideas of God—saying that he repented, was ignorant of what was going on in some parts of the earth, that he commanded the slaughter of little children, etc. I also showed that it taught obedience to tyrants, subjection for women, that it sanctioned slavery, polygamy, etc. These arguments are familiar. As to the prophecies, whatever they might prove, it was evident that one false prophecy in the Bible would destroy its divine authority. I instanced two false prophecies: the one concerning the time of the burial of Jesus—that he would be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth, which was not the case—and the prophecy that the end of the world would be before that generation passed away—a prophecy absolutely unfulfilled. I was astounded to hear my opponent declare that the character of God as revealed in the Bible had nothing to do with the question of its inspiration. Why, the very purpose of a revelation is to reveal God's character; otherwise it is worthless. And if we are to judge the Bible by internal evidences, the character of God in that book has everything to do with the question of its inspiration.

But, as in the matter of the genuineness of the Bible, my opponent, seeing he couldn't prove a good character for God out of the Bible, declined to admit the character of God as any part of the testimony. He thus abandoned in the discussion two main points in the issue, the genuineness of the Bible and the character of God.

The fourth evening the subject was changed. The following resolution was discussed:

Resolved, That the morality of Freethought is superior to the morality of the Christian religion.

I defined the essence of the Christian religion to be a belief in total depravity, vicarious atonement, and eternal hell, all of which are immoral doctrines; but without faith in these there is no hope of salvation, says the follower of Jesus.

On the other hand Freethought teaches that character is the main thing, and not belief; truth to be accepted without regard to consequences; right to be done for the right's sake, and not for fear of punishment or hope of reward. Freethought also stands for human rights without regard to creed; while Christianity is simply for the rights of its followers, which is both unjust and immoral. Freethought is for education, the unfolding of natural powers; while Christianity is simply instruction from some outside basis. It is the putting on of a harness, not the expression of a faculty. Freethought stands for self-respect, sympathy, and reverence, while Christianity in its creed affirms self-degradation, sectarian feeling, and fear of God. Freethought recognizes the value of this world, and educates for success in this world, while Christianity calls this a "dim vast vale of tears" and says we must have our minds fixed altogether upon another world.

Mr. Wheeler replied to my argument by a very good sermon on the Christian's hope and faith. Men were sick, they needed medicine; men were lame, they needed crutches. All right, I answered, for those who are sick and lame. They can choose their medicine, but the medicine and crutches should not be forced upon those who do not want them.

Mr. Wheeler denied eternal hell-fire, and thus by being one-third Infidel and only two-thirds Christian he made a much better plea than he otherwise would. When he is three-thirds Infidel he will do first-rate.

Mr. French presided at the debate, assisted by Mr. Baker and Mr. Billington, and there was no trouble from beginning to end. Good nature prevailed. I do not know whether any Christians were converted, but I am certain that Freethought has been greatly strengthened by this agitation. It has its supporters among the best men of the community.

The Fort Fairfield Liberal League was organized last winter, with a fine membership, and it has prospered well. Several lectures have been given by local talent, and by others—Mr. Ellis, of Secular Thought, etc. This debate was the result of a debate recently held between Mr. French and Geo. Eastman. This started the fire, which has been burning ever since, and now this great blaze. The audiences were larger than any ever gathered in this community. The interest has been intense. Liberals are satisfied with the outcome and are ready for another debate at any time the Christians may choose.

I think a great work can be done in Aroostook county, not only at Fairfield, but at Caribou, Presque Isle, and Houlton. There are hundreds of Liberals here, and by combination they can accomplish a great deal.

It is a curious fact that the Salvation Army barracks has fallen into the hands of the Liberals, and is now called Liberty Hall. Mr. Baker owns it; has fitted it up nicely, and the Liberal League meets here every Sunday evening.

I had the pleasure on Sunday afternoon of listening to Rev. F. A. Gilmore, Unitarian, of Presque Isle. I find him a broad-minded, scholarly, and Liberal gentleman. He is a very popular speaker and has the largest audience of any clergyman at Presque Isle. As he stands upon the Theistic platform of Thomas Paine without bigotry, of course we can shake hands cordially.

I have enjoyed myself greatly in this New England community. They are a go-ahead people here in true Yankee style. They don't hurry as they do out West, but they "get there" just the same with both feet. This must be a lovely place in summer, and I hope to visit it some time amidst the splendors of June. They have twenty-six schoolhouses in Fort Fairfield, some of them costly and beautiful; and as long as these remain we need not have much fear of the triumph of superstition.

Besides the debate, I lectured on Sunday morning on "The Rights of Man." I lecture to-morrow, Thursday evening, at Liberty Hall, on "Evolution and Creation."

R. L. Baker, president of the Liberal League, who has been an outspoken Freethinker for nearly half a century; who has been selectman of the town for thirteen years, deputy collector, sheriff, etc., in spite of his declared views; is heart and hand in the Liberal work. He distributes books and pamphlets at his own expense. He gives the free use of Liberty Hall to the League, and generously aids in other directions.

On Saturday evening after the lecture I enjoy a fine sleighride to the home of Joseph A. Conant. I haven't had a sleighride for years, and it was quite delightful to renew old memories as we sped over the snow in the brilliant moonlight. It is a quarter of a century, I guess, since I have thus dashed over New England hills. Mr. Conant is a stalwart Liberal. He is the father of nine boys and two girls. He was a great-grandfather in his sixtieth year. Liberalism prevails in this big family, descendants of one of the first Puritan governors of Massachusetts. I had a pleasant visit at his home four miles out, returning Sunday morning. Sunday was a busy day all round. I went to meeting three times, as most of the people did—to my own meeting in the morning; to Mr. Gilmore's in the afternoon, and to Mr. Wheeler's in the evening. The Christians didn't want to debate on the holy Sabbath, and so the day was given up to these different services, and the debate continued on Monday and Tuesday.

Among the friends I meet here, members of the Liberal League, etc., are Mr. and Mrs. Waldron; Geo. W. Eastman, who can hold his own with anybody, clergyman or otherwise; John McGill, an earnest worker; Mr. and Mrs. Grant; Dr. A. D. Sawyer; N. H. Martin; Geo. E. Bartlett; A. I. Rollins; W. T. Spear; J. F. Hacker, cousin of Jeremiah Hacker, the stalwart of nearly a hundred years; J. M. Wheeler, cashier of national bank; Cutts & Skates, proprietors of a large furniture establishment, etc.; J. S. Hall; Ole Johnson, and many others. Mrs. A. W. Hoyt attended all the debates and faithfully reported the points made to her sick husband, who could not attend on account of injuries received while in the war, but who is every inch a Freethinker and wanted to know how the intellectual battle was going on.

A. O. French and Dennis Billington, representatives of the Christian party, acted with the greatest fairness and courtesy. Mr. French is proprietor of a large business house, and acts on the square, and his creed doesn't seem to hurt him a bit. If God has the same sense of fair dealing I don't believe I shall suffer much in the world to come.

In every way I have enjoyed the campaign—good weather, good attendance, good people, and good cheer.

I was pleased to meet Geo. E. Baxter, of Perth Center, New Brunswick, who occasionally lectures for the Liberal League and keeps our flag flying on the other side. G. B. Frizzell, of the Collins House, is a genial entertainer and supports me for the combat with plenty of home comforts. I also enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Baker. Mrs. Baker is not Liberal altogether as to creed, but liberal as to heart every time. And so are many of the Christians I have met here. They don't think me so very bad, after all. They are apparently sorry that I am to be damned, but they don't fret over it any more than I do.

Daniel Hopkins, a Grand Army comrade, is pretty well posted up on Daniel in the lions' den, the king's image, the beast, the ten horns, etc., and gives me a good deal of information as concerns both the ancient and the modern world. He expects the end will come—Gog and Magog will be in battle array, the way of the East will be open, etc. There are quite a number of Adventists in this community, but they are not so far advanced yet as the American Sentinel.

Fort Fairfield, I guess, is the banner town of this Eastern country, and Liberty Hall will give forth no uncertain sound for many a year to come.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Fort Fairfield, March 29, 1893.

To My Liberal Friends.

I propose to publish a pamphlet, the opening part of which appears in THE TRUTH SEEKER this week, entitled, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I consider that we are drifting into a most dangerous religious tyranny and war. It is not simply church and theology that we must oppose, but it is religion at the root of these, which is what I have defined it to be. We must understand religion, and for the safety of the race we must destroy religion. I want this book to be widely read. It is important. Religion as the foe of humanity is not sufficiently understood. We do not realize its terrific nature. I have written this book because I feel the necessity of speaking the plain truth. I challenge contradiction of my statements. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for this book. Circulate it. Price, 25 cents per copy.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Communications.

Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie.

DEDICATED TO THE AMERICAN CONGRESS WHICH FOR THE SAKE OF RELIGION HAS STABBED LIBERTY TO THE HEART.

Whatever may be the essence of religion it inevitably manifests itself in a belief in God. Exclude all idea of a deity and there is no support for religion. A belief in immortality is the logical result of a belief in God. It is impossible to believe in God, that is, in infinite goodness, without believing in immortality. If the mind is restricted to this present world there is no possible demonstration of deity. Time is perfectly atheistical, absolutely godless. It is only by the reflected light of eternity that any divinity is discoverable. Against the overwhelming logic of the ills that flesh is heir to; of the tragedies of life, of the horrors of human experience, the theologian only finds refuge in the endless hereafter. Without a supernal world he is hors de combat. He must give his God another chance, or even he himself is compelled to admit that God is a failure. St. Paul declared that if this life were all then are we most miserable, thus frankly confessing that without immortality the deity is a stupendous fraud. And right St. Paul is, for if you take away from the believer in God the dream of immortality this life becomes to him a terrific puzzle, for he sees his God baffled at almost every point. Certainly the manifestation of God in this life is so weak, so pitiable, so contemptible, so useless, so beggarly, that he needs several eternities in which to vindicate his good name. It will take him a long period hereafter to make up for the infinite wrongs he now permits. I doubt if he ever can prove his omnipotent benevolence—if through millions of eons he can wipe away the stain of his earthly defeat. No amount of deific splendor in the next world might make one fully forgive him his cruel derelictions in this. The only plea that one can possibly make is that of "no jurisdiction;" that this is the devil's world, and the devil will give God no chance. God is "conspicuous by his absence," so far as this life goes. Thus religion is forced to a belief in immortality as a supplement to its belief in God. Take away immortality and religion would perish of despair—for it could no longer defend its God at the bar of human reason.

Thus religion ever has and ever will express itself in these two beliefs, God and Immortality—and when I speak of religion I speak of that in man which necessarily and logically affirms these dogmas.

It might be possible to so subtly define religion as to separate it as a feeling from these dogmas, but as a matter of fact this has never been done. No religion has ever existed without a belief in God and Immortality in some form. A simple belief in Immortality without a belief in God does not constitute a religion. I do not consider Spiritualism a religion. It is simply a philosophy. To believe that I exist to-day does not make me religious; to believe that I will exist to-morrow does not make me religious, and so a belief in existence hereafter as a continuation of this existence, provided that belief is based on present experience, does not make one religious. So when I say that religion is a curse, I do not mean to say that Secular and scientific Spiritualism is a curse, or even a folly. It is simply a human natural belief like a belief in continued life on this planet, and does not involve religion. If Spiritualism does become a religion by insisting upon a belief in God, then it is not only a folly but a curse, and must perish in the pathway of civilization. There are Spiritualists and Spiritualists. The Secular Spiritualist is with us, the religious or godly Spiritualist is against us.

One on evidence can believe in a future life without believing in God; but one cannot believe in God without believing in a future life, but a belief in a future life on a theistic basis is entirely different from a belief in a future life on a natural basis.

Therefore in what might be called common sense Spiritualism there is no such thing as religion.

There is no such thing as a "Religion of Humanity." Comte has failed in his efforts. There might be a theology without a religion; but there cannot be a religion without a theology. Religion involves worship; for if one believes in a God, he will worship that God. But one cannot worship humanity. There are noble qualities or attributes in humanity; but one cannot worship a quality, or an attribute. He must worship a being. Comte endeavored to make a supreme being out of humanity. But there is no such thing. Humanity is composed of individuals, and the individual being is to our experience the greatest being. Put a million individuals together, and you do not increase the quality of their being. There is no added dignity. You have no supreme being, only the individual still. Hence the worship of humanity is simply the worship of some individual, and such worship is degrading, and of course contrary to the idea of Comte. Comte as a matter of fact invented a huge abstraction, which is after all only a kind of God and has no real existence. Comte rejected theology, but accepted its outer habiliments, its husks; but religion cannot feed upon these, and hence the "religion of humanity" is dead.

The sentiment of humanity is something entirely different from the "religion" of humanity. The sentiments of love, devotion, self-sacrifice, exist in and of themselves, and require no religious foundation. When I speak against religion, I do not speak against a single natural sentiment of humanity, I want to distinguish religion from all these. Spencer's "religion of the unknowable" is also an absurdity. Religion is not a thought, I grant, but a feeling. But feeling is founded on sensation, and sensation must involve knowledge. In order to feel anything you must sense it, and therefore to feel anything in regard to the "unknowable" one must "sense" it, and if one senses the "unknowable" then he must have some knowledge of it. The infant can give no intellectual definition of its means of sustenance, but will anyone affirm that to the childish mind the breasts of the mother are "unknowable?" As well assert that the sustenance of poetry is unknowable to the poet's, or that the sustenance of religion is unknowable to the believer's, mind. The poet cannot always explain the origin of his ineffable ecstasy, but will anyone affirm that it originates in absolute ignorance? If there is in this universe such a thing as the "unknowable" we cannot possibly conceive it, or picture it, and therefore we cannot possibly have any feeling concerning it, and therefore there can be no "religion of the unknowable."

The endeavor to save religion to science or humanity is absolutely useless. It cannot be done. The curse cannot be taken from religion by seeking to change its nature, or its meaning.

In affirming that religion is a curse—not incidentally, but essentially—it is necessary that we know what religion is. The tree is known by its fruits, and in this way we must know religion.

Religion is inseparable, as I have said, from the God-idea.

What is the God-idea?

I do not see how it is possible to understand God in any other sense than as a personality. An "impersonal God" is a contradiction in terms. The "God of nature" if it means anything more than force means a person. If you call it "purpose," "intelligence," "mind," or even only "tendency," it must still be a personality. If there is a choice in the "tendency" it must be a personal choice. If there is no choice, then why call it God? It is no more "God" than the running of water downhill is "God." Pantheism if it means anything must mean that the whole universe is the expression of a personality. How can pantheism be any different from Atheism if it does not mean this? Atheism recognizes universal force, but that force is neither good nor evil as universal. It is only good or evil when partially considered—that is, when it is in relations. But pantheism asserts that the universal force is good. How can it be good in any real sense except it chooses to be good? How can it be worthy of any reverence unless its goodness is the result of a personal effort? In other words, pantheism simply means that all force is thought-force or will-force, and it is this which Atheism denies. There can be no will-force, however, without a personality.

God therefore, however vaguely and variously the term may be used, is a personality.

There can be no religion therefore without a belief in a personal God, or at any rate in a personal manifestation of God like Christ or Buddha in which is centered the religious feeling and hope.

There is no religion without some supernatural being as the object of its worship.

With these explanations let me give a definition of religion which I believe to be perfectly historic and scientific.

Religion is that feeling in humanity which always results in a belief in God, in a personal God or a personal manifestation of God; and also results in a belief in immortality as necessary to the vindication of the justice and goodness of God; and it also results necessarily in worship, in order to obtain the good will of God as the supreme ruler, and to enjoy the rewards of the hereafter, wherein the perfections of God will be victorious.

I propose to show that religion, thus defined, with its attendant results is a curse to humanity, and therefore should be utterly abolished. It is a purely savage feeling, a barbaric belief, and unfit for man's highest civilization. It is the foe of liberty and the enemy of human progress. History proves this, and analysis of the feeling as such will declare why it has been so.

Desperate attempts have been made to save the name of religion, as if religion in itself were a precious jewel—only it has been "in the rough," they say; in bad company and has never shown its pure brilliancy. Clear religion, it is said, of its unfavorable surrounding and it will be a beautiful thing—a benefit to humanity. Religion is not a jewel. It is a dagger—a bloody dagger. It is a dagger in its very nature. Brighten it up and it will be a dagger still. Wipe off the blood and its dazzling blade is still ready for slaughter. You cannot change that dagger into a jewel to shine in peaceful luster. All the ornaments of religion are but the ornaments of a weapon of death.

It is said that the numberless cruelties of religion are the fruits of its abuse, and not of its real nature. Is it possible that the abuse of a naturally good thing could result in such unmitigated evil? If it could be shown that religion has benefited the race, it might be admitted that the evil it has done was not normal, but abnormal. But religion has never benefited the race—it has never given it one truth, one art, one invention, or one discovery. It has been a murderer and a despot from the beginning. It has slain millions of the human race and has not preserved one single human life. It has always opposed science. It has imprisoned the noblest of mankind; put them to the torture and to death. The dungeon, the cross, the fagot, and the chain have been its constant aids. It is nonsense to say that the abuse of a naturally good thing would result in such infinite havoc. Liberty is a naturally good thing, and the abuse of liberty has been simply terrible; but over against this abuse behold the glory that has been achieved through liberty—the heights that have been won, the genius displayed, the knowledge acquired, the virtues attained. In spite of all abuse liberty has been an infinite blessing. But religion can show no such record as against its dark and bloody deeds. It cannot square the account. It has not a single credit mark. It has been evil, and evil only. Not one virtue has it ever given to humanity—not one ray of light or genuine hope. It has never planted one seed, or reaped one golden harvest. It is in its very nature a curse, and history is my witness. It is impossible for a thing really good to be the source of so much misery. What is so everlastingly bad in its effects must be bad at its fountainhead, and this I affirm.

An effort has been made by many liberal minded religious people to shift the responsibility from religion to theology. It is theology that is the source of these evils, they say, not religion per se. I deny this, and affirm that it is religion itself that is the curse, and not the theology that accompanies it. Theology is the child of religion—its intellectual offspring—but the child is not the criminal, but the father. If the child is cruel, it is because the father is cruel. Religion is the root, and theology is the flower, and the bitterness of the root has ever made poisonous the flower, so that it has breathed destruction.

Theology is a purely intellectual affair, and simply as such is perfectly innocent. The theologian simply as a theologian would no more persecute than the mathematician as a mathematician would persecute. Keep theology entirely within intellectual influences and it would be as gentle as philosophy or poetry, or pure metaphysics. It would be merely a mental amusement careless of acceptance or non-acceptance. It is only when feeling is involved that the theologicum odium is aroused. The mathematician would be equally cruel if the same feeling co-existed with his mental operations. If the eternal happiness of the mathematician was endangered by a non-belief in the theorem that the square of the hypotenuse is equal to the sum of the square of the other two sides of a triangle, he would instantly persecute everyone who would not accept the theorem. Or if he was convinced that a denial of this theorem was necessary to his eternal happiness, he would not only deny it himself, but draw the sword and compel everybody else to deny it, and imprison and kill those who affirmed it. The purely intellectual man would never persecute, be he theologian or mathematician; but when his intellect becomes the slave of feeling then the spirit of persecution is aroused. Religion the feeling, and not theology the intellectual perception, has been the source of every persecution, and it is absurd to try to vindicate religion at the expense of theology. It won't do. Neither history, nor science, nor human nature admits the evasion. Theology has been hideous and damnable, but it is religion that has made it so. Take away religion and theology would sink into "innocuous desuetude." It would then become an intellectual toy—a plaything of the imagination, a will-o'-wisp of the fancy. But join religion with theology and it is at once a cruel beast, like its progenitor.

If I bring theology to the bar of human judgment, I bring it simply as the accomplice of religion. Religion is the instigator of every crime which theology has sanctioned. Theology has simply followed after; it has not gone before. Religion is the master, theology is the perpetual slave. Kill religion and you will kill theology; but kill all present forms of theology and new forms will appear, still partaking of the dark and bitter fountain from whence they spring. It is useless to fight theology merely. It is religion itself that must be exterminated, and then theology will trouble us no more.

It is said that religion is a beautiful thing. So is the tiger beautiful when it is not mad. What is more beautiful than its graceful antics? So is the serpent beautiful when it is not angered. What is more charming than a snake? What glorious colors it has. What delightful movements. What exquisite grace. But the nature of the tiger and the snake exist in spite of their beautiful appearances. Yes, religion is beautiful, wonderfully attractive. It charms the eye and ear. Behold its gorgeous temples, its majestic statues, its enchanting pictures, its gloom irradiant with colors soft and thrilling. Listen to its solemn music, its chants, its sweet songs, its alluring voices. Yes, religion is beautiful. Its service is magnificent. It awes and subdues. The worshipers bow with rapture. Yes, religion untouched seems as peaceful as a poetic dream—it flows along a limpid shining stream—and who could think for a moment that there could be any terror in this lovely apparition, that it could torture and slay, that it was more cruel than the grave, that its music could turn to groans—its songs to tears—its temples to dungeons?

Ah, the ocean is beautiful, beautiful in its sunny glory, beautiful as it breaks in white splendor all along the sunny beach, beautiful in its calm blue depths beneath the calm blue sky, beautiful as it flows against the silver morn or golden eve; beautiful as the ship speeds merrily over its azure plain; beautiful as the stars are mirrored in its soft expanse; beautiful as it mingles with the moonlight on dark-browed rocks; beautiful as the chambered nautilus sails along its diamond surface; beautiful as we daintily play with its glittering billows, and the boat rocks to our happy dreams and the far-off horizon seems like Cleopatra's jewel melting in the glorious effulgence of the purple of the sea. Oh, it is beautiful, but let the breast of that peaceful ocean be smitten by the storm, let the hurricane come, where is the beauty then? Lost in terror, in shipwreck, and in death. Then everywhere the sea becomes a raging monster; it lashes the shores, it hurls thousands to destruction; it is an immeasurable horror.

So with religion, beautiful when summer's peace is brooding over it, but let religion be struck with fear, let it feel that its pomp and power are endangered, that it must preserve itself, and it becomes a monster, it fights like the wild beast, it bites like a serpent. It rends, it tears, it crushes, it devours, it kills. It is like the mighty ocean when the whirlwind is sweeping over it. Its beauty vanishes in immeasurable gloom. Then the tiger, the serpent nature of this beautiful religion is revealed.

It does not seem as if a belief in God and immortality could be so cruel. How can a belief in infinite goodness make one infinitely devilish? How can a belief in eternal existence kindle the fires of dark damnation? Yet it is so. These two beliefs have been the most dangerous in all human history. Dominating the mind, intensely held, they have transformed man to a tiger. It is strange that what appears so beautiful in itself, so sublime and precious, should be the source of the greatest horrors. One would think that a belief in God would make one kind and charitable. That the dream of immortality would suffuse life with measureless sweetness. But these beliefs have had the exactly opposite effect. Regarded as the greatest of blessings they have really been the greatest of curses. It is religion that has made them so. If these beliefs had been purely scientific they would indeed have been a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." If God and Immortality had been the gifts of science, how noble they would have been, how infinitely splendid. What warmth and brilliance they would have shed on human life. What grace and magnificence they would have given to human toil. But being, not the gifts of science, but the creatures of religious feeling, they have been a bloody paraphernalia along man's pathway. The face of God has been the face of a fiend, and the dream of immortality an eternal hell.

This is simply a fact, attested by a thousand wars, a million murders. I will endeavor to explain this fact and show that religion in its very nature must be cruel.

Religion originates in a desire for happiness. It is not that desire simply in itself, but the intensification, the crystallization, the abnormal emphasis of that desire. It is that desire made determinate, all-absorbing and all-commanding.

The very nature of religion therefore is absolute selfishness. It originates in selfishness. It is the expression of selfishness. From beginning to end it is a colossal egotism. It is more selfish than the desire for food by the hungry man, or for warmth by the naked wanderer.

How often it has been declared that religion is self-sacrificing; that it is indeed in its very essence self-sacrifice. There never was a false idea; there never was an act of religion that did not pertain to self; that did not begin with self and end with self. There is not a particle of generosity, of self-abandon, of real kindness in religion. Religious sacrifices I admit, always sacrifices, but it never sacrifices itself. It sacrifices a lesser good to a higher—the little self to the larger self—that is all. Self is not forgotten or obliterated. Religion has been one long record of sacrifices—sacrifices of millions of men, of doves, of sheep, of oxen, of the fruits of the earth. Religion is nothing but sacrifice, we might say, but never self-sacrifice. I challenge the production of one single deed of real self-sacrifice in all human history that has been the result of the religious motive. Great acts have been done for religion's sake—acts of heroism and splendor, romantic acts—but these acts have been all for the glory of the self. Armies have been led to mighty battles, innumerable sufferings have been borne, dangers dared, death encountered, for religion's sake, still the ulterior motive has been the exaltation of self.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Compend of Anti-religion and Science.

"The Creation of God," is the title of a book by Dr. Jacob Hartmann, a graduate of American, Canadian, and British medical schools, and universities and other institutions of learning.

We beg to call especial attention to this work. It is original in its conception; bold and fearless in its expression; free from prejudice or bigotry; profound in thought; full of facts, truth, scientific and historical data; concise in its arrangement; plain in its statement; clear and popular in its language. The scientific part is comprehensive, easily understood, abounding in useful and practical information. It is not a production to be simply glanced at and thrown aside; not written for the moment, to excite the passions and emotions; but a book that must undoubtedly be regarded as among the standard works, classic in its character. It must be studied, thought over; and this will call forth ideas and exercise the reasoning faculties. It is full of useful knowledge. It is a text-book that will not be affected by age, that can be read and reread with interest and profit. It is nowhere tedious, always instructive, apprehensible, and entertaining. Of whatever bias or belief any individual may be, he or she will certainly be much improved mentally by reading the contents of this book.

There are thirty chapters, and each chapter is an essay of itself, treating the subject thoroughly, bringing the most important points prominently and clearly before the mind. The first four chapters are devoted to the consideration of the chief aspects of the natural universe—our own solar and planetary system, their relative size, distance, and constituents, also distant stars, planets, and systems, as far as the human intellect has up to modern times discovered by astronomical research, painting the insignificance of our own sun with its planets, satellites, etc., compared with the incalculable number of other systems, suns and planets, their vast number and magnitude, their respective situations in infinit space. Such facts are recited, for instance, as that the sun, notwithstanding its so-called prodigious volume, is comparatively but a mere speck, appearing, when viewed from other remote planets, as a star perhaps of the second, third, or fourth magnitude. This terrestrial globe is discussed—its gaseous, fluid, and solid state; the earth's crust, the geological formation, its age, its constant elementary changes; its products, vegetable and animal life; its motion, variations, and phenomena; the antiquity and evolution of the various organic kingdoms; the atmosphere, its composition, influence, and saturating power, its relation to life and the laws governing the same; the chemical elementary substances, a subject of paramount importance. Here we will delay to remark that this last is a subject that every person ought to be more or less familiar with, since these elements enter into the composition and construction of everything celestial and terrestrial, animate or inanimate. Nothing can exist or ever existed without them; everything that has ever been produced or is being produced, from a simple protoplasm to an electric battery, is composed of them. This part shows the momentous role the vitalizing element, oxygen, with hydrogen, carbon, and nitrogen, play in organic life.

The subject of the fourth chapter, the sun, can not be overestimated. The facts dealt with are so extraordinary that the soberest hypothesis must appear extravagant. It is only by careful study and reflection that we can fully appreciate the sun's power and value; that we can learn something of its relationship to life—that the sun is the source, mediately or immediately, of all vegetable and animal life. By his warmth the sea is kept liquid and the air gaseous, the storms are agitated and the winds blown, etc.

The author demonstrates in these introductory chapters that, search where you will in the universe, suns, stars, planets, satellites, this terrestrial globe, its atmosphere, infinit space, chemical constituents, animal and vegetable life, all, all, everything known, is found to be natural, governed by natural laws; and not a vestige, not the remotest shadow, of anything supernatural, of a God or gods, is to be found. It demonstrates that the sun sets all this wonderful machinery in motion, exerts all the power that is exerted both physically and physiologically.

The scriptural criticism is certainly new and striking. The doctor proves beyond a possibility of contradiction that the first ten chapters of Genesis are an imaginary production, of fabulous origin—stories told and handed down thousands of years perhaps before the supposed creation was to have occurred. The author makes it clearly manifest that the creation of man, as represented in the Bible, is an absurdity, an impossibility. Man cannot be made out of dust, because more than two-thirds of water enters into his composition. The author makes it clear that the story was composed by some prolific brain when the human family had attained a high degree of civilization. He shows that the story of a universal deluge is as frivolous as it is false; that it is ridiculous in modern times to entertain an absurdity so palpable as that a rise of twenty-six feet of water could cover highlands and mountains ranging from three to eighteen thousand feet above the level of the sea. How the idea of God originated is fully discussed, and the mental process that led to the formation of idols, their worship and religious ceremonies. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day. The doctor reviews the patriarchal, Egyptian, and theocratic periods; the struggle for national life, first under the leadership of General Moses, the hero and savior of Egypt, the originator of Jehovah, the ambitious, scheming, intriguing politician; then under his followers of the time of Samuel, the Warwick of antiquity, the stern, bloodthirsty priest and general who led the nation to the zenith of its glory and greatness, making Saul and David kings; the movement culminating with the profligate, licentious debaucher Solomon, who ruined the nation; thence through the several centuries of theocratic and monarchical form of government, during which there were continual quarrels, dissensions, and bloody crimes and barbarism, terminating in their captivity and dispersion, with the so-called Lost Tribes returning to idolatry, while two are preserved by the Levites, the priestly tribe. The interest never seems to flag. Vigor and graphical-ness mark the recital, and curiosity grows more intense as the reader proceeds from chapter to chapter.

The principles of life, the animal machine, deserve and obtain special attention. The master tissues of the body, as the author designates the muscular and nervous tissues, these perform the work of the body, consume the elaborated food and throw off the waste material. The muscular tissues perform for their function all the mechanical labor; while the nervous tissues, the brain, spinal cord, etc., direct or guide them, thought, recollection, imagination, etc., etc., being the proper functions of the brain. The author advocates the view that nothing can be conscious except brain matter, and only through brain matter can intellect, understanding, wisdom, etc., be produced, and what is known as mind, soul, or spirit—these all being one and the same thing—has no existence apart from nervous organization; all the unseen forces are the products of chemical combination, vitalized or non-vitalized. All other organs, we are given to understand, are subservient to the master tissues.

The chapter on Alcohol and its Effects upon the master tissues everyone ought to read. It is a remarkable chapter, and deserves the closest attention.

It is impossible in this brief review to do justice to this excellent work, valuable for its helpful information. It must be read and studied to be appreciated. The book, though in part antagonistic to the prevailing beliefs or opinions, bigotry or prejudice, should be obtained and read by every thinker. "The Creation of God" we unhesitatingly pronounce a fit companion for any book or class of books in any library.

Liberal Societies.

"The Glad Tidings of Easter" was the subject of Professor Adler's lecture in Chickering Hall last Sunday morning. Every seat in the hall was taken and more than a hundred people were forced to stand. The following is a synopsis of the professor's remarks:

"The tidings of Easter are, in the first place, that spring is coming. This is sufficient to send a gleam of gladness into the heart. But from times of old men have been accustomed to give spiritual significance to the coming of spring. After a long period of stagnation comes the rejuvenation. Can we predict for man the perennial rejuvenation?"

"I was in Florence a year ago; I have never been in a city that impressed me more. But I doubt if there was one thing that made a deeper impression on me than did Ira Giovanni Angelico's painting of the crucifixion in the convent of San Marco. There are thousands of paintings of the crucifixion; artists seem to harp on that subject. The reason undoubtedly is that it gives them an opportunity to represent the tale of sorrow that is so common. But in all of these paintings the face of Jesus is the common type of the country wherein it was painted. Every artist has put his own conception of sorrow into the face of Christ. Here it is the sorrow of the dull, stupid peasant. There the sorrow represented is that which can only be ameliorated by supplicating heaven. But what struck me in the face of Fra Angelico's Christ was that it was so different from any of these. It was the face of a high intellectual being who seemed to see that there must be sorrow in order that there may be joy.

"The message of Easter is of the life that comes out of death. It is of the joy that comes out of sorrow. Its tidings are not for those who are naturally joyous; they are not for the happy maidens and youths. The message of Easter is to those who are in trouble; it is to tell them of a joy that is possible.

"When I speak of those in trouble I have in mind three classes. First those who are troubled with a guilty conscience. There are many who are guilty of wrong-doing, but of these it is only the better class who are troubled with the pangs of conscience. It is a sign of self-respect; let the wrong-doers who are thus troubled be not discouraged but begin anew. According to the teachings of Christianity man is naturally bad. According to the teachings of Christ man is naturally good. In this the teachings of Christ are diametrically opposed to those of Christianity.

"The second class I have in view are the parents who have been unsuccessful in their efforts to bring up their children properly. They should not despair, but rather should feel better able to succeed on the second trial. The third class consists of those who are attempting the erection of a nation. Here my thoughts revert once more to the subject of last Sunday's lecture. The more the Russian revolutionists are persecuted the more they feel that right and truth will eventually prevail; and this shows us that nothing can give us faith in truth and justice but deeds.

"To-day there is repeated in all churches the story of one who died a martyr's death. All reverence and all honor to him—Jesus of Nazareth. But his was after all but the type of that martyrdom which is much greater than his, that of the human race, which has been crucified thousands of times and died thousands of deaths."

Next Sunday Professor Adler will lecture on "The Anti-Semitic Movement in Germany."

T. B. Wakeman delivered a very interesting lecture before the Newark Liberal League last Sunday. "How to Sustain the Disillusioned in Religion" was the title of his lecture. In opening Mr. Wakeman said:

"This day is the birthday of spring. It is called Easter, after Eastre who was the goddess of spring and light. It is a day of happiness. We owe it to no one in particular, and we do not propose to let any one sect claim it as theirs.

"I have frequently been asked the question, 'What are you going to give us in place of the religion you have taken from us?' I always tell those who ask this question that we will sustain them by giving them a new religion which is higher and better than the old. The difficulty has been that Liberals were compelled by their position to assume the analytical instead of the synthetical course. But as in government the object of all revolution is to put a new and better government in the place of the old, so in religion. We can't destroy religion (using the word properly). But we can replace the old religion by one which is higher and better and which will hold us closer together."

Mr. Wakeman then compared the ideas of the ancient Hebrews with those held by the people of to-day. Their ideas were suited to their knowledge, and so we must suit our own ideas to our knowledge. The lecturer also told how he could take the symbols of any religion and explain them so that they would suit the new. Continuing he said:

"In place of the little personal god you were worshiping, we give a higher and a better one. When I am asked if I believe in a God, I say, 'Yes, a bigger one than you have any idea about.' That god is the universe. We destroy something that was never seen and replace it by something that you can see all around you. In place of Christ, we give you Humanity; and instead of the Holy Ghost we have the common life and love of the world."

Among those who spoke after Mr. Wakeman were Mrs. Smith, Messrs. Bird, Walker, Mayo, Morris, Place, Brill, and Burton. Messrs. Place and Burton spoke against the lecturer, but so flabbergasted was the former by the first words of Mr. Wakeman's reply to his adverse critics, that he left the room without waiting for the end.

Evidently the members of the Manhattan Liberal Club are not thoroughly inculcated with the importance of keeping religious holidays, for despite the fact that it was Good Friday and Passover, the meeting-room was well filled on the 31st. C. L. Schwartz lectured on "Capital Punishment." The lecturer reviewed the various methods that have been used to decapitate criminals. He also spoke at some length, and without any dulcification, of the barbarous methods of the inquisitors. Mr. Schwartz concluded by saying that he objected to capital punishment for three reasons; viz.: it entails expense, it is demoralizing in its effects on the community, and it is unpleasant.

The critics were Mr. Macdonald, Mrs. Leonard, Dr. Weeks, and Mr. Oppenheimer. Next Friday evening Mohamet Alexander Webb will lecture.

Mr. H. Nichols delivered an address on the "Silver Question" before the Brooklyn Philosophical Society. The lecturer said that the country had been declining yearly since 1866, when gold and silver was the currency of the country. Mr. Nichols thought that Mr. Sherman's attitude on the silver question was prompted by a strong regard "for revenue only." Among those who replied to the lecturer were Messrs. Hanson, Beers, Elwell, and Stone. Next Sunday Dr. Holbrook will lecture on "The Evolution of the Marriage Relations."

A Congress of Freethinkers.

I have just read in last week's TRUTH SEEKER Mr. John E. Remsburg's call for a World's Fair Congress of Freethinkers. This is a very commendable object. The different religious denominations are to have gatherings of this kind, and nothing would be more appropriate than for the friends of Freethought to do the same. We are sure that such a gathering could be made a grand success, and its influence an inspiration to universal mental liberty for many years to come. Let every Freethinker in the land give his or her aid toward the fulfillment of Mr. Remsburg's call. Last evening I delivered a lecture in this city on "The Evidences of Christianity Tested." Springfield is a priest-ridden place, and Liberals are strictly in the minority. However, the Illinois State Journal in this morning's issue did me honor by displaying the true spirit of Christian bigotry. This is the first time, I believe, that a Springfield paper has taken notice of a Freethought lecture, and here it is:

CENTURIES OF DELUSION.

"Popular Evidences in Favor of Christianity Tested," was the subject of a lecture by Franklin Steiner last evening in the supervisor's room. Mr. Steiner or the man who wrote the lecture for him has started to prove that the majority of the world's population have been seriously deluded for over eighteen hundred years. At the close of his lecture he offered for sale Ingersoll souvenirs, spoons, and books bearing on the subject of his talk. The attendance was small.

Now, the little penny-a-line scribe who wrote the above is not aware of the fact that Mr. Steiner's lectures are not written at all. Hence the man whom the Journal refers to could not have written it for him, whoever that man may be. Possibly, as some reporter for the Journal is so well informed concerning my affairs, he can tell me who it is that writes my lectures, and can tell me another thing that I did not know before—that the lecture delivered in Springfield last evening was ever in manuscript? Who is it that believes that the majority of mankind have been deluded for over eighteen hundred years? Here, our scribbler is not aware of the fact that the majority of mankind are not Christians. This is so nevertheless, and therefore the Christian believes that the majority of mankind have been deluded—not for eighteen hundred years, but for over two thousand years. Rev. George W. Northrup, president of the Morgan Park Theological Seminary, at the meeting of the American Baptist Missionary Union two years ago made this statement: "There are to-day one billion heathens, while at the beginning of the Christian era there were only six hundred millions, an actual increase of four hundred millions after the lapse of eighteen centuries. Again, during the era of modern missions—the last one hundred years—the heathen population has increased two hundred millions, while the number converted to Christianity from the whole heathen world is estimated at three millions."

Not only, according to the Christian scheme, have the majority of the human race been deluded for over eighteen hundred years, but more are deluded to-day than there were eighteen hundred years ago! Yet we must not say that there is a possibility of Christians themselves being deluded. Oh, no.

FRANKLIN STEINER.

Springfield, Ill., March 28, 1893.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The Socialistic local government of Roubaix, France, has vetoed every item on the city budget which directly or indirectly appropriated money for churches and other clerical institutions.

A new Freethought paper has seen the light at Barcelona, Spain. It has been named La Piqueta del Libre Pensamiento (The Freethought Picket), and its editor is the well-known Freethinker E. Moreno Acosta.

Mr. Hildebrandt, of Berlin, Germany, has been sentenced to prison by the German supreme court. The wicked man had in his brochure, "A Modern Infidel Letter," said a few plain truths about the Christian church.

The Freethought society at Creil, France, has been quite unfortunate during the past year, having lost eight prominent members by death; but we are proud to state that in each case the deceased was buried without the assistance of a sky pilot and ghostly mumbling of nonsense.

Liberty of conscience is guaranteed by the German state constitution. But then theory is one thing, practice another. Seven men appearing before court at Barmen refused to take the oath. "An Atheist has no legal rights in a court of law," said the presiding judge. This is German liberty.

The late English clergyman, J. Spurrell, D.D., must have had a hard time getting by St. Peter and being allowed to pick out his harp and crown. The orthodox disciple of the Galilean left a fortune of over $2,400,000. But perhaps the passage about the camel and the eye of the needle should be taken in a Pickwickian sense only.

The abbot of Neaurtzu cloister in Roumania, Dr. Joseph Moschénai, has caused quite a sensation in Bucharest by a letter of his published in one of the daily papers in which he states that he had to leave the cloister on account of the life led by the monks, which was in the highest degree beastly. The abbot can find the same state of affairs all over.

Holy Germans entered the Freethinkers' Hall in Berlin and distributed tracts. The fact that but a few consented to take one made "home mission" workers mad, and they caused a disturbance. No legal redress was possible, as the "home mission" is specially favored by the government. The Free-thinkers should find out whether this rule cannot be worked both ways.

A rare treat in the line of Freethought lectures is in store for the American Freethinkers. The fact is that our friend Victor E. Lennstrand will during the summer deliver a series of lectures here in the United States. Mr. Lennstrand is a splendid lecturer and debater, and besides is one of Freethought's martyrs, which can but lend additional interest to his coming.

Dr. Heilberg, the well-known peace advocate, recently gave a lecture before the Humboldt Society for Popular Education, at Leipzig. Our societies should follow the example set by the German Freethought society. The discussion which follows a lecture like that of Dr. Heilberg's—"The Idea of Universal Peace"—will give an excellent opportunity for vigorous attack on Christianity, the religion of war.

In spite of his advanced age Prof. Ludwig Büchner, M.D., the well-known author of "Force and Matter," and president of the German Freethought Federation, seems to have lost none of his youthful vigor. Jan. 31, 1893, the professor gave in Munich a lecture attended by over a thousand people on "Progress and Development of the Natural Sciences." The hall of the Freereligious Society was so crowded that men like Professor Ziemsen had to stand up.

Socialism.

The priest claims that all human government, good or bad, is by divine authority or permission. This theory is an invention of the priests, and is the bulwark of tyrants. Freethinkers unite in its denunciation.

But some few Liberals, without one thought, swing to the opposite extreme and advocate anarchy—a primitive social condition with no fixed authority—a condition about like that of a herd of buffaloes where the biggest bull roams free. To a reasonable Liberal it is somewhat discouraging to witness an ex-reverend stated lecturer in a large Liberal hall in this city declare he would not vote at all; that if he did he would thereby recognize government, the rights and need of which he denied. Now, when one starts on a toboggan slide it is well to know that there is a bottom somewhere.

Our federal Constitution would do fairly well if Congressmen would stop violating it by passing meddlesome and partial laws. Congress has been the fountainhead of usurpation, favoritism, extravagance, and corruption in this land. But instead of destroying the government, the Liberal should assist in sending men more intelligent, more honest, and more modest to make laws. Anarchism and civilization are incompatible.

Probably a much larger number of Liberals, dissatisfied with the existing order of things, are striving for Socialism—a social system of either all head, or else with no head nor tail, where individualism is absorbed in the concrete mass. The attraction here is the promise of equality—equal division of labor and wealth.

But this sort of society has been tried at different times and places, and has invariably failed of success. In an old but still popular legend it is written that one Jesus, with a few barefoot fishermen, tried it. And they left a record which no Liberal can approve.

About the beginning of this century an enthusiastic Frenchman (Fourier) conceived Socialism to be just the thing for human happiness. He wrote extensively in its support, and gained a few crazy converts in this country. Probably his work modified somewhat the brutal rigor of the ruling powers, but his plans failed.

A few years later Robert Dale Owen wrote volumes in favor of Socialism or Communism, and spent time and money in trying to establish Socialistic communities in the hope of remodeling society and government. Those communities have had their funerals.

And our brethren of the Shaker community, who combine with other oddities the practice of Socialism, are in a dwindling condition—not expected to live.

All these Socialistic experiments were based on more or less supernaturalism. The fishermen were looking for celestial bait to catch land gudgeons. Fourier wished to return to what he thought was the real teaching and practice of the said Jesus and fishermen. Owen was involved in an impenetrable fog of Spiritualism. And the Shakers believe that Jesus Christ came to earth the second time in the person of Ann Lee, a young English woman, about one hundred and fifty years ago.

The modern Socialist may reject all these modes of Socialism, but he wants a division of wealth, if not of labor, and objects to paying interest or rent. He thinks the neighbor who has made or saved money should let him have a share without charge. One mechanic, who may not be able to figure out the exact distance of the earth from the sun, may calculate that the saving of one dollar a week will soon enable him to buy a house lot near by, if not in, the heart of the city, on which to make a home. When he has the home, and after being assessed for improvements which have trebled its value, along comes a fellow-mechanic, who has spent his odd dollars on a bobtailed nag or some other funny thing, and insists that he did not earn the increment of the property, and for that reason should let some poor devil share its quarters without charge. Now it is easy to guess which of the two, if either, is a Socialist.

"Oh, look at Gould, with his millions, who never earned a dollar," says the Socialist. Nay, but look at the legislators who grant charters and patents so favorable that a few long-headed men can monopolize great interests. The recipients of the Pacific railroad grants, the sewing-machine patents, etc., largely became millionaires. And when a legislator receives a consideration for his vote he does not divide with his constituents. It is safe to say that no one ever worked for Jay Gould for less pay than he could get out of another for the same work. "Oh, but he gambles!" Well, it is all in the family. If in a game of stock policy Gould wins a million from Sage or Huntington, how does it harm him who has no stock?

The fact is that imprudence and incompetence are the principal breeders, in this country at least, of Socialists.

The advocate of Socialism overlooks the important fact of diversity of character and disposition found in any given community. He must indorse the erroneous statement of some philosophers that all men are born equal. He must presume that a promiscuous company of men and women will willingly surrender their individuality to become absorbed in a concrete human mass; that they will volunteer to work through life by arbitrary rule—each one to take a row in the field as does the harrow's tooth.

But men are not born equal, and do not grow up equal. What school ever did or can graduate a class of equals? They differ in ability, aims, and tastes; and it is well. There are many kinds of employment in the land; and while one can construct an engine or clean a watch, another biped is content with his pipe and cleaning a cesspool.

No people half civilized will be content under Socialism. The average man may have some love for the community, but he loves himself more. He will not willingly relinquish the individual liberty Socialism necessarily exacts. Through superstition his personality may be crushed under a divine right and priestly tyranny; but if there be any active brain left, he desires liberty. In the one case his nonentity is compulsory, in the other it is to be voluntary.

There is no good reason for urging Socialism in this country. All Liberals will agree that that government is best which governs least—which allows the largest individual liberty. Our federal Constitution were the Senate clause expunged—the Senate being merely an expensive obstruction—would be excellent. As it is, were it faithfully regarded by Congress and state legislatures, all church property would be fairly taxed, and there would be no public chaplains nor Sunday laws. A republican form of government, honestly administered, seems to be the best yet devised. Improvement will come when we select honest, courageous legislators in place of pious fanatics, cowardly sneaks, and scheming scoundrels.

The Socialistic agitation in Germany will not result in peaceful Socialism; but it is already disturbing the peace of rulers, and may ere long precipitate a revolution that will cause priest and royal blood to shiver.

But royal blood is strong and the priest is tough. In France, even yet, the waves of contention between absolutism and individual liberty are ominously rolling. The priest is persevering, and has his traps, baited with sacred lies, set in every direction.

Individual liberty is necessary for human progress and happiness, and priestcraft is its greatest foe. To destroy this foe is still a big job, requiring the concentrated energy of all Liberals. For fifteen hundred years past the priest has had things pretty much his own way. At last reason and science are forcing him on the defensive. Perhaps in the year 1993 the good old church buildings will be in use for schools, clubs, and theaters. Perhaps the priest by that time will have retired from all centers of civilization, and be found only in the woods with crows, à la Jeremiah, and—perhaps not.

L. G. REED.

No Brain, No Thought.

In defense of the biblical doctrine of soul immortality, its advocates are nearly always ready with the assumption that the feeling and hope of a spiritual existence after death, exist naturally in the breasts of all mankind. Now, I imagine that this idea is not entirely supported by fact; but granting that it may be so, such feeling and hope on the part of mankind do not sufficiently accomplish the fact of such subsequent spiritual or soul existence. In order to prove, by any means whatever, such a state of existence, it would first become necessary to prove that the soul had any existence at all. Substance is never annihilated. Matter is eternal in various forms, but in its changes the act of changing may not be matter. When I strike a blow with my fist, the fist itself and the arm and nerves of the arm are directed by the nerves of the brain, themselves set in motion by that still mysterious odic force, which, operating upon the brain, produces thought. The fist and arm and brain, and odyllic force operating upon the nerves of the brain, are matter; but the act itself and the consequences are not necessarily matter. Thought is merely the act. It is the operation of matter. Upon this basis of reasoning I conclude that when the brain dies and dissolves and changes into other elements there can be no such thing as its being acted upon to produce thought. Its individuality is lost, and even though its particles may assist in the processes of building up other brains, its individual functions as a brain have ceased forever. Upon the living, active brain, this odic force is operating everywhere. All thought is the result. I firmly believe that through the operations of this force all the phenomena of mentality, mental communications, so-called spiritual manifestations, and mental illusions have been and are being produced, but only upon living, active brains; that hypnotic influence is more general than it is commonly supposed to be; that although a man may not exactly realize or understand the fact, the operations of his brain exert an influence on other brains, and his brain is also influenced by the action of other brains. My belief, brought about by this foregoing chain of observations, is strongly at variance with all the teachings and assertions of those who advocate an individual spiritual existence after death; and to be consistent I must doubt the truth of any religion which is built upon a foundation of faith in the individual existence of thought (or soul) after death has rendered the brain inoperative.

J. B. SWETT.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Montreal, April 9	Boston, Mass., April 16
Osterville, Mass., " 11	Worcester, " " 16
Cotuit, " " 12	Bristol, Conn., " 17
Harwich, " " 13	Cincinnati, Ill., " 23

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association's program for this month is:

April 9th, Dr. M. L. Holbrook, "Evolution of Marriage."
 April 16th, O. P. Loomis, "Ancient Astronomy and Religion."
 April 23d, Prof. R. E. Mayne, "The Coming Man."
 April 30th, S. H. Wilder, "Science Falsely So Called."
 The Association meets Sundays at 3 P. M. at Fraternity Hall, Bedford avenue and South Second street, E. D.
 At the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East Fifteenth street, Friday evenings, the programme for April is:
 April 7th, Mohammed Webb, "Mohammed the Prophet."
 April 14th, Raymond Perrin, "The Christian Religion."
 April 21st, Lizzie Ward, "Women's Skirts."
 April 28th, Reuben Rush, "Life and Death."

LIBERALS living near New Cambria, Kan., should watch the local papers for dates of J. E. Rensburg's lectures there.

Mr. Alexander's Book.

From the Detroit Free Press.

An elaborate treatise covering a thousand large octavo pages deals with "The Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind," which may be briefly summarized as a theory that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. The author is James B. Alexander, who has very evidently made an exhaustive study of the subject, and spared neither time nor pains in an earnest effort to reach correct conclusions.

That the "facts" are as numerous as claimed, the size of the book, which is very largely devoted to facts, attests. Fully seven hundred pages of the thousand in the book are devoted to a presentation of the facts from which Mr. Alexander draws his conclusions, and if the latter are unwarranted he has put in the hands of his readers the means of showing that they are. The volume is profusely illustrated.

Letters of Friends.

A Gift That Shall Go to Do Good.
ORANGEPORT, N. Y., Jan. 31, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $2 to renew my subscription. M. E. ATWOOD.
P.S.—Apply $1 on subscription and the balance for the good of the cause.
M. E. A.

Cheering Words.
TOWNSEND, MONT., Dec. 20, 1892.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for my paper for 1893. I hope you may meet with generous relief for your financial needs and long continue to publish your most excellent paper.
C. T. COLLIER.

Aids the Propaganda of Civilization.
BENMILLER, CAN., Jan. 26, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Please find $5 for renewal of my subscription for 1893 and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." The balance you can keep to help you along. My greatest wish is that you may prosper in the good work.
WM. LONG.

Wishes Freethought Propaganda Assisted.
SAN ANTONIO, TEX., Jan. 11, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find one year's subscription for the paper. I trust those Liberals who are richly endowed will extend a more liberal hand and assist one of the grandest publications the age has yet called forth. Wishing success, I am,
Yours truly, VIRGINIE DONALDSON.

Churches and Saloons—It Must Be Like the World's Fair.
ARCHBALD, PA., March 1, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $2 from one who is termed a hard citizen in a little borough where churches and saloons go hand in hand—seventy-five saloons, and seven of the number running without license, and the priest takes the boodle.
J. J. RUTLEDGE.

They Would Burn the Truth.
BOX ELDER, NEB., Feb. 28, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: A short time ago I received a copy of your paper—the first I ever had seen. I am pleased with its teachings. Some persons say they would not have such literature in their houses—they would burn it. Inclosed find $3 to pay subscription one year.
I. W. SPAULDING.

Going to Organize—Let Others Imitate.
AXTELL, KAN., Feb. 23, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for my renewal to your most excellent paper. I am very much pleased with your stand on the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. The Liberals of this county, Marshall, meet next Sunday to effect an organization. I think the cause is growing rapidly here.
F. B. WHEELER.

Our "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" a New Thing.
ELLIS, MINN., Feb. 6, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I received the Bible Picture Book, and it is a little the best thing I ever saw. Everybody that sees it is wild over it, and some say they did not think anyone would dare to print such a book. I received the paper also, and shall be a subscriber for life.
Yours for Freethought and Liberty,
GEORGE JONES.

Religion Won't Let One Solitary Slave Read the Truth.
FORT JONES, CAL., Feb. 9, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5—$3 to pay my subscription for the paper; for the other $2 send me Ingersoll's "Gods" and "Ghosts," in cloth. There is too much religion here to get you a subscriber. Wishing you and the old TRUTH SEEKER a long and prosperous life, I remain,
A life-subscriber,
J. H. LINDSAY.

Feels It a Duty to Aid Freethought.
PAULINA, ORE., Jan. 23, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Money is very scarce here at present, but we feel it our duty to do all we can to help a good cause. Your paper is getting better all the time. And we look with much interest for the contributions of our old friend, and ex-editor of the San Francisco Freethought, as I know his letters will be of much interest to the readers of the paper. S. P. Putnam's letters are very interesting, and R. G. Ingersoll's writings, and many others. Hoping the good cause may ever continue, I remain,

Yours truly,
C. D. HARDISTY.

Indispensable.
MARTINSVILLE, ILL., Feb. 15, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I consider your paper the most scientific journal in circulation, and indispensable to a mind seeking after truth and right principles. As soon as I can make arrangement I mean to send for an order of books for a little library here from the TRUTH SEEKER library. I remain, as ever,
Yours for science, truth, and justice,
J. T. HANSEN.

The Two Meanings of the Word "Law."
WILBUR, NEB., Feb. 25, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I want to thank you for your able exposition of the Design fallacy. When in controversy with my Christian friends I found the design argument the most difficult to refute, as I had never discovered the distinction between natural order and human law or decree, as pointed out in your refutation of the design argument.
H. KILGORE.

Thinks He Pays Only Half-price.
COVINGTON, IND., Feb. 13, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I could not think of giving up THE TRUTH SEEKER. Here I am with $5 inclosed to pay up on my subscription. I do not feel that I am paying for more than half of what I get from the paper anyway.
Hurrah for Sunday opening. I am sure we'll get there. Respectfully, etc.,
SCHUYLER LATOURETTE.

"For the Spread of Freethought Light."
MEMPHIS, MO., Feb. 4, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Herein find $4—$3 to put a new subscriber inclosed on the roll of THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year and $1 for you to use as you think best for the spread of Freethought light. I have been reading your paper since our friend D. M. Bennett was in prison, and I must say I like it better as it and I grow older. I have often tried to get others to subscribe for it, but failed till to-day. Please send me catalog of publications.
EDWARD BUTLER.

Counsel Is Ever Welcome.
GANANOQUE, CAN., Feb. 21, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: You made two improvements in THE TRUTH SEEKER, by making the pictures separable, and putting the editorials in front. I would like to see another change, viz., giving only one page to "Letters of Friends," for the reason that so many of them are uninteresting to the majority of readers, and substituting such matter as comes under the head of "News of the Week," giving at least one column to humorous paragraphs.
Yours continuously, HENRY SMITH.

This Paper Needed to Cope With the Religions Press.
BALTIMORE, MD., Feb. 10, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I see in your last issue you want money. I inclose $5 for two years, no premiums. My subscription expired, according to the tag, Jan. 27, 1893; please extend to January, 1895. Your paper should be sustained. While the cowardly press throughout the land is catering to ecclesiasticism and infamous superstition, your paper is battling for our rights and liberties. So I think every Liberal should be prompt.
Respectfully, E. LIVEZEY.

May We Liv to Water Christianity's Grave.
ORO CITY, COL., Jan. 25, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $11 for the renewal of my subscription, and two new subscribers, and books as mentioned below. I do not see why I cannot get more subscribers for your paper. Almost all men, women, and children up in this altitude, which is eleven thousand feet above sea level, are Freethinkers—except a few Catholics; but they are ignorant and would not read anything that would enlighten them if they had a chance.

May Heston and the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER liv to water the grave of Christianity.
Yours for truth,
ELMER DUTRO.

We Will Distribute Literature.
GREEN HILL, O., Dec. 19, 1892 E.M.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $4, to be applied as follows: $3 for the renewal of my subscription for the grandest, boldest, and the most fearless of papers that I am acquainted with (it hews to the line, and if the sky-pilots do not want the chips to fly in their eyes they must keep them shut); fifty cents for "The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion," by T. E. Longshore; the balance to be used as in your judgment will do the most good.
ENOCH WICKERSHAM.

A Christian Quizzed.
CARBON, TEX., Feb. 21, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: The people out here are getting to be quite Liberal. One of our Liberal friends and a Christian were talking. The Christian told our friend that God made him. There was a good crowd present, and only one negro at that time. Says I to the Christian, "Did God make the white man?" "Yes," said he. "Then," says I, "who made the other fellow?" at the same time pointing at the negro. That was more than the Christian could stand, so he left, while the crowd enjoyed a hearty laugh. I. A. DINGLER.

Liberty and Equal Rights Impossible Under Religion.
BARNES, KAN., Jan. 24, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I am a Freethinker from head to foot, and believe in liberty and equal rights to all, which is an impossibility while clinging in the least to any religion. Reason should be man's guide and Humanity his altar.
Please find inclosed $4.70—for the paper and the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-book," $4; the "Liberal Hymn Book," twenty-five cents; "Holy Bible Abridged," thirty cents; "One Hundred and Forty-four Self-Contradictions of the Bible," fifteen cents.
JAMES PONTIUS.

How Is Slate-Writing Done?
EAST OTTO, N. Y., March 8, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I am interested in what your paper contains, and especially "Letters from Friends." I wish that some one who is scientific enough would explain how writing is obtained between closed slates, under strictly test conditions. I have got answers from departed friends written in their handwriting.
I feel encouraged; the Methodist minister here has been reading Ingersoll's lecture on Lincoln in THE TRUTH SEEKER that I gave him.
Your Liberal friend, C. BURCHARD.

Complains of 'There Being "No Limit to Credulity."
BELOIT, WIS., March 21, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER suits me very well. It is very hard to get new subscribers. I try and circulate my TRUTH SEEKER among the hypocrites, and I am doing what I can for the cause of truth. I attended a spiritual séance here held by a materializing medium who goes by the name of Charles Wianans, and there were a good many who were converted, but as for myself, I am well satisfied that it was a fraud. So it looks as if there were no limit to credulity. Wishing you success, I remain,
Yours truly,
NELSE CHRISTENSEN.

Thinks We Are Ushering the "Era of Peace."
FALUN, KAN., Jan. 28, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I long every week for your paper, where I partake of ideas from thinking people all over the globe. I think skeptics are now progressing the Era of Peace. "Letters of Friends" are more harmonious than ever before. Orthodoxy has held a strong hand over this community, but the young, where lies the safety of our country, are quite Liberal. Christians think infidelity rather bold when it even officiates at the grave, as was the case when the writer took a minister's place at Freethinker A. Rodin's grave, December 25th. Our friend was young and brave, only twenty-two years, but had to go. "Twas Nature's wish."

Inclosed find order for $7 for one renewal and two new subscribers.
Yours truly, GUS ECKWALL.

Shows How the Pope Talks.
MAGDALENA, SONORA, March 12, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I have been receiving THE TRUTH SEEKER since the 4th of February, and I am very fond of it. I don't wish to flatter you; but believe me, Mr. Editor, that it is the best paper I have seen. I am a Liberal and I congratulate you because you print such a paper, which I guess will be able to break the chain of superstition and take away the veil of ignorance and fanaticism with which religion has covered the eyes of humanity. The picture in No. 7 is a masterpiece; but let me tell you that I guess it had been better if it had had the pope saying: "Only the Roman Catholic religion is true and nobody can go to heaven but for it; my Bible does not say it, but I wish to say so, and that settles it." Yours truly,
IGNACIO HERNANDEZ.

An Emancipated Catholic.
NANAIMO, B. C., Dec. 19, 1892.
MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $4—$3 for the renewal of subscription for the paper and $1 for the "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," cloth covers, as you advertised in your paper you would send them both for $4. I like your paper very much. It is the best I ever did read, according to Truth—for I have been a truth seeker or Freethinker from the time I can remember, but nothing was clear to me till I got your valuable paper (which I give to my friends after I am done reading it), for I was brought up in the Roman Catholic church. Religion was talked to me much, but I could never believe in it. Will you please send me a catalog of your books? MRS. ELIZABETH KEMPER.

Freethinkers Kept Silent by Fear of Losing Work.
ORANGEVILLE, PA., Jan. 26, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I was in hopes I would get a new subscriber, but have failed so far. Although there are several here who agree with me, some are unfortunately too poor, while others are afraid to be known as Freethinkers—and in some cases not without good reason, for they could not hold their present places to make their living and would have to move or keep still.
We had a flag raised on our public schoolhouse on Saturday, January 14th, and speeches made. I was not there, but understood that one speaker thought the Bible should be read in the schools, and that Catholics and Infidels should be kept out. I am sorry I was not there. I could then give a better and more correct report. But the above is sufficient to show that their religion must be supported by the strong arm of the law with the policeman's club to back it up, for it has not bottom enough for itself to stand on and if not so supported it will go down.
Yours for truth, M. S. HAYHURST.

The Truth Has Changed the World for Him.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12, 1893.
MR. EDITOR: I must put it down for good luck that I here met a friend, Mr. Rosenthal, who is a Freethinker. He is a subscriber of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and has for a long time let me read your excellent paper. What I have read and found out through THE TRUTH SEEKER has made me a new man, and the world appears now in a different light before my eyes. I was a church-member and an earnest Christian when I first commenced to read THE TRUTH SEEKER. As I have been a Christian and believed every word in the Bible, it is easy for me to find the truth by comparing the old legend with books written by men who have yielded to their reasoning powers, as Thomas Paine and others. Please send me THE TRUTH SEEKER for six months, and the following books: "Death-bed of Infidels," twenty-five cents, "Bennett's Answers to Christian Questions," twenty-five cents, and "Woman, Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs," ten cents. As payment for THE TRUTH SEEKER and the above-named books, you will find inclosed $2.50. Keep what's left over.
P. HERTZBERG.

Believes Our Battling Not Fruitless.

LINDSEY, ONT., Jan. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: May you long live to edit your paper, is the hearty wish of one who believes that your persistent battle for the liberation of our race from the shackles of superstition is not in vain, as many who were blind now see that human reason is the best guide and human experience the best teacher.

THOS. A. MIDDLETON.

The Blundering Waste of the "Designer."

COOK, N.B., Feb. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Herein find postal money order for $7—$3 for C. W. Williams, $3 for myself, twenty-five cents for interest on past-due subscription; send "Crimes of Preachers" as soon as out; if any balance send a few Fair Leaflets.

I want to say in the way of encouragement that the grand old TRUTH SEEKER grows better and better. I have now read it for nearly sixteen years, and while the "lamp holds out to burn" there is one sinner that never will return to the worship of the Christian humbug. So never stop sending the paper till you hear of my demise.

You have handled the Design argument most masterly—though the strongest point you have not as yet touched; that is the everlasting waste. There are a thousand blossoms to one that reaches maturity, a million spawn to a few fish that possibly may become half grown. The spermatozoa or seed of man are wasted by millions; and, too, millions die in infancy. A designer that would make such a blunder ought to have been the first to die.

Yours for all truth, W. P. BROOKS.

The Difference Between Religions and Freethought Literature.

BRIMFIELD, IND., Feb. 6, 1893

MR. EDITOR: We feel as though we were paying for truth when paying for Liberal literature, and not for fables and falsehoods such as religious papers teach. How much better it would be for the whole world generally if they would read less of religious papers and more of such papers as yours and investigate such books as the Life of Thomas Paine and Voltaire's works, and stay away from churches and let the pastors preach to empty houses. Certainly no one that thinks of the matter at all can help but see that the priesthood have been the greatest enemies the human race have had to contend with, and in the place of teaching peace and good-will to men have only taught falsehoods and have brought discord and dissensions to mankind. Teachers and lecturers are always needed, but let them teach something true and instructive—tell what they know and not what they guess at. But my letter is already longer than I intended, so I will close by wishing you success in your good work.

MRS. S. W. DEVENBAUGH.

A Veteran and His Sunday Habits.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Jan. 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My subscription expires to-day, and, in consideration of my financial and other conditions, I have been thinking of asking you to discontinue my paper, for a time at least, until I might perhaps be in more favorable circumstances than at present. But when I think of the length of time I have been reading the paper continuously from week to week, I fear I would miss it more than I can realize at present. I have taken it seventeen or eighteen years, and have concluded to inclose $1.50 to continue it for another six months per adventure, the best I can do at present. I am now seventy-eight, and it has become a fixed habit to look for my paper on Saturday evenings, that I may have something where-with to keep the Sabbath while the good people are attending their churches.

At my stage of life I cannot expect to live to see the Nine Demands of Liberalism accomplished fact in our government. But my desire is that THE TRUTH SEEKER, and all other Liberal papers aiming at the same objects, may live and go their rounds as educators of the people from generation to generation, until all shall come to a knowledge of the truth, that justice may be done to all.

Upon reflection it is a source of sorrow when we remember such brave and good men, champions of liberty, dropping out of the ranks of Liberalism by death, one by one—such men as D. M. Bennett, Hon. Elizer Wright, T. C. Leland, Courtlandt Palmer, Stephen Pearl Andrews, John R. Kelso, James Parton, James Lick, Prof. William Denton, Horace Seaver, Mendum, and others—a serious loss to the cause of Liberalism.

SAMUEL GANTZ.

Christians' Treatment of the Heathen.

BARRE, MASS., March 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Do you not think this poem good enough for THE TRUTH SEEKER? When its author got off the last two lines he must have had in his mind the Christian missionary proselytism of Hawaii more than fifty years ago, and the late revolution.

I remember well when the first missionaries went out to Hawaii, funds raised, returns of numerous happy conversions, etc., etc. Please publish and oblige Yours, etc., ELLA E. GIBSON.

MODERN MISSIONARY ZEAL.

From the London Truth.

Onward, Christian soldiers!
On to heathen lands!
Prayer book in your pockets,
Rifles in your hands.
Take the happy tidings
Where trade can be done;
Spread the peaceful gospel
With a Gatling gun!

Tell the wretched natives
Sinful are their hearts,
Turn their heathen temples
Into spirit marts.
And if to your preaching
They will not succumb,
Substitute for sermons
Adulterated rum.

Tell them they are pagans
In black error sunk,
Make of them good Christians—
That is, make them drunk!
And if on the Bible
Still they dare to frown,
You must do your duty—
Take and shoot them down!

When the Ten Commandments
They quite understand,
You their chief must hocus
And annex their land.
And if they, misguided,
Call you to account,
Read them—in their language—
The Sermon on the Mount.

If, spite all your teaching,
Trouble still they give;
If, spite rum and measles,
Some of them still live;
Then, with purpose moral,
Spread false tales about,
Instigate a quarrel,
And let them fight it out.

Non-Spiritualists Must Combine With Spiritualists Against the Common Foe.

SKOWHEGAN, ME., Feb. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am, as you will see, a Spiritualist, having practiced among the sick for nineteen years—ever since D. M. Bennett was put in prison. I have been a weekly reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and in its pages I find many thoughts expressed proving what I call Spiritualism. Of all Spiritualist teachers R. G. Ingersoll is, in my opinion, the greatest, as he teaches humanity instead of brutality. I wish every Spiritualist would take THE TRUTH SEEKER and one of the Spiritualist papers, also that every Liberal would do the same. We should all join our forces in order to hold our own instead of helping the church power that will, if ever able, put us in chains. I think we should stand up and be counted and let it be known what our forces are and where we are to be found. I am not caring because some church member wishes to go and live with Christ, if some other wants to sleep a long time, or if still another wishes never to awake. They have that privilege. They say they never saw any spirits—that there is no such thing—so of course that makes it true. I say after a thorough investigation that I know there are spirits, and I claim the right of seeing and conversing with them, and not to go to hell because church people say I must. I am sorry that some who claim to be Freethinkers are bigoted, and stoop to slander and other means that are used by the enemies of liberty and do nothing toward reform, feeding the hungry, or relieving those who are sick and in need; and I say until they do they have no right to call mediums and healers fools, dupes, and such names, as I often see in the pages of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. I think there are as many Spiritualists as there are so-called Freethinkers who read your paper. Let us all work together to maintain our liberty and leave the gods and devils to themselves.

DR. F. S. BIGELOW.

The Lay of the Parson.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., March 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have made it a point for many years to read THE TRUTH SEEKER weekly, and to add to my little library by purchasing many of the books it advertises. To say that I am pleased with it and with the majority of these works is but faintly to express my opinion.

For common sense, for convincing arguments, for just and reasonable views, I have read no paper that can equal and certainly none that can excel THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Wishing to imitate it in a humble way, I seek to disseminate our views among my friends and those persons with whom I come in contact. Some have proved unwilling to even listen, but others I have won completely over. Among the latter I may class a young man—Chesterson by name—who roused himself from a sort of apathy concerning religious matters to pour a hot fire of argument into me. He is able and bright and worked the worn-out and honeycombed guns of that old hulk Christianity in a manner seldom equaled by even its most earnest and zealous officers. But it is ill defending a sinking ship, as he found, and he ended, at last, by taking a berth on the stanch vessel Freethought, where he may, in time, do excellent work.

One of his first acts was to celebrate an incident he had somewhere witnessed by a bit of doggerel which I take the liberty to append to this.

I remain, sincerely your friend,
HENRY M. AIKEN.

Our parson was slender, fair, and tall,
His face was a sight to see;
It shone with the light of faith and hope,
And of wondrous sanctity.

Full pious and meek, full holy and good,
Was this servitor of Christ;
And we loved him well, as Christians should,
Though he was somewhat high-priced.

Reasoning, he said, was a deadly sin,
A thing we must all avoid;
A harp and a crown we all might win,
If with thought we never toyed.

Sadly he spake of the infidel,
And told us about his crimes;
Showed us how surely he ends in hell,
While Christians have better times.

He spoke, and his voice was soft and clear,
Of love and of chastity;
Of the joy and the bliss we can't have here,
And of immortality.

We missed him once when we went to church,
And a deacon's wife was gone,
So his money-bags, he found on search,
Had followed our paragon.

Our wrath it swells as when ocean rolls,
And him cold we'd like to lay.
We'll show, at least, we all have soles,
If ever he comes this way.

Uncle Sam Is Quite a Fanly Individual.

SANTA FE, N. M., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER continues to be a most interesting and instructive paper, and I enjoy reading it and looking at Mr. Heston's pictures, although his illustrations are not always founded upon facts. In one of the late papers he represents Uncle Sam as standing in the door of the public schoolhouse forbidding the Catholic and Protestant ministers to enter with their armful of religious literature. Now, we all ought to know that Uncle Sam has always permitted the Protestant minister with his Bible and prayers to make his home in the public schools, while he forbade the Catholic similar privileges. It is only lately since the Catholic became strong enough to do some violent kicking that we have noted a change in some localities. Uncle Sam is by no means the ideal being whom Mr. Heston represents, but on the contrary, he is the gentleman who closes our World's Fair on Sunday and sends upright, industrious people to penitentiaries for doing something which may not be in accordance with his religious notions. He is always ready to enforce his puritanical ideas by the machinery of laws enacted for the purpose, differing in that respect from the Catholic, who keeps his religion to himself and does not bother other people with it. It would be an easy matter, for instance, to get up a petition for opening the World's Fair on Sunday and have it signed here by every Catholic including the clergy and bishop himself. But I don't believe in petitions upon such a large scale; nobody reads them, and any number of fictitious names can be put down, as we have seen from the result in Michigan, Ohio, and perhaps other places. But I do believe that if put to the votes of the people at large, quite a majority would be found in favor of opening in spite of the fact that three-fifths of the native American people would be for sustaining the action of Congress. I see by the dispatches that President Cleveland kissed the book and the ministers were made to feel happy by this act of hypocrisy. Well, this country is a long way yet from the road to common sense and honest dealings, and cannot compare with the progress made by France, Italy, and even our own Mexico. With many wishes for your prosperity and the success of Freethought, I am, Respectfully,

LEWIS SCHOEEMOYER.

The Relations of Congressmen to Closing the Fair.

NUNACH, CAL., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In reading over the Congressional report of Sunday opening of the World's Fair published in your paper some time ago, I noticed that the name of our Congressman, W. W. Bowers, was among the 138 non-voting members on the question. I had an idea that a great majority of those 138 members who did not vote on the question were really in favor of Sunday opening but were afraid to be put on record as favoring an open Fair on account of losing the votes of church people, so thought I would sit down and write Mr. Bowers a letter sounding him on the question. In my letter I told him I supposed he was in favor of Sunday opening but did not want to put himself on record on account of losing votes; urged him not to be afraid of losing the votes of a few fanatics; he would gain as many more Liberal votes. As for myself, and I represented forty other voters in my district, we are independent in politics, but we would certainly vote against any man who voted for or favored closing the Fair on Sunday, as it is a step directly in favor of a union of church and state. I received a reply from Mr. Bowers some two weeks ago, and in concluding his letter he said: "To sum the matter up, I am opposed to Sunday closing of the World's Fair by act of Congress." I believe if every Liberal had followed the tactics of the Sabbatarian fanatics and threatened to boycott their representatives politically in case they voted to close the Fair on Sunday, Congress would have given a good majority in favor of an open Fair. You may argue with the average Congressman till doomsday, it has no effect on him. But when you threaten him with a large loss of votes, that will generally bring him around. That is where the Freethought Federation of America will get in its work. There is enough Liberal votes to hold the balance of power in any election if they are properly organized. I noticed in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 18th a letter from Ole Hagen, in which he said he did not believe that the People's party intended to unite church and state. He believed there was enough intelligence and foresight in the party to prevent it. I do not believe it. From the time of the national convention in Ocala, Fla., when a resolution was introduced and adopted unanimously favoring the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday, I have been suspicious of it. In the Congressional vote on the question there was not a single People's party representative who was honestly in favor of Sunday opening. The People's party member of the California Sixth Congressional district, Marion Cannon, is so pious that I would not want to waste any ink on him trying to get him to favor any liberal proposition like opening the World's Fair on Sunday.

H. SANDBERG.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Little Brown Hands.

They drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long shady lane,
Where the quail whistles in the wheat field
All yellow with the ripening grain.
They find, in the thick waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-tipped strawberry grows,
They gather the earliest snowdrops
And the first crimson buds of the rose.
They toss the hay in the meadow,
They gather the elder blossoms white,
They find where the dusty grapes purple
In the soft-tinted autumn light.
They know where the apples hang ripest,
And are sweeter than Italy's wines,
They know where the fruit is the thickest
On the long, thorny blackberry vines.
Those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great,
And from these brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and wise of the land;
The sword and the chisel and pallet,
Shall be held in the little brown hands.

—Orange County Farmer.

Tell the Children the Truth.

Some one has kindly sent us a copy of a paper called the Ram's Horn, and in it is a little story about "Harry's New Year's Caller." It goes on to tell that God is reading everything that old Father Time is writing in his book. That God is glad when the things written are good, and when they are naughty then "God hides his face and is very sorry!" Now, it is no such thing, and that story-writer in the Ram's Horn had better not try to point a moral in any such way. Providing there is a God, does anyone suppose for a moment that he, out of the fifteen hundred millions of people on this planet, is taking note of the childish actions of a little three- or four-year-old boy, as above depicted? If it were so, there are thousands of other ways in which he might be better employed, and watching little Harry is not to his credit. He might look after the starving thousands in big cities, the plotting thieves, robbers, murderers, embezzlers, and prevent their heinous crimes—the grown-up men and women who are constantly getting into scrapes and making trouble for themselves and others. He might exercise his power in averting loss of life by the floods on the land, and storms on the sea, and in many other ways. The fact is there is no evidence that God cares two straws about baby Harry's actions, and Harry's common sense will show him that when he grows up and is able to exercise a little thinking on his own account. There is too much humbug taught children. Be open as the day with them. Tell them the truth, fair and square, and they will respect you all the more for it.

S. H. W.

Correspondence.

NOBILITY, TEX., Feb. 28, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: For the second time I will write to the Corner, which I am always anxious to read. My papa takes the paper, also the Independent Pulpit. Papa and mamma are both physicians. Brother says he is going to be a lawyer, and I am going to teach school when I get grown. We are all going to the World's Fair this winter. I hope to meet some of the correspondents there. There are a good many Liberals down here. Mr. Remsburg comes round here every few years and lectures for us, then the preachers "giv him fits," as the saying is, after he leaves. For fear of the waste-basket I will close.

Your Liberal friend,
DORA MORROW.

[We feel sure Dora will be a good teacher.
—Ed. C. C.]

PERRY, IA., Feb. 28, 1893.

MISS WIXON: I am a boy of fifteen years old. I live in Perry, a town with electric lights and water-works. My grandfather takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I read it, especially the Corner.

There are five churches here, but all the people do not go to church because they are Christians. I have some Liberal books and read all I can. I like to read stories,

I have two brothers and two sisters younger than myself. I go to the school regularly, but seldom go to Sunday-school, because I don't like to go there. I would like to hear from the writers to the Children's Corner. This winter has been very severe here, and the children have had very much sliding and sleighing.

Your Liberal friend, SLADE BEESON.

[We shall always be pleased to get a line from you.—Ed. C. C.]

GOLDTHWAITE, TEX., March 13, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I have not seen anything from this part of Texas, therefore I will write to let the readers of the Corner know what we are doing. I am not going to school at present. Our school was out on the 24th of February; but the schools here do not amount to much. I live within a mile and a half from Goldthwaite, a thriving little city situated on the Gulf of Colorado & Santa Fe railway. The county-seat of Mills county was visited on the 26th of February by a very destructive fire—all of the business part of town, also a number of dwellings. The losses aggregated over $100,000, partly covered by insurance. Well, as I do not go to school now or to church or Sunday-school the Sundays seem very long and lonesome. Well, I will close, my letter is getting so long. I remain,

Your Liberal friend,
ROSA McPHERSON.

GLENWOOD, WASH., Feb. 24, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. Papa takes the paper and I delight in reading the Children's Corner. We have a little brother; he is one year old. We named him Robert Ingersoll. I am twelve years old. At school I study Fourth Reader, spelling, arithmetic, grammar, physiology, and geography. We have one of Mr. R. G. Ingersoll's books; it is his "Forty-four Lectures Complete." Also "The Age of Reason" and "Crisis," by Thomas Paine.

The snow was about three feet deep this winter. The coldest was about 8° below zero. Papa killed a deer Tuesday, and papa, Josie, and I went to get it home Wednesday morning. It was down a big hill down by the big Klickitat river. I am glad you reached your home all safe from your voyage across the Atlantic ocean.

Well, I will close, hoping to see this in print. From your Freethinker friend, EVA L. PARROT.

CORTLAND, O., March 12, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: My parents take THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I can hardly wait to read the Corner. I am eleven years old and go to school every day. I have three brothers and three sisters, and we are all Freethinkers. My papa had Mr. Remsburg lecture on "False Claims" the 1st of March. Christians tore the posters down. Pa offered ten dollars for the detection of the one who did it, but the house was full anyhow. We are going to have Mr. Remsburg here this spring to deliver a course of lectures if we can get him.

Ministers and Christians never ask papa any questions, but they write him letters and send him tracts telling how hard Infidels die, and how happy Christians die, but they never sign their names. Mamma says, to read their sweet stories, death must be a long-looked-for pleasure.

I love my parents and schoolmates dearly, and have a nice time. Pa and ma take us little ones out riding every Sunday that is pleasant. When not out riding pa sits in his office and reads the Bible and Christian books, and Infidel books, too, and among them he has one of your interviews with Moody. He bought a dozen and gave them away. Our people give to the poor, but not to any church. There are a great many Freethinkers in this place but they have been afraid to speak out. But we do not get our living off Christians, and do not care a straw for their likes or dislikes. I wish I could correspond with some little Freethinker. No more this time.

From a Freethinker,

JESSIE PARSONS.

McMINNVILLE, ORE., March 7, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, My Dear Friend: I guess you have forgotten me I have not written to the Corner for so long. It is a very dismal day to-day—it rained a little this morning, and will rain more, I think. We have two young calves and they are as cute as they can be; one of them is white and the other red. I will start to school the 3d of April. I will have six studies—Fifth Reader, arithmetic, grammar, spelling, writing, and geography. It will soon be my birthday. I will be twelve years old the 22d of March. I am going to send you some pressed leaves some time. I would send you some this time but I haven't got any. The snow was three feet deep this winter, and when it melted off it snowed four feet more, and was very disagreeable, but I had a fine time riding the snowshoes. But I would fall down sometimes and get in the snow—although I didn't mind it; it was only fun for me.

Some of the children at school call me a little Infidel, but I don't mind it for I would rather be an Infidel than a Christian. Well, as it is bedtime I will close. Please excuse my writing. Yours sincerely, ELIZA FARMER.

[Why, certainly we remember Eliza, and wondered what had become of her. When they call you names at school, tell them that some of the noblest and loveliest characters that ever lived were called Infidels, and you are proud to be reckoned in with them.—Ed. C. C.]

GLENWOOD, WASH., Feb. 24, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: It has been three years since I have written to the Corner, so I thought that I would come again. I enjoy reading the paper, and especially the Corner, very much. I have just finished reading Mr. Ingersoll's "Forty-four Lectures Complete," and am now reading "Age of Reason," by Thomas Paine. I have also read a few other Liberal books. Last winter I stayed with my grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Jesse, of Barlow, Ore. While there I saw the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" and "The Bible Analyzed." Among the pictures was "The Voice of the Lord God Walking in the Garden." I can remember when I was but four years old mamma was reading the Bible aloud. When she came to the voice walking in the garden I began to laugh. She asked me what I was laughing about, and I wanted to know how a voice could walk.

We live in the mountains, about six miles from Glenwood and ten miles from Mt. Adams. The different kinds of timber here are pine, fir, cedar, and tamarack. There are many varieties of flowers here in summer. I am the oldest of five girls and one boy. I am thirteen years old.

Well, as this letter is getting rather long I will close.

From your Liberal friend,
JESSIE MAY PARROT.

[Jessie and Eva are two bright and interesting girls. It is a pleasure to hear from them.—Ed. C. C.]

CROMWELL, IA., March 10, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON AND READERS OF THE CORNER: In the paper of February 25th Mr. Geo. E. Remsburg's piece on "a convention of young Freethinkers" appeared. Glorious idea! As Mr. Remsburg says, "Why cannot we have such a convention?" We might meet at Chicago during the World's Fair. He says, "If properly managed it would be a credit to the cause of Freethought." I agree with him, but I think it would be more than a credit; as the boys say, it would be a "boomer," and in my estimation would do more for the advancement of Freethought in one week than is generally done in a year. It would be one of the most attractive meetings on the records of Freethought, and one to be remembered as well. Just imagine seeing even one-half of the children we hear from through the Corner and you will have an audience worth more than all the religious denominations put together. You can have the satisfaction of looking into the faces of really intelligent people, not these putty-faced mud-molds seen in most of the church pews.

I think great credit is due Mr. Remsburg for the suggestion of such an idea. Let all those who read the Corner suggest something additional, and not let this be an idea alone, but a reality.

Yours truly, MINNIE M. GEIER.

[Yes, it would be a splendid thing if it could be accomplished. To see our children, big and little, all together—there must be several thousand, all told—would be the occasion of a lifetime. What exchange of greetings! what hand-shaking! what recalling of pleasant memories! It is probably too much to expect, but we do think there should be at the World's Fair a Freethinkers' exchange, or headquarters where believers in Freethought can meet and names be registered.—Ed. C. C.]

ARMSTRONG, IA., Feb. 26, 1893.

MISS WIXON, Dear Madam and Friend in the Cause of Liberty: I was glad to hear that you returned safely from your long and interesting journey. I believe I should like to go on just such a trip.

We had a visit from a Presbyterian minister a few days ago. He had heard we were Infidels and he acted scared all the time he was here. He did not mention his religion, but papa showed him the pope's letter, and they talked about it most of the time.

I suppose you have heard that all the heretics are to be exterminated. We were showing a young Catholic fellow the pope's letter. "Well," he said, "that wouldn't be right." Yes; there are lots of them that think so. But the pope's word is law and they must obey him, even if it is against their own conscience. I am very thankful I am not made that way, and can not help pitying such people. They must have very small minds or else very small individuality to allow themselves to be led so. If we do not watch they will yet ruin our country as they did France; but I hope the people will awaken to their situation sooner than the French did. But we must live in hopes that they will not be so cruel as they were in those days—although there is no telling what they might do if they had the power. Still we must hope—hope will help us drown our fears.

We have many brilliant boys and girls growing up that may be like the diamond, which is a dull stone before cut and polished, and they will help us in our need.

Miss Wixen, I think you are doing a noble work. I cannot say enough in praise of you. I wish we had millions like you. I am sure the world would be better for their having lived in it.

Wishing you a long and happy life, I remain,
Your young Liberal friend,

ETHEL BURT.

[A thoughtful and excellent letter. We thank Ethel for her appreciation of our work. Such kind words help us to continue hopefully in our chosen field of labor.—Ed. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.
Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 1 mo, 383 pp., $1.25.
The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 234 pp., boards, $1.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology. By EDGAR C. BRALL.
Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.
Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	50
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Early subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan of Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, $1.95; paper, $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Greco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 80c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE. STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL. Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	Oxidized, { 10 ounces per doz. }	each $2.50
" "	Oxidized, { 14 ounces per doz. }	" 3.00
" "	Oxidized, { 10 ounces per doz. }	" 3.00
" "	Oxidized, { sectional gilt, 10 ounces per doz. }	" 3.50
Orange "	Oxidized, plain bowl, { gilt "	" 2.75
Sugar "	" satin " { gilt "	" 3.00
		" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description. Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bibles, Gold Pens, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.,

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Mother of Harlots; a Synopsis of Popery, as It Was and as It Is. By William Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. The object of this book is to expose popery, acquaint the people of the country with the dangerous machinations of the church in the United States, and warn them against giving it any countenance or support. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNTAIN PEN, 10c.

A splendid writing instrument. Hard Rubber Holder, patent continuous feed, durable gold pen, perfect finish, writes 10 pages at one filling. To advertise our line of 100 necessary articles we send sample pen with large catalogue post-paid for 10c., 3 for 25c. BIG BARGAIN VALUE! Catalogue free.

R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO. 65 Cortlandt St. N.Y. City.

3teow12

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing." In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

DID JESUS RISE FROM THE DEAD?

The evidence for the resurrection is in this book carefully considered, and found wanting. It ought to convince every Christian of the untruthfulness of this alleged miracle, for it is certainly one of the best essays ever written on the subject. In paper, 25 cents.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continence even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

THE ELIMINATOR; or Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets. By Richard B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.D. Cloth, pp. 441, portrait of author, price $1.50.

Dr. Westbrook, ex-president of the American Secular Union, has here written a very interesting book. It is full of historical statements that are trustworthy and informing; for its writer is a gentleman of extensive and accurate scholarship. It is, as a battery of attack against superstition, nearly complete; the extensiveness and variety of the field covered will be seen from the chapter titles that we will give farther on. And it is plain in language, understandable by the most unlearned reader; the author saying:

"I am prepared to have certain dilettanti sneeringly say, 'This book is of no critical value.' They are so accustomed to 'scholarly essays' which are 'poetically sentimental and floridly vague' that they have little respect for anything else. The book is intended for the common people, and not for the professional critic."

"The Whole Truth" is the title of the first chapter. This chapter proclaims the necessity of telling the whole truth on all subjects. Of the apprehensions that so doing will weaken morals and governmental order it says:

"These foolish fears show a great want of confidence in human nature, and falsely assume that moral character depends mainly upon an unquestioning faith in certain dogmas which, in point of fact, have no necessary connection with it. The statistics of crime show that a very large majority of those who have been seized by the strong arm of the law as dangerous members of society are those who most heartily believe in those very dogmas of theology which we are warned not to criticize, though we may know them to be accretions of ignorance and superstition, and that some of them have a natural tendency to fetter the essential principles of true religion and that higher code of morality which alone can stand strong under all circumstances. It is safe to affirm that ninety-nine hundredths of the criminal class believe, or profess to believe, in the dogmas of the dominant theology, Romish and Protestant; which are essentially the same."

Of the next chapter, "Sacerdotalism Impeached," a good idea may be had from the following four of its chief conclusions:

"(1) The clerical fraternity claims to be more than a mere profession. It is essentially a caste, a 'holy order,' borrowed from the ancient paganism, but somewhat modified by Judaism and a perverted Christianity."

"(2) From such a caste or order the whole truth is not to be expected, especially when the truth would show the order to be an imposture. The assumptions of peculiar sanctity, official pre-eminence, functional prerogatives, and special spiritual authority make such a hope unnatural and quite impossible."

"(3) The church system, with its tests of orthodoxy, its ecclesiastical handcuffs, and its worse than physical thumb-screws, puts an end to all independent thinking, and results in an enforced conformity inconsistent with intellectual progress and the discovery and full publication of the whole truth."

"(4) The pecuniary stipend upon which professional preachers are dependent has a demoralizing and degrading influence, so that the doctrinal teaching of the pulpit should not be received without hesitation and distrust. The common law excludes the testimony of interested witnesses, and though modern statutes admit such testimony, the courts take it for what it is worth, but always with many grains of allowance. 'A gift perverts judgment,' and self-interest may sway the convictions of a man who intends and desires to be fairly honest."

With the third chapter, "The Fabulous Claims of Judaism," the doctor enters on the task of following up the Christian religion from its very embryo, and showing point by point how it was formed.

"Moses and the Pentateuch," the next chapter, continues this labor. It convincingly shows the falseness of the popular Sunday-school claim that Moses wrote the Pentateuch, and indeed exposes the untrustworthiness of that piece of literature altogether.

"Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism" is a chapter that will open many a church-blinded eye to staring wideness. Parts of the Bible which readers have heretofore passed over with no conception of their real meaning will after perusal of this chapter be vested with a curious significance. It is supposed by those who have had no chance to obtain other than the ordinary Christian instruction, that the Jewish persons and tribes who are in scripture represented as adhering to Jehovah worshiped no other deities than him. But the fact is that they, like other peoples of that age, were prone to the adoration of a good many other objects. Serpent-worship flourished. Phallic worship, or adoration of the sexual organs and functions, prevailed largely. These worships possessed respectively systems of symbolism as elaborate as the Jewishistic. The references in scripture to their symbols and functions are here noted and explicated. The work thus begun is carried farther in the next chapter—

"Astral Keys to Bible Stories," which shows that fables concerning the sun and the other heavenly bodies are the secret groundwork of many Bible tales now wrongly taken literally.

In the succeeding chapter, "The Fable of the Fall," the legend of the fall of man is discredited, with considerable learning and satisfactory reasoning. The comment is added:

"The conclusion is inevitable that if the fall of Adam is a fiction, then the entire system of evangelical theology is based upon a fiction; and the fruit must be natural to the tree—a fictitious tree can only bear fictitious fruit. Orthodox theologians, especially of the logical Presbyterian stamp, realize that if they give up Adam and Eve as progenitors of the entire human race, they give up the very foundation-stones of the 'redemptive scheme.'"

The fall of Adam is really the pivotal principle in dogmatic theology of the orthodox variety. If the entire human race are not descendants of a real, genuine, historical pair miraculously created (a pair almost divine in perfection), and who by disobedience fell from their high estate, and by their federal or representative character involved all their countless descendants by natural generation and descent in the same ruin—if these things are not true, then what is called the evangelical scheme is based upon a fiction, and is to be so treated, regardless of the effect upon other theological doctrines. The dogma of a sudden, special creation of a perfect man is not sustained by the facts of history nor the science of paleontology. Scientific investigators find man, so far as the evidence of his remote existence can be traced, very nearly allied to apes; and there is abundant evidence to show that man has been improving in every respect as years and cycles of years have rolled away. It is thus absolutely demonstrated that the history of our race shows the rise or ascent of man from a very low estate, instead of his 'fall' from a condition of high perfection."

Chapters which are equally valuable, but over which space limits enforce us to pass, are: "Search for the 'Last Adam,'" What is Known of the New Testament, The Drama of the Gospels, the Ideal Christ, Jesus and Other Christs, A Reverent Critique on Jesus, A Few Fragments, Blood-Salvation, and The Things That Remain."

When we come to this last chapter, "The Things That Remain," we are, very unwillingly, compelled to discard our strain of unqualified approval. For the first of these things that Mr. Westbrook conceives to remain after criticism has done its utmost, is God. To be sure, this God whom no fellow can make budge is not so strictly personal, so absurd and baneful, a God as the orthodox deity. He is, says the author, "not a God. The passage in the New Testament (John 4: 24) admits that 'a' is an interpolation. There is no personality in God in a sense which implies limitation. God is spirit, and so spirit is God. Even Professor Haeckel, the German materialist, says: 'This monistic idea of God, which belongs to the future, has already been expressed by Bruno in the following words: "A spirit exists in all things, and no body is so small but contains a part of the divine substance within itself by which it is animated." The words God and religion have been so long associated with superstition and priestcraft that many liberal thinkers have a repugnance to both. But we must not let these perversions of sacerdotalism rob us of good words. We can conceive of God as the Over-all and In-all Spirit of the Universe. That spirit is causation, and matter, its palpable form, is one of its manifestations. We know that Nature's method of making worlds and brutes and men is by a uniform system of evolution, taking millions and billions of years to carry on the work to the present time, and that it is likely that it will take millions more to perfect it. When asked what spirit is, we answer, We do not know; neither do we know what electricity is, nor can we answer one of a thousand questions that come up regarding the subtle and occult qualities of matter. We see no difference between the Unknowable of Herbert Spencer and the Unsearchable of Zophar in the book of Job. The Unknown Power is the Noumenon, the absolute Being in itself, the inner nature of force, motion, and even of conscience. . . . It may be said that this is 'begging the question' by assuming the existence of an infinit God. But we deny that it is an assumption in its last analysis. What is known as the scientific method leads logically to the conclusion that there must be something that theists generally name God. You may call it 'protoplasm,' 'molecular force,' the 'potentiality of matter,' or even matter itself; and when you tell us what these words mean we will tell you what we mean by 'God.' Possibly we all mean the same thing. We know of the existence of God, as we know other things, by palpable manifestations. . . . We affirm no more of God than materialists imply of matter, and we endow him with no attributes that they do not virtually ascribe to matter. So far as assumption is concerned, both stand on the same ground. They, indeed, call things by different names, but mean about the same thing. What theists prefer to call 'the works of God,' materialists call 'Nature,' 'cosmic laws,' 'spontaneous generation,' 'the potency of matter,' 'conservation of energy,' 'correlation of force,' and 'natural selection.' . . . It is a rational proposition that something must have been before what is called creation. There must have been an intelligent potency, and that power theists call God. Materialism in its last analysis ascribes to matter all that theists ascribe to God. It gives matter an eternal self-existence—endows it with an inherent infinit intelligence and an omnipotent potency. It spells 'God' with six letters instead of three. It makes a God of matter, and then denies his existence!"

Certainly this is all very interesting. It must be so, we should say, to Atheists as well as to Theists. Atheists searching for succinct and sane statements of the arguments for the existence of a God, that they may know just what they have to fight, will scarcely be suited elsewhere better than in Mr. Westbrook's pages.

The second of these stubborn Things that Remain is religion. The writer says:

"We use the word religion as it is used by Cicero, in the sense of scruple, implying the consciousness of a natural obligation wholly irrespective of what one may believe concerning the gods. Religion in its true meaning is the great fact of duty, of oughtness, consisting in an honest and persistent effort to realize ideal excellence and to transform it into actual character and practical life. Religion as a spirit and a life is objected to by none, but is admired and commended by all. It is superstition, bigotry, credulity, and dogma that are detestable. The religious instinct has been perverted, turned into wrong channels, made subservient to priestcraft and kingcraft, but its basic principle remains forever firm. If it could have been destroyed, the machinations of priests would have annihilated it long ago. Give yourself no anxiety about the corner-stone of religion, but look well to the rotten superstructures that have been reared upon it. Its professed friends are often its real enemies. . . . That there is a general drifting away from the old formulas of religious doctrine everybody knows, and yet there is more practical religion in the world to-day than in any previous age. It does not consist in fastings and attendance upon ecclesiastical rites and ordinances; but it takes the form of universal education, of providing homes for friendless infancy and old age, of the prevention of cruelty to children and even to brute animals, of the more rational and humane treatment of lunatics, paupers, and criminals, ameliorating the miseries of prisons and hospitals,—in short, of elevating and improving the condition of universal humanity. These truly religious works do not depend upon any particular statement of religious belief, for all sects and persons of no sect are equally engaged in them. Charities would not cease if all creeds should be abandoned or should be so revised as not to be recognized by the disciples of Calvin and Wesley, and if every priest in the land should henceforth give up the mummeries and puerilities of the Dark Ages. Religion, as the 'enthusiasm of humanity,' the cultivation of the virtues, and the practice of the highest morality growing out of the inalienable rights of man in all the relations of life, is a fixed fact. It is a natural endowment, coeval with humanity in its development and progress, and is as absolutely indestructible as manhood itself."

The other Things which Remain are the scriptures, which "remain for just what they are" and no more; faith in the continuity of life, and faith in the doctrine of present and future rewards and punishments. These survivals from the iconoclastic hurly-burly are supported by arguments some of which seem to us to have weight, and others of which we deem fallacious.

We esteem the book not without its uses as missionary literature. It will please and convert some Christians who would be repelled by more sweepingly destructive works.

JANET SMITH. A Prcmiscuous Essay on Woman. By W. Stewart Ross. London: Stewart & Co. Cloth, pp. 220, price $1

W. Stewart Ross, or "Saladin" as he is more widely known, in this volume muses over woman—over the average, every-day woman especially. This common type of woman of our daily encountering, he dubs Janet Smith; and this incarnation of femininity he follows through the various phases of her life with penetrating observation and sage reflection, accompanied with sentiment gentle and sweet. Those who have enjoyed the choice treat of perusing the former works of this very noticeable writer, must remember the peculiar and delicious flavor of his style. In this book they will be gratified by the same relish of eloquence and glamour of poesy. The cogitations, too, are wise and profitable.

A passage of no little beauty is the following:

"Nothing which I have seen forged on the anvil of creation is at all to be compared with her [Janet]. I know the joy and the beauty of the woodlands when spring first hangs fringes of tender green on the branches of the larch, when the wild hyacinth makes the air heavy with fragrance, and the bracken bursts from the mold in as yet undeveloped bulbs. I love the nooks where, up through the waving foliage, you have a glinting glance of the blue banner of God, which, at night, he dyes black and waves over the universe, emblazoned with the escutcheon of Divinity, the one solemn moon, and the myriads of mysterious stars. The breezes play anthems on the tense strings of the harp of the soul. The mavis and the merle sing the only order of music I understand, and the murmur of the burn [brook] is the bass to the sylvan symphony."

"He did well who situated Eden among trees. He did well who ordained religious worship to take place under the oak. For, of a verity, deity's own temple is the forest; his Gothic columns are the whispering pines; the fretted vaults of his crypt are of intertwining honeysuckle, hazel, and holly; the beech and the birch join branches, and whisper in psalms as they form the long-drawn aisle. The sound of the stream tumbling among the boulders is the Te Deum on the organ of Nature. The incense is the breath of the primrose. The rock, gray and green with lichen and moss, is the altar: the fresh wet fern thereon seems as if around it glowed a nimbus from heaven; the dull century-plant has caught a glow which is not of earth; and the blue-bell melts away into the floral expression of a holy hymn."

"And, even here, the insatiable longing of the soul is not satisfied. Even here the cry is: 'O give, Eternal God, for my soul is void. Here is Eden: but where is Eve?'"

"Our prayer is granted. Eve is given us—the source of all our joy, the fount of all our woe. Eve is given us—no flower of the earth, no star of the sky, so beautiful as she. Her name, even if it be Janet, rings itself into the rhyme and rhythm of our being. The street looks the statelier because she lives in it; the field is greener where she trod. The red rose never was so lovely till you saw it in her hand; the white rose never was so beautiful till you twined it in her hair. Hours abridge themselves into moments when she is present; hours spin themselves out into eternities when she is away. The sun never ruled by day till now, and the formerly unheeded moon is an adored goddess, rich with the Love and Night. You recline at the gate of Aidenn, slumbrous with the perfume, drunk with the nectar of flowers. Stale Terra, the Earth, has been struck out of the stellar muster-roll, the hum of its cities has died away, and, in your dreamy ear, fall only the refrain of the anthems which the angels sing, and the murmur of seas lapping on the shores of worlds where sorrow is unknown. Her soft, warm arms are round your neck, your breast is garmented with the tumbling wealth of her wine-hued hair; dreamily hover over you rosy-tinted nymphs in samite of moon-lit gossamer. You sleep in the hush of heaven on a bed of lily and asphodel."

The author's Antichristian views in frequent places mingle with the strain. For instance:

"The Christian Janet has been an ill-educated, soft-headed, and hysterical dupe of priestcraft. Long since that accursed snake would have perished from the earth, had it not, for warmth, insinuated itself into Janet's bosom. The big python at the Zoological Gardens is rolled up in a blanket; the viper of priestcraft lies at our fireside rolled up in a petticoat. The priest is the fiend—

"Inhumanly ingenious to find out
New pains for life, new terrors for the grave."

But he has seduced Janet's simple trust, and she regards him with a sacred reverence and awe such as she does not extend to the grandest layman that ever lived.

"If we have to thank Janet for the birth we owe her—a doubtful boon—we at least beg to be excused from thanking her for, in our childhood, twining that viper round our heart; for not having brains enough to comprehend the mischief she was doing, and for, in the sacred depth of a mother's love, teaching us, unconsciously, the virtues of ignorance, mental lethargy, bigotry, and hate. How insidious the viper is at first to the child, as it basks in that child's simple and wondering credulity, and consecrated by a mother's holy love! The mother reflects not that, one way or other, it has made her the silly, brainless thing she is, the dupe of the priest and the slave of her husband. She reckons not that the son to whom she introduces the viper of Romanism, Presbyterianism, or the like, will have to pass through life an unconsciously cringing and abject helot, as far as the higher mental and moral manhood are concerned; or he will have to stand forth like a Laocoon, and, between the altar and the sea, wrestle with the monster serpent of Priestcraft, his valiant thews battling with the crushing coils, with much spiritual travail and anguish and agony."

Much time never passes without the grim glare of animosity which glows from Saladin's face when he is assailing evils, and the smile of rapture with which he contemplates his fancy's air-drawn scenes of tenderness and joy, both giving way to the twinkle of humor unctuously droll. Behold:

"Countless millions of prayers have gone up to Christ, and countless millions to Osiris; and the two have answered alike. There is a grand equality among the gods of all nations and ages, as far as the answering of prayers is concerned. Isis has answered just exactly the same number as Juno and Mary and Frigga. A more practical example of praise and prayer than the 'Christ to keep' specimen is, while I write, flaring from the boardings of London beneath the picture of a happy, red-haired girl who has just gone to bed in conscious safety from the inroads of 'Ye bugge that walketh by night.' The noli cemulari runs—

"Of all the powders made by art
There's none to equal Keating's;
From bugs and fleas it frees each part
Of blanket, rug, and sheetings;
And, when in bed I lay my head,
His praise I'll keep repeating.
There's not a man in all the world
Who's down on fleas like Keating."

"Never to speak of such big jobs as the averting of plagues, wars, and earthquakes, all the gods ever prayed to put together have never yet killed a flea. Gods help only those who help themselves. They practically say: 'Get twopenny worth of Keating's insect powder and stop bothering us about your fleas.' Mr. Stead some time ago, in his Review of Reviews, calculated that, during the first fifty years of his life, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, had been prayed for 890,000,000 times in English churches, exclusive of the times he had been prayed for by private individuals. The burden of the prayers was that his Royal Highness be 'endowed with his [that is, Jehovah's] Holy Spirit, and enriched with heavenly grace.' And, after this immense parson-power praying for him for over fifty years, Albert Edward is—just the Prince of Wales, better than some and worse than others of us poor wretches who are accounted hardly worth the praying for. If 890,000,000 prayers at enormous expense and concentrated on one point produce no effect, it is surely time to set about utilizing the incalculable volts or horse-power of hitherto misdirected energy."

Among the books awaiting our review are Dr. Foote's new "Human Wonders, Freaks, and Diseases," and others equally useful. Next week they will find themselves served up to the world.

INFIDEL DEATH- BEDS.

By
S. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherton, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Babe-lais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ROBERT G.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Babel and Babel, Faith in Faith, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for "blasphemy." Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyze the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERATION.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Conder, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents.

CIVIL RIGHTS SPEECH.

With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE.

A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9 x 13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22 x 28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

A LAY SERMON.

On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

(A home picture.) 50 cents.

" COLONEL INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 13 x 24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7 1/2 x 13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT.

An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents.

INGERSOLL ON McGLYNN.

Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED.

Paper, 3 cents.

BIBLE IDOLATRY.

Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1883. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE.

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1892. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Banquet at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings. This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,337 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This is, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly calendered, and richly tinted, the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it. As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "Tributes," that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Elizer Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Beside these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In the more elegant styles of binding it is eminently suited for presentation purposes, for any season or occasion.

Prices.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Also Analyzed. $1.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

THE NOTED SPECIALIST. For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J. And say you saw this advertisement in The TRUTH SEEKER. Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABLETS.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

WAS JERRY'S JOSS AN INFIDEL?

Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain: they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the Lord.—Jere. xxiii, 16.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.25.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.

Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the
Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from Life. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterin, and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the finest dressed kid strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regular goods of equal quality sell for 50c. to 75c.) Comprises 3 pockets, which we GUARANTEE no one can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzling. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction Guaranteed. Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Challenge of 1000 useful articles, 25c. 3 for 60c. 6 for $1.00, $1.50 Doz. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO, 65 Cortlandt st., N. Y.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and The Truth SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

The Chinese may resist arrest on May 5th.

HELENA FETTER, of New York city, has been crazed by religion.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., is fining tobacco-nists and candy-dealers wholesale for Sunday traffic.

The railroads have reaffirmed their intention to reduce fares to the Exposition only twenty per cent.

On the 23d ult. the pope gave a ceremonial audience to the princess of Wales and her sons and daughters.

The jubilee celebration of Leo XIII. brought in gifts of $1,250,000, and jewels, plate, and other valuable articles worth $1,000,000.

The American Bible Society will distribute New Testaments at the Columbian Exposition, and has already prepared 250,000.

NEAR Nacogdoches, Tex., last Sunday, two factions of a colored congregation fought in church with stones, club, knives, and pistols.

BESIDES the Sunday-school exhibits in the World's Fair grounds, a model Sunday-school building for the design of which a prize of $500 has just been awarded, will be erected outside the gates.

ANTONIO ASTORA, an Italian living in Johnstown, Pa., attempted to remove his trunk and valise from one boarding-house to another on Sunday, and was arrested and fined $4 for desecration of the Sabbath.

On the 27th ult. the New York police found the factions of the colored Zion Baptist church so far from being enabled by their religion to keep peace among themselves, that the profane aid of several officers supported by Infidel taxes was necessary.

At Chicago Rev. Cyrus Teed's "Heaven" or "College of Life" has begun injunction proceedings against the municipality for shutting off water to compel payment of water taxes, which the "Heaven" claims exemption from as a religious establishment.

THE Russian extradition treaty, which had been kept secret by the officers of this government, has been so far revealed as to permit our learning that the most dangerous clause is one promising the return of forgers. As a passport can be obtained by a political suspect only by forgery, he cannot leave Russia without becoming amenable for this crime.

THE conclusions of the persons at Chicago conversant with Fair matters is that "Sunday closing is a fixed fact." Those interested in the finances lament that "Sunday closing will seriously reduce not only the total attendance but the average week-days." They regret that Congress should have given $2,500,000 "hampered by the costly condition of Sunday closing."

THE success of Oscar Wilde's new play may occasion another attempt to reproduce his drama "Salome," which was refused a license by the British lord chamberlain in his capacity of dramatic censor, because of the doubtful propriety of representing personages from the scripture on the stage. "Salome" is founded on a New Testament episode, introducing Herod, John the Baptist, etc.

THE New York city Central Labor Federation learned that one of its component bodies, the Anti-Sweating Union, was entering on an alliance with Dr. Parkhurst's society, whereupon it resolved, "That we strongly censure the act of the Anti-Sweating Union in joining hands with Dr. Parkhurst's organization, because we think it hostile to organized labor, being composed of church-members, capitalists, and other disreputable people."

JAMES HAMILTON, a negro, at one time a preacher, was executed by electricity at Sing Sing, N. Y., on the 3d, for wife-murder. He had always been a devout Methodist, but several days before death embraced Catholicism, and devoted his remaining days to praying, reading the Bible, and conferring with his priest. He would pray aloud continuously, in a muttering tone, anon raising his voice to that of a preacher's exhortation. His last hour was spent with two priests. He advanced with them to the electric chair, carrying aloft a small crucifix, all three repeating a prayer. When he was seated Father Creeden leaned over his shoulder chanting "Save me, Jesus!" When the priest was given the signal to withdraw, Hamilton repeated "Save me, Jesus!" till silenced just as the "e" had left his lips and before he could sound "J." The crucifix in his right hand was clenched so tightly that it nearly broke.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 15. { PUBLISHED WEEKLY. } New York, Saturday, April 15, 1893. { 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 Per Year.

"When thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth" — Matt vi - 3^d — for peradventure thy left hand would find out what an infamous humbug you are!! — Watson Heston.

CHRISTIAN CHARITY.—POUNDS FOR THE PARSON, BUT CENTS FOR THE POOR.

THIS IS THE HOUSE THAT JOE BUILT!

HE HAS NAMED IT "The Santa Maria."

'Tis located at 674 East Sixty-third Street, Chicago, and is within NINE MINUTES' walking distance from the GRAND ENTRANCE to the World's Fair!

Entirely of brick and stone; permanent structure; stands alone; all outside rooms; new and neat; select neighborhood; high and dry; good plumbing; every modern improvement; $1.00 to $2.00 a day; NO DEPOSIT REQUIRED; under owner's management; only 43 rooms; HOME-LIKE! Address

JOSEPH H. GOODWIN, proprietor.

Why not engage rooms now? They're GOING!

Just Out.—25 Cents—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshipped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 895 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BRALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS,
HISTORY,
STATISTICS,
AND
OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

36 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
3 " The Church Robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
3 " Thanksgiving.	1 " The Lord's Instruments.
3 " Sabbath Laws.	25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14 " Children and the Church.	1 " The Church and Slavery.
10 " Woman and the Church.	2 " Priests and Politics.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	4 " Ireland and the Church.
4 " Studies in Natural History.	3 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
3 " The Bible and Science.	1 " The Uses of the Cross.
35 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9 " Persecutions of the Church.
4 " The Atonement Scheme.	12 " Some Allegories.
4 " The Lord and His Works.	3 " Heaven.
30 " Prayer.	6 " Hell.
1 " The Creeds.	7 " Miscellaneous.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of readings matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utility of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles awry."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastids; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]
Price, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.
Price, $1. Order at once.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor Study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Other Newspapers WITH The Truth Seeker.

Any of our readers who desire a New York weekly political paper can obtain one of the following in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER at reduced rates:
Tribune (Republican) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER. $3 50
Tribune (Republican) semi-weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER. 4 25
The Sun (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER. 3 50
The World (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER. 3 50
THE ARENA and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year both for $6 00
With large picture premium with the Arena, 6 50
THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year for $6 75

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 15. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 15, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - APRIL 15, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

A Spurious Document.

We have received several inquiries as to the genuineness of the "oaths" printed in a Western paper and purporting to be the vows taken by priests, bishops, and cardinals when entering into office. In regard to them we can only say that we are not in a position to know. They sound very Jesuitical and Romish, but whether they are the real thing or the concoctions of priest-hating Protestants we do not know.

Our attention has also been several times called to what purports to be a papal order to massacre the heretics of this country next September, and our opinion is asked as to its genuineness. In this case we have the decided opinion that the order is spurious—if for no other reason than that the pope wouldn't dare to issue it. The order is long, but it has excited so much interest that we reproduce it:

"ENCYCLICAL LETTER OF HIS HOLINESS, LEO XIII., By Divine Providence, Pope.

"To the Jesuits, Patriarchs, Primates, Archbishops, and other Ordinaries in Peace and Communion with the Apostolic See of the Entire World.

"For the Temporal Reign of the Future Popes in the Land Discovered by Christopher Columbus, known as the United States of America.

"Venerable Brethren, Greeting and the Apostolic benediction, Leo, bishop and servant of the servants of God: Be it remembered by posterity that he who is omnipotent in heaven and on earth hath confided his Church, which is One, Holy, Catholic, and Apostolical, and out of which there is no salvation, to one man upon earth, namely, to Peter, prince and apostle, and to the bishops of Rome, his successors, with full power to rule over it.

"This pontiff alone hath been constituted head over all nations and kingdoms, and invested with power to destroy, to separate, to scatter and subvert, to plant, build up, link together by mutual charity, in order to preserve the faithful in the spirit of unity and surrender them whole and entire to their savior.

"In order to fulfill the duties imposed on us by the divine goodness, we labor incessantly to maintain the unity of the Roman Catholic religion which God hath visited with heavy conflicts to the end that his own may be tried and for our correction; but the numbers and powers of the wicked have so far prevailed that no portion of the earth has escaped their attempts to propagate their infectious and detested dogmas, being supported, among others, by that slave to every species of crime.

"The American Republic, under Protestant rulers, is with the worst enemies of the Church where security is offered: this republic having seized upon the lands discovered by Christopher Columbus, a Catholic, and usurped the jurisdiction and authority of the supreme head of the Church, the United States is filled with obscure heretics.

"The Catholics have been oppressed and the preachers of iniquity established.

"The sacrifice of the mass, prayers, fastings, abstinence, celibacy and all the rites of Catholicity have been ignored by Protestants.

"The United States has been filled with books containing the most flagrant heresies, of which the Protestant version of the Bible is chief. And not content with adopting its false and impious doctrines, proselyting has been resorted to to turn the Catholics from the one true Church. The whole Roman Catholic hierarchy and priesthood of the world have been deprived of their livings by the Protestant heretics of America.

"Courts have been set up and rendered decisions in ecclesiastical cases, and the people forbidden to acknowledge the authority of the Roman Church or to obey its ordinances and canonical decisions.

"Naturalization oaths have been demanded in order that the subjects of the true Church might be made to subscribe to the United States Constitution with its impious laws and nefarious teachings, to compel them to renounce the true authority of the Catholic pontiff; to disacknowledge him to be the head of both church and state, whereby those who have persevered in the faith have been compelled to suffer spiritual afflictions.

"The Catholic bishops and clergy have been deprived of vast lands, and this is known to all nations and so clearly proved that all the palliation, argument or protest on the part of the United States is unavailing.

"We find, moreover, that impiety and crime have increased; that persecution against the religion of Rome has been redoubled by the Protestants dwelling in the United States of America.

"With deep sorrow we are now constrained to have recourse to the arm of justice, and are obliged to take action against a nation that has rejected the Pope as head of all church and state governments.

"In virtue, therefore, of the divine authority by which we have been placed on the supreme throne of justice, an office so superior to our capability, we do, in all the plenitude of apostolic power, declare that all heretics and the encouragers of heresy, together with all adherents, have incurred the sentence of excommunication, and they are hereby cut off from the unity of the body of Jesus Christ.

"Moreover, we proclaim the people of the United States of America to have forfeited all rights to rule said republic, and also all dominion, dignity and privileges appertaining to it. We likewise declare that all subjects of every rank and conditions in the United States, and every individual who has taken any oath of loyalty to the United States in any way whatever, may be absolved from said oath, as also from all duty, fidelity and obedience, on or about the 5th of September, 1893, when the Catholic congress shall convene at Chicago, Illinois, as we shall exonerate them from all engagements; and on or about the feast of Ignatius Loyola, in the year of our Lord, 1893, it will be the duty of the faithful to exterminate all heretics found within the jurisdiction of the United States of America.

"As the circulation of this bull by sending to all places would become a matter of difficulty, it is commanded that copies of it be taken and signed by Jesuit notaries, subscribed by a bishop, and sealed with the seal of our court. They will then have the same power and efficacy as these presents here.

"Given at St. Peter's, Rome, on the 25th of December, 1891, the fifteenth year of our pontificate.

"LEO XIII., Pope."

To one of our friends who sent this here we have written that we believed it to be a fabrication of the fanatical Protestants who hate Roman Catholics simply because they are Roman Catholics—on religious grounds exclusively. The so-called encyclical was published in the Loyal American, and the editor of that paper thus maintains the genuineness of his find:

"MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Feb. the 28th, 1893.

"PETER H. BURT, ESQ., Dear Sir: Your favor of the 23d at hand. The encyclical, like most secret diplomatic documents, is hard to trace. There are several points which go to prove its authenticity. It has been circulated around priests all over the country and was never denied until it was discovered by Protestants and published by them. It was sent to the high prelates, to be transmitted by them to the priests; but was intended to be kept absolutely secret until the time appointed to commence operations. It came into the possession of a gentleman whose business takes him among the high officials of the Jesuit order. He called together several friends, who assisted him in translating it. Several copies were made and certified to by those present, and the original document taken to President Harrison. To give the name of the man who secured the document would be to sign his death warrant. I do not know his name myself—nor do I wish to. Priests all over the country are preaching the doctrines promulgated in the 'encyclical.' Then, again, the fact that I have published the letter every week for two months and have not been prosecuted ought to convince the most skeptical that the thing is authentic. Should it become necessary to prove the authenticity of the letter in court, the name of the gentleman referred to above can be made public and the facts proved.

Sincerely yours,

"(Signed)

EDWARD J. DOYLE, Editor."

In spite of this, however, and also because of it, we still doubt that the pope ever sent out any such document. A moment's reflection is sufficient. The Catholics are numerically inferior to the "heretics." They would stand no chance in a war of extermination. The pope knows this well enough. He is a politician, and has worldly sense. Times have changed since the massacre of St. Bartholomew, and none know it better than the keen politicians of Rome. Moreover, the order has a medieval flavor, showing it to be an imitation of ancient orders. That it is done by Protestants is shown by their constant reference to themselves as heretics, and their Bible. Some fanatical fellow, with as much bigotry as the pope, and as little sense as the Catholics themselves, has evidently made this encyclical, as the Book of Mormon was made, by paraphrasing other documents. To one conversant with the tactics of the Roman church the paper seems a most absurd humbug. The Roman church will not attempt any butchery in this country. She will gain her ends by using the ballot, and through bargains and deals with the politicians. At the ballot-box is where she will sooner or later have to be fought.

Religion of Criminals.

Dr. Cesare Lombroso, professor of legal medicine in the University of Turin, publishes in Europe the results of his investigations with regard to the physiological basis of criminality, and in this country Dr. Arthur MacDonald supplements it with the results of his investigations among criminals. In the book published by the latter is this chapter on religion among criminals, which shows, what every observer already knew, that religion is no restraint upon the viler passions of humanity:

"While some of the chiefs of the bands ridicule religion, the majority of criminals believe in it; many of these make a sensual use and accommodation of it for their personal advantage. To a priest who was exhorting repentance, a criminal asked 'How many hotels he would reach before arriving at Paradise, as he only had six cents to spend on the route.' The criminal's God of peace and justice is a benevolent guardian and an accomplice.

"According to Lombroso* the free men are more frequently in the churches; but Lombroso adds that 61 per cent of the violators and 56 per cent of the assassins frequent the church.

"Ferri found only 1 who professed to be an Atheist out of 200 assassins; 7 of the others showed an exaggerated devotion; 5 were strong in the faith; the rest, while scoffing at the priests, affirmed that they believed in God. One said, 'He does not depend upon me to be a good man; it is God who gives this sentiment.' Out of 2,480 who were tattooed, 238 had religious symbols. In their slang, God is the great 'Mek'; the soul is 'the perpetual'; in Spanish, the church is called 'the sainted. These facts point to a belief in God and the immortality of the soul. The Bohemian murderers think they obtain divine pardon if they wear the shirt a year which they

	Criminals. (500)	Normals. (100)
Regular attendance at church.....	46 per cent	57 per cent
Irregular attendance.....	25 "	13 "
Absence.....	38 "	29 "

had on at the time of the murder. A criminal, having killed 12 soldiers and a priest, believed himself invulnerable, because he kept on his breast a consecrated offering. Some bands place sacred images in the woods and groves, where they keep candles burning. A criminal after strangling 3 women was said to be the most assiduous and sincere at church and the confessional. Three criminals refused point-blank to eat on Good Friday, and when the director of the prison inquired of them about it, they replied: 'What! Do you take us to be excommunicated?'

"A woman criminal, who had strangled a little girl, on hearing her death sentence, turned and said: 'Death is nothing. The essential is to save the soul, as I have saved mine; I mock at the rest.' A notorious criminal of Milan, who had been condemned for 34 murders, attended mass every day; he preached Christian morality and religion continually. A young man of Naples, who had killed his father, had asked of a madonna for the force necessary to commit the deed. He said, 'I have the proof that she aided me, for at the first blow of the club that I gave, my father fell dead; and I am extremely feeble.' A woman places the poisoning of her husband 'under divine protection.' In urging another on to crime, one said, 'I will come, and I will have God inspire thee.' Another, having stolen to found a chapel, continued to steal in order to furnish it. After strangling his mistress, a criminal gave her absolution 'in articulo mortis,' then sold the proceeds of his thefts to enable him to have mass said.

"At the moment when setting fire to the house of her lover, a criminal said, 'May God and the Holy Virgin do the rest.' Numbers of prostitutes pretend to be irreligious in the presence of their lovers and companions; but they are far from being so.

"In the ordinary life of the criminal, indifference is the rule. Religion does not seem to prevent vice and crime very much among them; it serves sometimes as a pretext to one or the other. Spanish prostitutes place above their beds the Child of the Virgin, like the sinners of the respectable world who go from the church to their paramours. While in many cases this is hypocritical, it is more often, in the case of criminals, frank and naive. Thus it is that religiousness is unfortunately and too often allied with the baser instincts of man, and such glaring contradictions become social ulcers."

If this had appeared a little sooner, it would have made a fitting closing chapter in the "Crimes of Preachers," which proves that Protestants as well as Catholics in this country are no less pious and vile than in Europe.

In reply to several inquiries, we may say that the book mentioned last week—"The Creation of God"—is published at this office. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. We shall make further notice of it, and put it in our lists.

The Christian Advocate is, or pretends to be, astonished that two ministers of the gospel have been found to be crooked. When Dr. Buckley reads the "Crimes of Preachers," a copy of which has been sent him, he will probably burst with astonishment.

Another warning against the prayer habit: "ABLENE, KAN., March 27.—R. W. Abraham Bear, a Dunkard preacher, dropped dead while offering prayer in the pulpit yesterday." Why will ministers persist in running such risks! Prayer—particularly in pulpits—and cigarettes are killing many.

J. E. Remsburg held a debate at Caddo, I. T., April 6th, 7th, and 8th, with Rev. M. A. Smith, presiding elder of the Methodist church in the Choctaw Nation. The Choctaw courthouse was crowded each night. The Methodist brother proved a very "weak sister" in debate, falling far below the average Campbellite parson in this respect.

Mr. Remsburg to Mr. Putnam: "My Dear Putnam: 'I am glad to hear that you are writing a book—'Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie.' I like the title, and it gives me infinite pleasure to underscore it." The second installment of this book is in this week's issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER. We shall not, however, wait for the weeks to roll by, but put it in type ahead of the paper and print it right away.

The Philadelphia presbytery is going to give the babies a chance as well as the perfectly good adults. It has adopted this clause for the "Confession of Faith": "Infants dying in infancy and all other persons not guilty of actual transgression, are included in the election of grace and are regenerated and saved by Christ through the spirit; so also are all other elect persons who are not outwardly called by the world." Our readers must figure out their own probabilities for themselves. Catechising himself in the solitude of his den, this Editor confesses himself a-goner. The publication of Heston's pictures would alone fix him.

President Cleveland has appointed as consul to Vienna Max Judd, of St. Louis. The Austrian newspapers cabled an inquiry as to his religion, as the name is Jewish. To a reporter Mr. Judd stated that he is "a Freethinker, a member of the Ethical Culture Society, and a great admirer of Prof. Felix Adler." All of which speaks well for Mr. Judd as an official, a scholar, and a gentleman. President Cleveland has made another sensible move in telegraphing to the United States Legation in St. Petersburg to stop all negotiations relative to the extradition treaty between the United States and Russia and to endeavor to have the whole matter referred back to him.

The New Jersey lawmakers in their infinite wisdom have enacted a law legalizing pool-selling on horse races, which, we believe, is a form of gambling, and therefore pernicious for the losers. The unco guide of the state, mostly ministers, held a mass meeting to protest, and A. Comstock, whom the New Haven Palladium alludes to as a "reformer of unsavory reputation," was called to speak at the gathering, and referred to one of the promoters of the bill, James E. Kelly, as the "boss gambler" of New York, when some one in the gallery asked: "Of what nationality is Kelly?" "Why, Irish, don't you know?" was Comstock's answer. There were a few hisses, when Comstock added: "And Kelly is a disgrace to the Irish race." "Any Irishman is better than you are," said a voice in the gallery. "You are no gentleman; there are Irish priests here and Irish laymen. They are respectable and you are not." We think that on this occasion we can score one for our Irish friend. He possesses a faculty, sometimes as rare as happy, of telling the truth in plain if homely language.

That religion is a disease, as Mr. Putnam claims, seems to be evidenced by the many cases of lunacy developed at "revival" meetings. One of the saddest of these occurred in Farmdale, Ohio, but a month ago. The revivalist was of the hell-fire type, and succeeded in stirring up the emotions of his hearers violently. A Mr. and Mrs. Gleason were regular attendants at the meetings. About a year ago their son was drowned, and the loss made inroads upon the parents' mental health, and they were in ripe condition to be carried away by religious excitement. Their minds gave way, and they are now raving mad. When put upon the train to be taken to the asylum the couple fought their attendants savagely and had to be strapped to the car seats, all the time shrieking and talking about religion in general and the meetings in particular. A day or so after Mr. Gleason and wife became insane, another attendant of the meetings went crazy. The residents of the neighborhood then concluded it was time for the evangelist to go and go he did, though somewhat against his will.

Revivals often leave queer effects, but one of the most curious results of this form of insanity that we have noticed is reported in the Spirit Lake, Iowa, Beacon. Charles Dickens and Sir Walter Scott, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, have been declared to be writers of books unfit to have in a public library! The Beacon gives the details: "Richland township has maintained a most excellent public library for a number of years, to the manifest benefit of her intelligent people. Recently there was developed a fear that some of the books were not of a proper character for circulation, and a committee was appointed to make examination, and clothed with authority to destroy all works of a questionable character. The library is kept in two sections. The gentlemen whose duty it was to inspect the section on the west side 'O. K'd' the entire equipment. The other portion, however, fared differently. According to reports a number of books in the vicinity of one hundred and fifty were consigned to the flames, as being too vicious for perusal. Among the condemned were Scott's and Dickens's works, and other standard books of equally high character. The committee did hasty and lamentable work." Mr. E. R. Sully, who sends us the report, says he has not yet learned whether the men composing the committee could read or write, but thinks it not probable.

The State Republican, of Lansing, Mich., views Helen Gardener, her fame, and her best book in this way: "Some of the world's best writers have been women, but only after long years of probation have they received much honor among men, but not so in the case of Helen H. Gardener, who for the past two years has attracted more attention in America than any other author. Her first book, 'Men, Women, and Gods,' was issued only three years ago, and is already in its thirteenth edition. It is a collection of essays written by her with an introduction by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, and is the most startling work of the kind since the issue of Paine's 'Age of Reason,' and is all the more remarkable because written by a woman who dared to put herself on record for that which she believed was right. Miss Gardener is a petite little woman, with snapping brown eyes, weighing less than one hundred pounds. She is a great student of human nature and is a great believer in heredity, and the result of her researches in that direction have been so valuable as to be consulted by men of science. She is an insanity expert, and recently visited Schweinfurth, the false Christ, at Rockford, Ill., and after an interview with him unhesitatingly pronounced him insane and self-deluded. She is a brilliant conversationalist, and carries the conviction that she believes intensely everything she says."

A Cleveland preacher recently undertook to find out why the people did not rush to the churches, and sent out a circular asking, "Are you a Christian?" and "If not, why not?" The following are some of the replies:

"I think you don't believe in it yourself."

"I'm not a Christian because I believe in truth, not fiction; and because of the unequal distribution of justice by the Christians' God to his children."

"No, sir; because the Christian church is in opposition to most reforms and does nothing to emancipate the people from the oppression of capital."

"No, I'm not, because I cannot reconcile the doctrine of man's free agency with the doctrines of hell, and God's omnipotence, justice, and mercy."

"Because the truthfulness of the Bible has been disputed by science."

"Because the church is not in favor of equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

"I'm not because I do not believe in the divinity of Christ. I think he was only a good man and a reformer."

"Christians as a rule, when employers, are greater oppressors of labor than so-called heretics. Christian and hypocrite have almost become synonymous terms."

"In the future life I should have to live with Rockefeller, Sage, Gould, Wanamaker, and other fleecers of their fellow-men. I don't want to associate with them."

"Because I do not believe in the Bible which preaches Christianity. It upholds polygamy, slavery, and moderate drinking, to all of which I am opposed."

And still the minister is not satisfied!

Last Sunday the number of visitors to the grounds of the World's Fair, which had previously been fifteen thousand, was swelled to thirty thousand. The buildings were closed to visitors, but everyone looked over, through, and under everything in sight. Many a "Sunday closer" in sentiment remarked on the quiet and orderliness of a Chicago Sunday crowd. Sunday closing was freely discussed. Among the many plans to make the Sunday-closing clause less oppressive to the laboring men were those overheard at the ticket-office. An iron-molder said that his employer had agreed with the men to let them work two nights in the week and to have Mondays off. Another, a brass molder, who would be mistaken for a young lawyer, said his employer had agreed to let the men work Sundays and have Mondays for the Fair. Instead of quitting at noon Saturday, they would quit work Sunday at noon. One wage-worker made the statement that twenty thousand of his fellow-workmen had agreed to work Sunday and have Saturday or Monday off, so that they could visit the Fair. But alas, poor workingmen, so piteously straining to slip the yoke and enjoy and instruct yourselves, are there not laws to suppress your Sunday industry, and parsons to press those laws, to the end that their pews and purses shall be filled? Yes, it is to be apprehended that this drama of Man's Struggle for Liberty—ever, and ever played again—will end with the so familiar scene of the preacher triumphant.

There is in Bulger, Pa., a girl who although able to repeat English words is incapable of knowing their meaning, and has her own words for objects and animals. She is an interesting study in philology. About three years ago the fame of a certain Catholic priest as a divine healer began to spread beyond the confines of Pittsburgh, Pa., and reached the little village of Bulger. It was said that he could cure the worst cases of sickness by simply touching the afflicted part of the body with the hands. The Kaufmans were devout Catholics, and the father decided to take Minnie to the priest to have her cured. They received this answer: "The child can be cured in three days. In that time she will be able to talk English as well as any other child of her age." Then the assistant explained how the cure was to be procured. Father and child were to go to the chapel before sunrise and remain on their knees for three hours. The rest of the day was to be spent in prayer. On the evening of the third day the divine healer would receive the child in his sanctum and touch her tongue with a piece of bone from the body of St. Anthony. He would then command: "Arise and speak!" and if at that moment the child's faith in God, St. Anthony, and the divine healer was perfect, her cure would be complete, and she would go forth speaking English as any other person sound in body and mind. The father was very much awed, and he resolved to give to the church fund all the money he had with him, except sufficient to take him home, but the next moment all his hopes were shattered. The assistant added: "And the charge is $50, payable in advance." The poor man turned pale, says the Sun, which relates this, but he said not a word. He went away, and the hand by which he held his child trembled. This exorbitant demand of the priest for compensation for services utterly worthless, is but one of the many extortions and humbuggings of his brotherhood throughout the country. That they are possible is a stain upon our civilization and our page in history.

In the East.

News and Notes.

The brilliant weather did not last my whole stay at Fort Fairfield. A little of the real lion of March put in an appearance after the debate, and Thursday, March 30th, was a stormy day. However, Liberty Hall was well filled and I gave a lecture on "Evolution and Creation" to the Fort Fairfield Liberal League. Mr. Baker has fitted up the hall in fine style and it makes a pleasant home for the league. It was built originally by the Salvation Army with great éclat, and it was supposed that Jesus would prevail. But as he had no bank account and debts accumulated, the building came into the hands of R. L. Baker, and he dedicated it to Freethought. I suppose the Christians do not see any "providence" in this arrangement, but it is certainly an indication of progress. When all churches come to the same end and with merry bells "ring out the old, ring in the new," there will be large additions to the world's happiness.

I hope I shall be able to return to Fort Fairfield, for I have not found anywhere more Liberal enterprise than here. I think from this point a pretty large influence will circulate and the whole of Maine receive an onward impetus and Aroostook will be one of our shining landmarks.

In spite of the lion in it, which roared a bit on Thursday, on Friday, the 31st, March went out like a lamb, and as I left Fort Fairfield in the afternoon with the good-bye of generous friends who will keep our campfire blazing on this Eastern front, the sky cleared off with gentle colors, and while speeding down the Aroostook valley, the river, the white banks, the gleaming hills, and dark woods made a beautiful picture changing in the golden light of the descending sun. Through the sunset palace I pass, and the vast starry portals of night, and arrive at Vanceboro at 12 o'clock, where in a somewhat sleepy frame I have to wait an hour for the Montreal train. It doesn't take me long to fall asleep when once I am on the home-stretch, and I am not awake until the morning sun is up in the sky. Looking forth I find we are journeying through vast forests, and scarcely a house is to be seen, and the Moosehead lake spreads in desolate expanse into the wide hills, emerging from which in snowy effulgence is Mount Katahdin, monarch of them all. It is a wild and grand scene for many miles. At Loony Pond a whole company of lumbermen plunge into the car. They are through the season's work, and sing and dance with the exuberance of frontier life, and make quite an interesting panorama along with the vast and solitary regions through which we thunder on. By and by we reach the majestic St. Lawrence, and towns glitter upon our view and finally Montreal appears with its quaint and solid ranks of houses and towering cathedrals. Capt. R. C. Adams is at the station and I am made welcome to this northern city, where the Freethought Club has flung its flag for many a year.

A good night's rest and the sparkling Easter Sunday, with its pagan memories, far surpassing the modern Christian myth, bursts upon my belated vision. With Captain Adams I take a look at the great cathedrals and churches, ornamented with flowers and ringing with music. One cathedral holds thirteen thousand people and every seat was occupied, and the priests like a lot of hustling old women were passing the contribution-box, and the pennies rattled with the organ peals. It was a curious sight to see this vast crowd bowing down before the candles and the chanting priests. It was not much better in the Protestant churches. There was finer music, less ceremony, and more eloquence—and as a consequence empty seats—for religious crowds always go where there is the least bit of sense, and the biggest show. The church is a circus, and the clown is the most attractive part of the service.

Montreal is overwhelmed with churches. There are one hundred and fifty churches, with immense cathedrals. Montreal is "snowed under," you might say, with ecclesiastical pomp. The value of church property in this city is over thirty millions. The value in the province of Quebec, with a population of one million, is $150,000,000, with an income of $13,000,000, and no taxes are paid. Moreover, a part of the taxes paid is for the benefit of the church. In fact the papal church in this province has more power and wealth, according to the population, than in any other part of the world. It has a lien upon the very land upon which Montreal is built, and derives an income from rents. Protestants are compelled to pay taxes for parochial schools. There is one priest to every twenty-five families in the province, counting the non-Catholic families. Only one-tenth of the people can read and write. In Montreal only about 30,000 out of 150,000 are English. The French rule with a rod of iron. Besides the ordinary taxes, a tax of from $100 to $500 is levied upon every business man—a tax upon his business—and this tax is driving hundreds into bankruptcy. So much for the religious city of Montreal.

However, there is a sturdy Freethought element, and for years it has held the fort right under the shadow of these mighty churches. Captain Adams, president of the Freethought Club, has given lectures almost every Sunday evening, and to crowded houses, and there are a few among the best citizens of Montreal who support him in his brave pioneer work.

I lecture to a full house on Sunday afternoon on "The Rights of Man," and it was decided to secure a larger hall for the next Sunday, and Victoria Armory Hall is the place. Two years ago the Freethought Club was refused the use of this hall, but now it is considered that our money at least is orthodox and the hall is at our service. This is a straw which shows an onward-moving tide.

Sunday evening I made an experiment at Point St. Charles. Mr. Chisholm, a member of the club, has built a hall at this place—the Fraternity Hall—and he gave the use of this hall for a lecture. This is among the shops of the Grand Trunk railway. It was decided to venture into this untried territory, and it was quite a success. The hall was nearly full and the lecture, on "Liberalism and Christianity," was well received. I lecture there again next Sunday. So I found Montreal a pretty good working-ground in spite of the vast preponderance of the churches. The Freethought Club, with its reading-room, library, lectures, etc., has maintained the spirit of liberty and has done great things, considering the field it has occupied. I do not know of any of our allies who have had to confront a more dark and dangerous foe than here in this province. It is rich, powerful, determined, and relentless.

Another sign of progress is the establishment of the Montreal Sunday News, under the management of Mr. Granville. This is a somewhat revolutionary affair. The very fact of a Sunday paper is startling. It is a new departure for this city of churches and is a disturbing element, simply as a newspaper. Under the charge of Mr. Granville, who is a thorough student, an advanced thinker, and a brilliant writer—a member of the Freethought Club—it is bound to be a progressive and influential journal. Of course it is not and cannot be distinctively a Freethought journal. It is a newspaper impartially conducted for all readers, Christian and non-Christian alike. It is for news of all sorts, but in purpose it will ever be for fair play, for justice to all, for truth, and for the education of the people. It is a sparkling journal, and so far has been a success, and its constituency is constantly growing.

Mr. B. Marcuse, secretary of the Freethought Club, has just published a bright little pamphlet adapted from the German, entitled, "The Holy Roman Curiosity Shop." Mr. Marcuse is an excellent German scholar, and out of the latest German researches on church relics, etc., he has compiled a most valuable summary. He is to add to this another lecture on "The Vicegerency of God on Earth" and republish the pamphlet, the first edition having been exhausted. Those who wish to know the almost utter idiocy of religious faith will find its demonstration in this book; but Mr. Marcuse tells me that he dare not publish all the facts he discovers of the folly and filth of the church. Those who study the original sources understand this. Mr. Marcuse's book is reliable and is a useful campaign document.

The Revue Canada is keeping up a bitter struggle with the priestly power. It shows plenty of courage, and will win, I think. It is a life-and-death struggle, and the exposures of church-craft and corruption are making a great sensation.

Montreal, April 8, 1893. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

To My Liberal Friends.

I propose to publish a pamphlet, the opening part of which appears in THE TRUTH SEEKER this week, entitled, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I consider that we are drifting into a most dangerous religious tyranny and war. It is not simply church and theology that we must oppose, but it is religion at the root of these, which is what I have defined it to be. We must understand religion, and for the safety of the race we must destroy religion. I want this book to be widely read. It is important. Religion as the foe of humanity is not sufficiently understood. We do not realize its terrific nature. I have written this book because I feel the necessity of speaking the plain truth. I challenge contradiction of my statements. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for this book. Circulate it. Price, 25 cents per copy.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The World's Fair From a Freethinker's Standpoint.

In May we shall begin the publication of a series of letters which will be of great interest and beauty. Samuel P. Putnam will write them from Chicago, and they will be about the World's great Fair, which opens in that lively and booming town on May 1st. Mr. Putnam's description—as everyone who knows him knows—will not be the commonplace matter of the geniusless boiler-plate correspondent, but the impressions made upon a cosmopolitan poet by the aggregation of samples of the world's progress in mechanics, art, literature, knowledge. The letters will undoubtedly be big and broad, wide and deep—a picture and a panorama, a history of human advance from "that man in the dug-out" to the racial subjugation of the forces of nature—so far as these forces are subdued. The letters will be essentially a Freethinker's view of the Fair, what it shows, and what it foreshadows, and we venture to say that among the hundreds of correspondents at the Fair, and the thousands of letters to be written by them, there will be none like the writer of the Freethought views and his descriptions. Readers of his "News and Notes" will agree with us in this estimate, we know.

We shall be obliged to our friends if they will call the attention of their friends to this announcement and suggest to them that a six months' subscription will insure them the receipt of these letters, which will alone be worth many times the cost of the paper.

Communications.

Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie.—(Continued.)

DEDICATED TO THE AMERICAN CONGRESS WHICH FOR THE SAKE OF RELIGION HAS STABBED LIBERTY TO THE HEART.

The simple desire for happiness is perfectly right and innocent, and when pursued in an equable way without making, as Dickens says, any fuss about it; taking it as it comes with a sort of wise carelessness, letting it flow like a crystal stream in regardless beauty, and not damming it up into a huge motive power which constantly and distinctly appears—pursued in this fashion, not directly, but indirectly, the desire and the attainment of happiness are a perpetual benefit. Reason, philosophy, and science thus regard happiness. It is incidental to human effort and not its absolute goal.

Of course we must be happy; but the best way to be happy is to spend but little thought about it. We labor and are happy; but if we labor to be happy we are very apt to be miserable. Happiness is so subtle a spirit that it evades direct search and drops upon the unconscious mind.

The method of religion is not the method of reason, science, and philosophy. Religion accentuates the desire for happiness, fondles it, cultivates it, and makes a supreme desire. It becomes more than a desire—it becomes a purpose—a conscious effort, an ultimate aim. Religion not only wants happiness, but eternal happiness, an assured happiness that even time cannot destroy. Religion is a searching after happiness, and the being who is supposed to grant happiness becomes the object of passionate worship. The cry of religion is, "I want to be happy," and that is the curse of religion, because in its effort after happiness it crushes and it kills, as the wild beast crushes and kills in its efforts to satisfy hunger. All that religion has ever done in this world, with its beliefs, its worship, its rituals, its temples, its sacrifices, its wars, its persecutions, for the attainment of happiness, has been a tremendous failure. It ever will be a failure, misery instead of bliss. Religious people are not only unhappy in themselves, but they make everybody else unhappy. Religion becomes by the very pursuit after happiness a most solemn affair, a melancholy procedure. Even the most excruciating sufferings are invented and endured in order that the exquisite bliss of the final reward may be greater. What has not been done for religion's sake? Its votaries have lived naked in the desert, have given up every earthly comfort, have plunged the knife into their own flesh, have walked on hot irons, have whipped their bleeding bodies, have stood in one posture for years on the bare sands or the fiery column, have poured by the million into the battle's cruel front, and all for the sake of happiness, "eternal happiness." In no other way can one explain the awful phenomena of religion. At the heart of it is an exaggerated desire for happiness, for a happiness so secure and so brilliant that the fluctuations of time cannot disturb its eternal glory. Most of the enormous miseries of man have been created and endured through this desire for happiness. What a satire on the folly of human nature. The very desire for happiness has been the fruitful source of unnumbered woes. How much better off man would have been had he never made so much fuss about his "soul's salvation." If he had taken things as they are, with moderation, accepted the happiness which follows after, not sought that which is before and ever fitting, what a paradise he might have attained. At any rate, what an immense amount of suffering and error would have been avoided.

The simple desire for money is not only innocent, but beneficial. Everyone should desire money. It is a good thing. One cannot be without it, and should labor for it. But the desire for money should be moderate. It should not be an all-absorbing passion. Money in itself is a blessing, but when made the goal of all human effort it becomes a curse. Who is more contemptible than the miser? Who is a greater fool? Who so misses the very essential value of money? To live and dream and hope with only money in view; to bend every energy to its acquisition, is to destroy the very purpose for which money exists. What is the use of money to the miser? It is absolutely useless, and in fact, it ceases to be money. The miser's greed is for money, and yet his very greed when he gets the money destroys its value as currency—that is, its real value as money. The very desire for money changes money from coin to a useless burden.

The religious man is simply a miser—the miser of happiness. By his very miserliness he loses the thing he wants. The natural desire for happiness becomes unnatural. Nature ceases to gratify his enormous passions and he resorts to that which is above and beyond nature. He resorts to God and to Immortality. Only these can satisfy his inordinate craving. Time for him is bankrupt. Eternity alone can redeem his claims. Hence he sacrifices the pleasures of this world, the happiness that is attainable, the every-day joys and comforts of earthly existence, for a transcendent bliss beyond the grave. As the miser in his greed never gets the real value of money, so the religious man in his greed never gets the value of the life that actually is. He wants to be so happy that he isn't happy at all.

The belief in God is therefore a purely selfish belief. People believe in God because they want to believe in one who can make them infinitely happy, and for no other reason. The intellect does not demand God. God explains nothing. The pure intellect abhors God, even as nature abhors a vacuum, for to the pure intellect God is nothing; as the creed says, he is without body, parts, and passions. And what has the pure intellect or science to do with such a nonentity? It is the heart that craves for God. When the desire for happiness becomes supreme, illimitable, then nothing can satisfy that desire but a belief in God, and hence the passionate belief in him—the most selfish belief of man, and so the most cruel belief. The belief in Immortality, as a Theistic belief and orthodox belief, is also an intensely selfish belief, and a cruel belief. As the very essence of religion is selfishness, so the very essence of its two grand doctrines is selfishness, and hence the cursed nature of these doctrines and the cursed nature of religion. And its voice has ever been, "Unless ye hate father and mother, brother and sister, wife and child, yea and your own life also, ye cannot be my disciple." Such is the imperious command of this colossal egotism. What is its God but the reflection of the believer's own self—that which is most dear and beautiful to him—seated on the throne of the universe? What is Immortality but the prolongation and triumph of this inner self above and beyond the wrecks of time? God is the universality of self-immortality—that is, orthodox Immortality is the eternal victory of self. And it is no wonder that these two beliefs have filled with bloodshed and horror the pages of history; for no hungry beast will fight for food as man will fight for what he considers absolutely necessary to his happiness.

I believe that history, science, a knowledge of human nature, a study of religious literature, an analysis of religious sentiment in all its various manifestations, will justify this definition of religion as the most selfish, and the most cruel, passion of which humanity is capable. That it is most cruel who will deny? What makes it cruel but its selfishness? That it is potent who will deny? but what makes it potent but the desire for happiness that is in it? That is why it so long endures, although science condemns it. This is why it survives in spite of all its horrors and follies. This is why it is so attractive when no dangers threaten it. This is why it is so furious when it is attacked, why it persecutes, why it imprisons and murders, why it opposes change and progress, new truths and new ideals. It is not a mere doctrine, but a desire, and if a desire then it must be a desire for happiness, but not a simple, natural, moderated desire, which is wisdom and humanity, but an exaggerated, unnatural, all-absorbing desire, whose fruit is inhumanity, ignorance, superstition, slavery, worship, blind faith, suffering, poverty, war, and every curse imaginable. There is no wrong and no injustice of which religion has not been guilty. It has increased a thousandfold the natural misery of mankind. It has not diminished any actual suffering. It has not added to the real happiness of this world any more than the miser has added to the real wealth of the world by his morbid craving. Religion is nothing but selfishness emphasized, crystallized, doctrinized, institutionized, made into a church, a creed, a sword, a dungeon, a rack, a whip, a scaffold. Religion gave the hemlock to Socrates. If the record be true it was religion that hounded Jesus to his death for no other reason than that he was an infidel and a blasphemer, and when afterward the religion of Jesus triumphed it was the bloodiest conqueror of all. It was religion that hurled the wild monks of Africa upon the beautiful naked body of Hypatia, and the rude multitude tore her to pieces with the fury of a mad beast, because she represented that glorious philosophy which is the eternal opponent of religion. Religion destroyed the magnificent library of Alexandria, for books laden with the treasures of human thought and the destroyers of religion. Religion poured a million people upon devoted Palestine, who perished for the sake of heaven and not for the benefit of humanity. In their eyes the victorious cross was the symbol of eternal happiness. Religion invented the ghastly Spanish Inquisition. Was it not better to torture men to death than suffer a soul to be lost? The horrors of the French Revolution were the result of religion, for did not Robespierre say that if "there were not a god it would be necessary to make one?"

Religion has been simply and solely evil, and when the secret of religion is revealed we understand why it has been so incessantly devilish. It is the master egotism of the human heart and it will abide nothing in opposition.

An orthodox preacher, known to be very radical in his views, was asked by a friend of mine why he continued in the pulpit contrary to his intellectual convictions. He pointed to his little child—a lovely girl that might charm the heart of any father—and replied: "For that little girl's happiness I would not only lie, but I would steal!" A father's love is beautiful, but how cruel and unjust it might be. That father's love was a religious love, not a generous, reasonable, moral love; it was a selfish love that would make him a criminal if need be. Such is the spirit of religion. It is a tremendous passion. It is devotion to what the mind thinks most beautiful and dear. But in its very devotion it becomes a hideous madness. As that father for his child, so religion for the sake of the entrancing object of its adoration, would lie and steal and murder—for this it has done all through human history. I challenge the production of one single line in all religious literature that breathes anything but selfishness. Religion says that man is "to glorify God and enjoy him forever." That means that one is to glorify self and enjoy self forever. God is not objective but subjective. Born of the ego, he reflects the ego. I do not care how beautiful the idea of God may be it is still self, and therefore the very dearest thing for which the self can strive.

I never heard an orthodox prayer yet that was not purely selfish. I never heard an orthodox sermon that was not an appeal to pure selfishness. I never heard a Christian hymn that was not the very outbreathing of absolute egotism.

While writing this essay I attended an orthodox revival-meeting, and the first hymn sung with the usual fervor was the following:

How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear;
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fear.

It makes the wounded spirit whole,
And calms the troubled breast;
'Tis manna to the hungry soul,
And to the weary rest.

Dear name, the rock on which I build,
My shield and hiding-place,
My never-failing treasure—filled
With boundless stores of grace.

Jesus, my shepherd, savior, friend;
My prophet, priest, and king;
My Lord, my life, my way, my end,
Accept the praise I bring.

I would thy boundless love proclaim
With every fleeting breath;
So shall the music of thy name
Refresh my soul in death.

I leave it to anyone who understands human emotion if this is not the expression of a purely selfish emotion. Where is the self-sacrifice in this hymn? There's not a bit of it. It is the very passion of egotism. Substitute "Almighty Dollar" for the name Jesus, and not a sentiment would need to be altered. The same emotion would burn in the heart. The only difference is that Jesus in the long run gives more happiness than the dollar. If the dollar could guarantee as much glory hereafter as in this world Jesus would be nowhere. Jesus has the advantage of eternity, and hence his superior attractions. This is a model Christian hymn, and yet what is it but the outpouring of gratitude for favors received and flattery for favors expected? Is there anything in that hymn that a courtier wouldn't say to his king?

There is self-abasement in religion, prostration in religion, humility in religion, but not self-sacrifice. Every posture, every attitude, every voice, every lowly act of religion, is for itself. It is for the glorification and enthronement of self. Religion is not a curse because of its abuse. It is a curse because it cannot help being a curse. Every horror that it has made is its legitimate fruit. It is the terrific activity of the most subtle and overmastering egotism of which human nature is capable, a selfishness so enormous that the theater of this world is not sufficient. It must invent a God and Immortality as the only possible means to satisfy its illimitable cravings. How the passion of the miser, of the gambler, of the drunkard, of the glutton, sinks into insignificance in comparison with this gigantic passion that in its vast desires sweeps beyond "the flaming bounds of space and time." No wonder that religion when aroused is such an insatiable destroyer. No wonder that it desolates this fair earth to save its supernatural heaven. No wonder that it is a curse, always a curse, and to-day a curse.

Having shown that religion is a curse, I now propose to show that it is a disease. It might be a curse and still be a natural and universal characteristic of human nature, and therefore permanent; and we could only comfort ourselves with the maxim, "What can't be cured must be endured." But religion is not natural and universal. It does not belong to healthful human nature. It is a disease. It therefore can be got rid of by mental hygiene.

It is said that man is a religious animal. I deny this. Man is not a religious animal any more than any other animal is religious. Religion is the misfortune of man, not a necessity. Man is not born to be religious, any more than he was born to have the cholera.

Religion is not universal. The religious feeling itself is not universal. As a matter of fact it exists in a very small minority of the human race.

Religion has always drawn the sword, and forced itself upon the world, and this is why it has seemed to be in such a big majority. It is as if an insane man should thrust himself upon a whole community and compel everyone to be insane or act as if they were insane.

I grant that immense numbers of mankind are cowards and hypocrites, and this is why religion so far has won the day.

The really religious people have forced the cowards and hypocrites under their banner.

Cowards and hypocrites are not necessarily religious. They only pretend to be. I claim that not one in a hundred is really religious. The human being is naturally secular. Religion is the aristocracy of fanaticism. A few fanatics have compelled the majority not only into submitting to its dictates but into actually believing that they are religious themselves when they are not so.

Who among the people that we meet with are religious? How many talk religion as they talk politics or literature or science? How many read religious books? The Bible is covered with dust even in Christian homes. In a letter to a friend Charles Sumner said he himself was not a religious man, and could not realize what the religious feeling might be. Sumner was honest, and he represents a very large number of people who are non-religious, and yet they dare not be as frank as Sumner. To confess to a lack of religious feeling seems like confessing to a lack of some natural quality. Such is the power of fanaticism even upon intelligent minds. Religion is something that is put on. It is a profession, an artifice, an imitation, a veneer. In civilized society religion is ignored. If one is really religious and tries to live it and talk it, he becomes a nuisance. By common compact religion is avoided in ordinary conversation. Religion is a supposition, and it is impolite to make it anything more than a supposition. One is supposed to be religious, but no questions must be asked. One can say Good morning and How do you do? and How are the folks? etc., but it won't do to say How's your soul this morning? You would laugh at one who should make the inquiry, and if he persisted you would be indignant.

If a man is religious, he will naturally express himself in that way. It is absurd to say that a truly religious man would keep his feelings to himself. It is the very nature of religion to break out like the small-pox.

There is no "golden silence" in religion. It is noise all the time. Religion never "lets concealment, like a worm in the bud, feed on its damask cheek." It is voluble. It runs to tongue as easily as it runs to ears. Tongues and ears are indicative of true religion. Both are characteristics—lengthwise and all. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear," is a religious injunction. Also "Preach the gospel to every creature" goes with it. Religion could not subsist without preaching any more than it could subsist without believing. Religion would die if it had to keep still. Therefore it is patent that every religious man and woman can be counted. Religion will manifest itself in some sect, however small. The statistics will therefore gather in all the religious people of the country.

The membership and attendance of all the religious sects and churches in this country, of every name, only number a little over twenty-one million. Therefore the non-religious people of this country are in a majority of over two to one—admitting that all the twenty-one millions are religious people. But are they? It will be easily admitted that a large number of hypocrites and cowards are in this twenty-one millions. All the hypocrites and cowards are with the church. I think that universal experience will testify that one-quarter of the human race are hypocrites and cowards. Therefore, fifteen millions of the inhabitants of the United States are hypocrites and cowards. I do not think this an exaggeration. This leaves out of the twenty-one millions only six millions that are honestly religious. I think this a large proportion. I am sure that there are not more than a million really religious people in this country. The country could not stand any more than that number, when we consider what a rampant bigot the truly pious man is. Our safety lies in the fact that only a few are religious, as it lies in the fact that only a few are insane.

These figures clearly prove that religion is not universal. It is partial. It is not natural; it is artificial. It is not health; it is disease.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Legend of the Sabbath-Breakers.

"Moreover ye know what befell those of your nation who transgressed on the Sabbath day. We said unto them, Be ye turned into apes, driven away from the society of men. And we made them an example unto those who were contemporary with them, and unto those who came after them, and a warning to the pious" (Koran, cap. II).

THE STORY.

At Elath, on the Dead sea shore,
Some Hebrews dwelt in days of yore,
Where, tempting them to sin and shame,
On Sabbath morn the fishes came—
Great schools, a fisherman's delight—
Only to leave on Sabbath night.

A REFLECTION.

Alas, who never felt or knew—
Be he or pagan, Christian, Jew—
A strife arise between his creed
And his rebellious human need?

A REMINISCENCE.

Lest I should seem to boast herein
Over those ancient Hebrews' sin,
Let me confess that even I
Hav felt the same temptation nigh.
'Twas Sunday morning, bright and clear,
A babbling brook ran very near—
Some fifty paces (maybe more)—
In front of father's cabin door.
A spring, this rivulet beside,
Cool, pure, and bright, our hut supplied.
There now this Sabbath morning fine
(I think my age was then but nine),
With pail in hand, I sought the spring
From whence a fresh supply to bring.
But as upon the stream I look,
Two nice large fishes in the brook,
As if asleep, lie side by side,
While curling ripples round them glide.
Our parents wondered much that day
That I at home could wish to stay.
"What! not to church! What do you mean?
Why would you stay? What hav you seen?"
Then I, thus being urged and pressed,
To them my wicked thoughts confessed:
How I designed, when all was clear,
To take my father's fishing spear,
And, all alone—what triumph mine!—
To capture those two fishes fine.
I had expected nothing less
Than to be chid for wickedness;
But no; my father simply smiled
Upon his wayward, erring child;
His spear down from its brackets took,
And bade me show him to the brook.
With two deft, quiet thrusts and true
Those fishes at my feet he threw;
Then to the church we all repair,
Among the earliest comers there.
Then, after service—oh, what shame!—
To dine with us the preacher came;
"Gave thanks" for those same fishes fine,
But half his thanks to God seemed mine.

THE STORY RESUMED.

But those of Elath by the sea
Were not more wicked sure than we.
There would those schools of fishes stay
To tempt them every Sabbath day,
But ere the unforbidden dawn,
Lo, all the finny tribes were gone!
At length, grown hungry, desperate,
Some slyly caught and dressed and ate;
But afterward cut sluices wide,
With gates to hold the fish inside,
So that their only Sabbath work
Was just to giv the gates a jerk.
But then the others, when they saw
Their neighbors thus transgress the law,
In vain by speech and force essay
To stop this work on Sabbath day;
But, growing still more obstinate,
God's holy day they desecrate,
Till David cursed them, when to apes
Did God transform their human shapes.
Thus they endured this plight three days—
This transformation and disgrace—
And then a mighty wind arose,
Swept all into the sea—all those—
And then subsided in repose.
And never since hav human shapes
Been metamorphosed into apes;
And never since can fishes say
Precisely which is Sabbath day;
(In fact the creedists cannot tell
To save their precious souls from hell);

And ever since that ancient time
No miracle coudemns the crime;
And now like buzzards faith must eat
Some most obnoxious ancient meat.
Harlan, Ia., March 28, 1893. J. K. P. BAKER.

Answers to Prayer.

The Youth's Companion of February 9th has a little article containing some extracts from the last sentences of the journal of De Long, commander of the Arctic expedition of 1879, which are a good supplement to the claim of Mr. Moody that he saved the steamer Spree by stilling the storm and quieting the Atlantic ocean with prayers. Jesus contented himself with experimenting on the little lake of Galilee. He never thought of trying his hand, or rather his mouth, upon the Mediterranean sea, much less upon the Atlantic ocean. That shows how much bigger man Mr. Moody is than the "humble Nazarene." Peter said there was only one name known in heaven or among men whereby ye can be saved; but there seems to have been another route to heaven discovered recently. "The world's great evangelist" has published a book entitled, "The Way to God, by D. L. Moody." The capitals in the name of God and Moody are about the same size, which shows the modesty of the man, seeing the man furnishes his own autograph and the God does not. At any rate Mr. Moody is not guilty of the egotism which Mr. Greeley charged against Joseph Lane, that "he spelled god with a little g and began his own name with a capital."

But I digress. De Long and all his men perished. This is the pathetic way in which the Companion tells the story:

"The journal was found behind his body, buried in the snow of the Lena delta—one of the coldest spots on the globe.

"Evidently his last act was to throw the precious papers behind him, in order that they might not be lost when the river rose in the spring. Death arrested his arm as he lifted it for the purpose and it was frozen in an upright position.

"The latter part of this touching journal was dated from the day when the Jeannette was crushed in the ice and De Long and his men were forced to begin their terrible journey to the mainland across the treacherous ice-floes.

"The journal stopped with these significant words: 'October 30th, one-hundred-and-fortieth day.—Boyd and Görtz died during the night. Mr. Collins is dying.' Probably on the next day the last man of the party perished.

"Every Sunday, as long as strength permitted, these men held divine service. On October 10th, the one-hundred-and-twentieth day, they had nothing to eat for supper but a spoonful of glycerin apiece. 'All hands weak and feeble, but cheerful. God help us,' runs the pathetic record. After this they crawled into a hole in the bank. The howling gale did not permit them to move. A later entry in the journal runs as follows: 'We are in the hands of God, and unless he intervenes we are lost. We cannot move against the wind, and staying here means starvation.' Can the imagination picture a more hopeless situation? Eighty miles from the nearest settlement, with only a spoonful of glycerin apiece, and strength to move less than a hundred rods. Among the last consecutive words in the journal were these: 'All united in saying the Lord's prayer after supper. Living gales of wind. Horrible night.'"

Truly, the imagination cannot picture a more hopeless condition, and yet they declared they were in the hands of God. Paul says: "Our God is a consuming fire," but his presence does not raise the temperature around the poles to any appreciable extent.

Said De Long: "Unless God intervenes, we are lost." God did not intervene. He never does. When our temporal salvation depends upon the intervention of God, we are lost. If God answered the prayers of these perishing men, it was by sending a howling gale in their faces.

They prayed, "Giv us this day our bread," and they got a spoonful of glycerine apiece, and that was some they brought with them. "They prayed as long as strength permitted." God does not even furnish strength to pray. The breath spent in prayer is wasted. Says the Companion: "It is another witness that the soul recognizes God in its hour of mortal need."

Is it not rather a witness to the truth that all the gods are non-existent, or dead, or deaf and dumb and blind, or asleep, or gone on a journey? Is it not another proof that prayer is useless, supplication vain, nature relentless—"no ear to hear, no heart to pity, no arm to save?"

One is tempted reverently to inquire whether—seeing there are few prayers to answer around the North pole—it pays God to stay up there in the cold unless he can do something in such an emergency as we have been considering.

Jesus said, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name believing ye shall receive."

What a mistake. How much more truthful the teaching of Buddha that the only source of help for men is to help each other, and that the gods if they exist are probably so feeble as to need help themselves.

Perhaps the gods have need of help themselves,
Being so feeble that when sad hearts cry
They cannot save. I would not let one cry
Whom I could save. How can it be that Brahm
Would make a world and leave it miserable?
Since if all-powerful he leaves it so he is
Not good, and if not powerful he is not God.

Milwaukee, Ore.

D. PRIESTLY.

Science and Progress.

Qualified Heretics.

The Russian government, with its barbarous methods for the suppression of Judaism, treats its Mohammedan subjects with a good deal of leniency. The emir of Bokhara (like the pretender to the throne of Afghanistan), on his recent visit to the czar was made a pet of the St. Petersburg aristocrats, and the "procurator of the holy synod" defends the inconsistency on the ground that the Koran inculcates the belief in a future existence, while the Old Testament ignores that doctrine—so completely, indeed, that few modern Hebrews have much faith in the existence of a literal heaven. In their present predicament the Russian Jews cannot well doubt the existence of a literal hell.

One-Sided Progress.

There is no doubt that in the direction of political freedom the United States have got a century ahead of the Old World, but it is equally true that, in regard to religious emancipation, a large percentage of our native moralists are about that much behind the educated classes of central Europe. The Sabbath idiots of Chicago, San Francisco, and New Orleans owe their defeat almost entirely to the votes of the foreign population.

A Substitute Devil.

Realizing the decline of the belief in a personal hell-boss, the long-headed leaders of our Protestant Jesuits are casting about for an available substitute, and urge the appointment of "law and order commissioners," who, of course, would denounce every anti-clerical publication as immoral, and every skeptic as a blasphemer.

Ethnological Revelations.

Prof. Frank Buckland, on his return from France, had a young squirrel-monkey in his arms—a tiny pet which he hoped to smuggle through on the principle that children under two years go free; but the ticket agent of the Dover railway insisted on the payment of live-stock rates. "Since you charge for all animals, what have I to pay for these?" asked the traveler, producing a basket full of snapping-turtles. The official adjusted his specks, consulted his tariff ledger, and then surprised the naturalist by the memorable verdict: "No charges for them, sir; they are insects." With a similar amazement many Americans of foreign birth must have studied the ethnological statistics of Mr. Porter, who in his last census bulletin classifies Welshmen as "Anglo-Saxons," and Hungarians as "Slavs." Political associations may, to some degree, have obliterated the difference between the West British Celts and the followers of Hengist and Horsa; but the Magyars have now for more than a thousand years devoted their best energies to the preservation of their independence from the yoke of their Slavonic neighbors, and so far from being Slavs, are not even members of the Caucasian race, but Turanians—kinsmen of the Fins and the Turkomans. The country of the lower Danube, it is true, swarms with Slavs, but Mr. Porter might as well have described a Cape Colony farmer as a "nigger," for being a native of the Dark continent. "You ought to show more patriotism, sir," said a Moscow police-commissioner, in reprimanding a disrespectful British resident; "you have been doing business in this town so long that we have a right to claim you as one of our own." "If I should happen to work in a stable," said the Britisher, "does that give you a right to call me a horse?"

A Dangerous Game.

King Humbert has been called the Henri Quatre of Italy, and it has more than once been predicted that he will ultimately share the fate of that gallant monarch. Last Saturday (March 25th) a fellow named Berardi hurled a stone at the head of the king with such force that the missile whistled through the air like a rifle ball, and missed its aim only by a fraction of an inch. He was at once overpowered, and in his fright confessed that he had been inspired by religious motives and wished to wreak God's vengeance upon the king for failing to do justice to the pope. A raging mob gathered about in an incredibly short time, and while hundreds crowded the path of the king's carriage with ringing cheers, a broad-shouldered laborer shook his fist under the nose of a priest, and pointing in the direction of the Vatican: "Avertile—you warn him [the pope]," he said, "if his bullies ever accomplish a job of this kind, we'll tear his rookery to pieces before the dawn of the next day!"

Assisted Immigrants.

The Brazilian government has spent millions for the encouragement of immigration by land-grants and direct subventions to actual settlers; but the commissions complain that many of these settlers remain aliens in speech and religion, and that few of their new colonists come to stay and multiply. They ought to try their luck with a cargo of English sparrows.

A Hero's Reward.

A biographer of Shamyl, the Circassian prophet-chief, describes the last hours of the famous patriot who had dragged himself to a suburb of Mecca and died content that Allah had not forsaken him after all, but permitted him to die free and in sight of his holiest temple. "And this," comments the biographer, "was the reward of a man who for twenty-three years had proved his devotion to his faith and his country under unspeakable hardships, and whose valor, unassisted by modern implements of warfare, had in forty-two battles vanquished the same troops that defeated the tactics of the great Napoleon." But had Napoleon himself a much better reward? "The embroidered shroud on his tomb in the Dome of the Invalides," says Mons. Taine, "is the net result of his heroic campaigns." "So much labor for a winding-sheet?"

St. Peter's Boss Called Down.

"Our blue-ribbon bigots," writes a friend from Belvidere, Ill., "wanted me to sign a pledge invoking the aid of the Lord, and I offered their president a bet that I could keep sober without anybody's aid much longer than he could with the aid of Christ and all his Apostles. I knew that he had been a hard drinker, and merely wanted to stimulate his self-respect, but they boycotted me for blasphemy, though the result proved the correctness of my conjecture, for in less than six months their moral exemplar was rolling in the gutter again."

Monkey Instincts.

One trait of nature seems to make all monkeydom kin, viz., the predatory instinct that appears to consider theft its own reward; and the phenomenon of kleptomania may yet be recognized as an incidental confirmation of Darwin's theory. The Vienna police not long ago unearthed an association of amateur shoplifters—girls in their teens, many of them, and nearly all able to offer the doubtful plea of disinterestedness from a dollars-and-cents point of view. They had never patronized pawnshops, and rarely enriched their private wardrobes with their ill-gotten dry-goods, but contented themselves with hoarding their plunder (including hardware, mathematical instruments, prayer-books, and other articles of no earthly use to female aristocrats), or vauntingly exhibiting it at their secret meetings. There are kleptomaniacs who will pick up handfuls of garden gravel rather than come home with empty pockets, and a Danish author of some celebrity once told me that one of his relatives was in the habit of robbing his own larder. Whenever he thought himself unobserved, he would use a private key to unlock a door in the rear of his dining-room, slip in, grab a lot of prunes, coffee-beans, or raw onions, and carry them up to his study, where his wife often recaptured bushel-bags full of such miscellanies.

F. L. OSWALD.

Not Stolen, Only Copied.

No one except the initiated, says a Western paper, has any idea how common it is becoming in this city for ministers to crib their sermons. A preacher who earns a large salary in one of our largest churches lately delivered an address. Shortly after, one of his parishioners remarked that it was very fine.

"Yes," said another, "but he stole it."

This was told to the preacher. He resented it at once, and called upon the gentleman to retract.

"I am not," was the reply, "very apt to take back anything I have said, because I usually weigh my words before I speak. But in this instance I will retract. I said you had stolen the sermon. I find, however, that I was wrong; for returning home, and referring to the book whence I thought you had taken it, I found it there, word for word."

Bound Volumes of The Truth Seeker.

We have a few bound volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year just closed (1892) which will be sent on receipt of $4. We also have a few of previous years which can be sold for $3. Readers desirous of keeping files as received weekly can obtain the File Binder for $1.

Liberal Societies.

A man with no little personal magnetism is the Mohammed Alexander Russell Webb, who appeared before the Manhattan Liberal Club, Friday evening, April 7th. As Mr. Webb said in opening his lecture, he did not intend to make any converts in one lecture, but it was his aim to disseminate a truer and more liberal comprehension of the Prophet. With this object in view he had chosen for a lecture the life of Mohammed.

"I have yet to find a single Christian writer who has written fairly and justly of Mohammed." To illustrate the treatment he has received at the hands of English biographers, Mr. Webb read selections from various authors. In regard to the prevalent idea that he was an impostor the lecturer said:

"The Koran repeatedly and unequivocally declares that Mohammed was only a man with all the characteristics, while the Prophet himself was careful to assure his hearers that he differed from them in no spiritual way, except in his spiritual developments; that he was subject to the same physical laws that governed them, and that the regular course of nature could not be changed to suit the whims or fancies of anybody."

The lecturer then reviewed the life of the Prophet, laying particular stress on the fact that he had but one wife, and that he never countenanced warlike measures unless they were absolutely necessary. In regard to polygamy, Mr. Webb said there was nothing in the life of Mohammed that would encourage such views, nor is there anything in the Koran.

Dr. Foote and Mr. Oppenheimer were the first critics. The latter thought the members of the Christian missionary societies ought to have been present and seen how missionary work should be conducted. Mr. Wakeman was the next critic. He declared that there were numerous passages in the Koran which advocated polygamy. The other critics were Dr. Weeks and Dr. Ward.

In replying to his critics Mr. Webb said that there was but one passage in the Koran which said anything about a man having more wives than one, and that passage had been translated as a permission, while it was in reality a prohibition. Next week Raymond S. Perrin will lecture on "The Christian Religion."

Mr. Webb's book on Mohammedanism will soon be published. As soon as pending negotiations are completed a free library will be opened and lectures on Mohammedanism given regularly and often.

A general discussion of the question "Is Religion a Curse?" took place Sunday afternoon at the meeting of the Newark Liberal League.

Mr. Bird first read selections from Mr. Putnam's coming book, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." The speaker thought all religion is useless, even the high and intellectual one proposed and advocated by Mr. Wakeman. The first speaker after Mr. Bird was a Christian gentleman, who is not very well known to the members. The gentleman believed in a hereafter, because all of his multitudinous fathers-in-law had on their dying beds embraced the Christian faith. Another gentleman who believed in the good of religion, especially the Christian religion, was Mr. Place. This gentleman was frank enough to say that the only reason that he was honest was because he expected to go to heaven when he died; for which frankness he was soundly rated by the members of the League. Mrs. Smith, Messrs. Walter, Brill, Burton, Sexton, Morris, and Mayo also took part in the discussion. Next Sunday Dr. Lewis Jones will lecture on "Cities and Civil Government."

The regular meeting of the Young Men's Debating Club was held in Newark Saturday evening, April 8th. "Life and the Mystery of Life" was the subject for discussion. Mr. Walker read a very interesting and erudite essay on "Life and Its Mysteries." The essayist treated the subject more from an historical than a doctrinal point of view. He reviewed the Abhidharma of Gautama, and while he did not believe in the Karma of the Buddhists, he thought their idea of Nirvana worth some consideration. "One of the greatest mysteries of life is the mind or consciousness." Mr. Walker held that the mind was a tabula rasa, quoting and explicating the Lockian formula, "Nihil est in intellectu quod non prius fuerit in sensu." He characterized the epigram of Leibnitz as meaningless; in order, however, to show the psychological differences of the two schools he rapidly reviewed the a priori philosophy of Spinoza, Malebranche, Descartes, Butler, etc. He then expatiated on the ontological and cosmological differences of the various schools of philosophy. In concluding he dwelt at some length on the benevolent theory of morals of Hutcheson as opposed to the theory of Hobbes that all our acts arise from self-love. "While such may be the case among some proletaires certainly the vast majority is not so base." Short addresses were made by Messrs. Bird, Gillen, Saxton, and Newing. At the next meeting Mr. Saxton will lead the discussion, which will be on "Spiritualism."

Chickering Hall presented the usual brilliant array of handsome men and women last Sunday morning. Professor Adler had chosen for a subject "The Anti-Semitic Movement in Germany."

"It will be noticed," began the lecturer, "that the movement calls itself anti-Semitic and not anti-Jewish. There is a reason for this. The name 'anti-Semitic' was chosen with the purpose of deepening the stigma that it is intended to convey. By the use of this name it is intended to imply that the Jews represent a race which cannot be assimilated. The fear is expressed that these people will soon outnumber the Aryans unless they are put down. This is ridiculous on the face of it. There are only six million Jews, while there are hundreds of millions of Aryans. But it is not true that the modern Jew represents the Semitic race. It is not true that the Jews of to-day are an unmixed race."

"But the cry against the Semitic race is only a cloak. There are other and deeper causes. The most important of these is the religious cause. It is a curious fact that the religion named after the gentlest and most humane master has shed more blood than any other. I sometimes wonder what Jesus would have said if it had been prophesied to him that there would arise among his followers a Torquemada, an Alva."

"Another cause of this bitter feeling is the cry that we hear about us every day, that of deicide. If Christ was god, and came on earth to be crucified, then the Jews only acted their part in a pre-arranged drama. But if he was only a human being, then we must say the same of them as we say of the Florentines, who expelled Dante and now almost worship him—the best men are seldom understood by the people of their time."

"The growing feeling of Nationalism is another cause. The policy of exclusion of foreigners is one of the first signs of this feeling. But this policy is suicidal, for it is the foreigners who are grafted into a nation that best represent that nation. Napoleon, Kant, Catharine II., are examples of this."

"I now come to the economic cause. The strain produced by the change of economic conditions is felt by all classes, and especially the official class. The officials are no longer treated with the respect that the merchants and bankers are, and so they fix on a few of this latter class, the Jews, and vent their spite on these. But it is among the workingmen, among the semi-Socialists, that the movement has its principal footing. But while the movement is apparently directed against the Jews only, it is in reality directed against the entire industrial system."

Next Sunday Professor Adler will lecture on "The Difficulty of Reform in New York City."

Succotash.

I learn from the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle that Mr. Robinson, the proprietor of the Musee-Theater, has been giving entertainments on Sunday. To this, as usual, the clergy took exception. It was represented that the performances were of an immoral character, that disreputable women assembled there, and that the authorities were appealed to to close up the wicked and immoral place on Sunday.

Certain individuals were sent there under disguise to see what was going on at the Musee on Sunday, and report to headquarters the immoral and indecent performances, if such were found to be practiced.

The committee reported that the lion and leopard did not indulge in any immoral acts, that the bear and the birds were well behaved, and that the monkeys and wax figures seemed to show a decent regard for the solemnity of the occasion. The women looked well, were dressed well, and behaved in such orderly manner as to arouse no suspicion of evil intent. The men were all civil and sober, and seemed to be interested in the entertainment and showed no disposition to disturb the peace or good order of society.

But they were at the Musee-Theater, and not at the church—"there's the rub"—that's what gruels the kidneys of the clergy. And here is the real inwardness of closing the World's Fair on Sunday. If the gates are left open the churches will be deserted, and the holy scavengers can catch no bullheads in their salvation drag-nets. What they care about the morals of the people will never disturb their brainless noddles.

These devil-dodgers know that if the gates are closed on Sundays, the saloons and dives and other places of ill repute will be crammed with customers, and this shows the extent of their anxiety about the morals of the people.

In Rochester the saloon-keeper is making common cause with the minister because their interests are identical. Neither cares a rupee whether the Musee is open on Sunday or not. But there are those who would go to the saloon or attend the church if the Musee were not open. And that is all the interest the saloon-keeper or the minister has in the matter. The church is willing to concede a fair share to the saloon if it can secure what remains.

Heston has given a very impressiv cartoon representing the minister, the saloon-keeper, and the jackassical Congressman. Next let him represent the minister and the saloon-keeper as the Siamese twins, the one holding a Bible and the other a bottle, with this inscription over them:

Our aim is the boodle.

The love of God was shed abroad in a church a short time ago. The church was crowded and chairs were placed in the aisles to accommodate the people, but all could not be seated. A pious deacon was standing while the choir was singing, and a brother slid in behind him and took his chair. The minister had just put himself in position to give the Lord a little cheap advice, when the good deacon found the brother occupying his chair. At first there was a suppressed whisper and then the talk was not only loud but fast and furious. And to show that he had the love of God shed abroad in his soul, the good deacon knocked the brother down. And then, "invoking the God of battles," he jumped on the brother and pummeled him until he showed a contrite spirit, and learned that Christ did not come to bring peace.

The women screamed and fainted, they trampled each other under foot in their wild scramble for the door, and finally the minister snapped the "amen" off the end of his finger, and pulled the good deacon off, and thus ended the heavenly racket.

O, how happy are they who their savior obey,

And have laid up their treasures above.

Tongue cannot express the sweet comfort and peace

Of a soul filled with heavenly love.

A few Sundays ago a minister went up into the pulpit to open the services with prayer. He made quite a long prayer, but ended with a very feeble amen. The congregation waited some time, but the minister did not arise from his knees to proceed with the proceedings. A member went to him and found him dead.

I tell you the pulpit is a dangerous place. Christians, don't make fools of yourselves. Whenever you bow your knee in prayer think of this awful lesson, "God is not mocked." He will certainly come down on you with his great dambanger if you don't stop praying.

The Chapman-Wettstein discussion is still on. I do not wish to take part in this discussion, but would like to ask a few questions.

I saw a blind man the other day walking with his hand on the fence in order to keep his way. It is said "the spiritual eye is keener than the material." Now, if there is a spiritual or inner man that sees, of what use is that to the blind man? The blind man is old and will soon die; will he be able to see then?

My brother's arm was paralyzed a year before he died; was there a spiritual arm that was not paralyzed? If there was, it did not help my brother, nor was he cognizant of the fact, if it were a fact.

We have a man in our place who is deaf; is there an inner man or spirit which hears all that is going on? If so, he is not conscious of the fact.

Now, when we lose our sight and taste and smell, our hearing and feeling, when the heart ceases to beat, and the brain to perform its functions, we are dead, and the idea that a spirit is to be born from us is all idle vapor.

Who knows anything about the structure of a spiritual eye or ear? How can we obtain a knowledge of the nervous system of a spirit? Who knows that a spirit can hear, see, feel, or taste, or enjoy or suffer? There is no knowledge upon this subject, neither can there be.

"Sandy, what's this they call metaphysics?" "Why, it's when one chiel tries to tell another chiel something that he knows nothing about himself; that's what they call metaphysics."

Why cannot somebody be found who can tell us something about God? The reason is, nobody knows. Let anyone set down to write what he knows about God, and he cannot write a half-dozen sentences. He will find that there is too much of Sandy's metaphysics connected with the subject.

Heston's cartoon on the stuffed prophet is immense, but it does him no injustice. The conception of the cartoon must have been in Heston's brain before it was put on paper. Can he keep on producing cartoons after he is dead, and his brain ceases to act?

JOHN PECK.

Naples, N. Y.

Agnosticism.

Amongst numerous reasons, the Agnostic rejects Christianity because he cannot reconcile belief in an all-good deity with the evil in the world. Did he create the evil? If it be answered: "The devil made it," the Agnostic inquires, Did he create the devil? If you reply in the affirmative you admit that he is not all-good, for he created a being of evil! If you say that the devil was at first a good being, but afterward fell, you admit frailty on the part of an all-powerful and all-wise deity, for you either admit that your deity could not create that being perfectly good, in which case he is not all-powerful, or he did not know that he would fall, in which case he was not all-wise! If he did know that he would fall, and created him with that knowledge or intention, he must have been creator of evil! If you say that he did not create the devil, you admit that he was not the first cause! In this case the devil might have created the deity or some other being might have created both! If you deny the existence of a devil, you not only throw the responsibility of having created evil upon the deity, but cast down the foundations of Christianity, which are based upon redemption!

However, it is probable that neither a personal devil nor a personal deity exists.

The Jewish scriptures name the party the Hebrews believed to have been the creator of evil. For the culprit's name refer to Isa. xlv, 7.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Boston, Mass.,	April 16	Worcester, Mass.	April 16
Bristol, Conn.,	" 17	Cincinnati, Ill.,	" 23

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association's program for this month is:

April 16th, O. P. Loomis, "Ancient Astronomy and Religion."

April 23d, Prof. R. E. Mayne, "The Coming Man."

April 30th, S. H. Wilder, "Science Falsely So Called."

The Association meets Sundays at 3 P.M. at Fraternity Hall, Bedford avenue and South Second street, E. D.

At the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East Fifteenth street, Friday evenings, the program for April is:

April 14th, Raymond Perrin, "The Christian Religion."

April 21st, Lizzie Ward, "Women's Skirts."

April 28th, Reuben Rush, "Life and Death."

THE Barlow, Ore., Three Sisters makes a fair report of Mrs. Katie Kehm Smith's lecture in that town in reply to a minister who said that schools and colleges, orphan asylums, hospitals, and homes were the fruits of Christianity, and that saloons, prisons, scaffolds, Anarchists, and the destruction of hope, peace, and life were due to Infidels. Mrs. Smith said:

"One of two things must be conceded—namely, that either Mr. Bateman did not know the true history of Christianity or, knowing it, he not only seeks to cover up its crimes and cruelties, and exhorts others to do so, but goes even farther and says that Christianity is synonymous with goodness and virtue. She denied that morality and religion were synonymous and gave many illustrations where the grossest immoralities have been committed by very religious people. She also called attention to the morality and goodness and progress made before Christianity was known, and also by those people and those nations which have never embraced Christianity. Mrs. Smith read statistics from prison records showing that our criminals are with few exceptions Christians. In answering Mr. Bateman's statement, 'If Infidels had ever built a school or done anything for the uplifting of humanity he had never heard of it, except a school at Silverton,' the speaker said: 'It is hardly possible that the gentleman never heard of Girard College, founded by the Infidel Stephen Girard.' Mrs. Smith said that besides the $6,000,000 left to establish this College, Girard gave during his lifetime $30,000 to the Pennsylvania Hospital; $10,000 to the orphan asylum; $20,000 to the deaf and dumb school; $10,000 each to the Lancaster schools, to the poor of Pennsylvania for free fuel, and to aid distressed sea captains; $20,000 for the relief of poor members of the Pennsylvania Masonic Lodge; $500,000 to the city of Philadelphia, and $300,000 to the state of Pennsylvania for canals. She said when our government was impoverished in 1814 Girard furnished it with $5,000,000. She spoke of the gifts of Robert Owen; James Smithson, the founder of the Smithsonian Institute; of Peter Brigham; John Redmond; Peter Cooper, and of James Lick; and after speaking of the Lick Observatory said: 'If Rev. Bateman will go to San Francisco he can enjoy a bath at the expense of the dead Infidel James Lick.' Mrs. Smith quoted dozens of instances of deeds of charity done by Infidels, but we have not space to enumerate them. She spoke of Thomas Paine, his life and death, and denied the minister's statements in regard to his death. She read historical evidence showing that he died as he had lived—an Infidel. The speaker reviewed what she called the 'crimes and cruelties of Christianity,' the persecutions which had been done in the name of religion, and contrasted its history with the record of Liberalism, which she called 'the religion of humanity,' and then outlined what Liberalism would give the world in place of Christianity."

Letters of Friends.

The World Would Be Better If All Took This Paper.

POTTER, ARK., Feb. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am well pleased with the paper—in fact, do not see how I could get along without it. The world would be better off if everybody was taking it, and living up to the principles advocated by it. I admire the writing of several of its correspondents, and more especially the lectures of Colonel Ingersoll.

Respectfully, W. P. McINTOSH.

The Influence of Freethought Literature on Future Generations.

COLUSA, CAL., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith please find $3 in payment for the paper. Money is very close with us. Had I been aware of your great needs I should have deprived myself of some other luxuries and remitted earlier. The results of the influence of your excellent paper will be felt in coming generations with tenfold force. May it weather the storm, is the sincere wish of the subscriber,

J. G. GARDNER.

The Catholic Future.

PUGET CITY, WASH., Feb. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Times are so hard it is impossible to get any new subscribers yet, though a great many like the paper. I think I am the only one who takes it in this whole community. They are almost all Liberal (?) people, but seem to have no fear of impending danger. I firmly believe the Catholic church will be the cause of the downfall of this republic, as the Catholics vote together to a man, and there are enough conservative people, who see no danger, to vote with them so they will soon control our elections. Then, good-bye Liberty.

WALTER J. CHIPMAN.

A Glorious Achievement—Prevented the Building of a Church.

SPORTING HILL, PA., Jan. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please inclose a copy of your "World's Fair Leaflets" as a sample. I am using all efforts to assist you in fighting for the grand cause of Mental Liberty and the suppression of priestcraft, religious bigotry, and superstition.

Not over a decade ago I stood alone fighting for this glorious cause, and I now pride myself in saying that through the outspoken and determined stand which I have taken I have prevented the religious orthodox from erecting a church in my town or any other place of religious worship, when you cannot find another place of the number of inhabitants where none of these places exist.

Go on with your work, such as THE TRUTH SEEKER has been doing since its outstart. Liberalism is growing fast, even in the benighted part of our country.

Fraternally yours, T. H. HERSHEY.

Hopes for Less Cant from Cleveland.

SPANGLE, WASH., March 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I herein send you names of some who profess to be Freethinkers but who are not subscribers to your paper.

Well, Mr. Macdonald, to-day our new president is to be put in the chair. Out West here we of the third party—the members of which are nearly all Liberals, with very few exceptions, in this county—are not looking for much justice from this administration. But we are hoping, at least, that we will have a great deal less Jesus than we had under Harrison.

We have not yet joined the Federation.

Putnam ought to have a monument for the glorious way in which he is fighting for the cause of Humanity. May he live many years and continue to fight in the same brave way.

Success to you and your paper, Brother Macdonald.

Sincerely the friend of all reform,

CLEMEY LACEY.

Wants Foreign Freethought News.

LIBBY, ORE., Apr. 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please send your paper to the following address for one year. Inclosed find $3.50 in payment for the same, with premium as offered in the last number of your paper. Send the New Bible Picture Book as premium.

I have nothing important to write about, as I read all the "Letters from Friends" and nearly all of them agree with my views. The People's party of this place some weeks ago took an interest in the Women's Christian Union work in electing a man to represent them at Salem in the coming convention to give us some Sunday laws. They think we have too much liberty. Or maybe they want their prayers before the elections come, as the Prohibition party used to be treated.

I have seen only one in this place that did not like your paper, and he said he would not dare to read it for any price; the pope is his idol. It is hard to get any new subscribers. The hard times are much the cause of it. Many families in this place have been living on water and bread, and cabbages and clams occasionally, for the last year. Give us all the news from Sweden and other countries that you can pick up that is interesting to Freethinkers in general. H. P. STIFFE.

If Each Would Help Freethought As Much As Other Movements.

GRAYS, KY., Feb. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5 for renewal to THE TRUTH SEEKER, "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book," cloth (premium), and Ingersoll's Argument in the Reynolds Blasphemy Trial, cloth.

I feel sorry that I am unable to do more for the cause of Freethought, which has been so dear to me for fifteen years, but I hope to be always able to earn an extra $5 bill each year to spend in it.

I am a coal-miner and find among my craft in this district very few Freethinkers. I met with so many at a convention last week that I was very much astonished, but a little thought explained it all. Freethinkers are, in almost all cases, the most intelligent and most trusted amongst their class. In this district we have only four months' school term each year, which accounts for the fact that Freethinkers are few. But if each would work for and help Freethought as much as they do other movements, Freethought, the grandest of them all, would soon be a force in the country.

Wishing our paper every success, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

WM. ROBINSON.

P.S.—Please also send Ingersoll's Lectures, in one volume, half calf, $5. I make the money order $10. W. R.

No Need to Be Tender of Christians' Feelings.

PEASTER, TEX., Feb. 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: There are quite a number of Liberals in this community, but I believe none are taking THE TRUTH SEEKER. All, however, have seen copies of it and know its principles. A few object to its radicalism, but for myself, if I was going to destroy a venomous reptile, I would endeavor to perform the act in the quickest way possible. When the preachers attack infidelity, they spare not the feelings of any. They call them fools, gamblers, blacklegs, libertines, free-lovers, and debauchees, and affirm that they are capable of committing any crime in the calendar. I believe in paying them back in their own kind of coin. I have frequently confronted them with Billings's "Crimes of Preachers," and shown them that it was not wisdom for persons living in glass houses to be tossing stones around in such a careless manner. They have long since learned to treat me with civility.

There are a number of Christian denominations here which hold forth at stated periods and dispense the "glad tidings of great joy." Among them are Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists (missionary and hardshell), Campbellites, and Second Adventists—the last of which deny the immortality of the soul and future eternal punishment. And I am at a loss to know why they had not just as well deny the rest of it. The different Christian denominations in this locality agree so badly that I believe they are doing more for Liberalism than Liberals themselves. All are growing more Liberal year by year, but they are not yet cognizant of the fact.

I learn by letter that J. E. Remsburg will be in our state next month on a lecture tour. We shall try to procure his services for one or more lectures and have him shake up the foundation of superstition.

With best wishes for the prosperity of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I am,

A Liberal to the core, J. WHITE.

Is Our Future Home Cooling and Getting Pleasant?

ALEDO, TEX., Jan. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send a new subscriber. You can put him down as a real Freethinker. He is a reading man, and a thinking man also, and a man that is not afraid to express his views.

There are a great many Liberalists or Freethinkers in this country. As I am outspoken at any and all times, I have a chance to know, so I will inclose you a few names. I think that I said that there were a great many Liberalists. Well, there are, but they are slow to say so. As to myself, I have been reading your paper for three years, and do not hesitate to say that it is the best religious paper that I know of, and I would rather read it because it deals with facts as nearly as possible, instead of fiction. Some of my Christian friends will look at Heston's pictures and laugh at the hits. I say "my Christian friends" because I have some warm friends that belong to the church, and I hope that they are just as honest in their belief as I am in mine. I do not wish to condemn any person or persons for their belief, although I find that I am often condemned, and consigned to that awful lake of fire and brimstone—but I cannot find anybody that can tell me where that lake is or where the brimstone comes from. However, I shall keep on making inquiries. I may find out. I made some progress not long ago. A preacher told me that he did not believe that there was any literal hell at all, and that he told his hearers so in one of his discourses and that some of his brethren and a preacher or two rounded him up about it and that he stood to what he said. That looks as if it might be getting a little cooler and may gradually cool down and become pleasant about the home of the Liberalists yet, doesn't it?

Now something about the pictures. As to myself, I am in favor of them first, last, and all the time. Nearly all of them teach a lesson. If this is worth room in the best paper that I read, which is THE TRUTH SEEKER, I may write again. So with best wishes and a long life to the Editor and a good word for our artist, I will sign my name and stop.

J. C. MILLER.

A Hotelkeeper Disseminating Truth.

WALTON, IND., Feb. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I write you to-day to let you know that I yet live and have my being, though I am now in the seventy-seventh year of my life, and have the first copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER in my house that D. M. Bennett published. I have seen prosperity and adversity. I live for this life only; I know nothing of another life.

I inclose to you a money order which I wish you to place to my subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER, and also send a copy of cloth-bound "Bible Myths."

I inclose to you a few of the cards of the Engler House, so that you can see my way of doing business:

ENGLER HOUSE,
TEMPLE OF SCIENCE AND HOTEL.
Class Meeting at all hours. Now in the Holy Land.

Good Accommodation for Travelers.
DAVID ENGLER, Prop., WALTON, IND.
There is a bell on the Engler House,
That rings for a noble cause;
Its tones go forth for one and all,
To teach Science, Truth and Virtue's laws.

Let there be free schools without creed or sect, based on the teaching of Science and Truth and the World's Fair to be open on Sunday.

I have had eleven thousand of these cards printed in the past eleven years. My Christian friends said to me that if I put those cards out it would ruin my business. I have been in the business twenty-three years here. There have been opposition Christian hotels run against me, and they have played out. I am here yet, and I am the only hotel man here now. If you see R. G. Ingersoll ask him if he recollects the time when he delivered one of his lectures in Logansport, and I at his request met him in his private room, and he gave me the sacrament and initiated me into the church of Humanity, of which I expect to proclaim in my class-room to the latest period of my time.

May THE TRUTH SEEKER never cease to be published while error roams the face of the earth.

D. ENGLER.

A Delightful Club.

CHICAGO, ILL., March 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Less than a year ago your correspondent arrived here an utter stranger. Six months ago, at the solicitation of many new-found friends, who formerly knew him only by reputation as president of the Boston Question Club, he helped organize the Chicago Question Club. That it might be conducted similarly to the famous one in Boston, of which they had read so much, he was elected president. It meets at 2:30 P.M. every Sunday at 337 So. Halsted street. Free discussion follows a brief address on tariff, wages, suffrage, money, strikes, labor unions, immigration, profit-sharing, municipal reform, single tax, or some other social or economic question. Equal time is given both sides through five- or ten-minute speeches, alternating pro and con. Both admission and platform are free, and strangers are given the floor in preference to regular speakers. No one can speak a second time to the prevention of another who has not spoken. The one religious thing we do is "take up a collection." The club has been a grand success—financially, numerically, and ethically. The name, Question Club, commits us to no "fad" or "ism," and consequently commands more universal respect and newspaper prominence than if we had the reputation of being a lot of so-called "cranks" of any one particular school of reformers. The club aims to discuss popular questions at the time most public interest centers in them. Consequently, three or four reporters are sometimes present at once, and the newspapers give good reports of the proceedings. Our secretary always delivers to the Associated City Press a copy of the resolutions passed, or the questions sometimes addressed to prominent persons, and consequently most of the daily papers print them. Instead of the old-fashioned form of a resolution, we generally state our subject for discussion in the form of a question, thereby committing ourselves to neither side. Regular members pay an initiation fee and monthly dues; associate members pay monthly dues only. Our success has led to the formation of Question Clubs in a number of other cities.

A short time since, we discussed the question: "Should the World's Fair be closed Sundays?" and passed the following resolutions, drafted by your correspondent, who generally writes the Club's questions and resolutions:

Whereas, The biblical command, "Six days shalt thou labor, etc.," as imperatively forbids any rest during those six days as labor the seventh;

Whereas, There is no biblical authority whatever for substituting Sunday (the first day of the week) for Saturday (the Sabbath or seventh day) as has been done;

Whereas, "Every man should be a law unto himself," knowing best when and what rest he needs;

Whereas, The United States Constitution strictly forbids Congress making any "law respecting an establishment of religion;"

Resolved, That, by closing the World's Fair Sundays, Matthew S. Quay and other pharisaical Sabbatarians not only outrage morality and the United States Constitution but even deny the Bible they hypocritically profess to defend.

Resolved, That it is as infamous to prevent willing as to compel unwilling attendance at either a World's Fair or church; as tyrannous to deny men their just equal rights under the euphonious name of Sunday law as by any other name;

Resolved, That, to deprive man's "free moral agency," while stealthily and treacherously denying him that "free moral agency" through unjust law, deceives none but imbecils;

Resolved, That freedom is not the offspring of restriction, and, as unjust Sunday restrictions, like unjust tariff restrictions, hinder individual liberty, consistent opponents of one form of tyranny must likewise oppose the other.

Resolved, That, to compel our invited foreign guests to conform to our narrow bigotry—while boasting our liberty and freedom—is to offer them them a flagrant insult.

D. WEBSTER GROH,
President Chicago Question Club.

The Coming Steal.

NEW YORK CITY, March 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I ask you to favor the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER through its columns with a few lines from a truth seeker and truth proclaimer.

Dear truth seekers and proclaimers, while I feel the title of this address is the coming inevitable, I pen these few lines to question whosoever will answer, Is the same avoidable? In the past there have been gigantic steals that have amazed the citizens of our republic, that have amazed the peoples of nations. Steals that have threatened the overthrow of governments (France is a standing example). Steals that have enriched the few at the expense of the many, causing the lower and middle classes, the producers, to be clad in rags and to suffer want for the necessities of life; while the plunderers were clad in silks and satins, dined and wined on the best the producers could forward, and read upon the stolen coin of the people's money "In God we trust" without the least compunction, with the condition of the poorer classes of producers staring them in the face. With might as right, they trusted in their hirelings, who framed laws to make the condition possible for them to trust their servants, who were well paid by the plunderers who hoarded up the people's money by the betrayal of the public trusts the people invested in their public servants.

"In God we trust!" A cloak for the priesthood and leading Christians (probably the authors), and a commandment for the producers whom they plundered.

They claim Christ was God. He commands, they obey—let us see how far. Christ commands, "Giv what thou hast to the poor, and follow me!" Do they obey? No, but have the audacity to preach it while they have hoarded and are still hoarding the wealth of the producers into the millions; investing the same in property of which they are robbing the government annually of the taxes. The priesthood have become the poor, and are continually asking the producers to give to the poor and "follow me." Every common-sense person knows they are the poor, for they have always been paupers, as well as robbers and beggars, and always will be as long as the producers remain asses.

In the recent troubled state of the Catholic hierarchy in the United States over their possessions and influence gained, the public press estimated their possessions at $21,000,000—the same exempted from taxation. Now, Liberals, think: "Giv what thou hast to the poor and follow me!" Is this not a gigantic steal? Who of them can dispute the fact that they have never obeyed this command of Christ, but on the contrary have been the robbers of the poor, requesting the poor to follow them? Who of them will dispute this fact?

Is not the priesthood obtaining money under false pretenses in the name of him whom they never followed?

Have their followers no eyes, or are they made up wholly of ears?

What are the false pretenses? Promises of hereafter, of which those who promise know as little as the promised.

Liberals, think, how would you like to accept a promissory note of the priesthood to read,

After death we promise to pay happiness for all the cash you can bring us (of which we know nothing ourselves).

(Signed) CHURCH OF CHRIST, PER REV. —

all this without the least tangible evidence to the human mind that there is a hereafter?

Liberals, how in the name of common sense in this enlightened age of reason can the majority of our population be humbugged in this way? Have the majority no thoughts of their own? or are they like sheep going over a stone wall—when the leader jumps all follow mechanically?

If this mechanical following continues, and this mechanical collecting from the producers of this country, and this mechanical purchasing and selling of political and legal privileges regardless of consequences, in the United States, our much-boasted liberty, founded by Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin, will be no more, but of the past. Our glorious Constitution of the United States will be stored away as the spoils of the coming hierarchy, who have now crept upon us as a savage beast on its prey, with all its prearranged plans for the coming steal! The most gigantic steal in the history of the world, that of the grandest republic the world has ever produced, the richest and the grandest nation upon the globe—this the Catholic hierarchy seeks, nothing less. I am convinced by all her actions; they speak louder than words.

Liberals, we have foreign invasion established in our borders. We are in the grasp of Rome.

Who will deliver us?

Respectfully yours for deliverance,

G. K.

Interesting Attempt at Co-operative Labor.

TOPOLOBAMPO, SINALOA, MEX.,
March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Thinking your readers might like to hear something of this co-operative colony, I venture a few remarks.

Of the resident colonists, some have been here over five years. Many have come and left dissatisfied. A few have remained. So that now there are here about four hundred and fifty men, women, and children. The colony has never yet been self-supporting, but now there is a fair prospect of its raising enough to eat; but not enough to wear; and whether or not we shall this year raise a surplus of food enough to sell to buy clothing is yet an unsolved problem.

The colonists have dug an irrigating ditch seven miles long from the Fuerte river, twenty-two feet deep at the river and gradually getting less till it delivers the water on the surface of the land, where it can be made to water perhaps several thousand acres. This ditch cost $200,000, and is worth it, or more. The object of this movement is to accomplish Industrial Freedom on business principles through a joint-stock company, which is to own city, farm, factory, and transportation, and control exchange. Its principles put in practice are: Exact from each according to his ability and give to each according to his deeds, or needs, as the case may be. Every member must be strictly disciplined according to the iron rule of equity, and of obedience to directors and managers, whom he has a voice in electing from the stockholders. The golden rule of mutuality and interdependence is to govern in all their relations. The end to be attained when the undertaking is accomplished is this: Every child shall be kept at an industrial school and college until twenty, then work at some employment of his choice best suited to his capacity until fifty. Then, it is supposed, everyone will have standing to his credit in the company enough to support him in leisure the rest of his life. This is the heaven upon earth they are struggling to build; though now in poverty, privation, and want, with no dwellings but tents and dirt-covered huts and dirt floors, for there is no lumber here yet. But the climate is very favorable to this condition of things. The materials out of which to build a heaven upon earth are here, ready for the builders to develop, if they possess the requisite skill and moral character to do it.

The colonists are above the average in intelligence, and mostly belong to the Liberal class. There are a very few professing Christians; more of Deists, Pantheists, Agnostics, and persons of other shades of opinions. Some are Quakerish, having been bred in Quaker communities and necessarily inherited more or less of the ish.

In reference to this colony a certain clergyman remarked that "God has at last raised up a lot of Infidels to put in practice the principles of Christian Socialism, which the church has entirely lost sight of."

The company will support no religious society, and none has yet been formed. The colonists have voluntarily fallen into the habit of resting Sunday, though some work more or less that day. But instead of a Sunday evening prayer-meeting they substitute a dance on the ground by a bonfire light. Those who may think of coming here to help out this movement should bring cookstoves, utensils, and household goods; flour, groceries, clothing, axes, grubhoes, mattocks, shovels; in fact, tools of all kinds come into play. Bring all kinds of improved farm machinery. And above all lots of money, so you can get what you want here. And do not forget tents to live in. Come prepared to help the colonists and not to be helped by them.

The most desirable colonists now to come would be robust young men, who are in sympathy with our principles and willing to undergo hardship and privation to carry them out. The feeble and the children should stay away until the colonists are able to provide for their reception into comfortable quarters and surroundings. This climate renders tents and huts quite tolerable, though not altogether desirable. But the prospect of the vast fruitfulness of this country when irrigation is once well developed enables a young man to endure the pioneer hardships for the reward to come after.

The invitation is now: Come and join us in our privation and hard work for the sake of the reward hoped for in the future.

There has not been the harmony among the colonists which there should have been. The Mormons who settled in Chihuahua about the time our colonists settled here have beaten us in the race badly. They have been self-supporting for some time and are selling their surplus in the mines. The main secret of their success over us is, that the fundamental principle with them is obedience to their directors. The lack of this amongst us has worked to our disadvantage and put us back. But we hope to accomplish here on business principles what the Nationalists are trying to do on political principles—Industrial Freedom.

F. H. MARSH.

Christ and His Apostles Drinking Mescal.

TOPOLOBAMPO, SINALOA, MEX.,
March 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: By your permission I will answer some twenty letters received from your readers. I have had the colony's paper sent to M. V. Dadisman, also D. M. McMillan, and will write to them personally.

A. K. Owen started this colony in 1883 by publishing his plans of integral co-operation. In 1886 the Credit Foncier Company was chartered under the laws of the state of Colorado. Nov. 17, 1886, the first party of five hundred colonists landed by order of the board of directors, of which Owen was chairman. Some seven hundred have landed here since. Three hundred and fifty are here now. A great many left in disgust at the way things were managed. All liked the climate and soil. In December, 1886, land was bargained for at Vegaton and camps started there and at Susfragio, as well as at the bay and other places, with no definite plan of operation. In the autumn of 1887 a farm of four hundred acres was purchased at La Logia, and those that did not leave went there, and made some Indian huts out of poles, brush, and mats. The rest of the camps were given up. The people worked with a will. But the integral co-operative machine seemed to be a back-acting concern. Everybody received $3 in credits for each eight hours' work, and were to buy their own products back for credits at cost of production. They produced but little, but piled up $300,000 in credits. The debt on their unprofitable La Logia farm became due, and was paid off by a man in Kansas, who holds it yet.

In the summer of 1889 the Kansas-Sinaloa Investment Company was organized. Its object is to buy lands in Sinaloa for the use of its members. This company has purchased what is known as the Mochis tract of over eighty thousand acres, and owns some two hundred thousand acres. Its stock has never been below par. None has ever doubted the ability or honesty of its board of managers. It was this last company that constructed the big ditch, costing $175,000. It is on the Mochis tract, seven miles from the Fuerta. Here are living about one hundred people; farming and gardening. Five hundred acres have been cleared. To-day while I write I can look from my tent and see them gathering strawberries, digging potatoes, and gathering peas, beans—in fact, nearly all kinds of garden truck. We gather and plant nearly all the year round. About a thousand orange trees have been set out in the last month of four and six years old. They are expected to bear next year. About a mile further on is another settlement, where about the same number of people have taken land. It is called Kickersburg by some, because these people have refused to deal under the Owen credit plan. In return the people here are sometimes called Owen's pets. About seventy-five are at the bay. They are sometimes spoken of as Wilberites. About fifty or seventy-five are at La Logia yet, but they are moving away every day. Everybody here has been expecting that a permanent organization would be made. Two or three times have been set, but the time has gone by without organizing. The time is now set for May, when Flusham, who is said to have lately sold his property in Dutchland for an even $1,000,000, will be here. His agent is now here—Hoffman, president of the Kansas-Sinaloa Investment Company. Owen and others interested in this work will be here and perfect all plans, and I am satisfied all will go well. I have been here nearly three years and have not heard of a fight or a scandal. Our leaders are believed to be honest, our people hard-working and moral, but so far we have not produced much. We have never been self-supporting. But I think we soon will be. A boat landed here last week with eight new members and fifteen tons of flour. Our new grader, that cost us some $1,200, is on the ground and works finely. Our steam-drill is at Guyamas, and our railroad is said to be a sure thing. Time will tell. The new party like it well here. Some twenty odd members that went away have returned during the last three months. There are men here from the best parts of Florida and California, and all agree we have a fine country. Our bay swarms with turtle, fish, shrimps, clams, oysters, crabs, and I saw three men fetch eight thousand duck eggs to our store, all of which they had gathered that day on one of the islands in the bay. I saw this last week. No church or dramshop will ever curse our land—that is, the land owned by this company. I advise all readers of this article to go slow; wait until we are organized. If you think of coming down here send $1 to the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and drop me a card, and I will see that you get our paper that is published here all right. The Editor will apply the same on my subscription.

During December and January I was up in the Sierra Madre mountains for pine for our mill. I saw lots, and cut fifteen hundred logs of from one to two feet in diameter. I saw lots of trees five and six and some ten feet through. The river did not rise, and our logs are there in the bed of the Choise river, which is a branch of the Fuerta. They will most likely come down in June.

As I love the dear old TRUTH SEEKER, also the boys and girls, I am going to offer a prize. To the girl that sends the most names with the required amount of money to THE TRUTH SEEKER for that paper for one year during the present year, I will send them a box of beautiful shells of a hundred varieties free of cost and guarantee safe arrival; and to the boy sending in the most, the same. I have sent several boxes home to my children in Kansas, any one of which I could have taken $5 for here.

Friends may expect to hear from me in five or six weeks again.

I will say, too, that the funniest thing I ever saw is the way J. Christ is pictured out in Mexico. In every instance his face is the same as that of the common American picture, but otherwise I have seen him in American red-top boots, Mexican red blanket—in fact he is pictured dressed in all kinds of Mexican costume. If I can get the picture of Christ and the twelve Apostles drinking mescal I will send it to Heston.

A. BUTTERFIELD.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

(Reprinted by particular request.)

Brown's Religion.

A man named Brown—a very common name—
But, Brown or Jones, I'm sure 'tis all the same—
He was no genius, neither rich nor learned,
And for great schemes had never cared or yearned;

But was one of these easy-going men
Who make but little stir with tongue or pen;
Who keep the even tenor of their way
Through winter snows and sunny time of May.
And he was known where'er his life-line fell
As an honest man, but—an infidel.

He lived a quiet, upright, sober life,
Faithful and true to fellow-man and wife;
And most of folks who'd known him long and well
Had many tales of his good deeds to tell:

Of how, while other people preached and prayed,
He quite long journeys round the city made—
"The poor and sick I'm looking for," he said,
"For those who on dry sticks and husks are fed."

He found—in attics high and cellars dark,
Where poverty had set her chilling mark—
What you or I or anyone may find,
On any day—our own, our human kind,

In want and sorrow and shivering with cold;
With voices trembling their story they told,
Of how they had struggled, essayed, and failed,
While scornfully the world at them had railed.

On such occasions Brown would be quite wroth
And utter profanely many an oath.
Said he: "They preach of God in whom we've breath,

While here are his children starving to death!

"They pray for heathens in cannibal lands,
And pour out money to loosen their bands,
While the outcast at home, though sore he plead,
Is left to die, or for ravens to feed."

But while some asked God to pity the poor,
Great loads of oak wood Brown left at their door,
And he also left, where'er he passed by,
Beans and beefsteak, bread and butter, and pie.

"It is my way," Brown said to the deacon,
"And if I'm faithful, I rather reckon,
I shall be square with the Infinit One
When my work on earth is finished and done."

"Your soul," snarled the deacon, "think of your soul,

That works cannot save from the fiery roll
Of the hot, hissing flames down there in —"

"Hold on," said Brown, "when this body, this shell,

To its first estate shall safely return,
Will there then be anything left to burn?"

"You fool!" sneered the deacon, as to his store
He quickly retired and inwardly swore
That if he were God, every infidel
In sulphur and fire should be roasted well!

Then he thought, as o'er he counted his cash,
That soon there might come a financial crash;
And, as times were hard and the gospel high,
He must raise money somehow on the sly.

Soon after, he failed for quite an amount,
But not until he had made a large count
Of assets of widows, and orphans too,
Who thought that he to his promise was true,

To return to them, before many suns,
The interest due as well as their funds.
He was so pious and talked with such zeal,
That they could not think he would lie or steal;
But he grasped their means though, nevertheless,
And they soon found themselves quite penniless.

With tears they then told their wrongs unto Brown,

Who said: "Now, this man's expecting a crown,
A robe, and a harp, and all that, you know,
Where rivers of bliss eternally flow.
Well, maybe he'll get 'em, but as for me,
In such company I'd rather not be!

The deacon's known as a pious old saint;
While I—well, I have made no complaint—
But which is the worse, my friends here may tell,
Such a pious fraud or an infidel?"

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Are Schools Attractive?

As objectionable as the parochial school system of the Catholic church is to the thinking man, we think it originated from the Protestant church.

We well remember sixty or seventy years since, in the competition among the Protestant churches of New England —which was really the only thing that seemed to keep them in existence—each sect would have its own boarding-school, a sort of post-graduate continuation of the village school, and much more deleterious in its effects to keep alive sectional hatred.

There is something radically wrong in the system of teaching children. Inquiring of a young man who for cause had been confined in prison for a term of months as to what his feelings were under confinement, he compared it to "going to school!"

Can it be possible that the analogy between school-teaching and prison discipline is so very close that this crude young man could make this comparison?
Is it to be wondered at that the teachings of his infant mind should have prepared him for the prison, as the prison prepares the criminal for the gallows?

GEO. M. DAVENPORT.

[The young man was unfortunate in being sent to a poor school, where the teachers were inferior. When the teachers are fitted for their work by natural adaptation as well as education, children will be fond of school. As a rule, children like to attend school.—ED.
C. C.]

Correspondence.

OPHIR, CAL., March 18, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my second attempt at writing a letter for the Children's Corner. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for five or six years. My aunt Mary Smith is here on a visit to all her folks. She is a Freethinker. I live with my grandmother. I am nine years old, and I go to school every day. I have a sister five years old and a little brother four years old. I will close for this time.
CORDELIA E. KAISER.

SALINA, KAN., March 21, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Please accept a few lines for the Children's Corner from a little boy nine years old. I have been sick for the past two weeks and therefore not been able to attend school. My papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and we all think it a grand paper. Mamma would rather read your paper than eat a good dinner. Some of my Christian friends think it very wicked because I prefer your paper to the Bible, but I think there is a good deal in the Bible that is not fit for children to read.
As I am seeking the truth and not hypocrisy,
Yours for truth and light,
HORACE HEDSTROM.

EDOM, TEX., March 16, 1893.

DEAR AUNT SUSAN: As I have never written to the Children's Corner yet I thought I would write a short letter to let you all know that I am well and going to school. I study Fourth Reader and spelling and Barnes's United States history and arithmetic and geography. My mamma takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I will tell my age. I am a little girl eleven years old, and have black eyes and curly black hair.

Texas is full of mountains, hollows, and swamps, and pine hills, and we live twenty-two miles from the county-seat, which is Canton.

Well, as I don't know any more to write,
I will close. Your young Liberal friend,
ELLA SHAW.

BAKER, WASH., March 2, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND FRIENDS OF THE CORNER: I thought that I would again write to the Corner. I have been away from home a long time, but have come back to stay awhile. The deepest snow has been about four feet. If you will believe me I will tell you the wild flowers bloomed here till some time after New Year's; it was not very cold in spite of the snow. The river is a little high this morning, but papa and I crossed it and had no trouble at all. This is one of those rainy days which gives a person, with nothing to do, the blues. Everything seems dull.
Before this wet weather set in I had heaps of fun on the hard snow, on which I could run. The snow is about a foot and a half deep now, and very soft and wet; the chickens do not like this weather very well, and I don't blame them. Well, I cannot think of anything more to write; I will close. This letter leaves me very well, and hoping it will find you the same;
I remain as ever, your friend,
LORA FLICK.

DENVER, COL., March 13, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would try and write to the Children's Corner.
I don't see any correspondence from this place.

Papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for years, and we all like it very much. When Mr. W. S. Bell lectured in Denver he stopped at our house, and we think there is no one like Mr. Bell.

I will now tell you about a little Liberal girl. She is only four years of age. She was over to our house, and sitting upon my lap. I said, "Petie, where is God?"
"Why, don't you know where God is?"
"Why, God is in Dillon, Col., with my grandmother." And I said, "Don't you pray when you go to bed?" "Oh, no, me too sleepy."

We are having fine weather and hope you are having the same.

If I see this in print, I will write again.
Your Liberal friend, EFFIE SMITH.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Being a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER I thought I would write again. My oldest sister takes it; and I see that we get it every week. I believe my sister Louisa and I are the only Freethinkers in our school. I am twelve years old, and in the tenth grade, A, and study grammar, geography, physiology, history, reading, drawing, writing, dictation, and arithmetic.

I get so tired of hearing my teacher read the holy Bible. We have to sit like statues when she reads it. One day I asked her, "What makes the Gulf stream go right through the Atlantic ocean to the other continent?" And she said, "Because God makes it go straight." She said this in a cross, loud voice, and did not satisfy me. Now, can you tell me the reason why?

If this escapes the wastebasket I will write again; if not, well, then I will write too. Yours for Freethought,
EMIL F. SCHULZE.

MADRON, WASH., March 12, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: We take THE TRUTH
SEEKER and have since 1883. The first one we saw was sent us by a friend, a very staunch Liberal. Now, this is my first letter to the paper in any form. I read the Children's Corner and am very much interested in the little Liberal letters. It pleases me to see so many growing up to be Liberals. There are many calling themselves Liberals here, but I can't see it:
they are not anything.

Now, I do not want to take up too much time or space in your valuable Corner.

Now, if I see this in print I may give the little ones a description of my home in the far West, on the Pacific coast. I am no child, nor even middle-aged, but a real old grandma. I have a little granddaughter ten years old. She goes to school, and I only see her once a week; then her grandpa gets her to read the Children's Corner to him. She is very much interested in the Corner. If this is too long put it in the waste basket or do what you like with it.

Yours for truth, right, and liberty,
GRANDMA.

[Thanks, grandma, for your good letter. Hope you will write again.—ED. C. C.]

EDOM, TEX., March 13, 1893.

DEAR MISS SUSIE: I will write you a few lines and try to tell you something about Texas—that is, a part of it, which is full of rocky mountains here around Edom, and we live at the foot of a mountain. The mountains are not high enough to be called mountains and we call them rocky hills. We have always lived in Texas.
Ben Wheeler, Brownsboro, Channeler, and Martin's Mill are all under sixteen miles from Edom, and it is twenty-two miles from the county-seat, which is Canton.
I would be so glad to have a nice Corner.
I think your little boys and girls had better all hurry up; it is soon going to be so warm that we cannot write much. I am going to school at Edom. We live two miles from Edom. Editor Children's Corner, please tell me your full name.
Dear Aunt Susie, please tell me your age.
I will tell you mine; I am fourteen years old. It is so far from Edom to Fall River, Mass., that my letter will be a long time getting there. If I see my letter in print I will write again. Well, good evening to you. Your true friend,
COLUMBIA SHAW.

HYDESVILLE, CAL., March 4, 1893.

MISS S. H. WIXON, Dear Friend: We take THE TRUTH SEEKER and recommend it highly. I think if I could get my neighbors to read it once, they would like it, too; but they are Catholics and very rabid ones at that. We have a talk sometimes.
I quote a few words from THE TRUTH
SEEKER and tell them what a great, great man Mr. Ingersoll is. We have three daughters that do not fear anything and are not afraid to tell what they think. I do not allow them to read the Bible, or in short the novel, until they are old enough to hear all sides, then decide; that is what my father said. I read the Children's Corner to our children. The piece, "All Children Are Mine," is good. Yes, I am very glad that the poor motherless and fatherless children find a kind mother. I can sympathize with them, for my dear, kind, affectionate mother died on February 8th.
Her death was caused by the cars running into the wagon, which killed one poor woman instantly and injured mother, who lived two months, then died. I am the only Freethinker out of the family of ten children. I used to go to church and sing, in fact was the leader in singing, but when I got home it was forgotten. I never will forget how I hated to read some verses in the Bible class, and, even now, I get disgusted reading the novel; it degrades a woman on every page. I think it disgraces them who believe it. Oh, what a shame, its being called the word of our God! I believe there is an overruling power, and hope there is a place of happiness for all good creatures, Freethinkers included.

I would like to say more and do more for Freethought. I will try to get my neighbor to read that article, "All Children Are Mine." I will close by wishing to see my letter in the Children's Corner. A friend of the Freethinkers, Respectfully,
MRS. W. P. KIRBY.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance.
12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 1 mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free-thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued.
66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—
A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry
Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York
Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed.
Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan
H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G.
Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake.
This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh.
By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies
for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H.
L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine.
A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas
Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
23 Lafayette place, New York.

The Agnostic Annual

—FOR—1893

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:
The Moral Sanction, Leslie Stephen; Reverent
Agnosticism, Amos Waters; The Mother Nature,
A. P. M. Gerald Massey; Dogmatism in Theology, Alfred M. Moberg; Sermons on the Mount,
Samuel Laing; The City of the Dead, W. Stewart Boss (Saladin); On the Duty of Honesty in Our Convictions, C. E. Plumtree; Scientific Religion,
B. Bithell; The Blight of Superstition, Charles
Watts; Anthropology and Orthodoxy, Edward Clodd; The Disappearance of the Nether World,
P. J. Gould; Religious Ideas: Their Origin and Development, Frederick Millar; Signals with Mars, A. Poem, C. H. Martin; Materialism and Idealism Harmonized, Lucian Armstrong.
Price, 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages; 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Janes. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Janes is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages; 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages; 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Græco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages; 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. Ball.

Price, 25 cents.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Mother of Harlots; a Synopsis of Popery, as It Was and as It Is. By William Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. The object of this book is to expose popery, acquaint the people of the country with the dangerous machinations of the church in the United States, and warn them against giving it any countenance or support. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during a residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

in your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 839 pages, $3.
Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.
The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 133 pages, 50c.
Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.
Universe Analyzed. $1.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing." In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

DID JESUS RISE FROM THE DEAD?

The evidence for the resurrection is in this book carefully considered, and found wanting. It ought to convince every Christian of the untruthfulness of this alleged miracle, for it is certainly one of the best essays ever written on the subject. In paper, 25 cents.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story." In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

"The Cause of the Toiler" is a bit of a book indited by Jenkin Lloyd Jones and published at Chicago by Charles H. Kerr & Co. In its 36 pages is neatly packed a "sermon" preached on Labor day, by that gentleman lacking a "Rev." but much more than most preachers deserving reverence. This pamphlet presents little of methodical and reasoned attack on the present labor system, and elaboration of a new one; but is more of the nature of an exhortation. It is useful. Some works point out the path, this one provides the impulse. Its language in pleading for shorter hours and more comforts for the worker, is so manifestly and penetratingly sincere and heartfelt, that the book would prove serviceable as a gift to some mistaker who deems the cries for labor's betterment but ventings of covetousness or envy. Price, 20 cents.

It is curious how few of mankind are aware of the fact, so patent to the informed intelligence, that creation instead of being done once and then discontinued, is unceasingly proceeding under our daily eye. This interesting truth, that nature was not once made by a God, in six days, who then rested, but that it is unendingly making and remaking itself, is set forth in detail in H. M. Simmons's book, "The Unending Genesis; or, Creation Ever Present." This is published by Chas. H. Kerr & Co., at 25 cents. In opening, Mr. Simmons adverts to the fact that the Bible story of creation "has much in common with that on the old Assyrian tablets discovered at Nineveh, and probably both were derived from those older Babylonian legends which have furnished much to the opening chapters of the Bible." Stomaching as best they may this charge that their scriptures are borrowed, Christians will proceed through the chapters, "The Old Genesis Story," "The Firmament of Space," and "Worlds Rounded and Rolling." This last chapter, by the way, closes with the statement that the greater Genesis of the bible of science opens with a text far finer than that heading the Christian one. This cosmogonic text up to date is: "Without beginning and without end, from everlasting to everlasting, God creates the heavens and the earth." In succeeding chapters the writer continues to show the folly of the Bible and pulpit version of creation, presenting the scientific account of that highly useful process. He entitles these pleasant chapters, "Worlds Warmed," "Let There Be Light," "Compounds and Crystals," "Sea and Land," "The Air Firmament," "Plant Creation," "Animal Creation," "The Mental Dominion," and "Moral and Spiritual Creations." The outcome is a very pretty little portrayal of how our space-wandering ball and its animate passengers came to set out on their eventful excursion. The author seems throughout the booklet to be keeping company more or less with one of those individuals not nowadays always admitted to the best society, namely, Gods; but this fellow consorted with by Mr. Simmons looks a mild sort of individual, and, we think, won't bite.

Stuart Robson, the eminent actor known all over the country, keeps a scrapbook in which he pastes all collectible newspaper clippings relating clerical crimes. His motif, he boldly proclaims at all places and times, is, when his profession is accused by the parsons of immorality, to show that those persons are equally guilty of it. This is a most praisable scheme. If each profession or craft in the land would follow suit, but a very short time would pass before the shamefully arrogant claims of the clergy to a superior morality would be definitely exploded. These humbugs who are guilty not only of as much roguery as others but of vastly more, and who, despite this, with an effrontery almost beyond belief, take upon themselves to reprimand everybody else, would be exposed and indignantly disgraced. And their pernicious churchly institution, which we with the utmost possible clearness see breeds wrongdoing beyond any other thing, would be unceremoniously overtopped into its fitting pit of ignominy. In this undertaking, not pleasant in every phase but commandingly necessary, the class of Freethinkers have done some work. The well-known volume, "Crimes of Preachers," has been circulated by them for some years, to the discomfort of no few of the detestable interlopers and impostors. A new edition of this work is just out. It has been enlarged by the records of ministerial villanies perpetrated since its third edition. The culprit's name, residence, denomination, and crime are given. Dreadful reading is the recapitulation in which the offenses are resurveyed grouped according to their identity. Merely from "A" to "C," for instance, the churchmanly record runs: "Abortion, Allowing child to die without medical service, Adultery, Assault with intent to murder, Assault with intent to do great harm, Assault with intent to rape, Assault and battery, Attempted elopement with women, Abusive language, Attempted bigamy, Arson, Bastardy, Beating wife, Bigamy, Breach of promise of marriage, Buggery, Breach of hospitality, Breach of trust, Burglary, Bribery, Blackmail, "Beecherism," Beggary, Beating women, Compounding felony, Compelling to marry, Coercing dying into willing him property, Coercing persons into giving to his institution, Cruelty to animals, Cruelty to children, Cruelty to wife, Cheating, Counterfeiting, Criminal carelessness." From the final summary we learn of 2,420 crimes charged, of which 1,202 are against women in a sexual way. The price of the book is 25 cents. Further particulars of it are given in our advertisement columns.

In one very comely volume we find two works of Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., the devoted Liberal, industrious humanitarian, and widely informed physician. The first work is titled, "The Seven Wonders of the Human Body, and Some of Its Freaks." This is a lecture on physiology which was delivered as accompaniment to a stereopticon lecture. It is highly fascinating, and, as is said of novels, once begun will not be laid down till finished. A host of facts about the construction and working of our animal frame are given. These facts are sugar-coated with alluring anecdotes and numerous illustrations. Even the interest which the mass of mankind are known to take in freaks and monstrosities of nature is taken advantage of, as accounts of some of the most singular of these miscreations are dovetailed into the work. A colored frontispiece representing the Seven Stages of the Human Creature in the womb and out, starts with faces of the sort which the absorbed Bible-reader sees in his dreams, and which he expects will greet Infidels, and about all of his congregation but himself, as they beach on the unbeautiful shore. These countenances of the babe at two weeks, four weeks, six weeks, and eight weeks, give way to less grotesque visages; of which one, that of the adult female, is a delight for lengthful contemplation. The headings scattered through the work are: "The Skeleton Man," "The Muscle Man," "The Skin Man," "The Nerve Man," "Our Automatic Man," "The Lungs—Respiration," "Special Organs for Excretion," and "Man's Diaphragm." The statements are so informing as to be valuable to the adult, while the style has been carefully made so popular and seductive that youths will interestedly read it without the command necessary to make them study other works. Parents who would like to have their children learn a little of how their bodies work and how they can be kept in repair, may by means of this book carry out their desires without recourse to the stick. With this production is bound a treatise on "Autotoxemia, or Self-Poisoning of the Blood; Explaining the Origin, Relation, and Treatment of a Variety of Common Ailments and Chronic Diseases." From this inditing it appears that if people continually let themselves get constipated the waste matter reabsorbed into their system will poison their blood, and by its operation on the liver, etc., ruin their health and make them as cross as a minister who has heard that one of his townsmen is circulating Infidel literature. The pages of the work first mentioned number 68; the latter favors us with 149 wise pages. The price is 25 cents.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists. Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers: "Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?" Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GOLD.

SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS F. BLACKBURN

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL.

MINERAL.

3mo14

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

THE end of all our moral attainments is tranquillity of mind.—Democritus.

THE most useful conviction that can be imprinted on the mind of rational beings is that every crime is a certain cause of suffering to him who commits it.—Epicurus.

GOVERNMENT is an expedient by which men would fain succeed in letting each other alone; and when it is most expedient, the governed are most let alone by it.—Thoreau.

JUSTICE consists in doing no injury to men; civility in giving them no offense. We should be as careful of our words as our actions; as far from speaking as from acting ill.—Cicero.

THE Voltairean spirit is a solicitation to the world of readers to think with their own minds, to believe only what is in harmony with the known nature of things, and, having done this themselves, to concede the same right to all men without reserve.—Parker.

In the history of our modern nations I see little but confusion; a crowd of trifling events, without connection and without result; a thousand battles which decided nothing, and from which I only learn what weapons men used to destroy one another with. I have renounced a study equally tedious and immense, which overwhelms the mind without enlightening it.—Voltaire.

THERE are to be found in no direction clear scientific facts which compel us to believe in the existence of innate ideas, conceptions, views, knowledge, or thoughts, implanted in our minds from without by a higher power. Nature knows neither views nor objects, neither psychical nor material conditions, imposed upon her from without or from above. From the beginning to the end she has evolved organically out of herself, and keeps evolving without ceasing.—Büchner.

LET us be honest. Did all the priests of Rome increase the mental wealth of man as much as Bruno? Did all the priests of France do as great a work for the civilization of the world as Voltaire or Diderot? Did all the ministers of Scotland add as much to the sum of human knowledge as David Hume? Have all the clergymen, monks, friars, ministers, priests, bishops, cardinals, and popes, from the day of Pentecost to the last election, done as much for human liberty as Thomas Paine?—Ingersoll.

I DESIRED to read the history of France, Germany, Spain, Italy, and found a mere chaos; a heap of useless facts, for the most part false and ill digested; barbarous actions under barbarous names; insipid romances; no knowledge of manners, governments, laws, opinions—not very extraordinary in a time when there were no opinions except monks' legends, and no laws except those of brigandage. The Middle Ages! Nothing remains of those miserable times but convents founded by the superstitious, who thought to ransom their crimes by endowing idleness. I can not endure in Daniel those continual tales of battles, while I look for light upon the states-general, parliaments, municipal laws, chivalry, all our usages, and above all, the progress of communities once savage and to-day civilized. I seek in Daniel the history of the great Henry the Fourth, and I find in it that of the Jesuit Coton.—Mme. du Chatelet.

In the realm of morals, serviceable as the idea of fire-brands thrown by the right hand of an avenging God [i. e., comets] to scare a naughty world might seem, any competent historian must find that the destruction of the old theological cometary theory was followed by moral improvement rather than by deterioration. We have but to compare the general moral tone of society to-day, wretchedly imperfect as it is, with that existing in the time when this superstition had its strongest hold, to make ourselves sure of this. We have only to compare the court of Henry VIII. with the court of Victoria, the reign of the late Valois and earlier Bourbon princes with the present French Republic, the period of the Medici and Sforzas and Borgias with the period of Leo XIII. and Humbert, the monstrous wickedness of the Thirty Years' War with the ennobling patriotism of the Franco-Prussian struggle, and the despotism of the miserable German princelings of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries with the reign of the Emperor William. In this emancipation from terror and fanaticism, as in so many other results of scientific thinking, we have a proof of the inspiration of those great words, "THE TRUTH SHALL MAKE YOU FREE."—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25; gilt, $1.50.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for "blasphemy." Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyze the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERANCE.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents.

CIVIL RIGHTS SPEECH.

With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE. A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9x13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

A LAY SERMON.

On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

" " " COLONEL INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN.

(A home picture.) 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 18x24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7x13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT.

An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents.

INGERSOLL ON McGLYNN.

Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED. Paper, 3 cents. BIBLE IDOLATRY. Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1883. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE,

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1892. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Bazaar at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings. This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,337 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly calendered, and richly tinted, the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it. As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "Tributes" that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Eliza Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Besides these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In the more elegant styles of binding it is eminently suited for presentation purposes, for any season or occasion.

Prices.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

INFIDEL DEATH- BEDS.

By
G. W. FOSTER.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendree, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Anstin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
- 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... 25
- Underwood..... 10
- 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
- 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
- 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
- 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
- 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
- 12 Tyndal's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait..... 25
- 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
- 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 15 Were Adam and Eve Our first Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
- 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
- 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
- 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
- 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
- 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
- 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
- 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
- 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
- 38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 10
- 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... 10
- 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
- 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
- 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh.....

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 5
- 2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 5 20 Questions Without Answers..... 5
- 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
- 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
- 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
- 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
- 11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
- 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 10
- 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake..... 10
- 14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
- 15 Lu'icrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
- 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH. A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.
STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL
Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons, { Oxidized, each $2.70
{ 10 ounces per doz., }
" " { Oxidized, " 3.00
{ 14 ounces per doz., }
" " { Oxidized, " 3.00
{ gilt bowl, }
{ 10 ounces per doz., }
" " { Oxidized, " 3.50
{ sectional gilt, }
{ 10 ounces per doz., }
Orange " Oxidized, plain bowl, " 2.75
" " " gilt " " 3.25
Sugar " " satin " " 3.00
" " " gilt " " 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl. "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Badges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.,

Designer of The Perfect "Otto Wetstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. RAGGER & Co., Attys. Washington, D.C.

Do Your Own PRINTING.

Card Press $3. Size for circulars or small newspaper $22. Saves you money and makes money printing for neighbors. Full printed instructions. Send stamp for catalogue of presses, type, cards, etc., to the factory.

KELSEY & CO., Meriden, Connecticut.

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc. A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also Lanterns for Home Amusements. 236 page Catalogue free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST. For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N.J.

And say you saw this advertisement in The TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel

To regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABLETS.

RIPANS TABLETS

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

A FINE ADVERTISEMENT FOR A GROGSHOP-KEEPER.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.25.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

-OR-

Curious Revelations From the
Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's

ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the finest dressed kid strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regular goods of equal quality sell for 50c. to 1.00c.) Comprises 3 pockets, which we GUARANTEE no one can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzling. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction Guaranteed. Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Catalogue of 1000 useful articles, 25c; 2 for 60c; 6 for $1.00, $1.80 Doz. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt st., N. Y.

News of the Week.

Two of the jerry-built hotels thrown up at Chicago for Fair visitors, collapsed in a slight storm on the 7th.

PHYSICIANS and quarantine officers from twenty-eight states and Canada met at New York and conferred on excluding cholera.

THE Law and Order League of Pittsburgh, Pa., has had the manager of the Press fined $25 each for three violations of the Sunday law in the publishing of his paper. Attorney Yost of the Law and Order League says publishers of Monday morning papers will be prosecuted next, and those who work on papers must submit to work five days a week, unless they prepare Monday papers after 12 Sunday night.

A PROTEST has been made against the Senate's considering the Russian extradition treaty with closed doors. It is signed by such eminent citizens as Richard Watson Gilde, William Lloyd Garrison, Thomas Edison, Charles Scribner, F. B. Thurber, and William D. Howells. The protest says: "For the United States, every feature of whose criminal law is drawn to secure the rights of the individual, to make a treaty with a foreign autocracy which, in political trials, employs a system in which neither habeas corpus, trial by jury, nor the rights of a prisoner to employ his own counsel is known, would be to turn its courts into the instruments of a foreign tyranny."

Where Will You Sleep?

Questions relating to sleeping accommodations in Chicago while visiting the great "Fair" must be of interest to many of our readers, for it is not everyone who will be so fortunate as to have friends or relatives there who will offer entertainment at their homes. There have undoubtedly been great preparations made to take care of the large number of people who will visit the "World's Fair," and it is probable that in nothing else has there been so much in the way of scheming and swindling going on as in this particular. There are all sorts of "dodges." For instance: Some invite you to "subscribe for stock in hotel companies and share in the profits arising therefrom—by filling out a blank and pinning a $1 bill to it!" Some invite you to "purchase a share in an 'association' for $10 and pay a membership fee of $2." Others beg you to "allow them to pay all of your expenses, from the time you leave your home until you return to it!" Others require "a substantial 'deposit' to be made, as a guarantee of good faith!" Many expatiate at length upon the merits of their buildings, but ingeniously avoid stating that such buildings are from ten to twenty miles removed from the grand entrance to the Fair! An immense structure of the "elegant" kind is known to be located on the very edge of a cemetery, which is also "kept dark." Some have represented that they would erect four- or five-story brick buildings, when they have, in fact, built two-story, ramshackle frame fire-traps, in which their victims will be huddled together like peas in a pod! Those who have advanced money for "shares of stock," "membership fees," or "deposits," will find that many "companies" to whom they advanced such monies were depending entirely upon those advances for the money with which to construct their houses, and that, in many cases, sufficient funds were not realized for the intended purpose. In these cases, the innocent "investor" will be confronted with unfinished apartments, and he will thus find his money "tied up" in unavailable "accommodations." In other cases, the "shark" will have "skipped" without even having "broken ground" for a house!

There are others, however, who have erected substantial buildings and have made conscientious preparations to receive and take care of visitors in an honest, straightforward manner. In this connection we wish to call attention to Mr. Goodwin's attractive advertisement on the outside front page of this issue. Our representative has known Mr. Goodwin in a business way for a number of years. He assures us that Mr. Goodwin has the reputation of faithfully fulfilling his promises, and we have good reason to believe that in this new enterprise of his he can be implicitly relied upon. He has built a permanent house, which he will use this year for the renting of rooms and afterward let as apartments for families. There are in his house only forty-three rooms—each well lighted and newly furnished—while his price, we are sure, cannot be complained of. Mr. Goodwin, who is a Liberal, broad-minded, and refined gentleman of culture, will spend the season there, and promises to extend special courtesies to any readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER who may be his guests. We advise our readers to send to Mr. Goodwin for further particulars respecting his house, the "Santa Maria."

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 16. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 22, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST:—"Teach POPERY or teach nothing! Submit or I'll strangle you!"

HOW THE ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST LOVES FREE EDUCATION.

THIS IS THE HOUSE THAT JOE BUILT!

HE HAS NAMED IT "The Santa Maria."

'Tis located at 674 East Sixty-third Street, Chicago, and is within NINE MINUTES walking distance from the GRAND ENTRANCE to the World's Fair!

Entirely of brick and stone; permanent structure; stands alone; all outside rooms; new and neat; select neighborhood; high and dry; good plumbing; every modern improvement; $1.00 to $2.00 a day; NO DEPOSIT REQUIRED; under owner's management; only 43 rooms; HOME-LIKE! Address

JOSEPH H. GOODWIN, proprietor.

Why not engage rooms now? They're GOING!

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Truth Seeker Library.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. Bennett. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $8; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church: Their Cri and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. Bennett. 8vo, 1,119 pages. Morocco, gilt edges. Price, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages. By D. M. Bennett. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustive work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. Newman, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4; leather, $5; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams, Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and the Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred writings of the World. By Viscount Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BRALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable.

Price, $1.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated Price, cloth, $2.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN.

Price 25 cents.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that Infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam"; What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain. Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cells and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so fondly mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

—o—
Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling revelations.

—o—
Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK--AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE!

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subtleties, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances.

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables {Gateways to Knowledge.

{Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages, Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER.

28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE INGERSOLL Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Other Newspapers WITH The Truth Seeker.

Any of our readers who desire a New York weekly political paper can obtain one of the following in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER at reduced rates:

Tribune (Republican) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, $3 50
Tribune (Republican) semi-weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 4 25
The Sun (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 3 50
The World (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 3 50
THE ARENA and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year both for $6 00
With large picture premium with the Arena, 6 50
THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year for $6 75

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 16. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, April 22, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - APRIL 22, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Weather and Witchcraft.

We will conclude our account of the preposterous doctrine of the Christian church that bad weather is produced by human emissaries of Satan, and of the terrific cruelties practiced on the persons supposed to be those emissaries.

The endeavor to detect the evil-working sorcerers and witches, when it had once been started by the papal bulls, spread over Europe and rapidly grew in fury. The Dominicans plied the task with fervor, and when they fell from the fore rank the Jesuits took up the work and prosecuted it with equal zeal. A very few keen-minded persons, scattered here and there, pierced through the mist of the prevailing superstition; Agobard, archbishop of Lyons, for instance, declared, "The wretched world now lies under the tyranny of foolishness; things are believed by Christians of such absurdity as no one ever could aforesaid induce the heathen to believe;" but these solitary thinkers were by fear or force soon reduced to silence. It was in vain that the scientific investigator Paracelsus offered a physical theory of thunder; the great ecclesiastical champion Bodin laughed it to scorn, for, said he, thunder is "a flaming exhalation set in motion by evil spirits," and this is proved not only by the confessions of tortured witches, but by the passage in Psalm civ: "Whom maketh his angels spirits, his ministers a flaming fire." The volumes in demonstration of the theory of witchcraft were of great number. One of the most noted was by Bishop Binsfield of Treves, France. This book, written toward the end of the sixteenth century, enlarges in proof that everything confessed by witches under torture, especially as to the raising of storms and the general control of the weather, is worthy of belief. It was long a standard authority, both with Catholics and with Protestants, throughout Europe. Its title-page contains the boast of the author that in fifteen years he had for this crime sent to death nine hundred persons. Of the scriptural texts cited in proof of these doctrines, those most frequently advanced were the ones treating of the witch of Endor, the demoniacs of the New Testament, and the magicians of Egypt who contended with Moses and Aaron in the court of Pharaoh. In the vast literature formed on the subject, the different species of witchcraft were all carefully classified and associated with particular doctrines. The whole philosophy of the satanic was minutely investigated, and the prevailing mode of thought embodied in bulky treatises regarded as masterpieces of theology. Bodin's "Démonomanie des Sorciers," as a typical and celebrated work, may be worthy of a few more words here. The "Démonomanie des Sorciers" is chiefly an appeal to authority, which the author deemed on this subject so unanimous and so conclusively that it was scarcely possible for any sane man to resist it. He appealed to the popular belief in all countries, in all ages, and in all religions. He cited the opinions of an immense multitude of the greatest writers of pagan antiquity, and of the most illustrious of the fathers. He showed how the laws of all nations recognized the existence of witchcraft; and he collected hundreds of cases which had been investigated before the tribunals of his own or of other countries. He relates with the most minute and circumstantial detail, and with the most unfaltering confidence, all the proceedings at the witches' Sabbath, the methods which the witches employed in transporting themselves through the air, their transformations, their carnal intercourse with the devil, their various means of injuring their enemies, the signs that lead to their detection, their confessions when condemned, and their demeanor at the stake. The showing of mercy to witches he especially reprobates. To pardon those whom the law of God condemned to death, was indeed beyond the province of princes. Those who were guilty of such an act had outraged the majesty of heaven. They had virtually repudiated the divine law, and pestilence and famine would inevitably desolate their dominions. One fatal example there had been of a king tampering with his duty in this respect. Charles IX. had spared the life of the famous sorcerer Trois Echelles, on the condition of his informing against his colleagues; and it is to this grievous sin that the early death of the king is most probably to be ascribed: "For the word of God is very certain, that he who suffers a man worthy of death to escape, draws the punishment upon himself, as the prophet said to king Ahab, that he should die for having pardoned a man worthy of death. For no one had ever heard of pardon being accorded to sorcerers."

Of the fearful harvest which was reaped from the seeds thus sown, we will give a few outlines. In almost every province of Germany, but especially in those where clerical influence predominated, persecution raged with fearful intensity. Seven thousand victims are said to have been burnt at Trèves, six hundred by a single bishop of Bamberg, and eight hundred in a single year in the bishopric of Würzburg. In France, decrees were passed on the subject by the parliaments of Paris, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Rheims, Rouen, Dijon, and Rennes, and they were all followed by a harvest of blood. At Toulouse, the seat of the Inquisition, four hundred persons perished for sorcery at a single execution, and fifty at Douay in a single year. Remy, a judge of Nancy, boasted that he had put to death eight hundred witches in sixteen years. The executions that took place at Paris in a few months were, in the emphatic words of an old writer, "almost infinite." The fugitives who escaped to Spain were there seized and burnt by the Inquisition. In that country the persecution spread to the smallest towns, and the belief was so deeply rooted in the popular mind that a sorcerer was burnt as late as 1780. Torquemada devoted himself to the extirpation of witchcraft as zealously as to the extirpation of heresy, and he wrote a book on the enormity of the crime. In Italy, a thousand persons were executed in a single year in the province of Como; and in other parts of the country the severity of the Inquisitors at last created an absolute rebellion. The same scenes were enacted in the wild valleys of Switzerland and of Savoy. In Geneva, which was then ruled by a bishop, five hundred alleged witches were executed in three months; forty-eight were burnt at Constance or Ravensburg, and eighty in the little town of Valery, in Savoy. In 1670, seventy persons were condemned in Sweden, and a large portion of them were burnt. And these are only a few of the more salient events in that long series of persecutions which extended over almost every country, and continued for centuries with unabated fury. The church of Rome proclaimed in every way that was in her power the reality and the continued existence of the crime. She strained every nerve to stimulate the persecution. She taught by all her organs that to spare a witch was a direct insult to the almighty, and to her ceaseless exertions is to be attributed by far the greater proportion of the blood that was shed. In 1484, as we related, Pope Innocent VIII. had issued a bull which gave a fearful impetus to the persecution, and he it was who commissioned the Inquisitor Sprenger, whose book was long the recognized manual on the subject, and who is said to have condemned hundreds to death every year. Similar bulls were issued by Julius II. in 1504, and by Adrian VI. in 1523. A long series of provincial councils asserted the existence of sorcery, and anathematized those who resorted to it. "The universal practice of the church was to place magic and sorcery among the reserved cases, and at prones to declare magicians and sorcerers excommunicated;" and a form of exorcism was solemnly inserted in the ritual. Almost all the great works that were written in favor of the executions were written by ecclesiastics. Almost all the lay works on the same side were dedicated to and sanctioned by ecclesiastical dignitaries. Ecclesiastical tribunals condemned thousands to death, and countless bishops exerted all their influence to multiply the victims. In a word, for many centuries it was universally believed that the continued existence of witchcraft formed an integral part of the teachings of the church, and that the persecution that raged through Europe was supported by the whole stress of her infallibility.

Such was the attitude of the church of Rome with reference to this subject, but on this ground the Protestant Reformers had no conflict with their opponents. The credulity which Luther manifested on all matters connected with diabolical intervention was amazing, even for his age; and, when speaking of witchcraft, his language was emphatic and unhesitating. "I would have no compassion on these witches," he exclaimed, "I would burn them all!" In England the establishment of the Reformation was the signal for an immediate outburst of witchcraft superstition; and there, as elsewhere, its decline was represented by the clergy as the direct consequence and the exact measure of the progress of religious skepticism. In Scotland, where the Reformed ministers exercised greater influence than in any other country, and where the witch trials fell almost entirely into their hands, the persecution was proportionately atrocious. Probably the ablest defender of the belief was Glanvil, a clergyman of the English establishment; and one of the most influential was Baxter, the greatest of the Puritans. It spread, with Puritanism, into the New World; and the executions in Massachusetts form one of the darkest pages in the history of America. The greatest religious leader of the last century, Wesley, was among the latest of its supporters.

But these countries to which our narrative is now bringing us, demand a fuller treatment than they can obtain in this week's issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Pausing after this account of the witchcraft persecutions of continental Europe, we will give next week a relation of those of England, Scotland, and our own land.

The World's Fair on Sunday.

As week after week passes without the Sunday opening of the World's Columbian Exposition being obtained, it looks more and more as though the churchmen are going to triumph in their crowning outrage on the rights of the people. These hateful meddlers and domineers are found chuckling and gloating over their vile deed in all of their periodicals and pulpits.

Rev. Robt. MacArthur, of New York, says: "If the gates are opened America will be false to its history and disloyal to its God. It will not be making a true exhibition of one of its historical institutions—the American Sunday. It will be bowing down at the feet of the gods of greed and lust. It is a great thing for the nation that the Congress of the United States has emphatically voted against opening the gates. Even if the local directory, by some legal technicality, should secure the opening, the moral influence of the action of Congress would still be exercised over the nations of the earth."

How "moral" will be the influence of the action of Congress, and of the closing if it prevails, may easily be conceived by anyone who knows the tendencies of crowds in strange cities when no place of innocent interest is open. Full swing, it is most clear, will be given to debauchery of every description at Chicago this year. In the words of the Detroit Free Press, "it looks as though the World's Fair would be the only thing closed on Sunday in Chicago this season."

The evil effects of Sunday closing are, we are pleased to be able to note, deplored and deprecated by one ecclesiastic—a white sheep of a black flock. This is Bishop Spalding, Roman Catholic, of Peoria, Ill. He says: "I hope some means can yet be devised through which the Fair will be opened Sunday. There will be thousands of visitors here, and with the saloons and places of vice being wide open while the gates of the Fair are shut, I fear there will be cause for regret that the Exposition was closed. I believe that all museums and libraries should be open on Sundays. They act as educators, and no one disputes the fact that they elevate mankind. If Puritanical customs must prevail, why not close the public parks on Sundays? If Christian ministers insist on closing the gates of the Exposition, workingmen will believe that the church has no sympathy with them and the influence the church now has among them will be almost entirely destroyed."

Mohammedan Nibblings at Christianity.

The inferiority of Christianity to most other religions, and the objectionableness of some customs that prevail in Christendom, continue to be exposed to Americans by the Mohammedan missionary, Muhammed Alexander Russell Webb.

One of the most telling points made by this goodly emissary of Moslem is that respecting liquor-drinking. His religion forbids this practice, and has reclaimed to prosperity many African peoples plunged in degradation by contact with Christian rum and religion. The position of Christianity on alcoholic indulgence is well known to readers of E. C. Walker's "Bible Temperance" and a number of other publications.

A statement in Mr. Webb's previous lectures that Mohammedan women had been shocked by some customs of American ladies, is in his latest utterance made more explicit. He details: "The Mohammedan women are not what they are represented to be. I lectured to about fifty of them one day in a private house in Bombay. They were all behind a curtain. I told them of the American girl's courtship and ball dresses—those low-cut affairs with two shoulder straps. The next day I was told that the women were horrified and said they could not believe American girls were so degraded."

From our Islamitic friend's further remarks we find—what might have been expected—that his religion has suffered equally with Infidels from the venomous tongue of that notorious slanderess Christianity. "European works on Islam and its founder," he tells us, "contain little else than abuse. Dean Prideaux, a Christian author, was naturally biased, and utterly unacquainted with his subject. This man is accused of deliberately inserting in the Koran a line of his own composition and invention to throw discredit upon Mohammed. Sale, in his later translation, exposed this fraud."

If religion we must have, let it be of Mohammedan, Buddhist, and every kind possible. Multiplicity of religions will insure freedom to all of them, and to the dissenter from all faiths as well. Evil is the predominance of one sole religion—especially of that most tyrannical of all, Christianity.

Commissioner Gray of the New York city park board expresses his opinion that the Museum of Art should be kept open all day Sunday. Three times as many persons visit it on that day, he says, as on any other, and it is ridiculous that it should be open only a few hours in the afternoon. But there is little chance that the clergy will ever submit to seeing this institution open during the hours which they have learned to consider their own for rifling the pockets of the people.

A monthly journal devoted to the interests of watch, jewelry, and kindred industries contains in its April number an article entitled "The Story of My First Watch." Those who tell the story are well-known men and women, among them Colonel Ingersoll, who says: "I do not remember my first watch—though I certainly had a first one; and I cannot tell whether it was good, bad, or indifferent—but I presume it was bad. Forty years ago a watch was not a necessity; now it is—without a watch you lose a train, and losing many trains consecutively invites demoralization."

Bill Nye—for the public—believes in a God, but his deity is different from the orthodox ideal, in that he is not a Sabbatarian. Bill has been traveling out West recently, and writes thus of one of Nature's phenomena: "Much may be said of the magnificence and awful and impressiv grandeur of the Royal gorge, and the wonderful power that could not only create but sever these great mountains as with a mighty sword. Much might be written of all the wonders between the Mississippi and the Golden Gate, enough to convince the most skeptical, doubting soul on earth that there was a great and good intelligence back of all accidental chemistry, glacier erosion, earthquake action, and preadamite changes—a God who created this mighty museum of never-ceasing wonders and then left them all open on Sunday, so that the poor and the workingmen might come and see them. I still believe that there could have been no harm in leaving the Royal gorge open on Sunday."

The Evening Post, in its ponderous but usually sensible way, has reached the conclusion that praying is not a legitimate government business, that the ministers selected to officiate often possess faults more mighty than their virtues, and that the finest settlement of the trouble would be to abolish the preachers and their prayers. The Post says: The difficulties of serving as chaplain of a legislative body appear to be on the increase. We commented some weeks ago upon the dissatisfaction caused in both Kansas and Nebraska the past winter by the display of partisanship in the prayers of the clergymen employed. There has been even more serious trouble in Texas. A bill was recently defeated in the house of representatives which proposed to make an appropriation from the state treasury for the establishment of a home for fallen women. Next day the chaplain besought the deity to "open the eyes of those who have allowed the love of money to be balanced against virtue, that they may see that purity is above rubies, and that in their hands is placed the power to save those against whom the false standard of society has closed the churches and all avenues of reformation." One of the members who had voted against the bill offered a resolution reciting that "the prayer which appears in the house journals this morning is an unjust and unwarrantable reflection on certain members," and ordering that the portion above quoted be expunged from the journals. Another member supported the motion in a vigorous speech, declaring the prayer "an insult to the members," and an "attempt of the chaplain to dictate to the house." But the chaplain had his defenders also, one of whom insisted that he had not gone far enough; that "without prayer and much prayer you are gone forever;" and that "there are members criticising this prayer who are steeped in vice and folly and need prayer." The clergyman himself was given the floor, and explained that he had no individual member in mind, and that they were "all patriotic, honest, and honorable gentlemen"—in short, that the objectionable passage was uttered in a Pickwickian sense. Thereupon the resolution was rejected and the matter was dropped. The incident shows very clearly what a farce the chaplain's prayer is becoming, and should hasten the day of its abolition.

New Books.

We have supplied all who ordered "The Crimes of Preachers," and are able and quite willing to supply more. To facilitate the acquisition of knowledge about the men of God in this country we offer five of these books for $1. We suggest that quantities be obtained and distributed around the neighborhood.

A new edition of Bell's "Handbook of Free-thought," of which Mr. Jamieson speaks so highly, has also been rendered necessary by the free sale of the old, and we have improved the occasion to bring out a paper edition and reduce the price on the cloth-bound one, which we make $1. The paper-covered style is 50 cents. This book ought to sell by the thousands now.

Mr. Putnam's new book is meeting with general favor, a large number of orders having already been received. Mr. Putnam read the final proofs just previous to his departure for Buffalo and the West, and the pressmen are at work upon it. We shall have it ready for delivery in a week or ten days. It ought to be circulated widely. It goes to the very bedrock of the religious question.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the new book, "The Creation of God," a notice of which appeared recently. Dr. Hartmann is a practicing physician of this city, with the solid qualities characteristic of German scientific men, and thinks for himself in medical as well as theological matters. This book contains a great deal of useful information regarding man, how he is made, and how he makes his gods. The book is very cheap, at the prices given, and should have a large sale.

The cartoon on the first page of THE TRUTH SEEKER for March 25th, showing what Christianity has borrowed from the pagans, has met with exceeding great favor, greatly deserved, for it shows at a glance what it takes a volume to explain—that Christianity is not an original religion, but an adaptation of preceding systems, with some bad features added. Mr. Smith, of Geneva, has ordered a lot for distribution, and we have received a request from England for permission to use it there. In order to facilitate its wide distribution we have printed it separately and suggest that our readers send for some and circulate them. We will mail them for 10 cents a dozen, or 75 cents a hundred, and give generous count.

We have been a little industrious this winter, without saying much about it, in getting out new books, and have still another one to announce as complete. "The Resurrection of Jesus" is a new treatment of a subject vital to Christianity, and one upon which Paul allowed that the whole system hinged. It is a striking commentary upon that system also that those in some communities in this "free" country who have the common sense to see its falsity are forced to conceal their conclusions. The author of this work says it would ruin him professionally to have it known that he wrote it, so it is published under the name of Don Allen. However, the author is a writer very favorably known to our readers, and will be more so from this book. A review of this work will be given next week, and in the mean time its essential points are set forth in an advertisement appearing elsewhere.

In the East.

News and Notes.

About five hundred people were present at the Victoria Armory Hall Sunday afternoon, April 9th, at the lecture on "Spiritualism, Theosophy, and Freethought." There was also an increased attendance at the evening lecture in Fraternity Hall, Point St. Charles. So Montreal, in its northern fastnesses, where the power of the church is so venerable and great, is not by any means without hope. The mass of ignorance, however, against which Freethought has to struggle is shown in the fact that a bill was introduced in the provincial parliament to allow those who could not read or write to be members of the school board. What a comment on "Christianity and civilization."

Through the continued and well-directed efforts of George Martin, first president of the Freethought Club, and Captain Adams it is now the law of the Dominion of Canada that one can affirm if he wishes, and the Agnostic and Atheist are competent witnesses. This is a great gain in legislation, and Canada is ahead of Massachusetts.

Even McGill University feels the breath of progress. The theological students are no longer on the free list. They have to pay their way. Evolution is pretty well enthroned in the medical department, and even Principal Dawson hedges somewhat and is not so orthodox as he once was. There is no question but McGill University will wheel into the line of advance. It has been nobly endowed by Freethinkers. Mr. Moulson, Mr. Macdonald, and Mr. Workman have given millions to this institution, and its educational facilities during the last few years have been wonderfully increased; and it is inevitable that the spirit of science will prevail in all its departments.

Mr. Moulson gave $10,000 for the opening of the public library on Sundays. His gift was accepted and Freethought has taken this vantage-ground.

I had the pleasure of meeting W. S. Barnes, a very Liberal-minded and scholarly clergyman of the Unitarian church. In fact, the only difference between him and myself is on the question of theism. His criticisms of the Bible and dogmatic Christianity are as radical as my own.

Thus there are many influences in Montreal in favor of freedom. The priests do not have it all their own way.

There is a vast amount of unexpressed Freethought in the social and literary life of the city. It pervades the educated classes, although not distinctly recognized.

I found Captain Adams to be a stalwart supporter in my campaign here, always saying just the right word in his opening or closing addresses, and keeping the audience in full sympathy with the speaker, and the cause for which he pleads. I am sorry that Mrs. Adams was unwell during my visit, but even though an invalid for the time being, the brightness of Freethought was not lacking in one who has been so brave and clear-sighted a truth-seeker in the intellectual struggles of this age. Mr. and Mrs. Adams and Walter Adams will spend the summer in British Columbia, where I hope the golden streams will flow and "make a rattle" for the gallant captain.

I leave Montreal on Monday morning, April 10th, having enjoyed to the utmost the Liberal and social life of the city. The weather was fine, the soft April winds breathing over the glittering snows; while the huge buildings, the river, and the mountains make a beautiful picture beneath the clear skies.

Monday night I am in Boston, and Tuesday glance in at the Investigator office, where there is always good cheer; have a chance to see Dr. Noyes, E. C. Walker, Schum, Yarros, the Tiltons, Simpson, and others, who make Boston a kind of electric machine, so that you can't pass through without being "shook up" with new ideas and tremendously radical notions which make you wonder what the finality will be in this infinitesimal clash of thought. I suppose, however, the finality will never come. We shall never know what the end will be; when we think we are safely anchored, there is a fresh tempest and we must go dashing on.

Tuesday evening I am among the Cape Cod folks.

I have always wanted to come to Cape Cod, and look upon the "peculiar people" here, who in this somewhat out-of-the-way place, stretching into the sea with pine woods and lonely sands, have cultivated a serene and independent existence, and developed a type of Yankee upon which even Boston might look with surprise and admiration. That was in the time when almost all were seafaring men, when they went on long voyages, tackled the whale at the North Pole, passed through innumerable adventures, and came home with a thousand and one stories as vivid and ghostly as those of the "Arabian Nights." These dear old romantic tales of Cape Cod have passed forever away. The Cape is now covered with elegant residences. It is a gorgeous summer resort, amidst the beautiful shining seas. There are lovely drives in the pine woods and along the sandy shores. The ocean views are wonderfully fascinating, ever varying in the splendid atmosphere. No wonder the millionaire seeks these shining spots and builds his mansion. Lands not worth a dollar an acre in the good old days of the whale and the cod, now command $5,000 per acre. Anyone who has a frontage on the water has a small fortune, and the "back lots" are by no means at a small figure. Cape Cod is becoming fashionable and brilliant, and the vikings of the past are disappearing.

The Old Colony railroad takes me to West Barnstable. Osterville is seven miles from this place. Daniel Crosby meets me at the station, and soon I am at his pleasant home. A very good number gather at the hall, and I lecture on "The Demands of Liberalism." Our friends have just organized the "Cape Cod Secular Association," of which F. A. Makepeace is president; Daniel Crosby, J. S. Handy, vice-presidents; Mrs. Emily R. Crosby, treasurer; and Wm. T. Makepeace, secretary. A business meeting was held after the lecture, and $60 was subscribed in a few minutes for future work. The association has at present a small membership, but is bound to hold its own. The majority of the people are Liberals, but quite indifferent. It is this that the new society must overcome. The churches are pretty feeble, pretty sleepy, and Liberals think it not worth their while to organize against them. They do not realize that Freethought is education; that it is progressive and can only do its best by constant effort.

The Cape Cod Liberals who do see the danger have plenty of backbone, and will stand by their colors. On Wednesday morning Daniel Crosby drove me over to Osterville beach, where Moncure Conway, Miss Annie Shaw, etc., have summer residences. The sea views are charming from this place. In summer nearly two thousand people congregate here. The bathing is fine. The sea is covered with sails. Faint in the distance is Martha's Vineyard, and the lighthouse is just discerned. To the southward is Nantucket, but it is invisible.

The Crosbys, father and sons, and cousins and uncles, are all Liberals, and make quite a band in themselves. They are boat-builders, and their boats are among the fastest and most elegant on the sea, and their pennon has won the prize. I guess they build a hundred boats a year. Their boats are sold as far west as Michigan, and as far south as Florida. They are stanch and graceful and look as if they could skim over the waters like a thing of life. I spent an hour or so among the boathouses.

In the afternoon, with Mr. and Mrs. Crosby, I go over to Captain Handy's. I lecture here in the evening, but to a small audience. I was disappointed, for Cotuit has been quite a Liberal place in the past. Freedom Hall, in which I lectured, was built a number of years ago, in order that Liberals might always have a place in which to speak. But in spite of this Cotuit is not much of a Freethought community. If the churches sleep, the outsiders sleep also, and it is a drowsy community anyway, unless a minstrel show should come along, or a circus, or a funeral. Then the attendance would be large. If I had been a corpse I should have drawn ten times as many as I did.

Captain Handy has been over thirty years a seafaring man, has met every kind of fortune, and is not the sort of a man to give up when once he sets about a thing. He has battled with too many a storm and roughed it with too many a gale to ever haul down the flag of Freethought. Captain Handy, although not much my senior, is a grandfather, and wears his honors bravely. He was a happy father also, only a few months ago, and the uncle-baby is only two months older than the niece-baby. Cape Cod is a good place for babies. They are born healthy and numerous and flourish, and never surrender. They are natural Freethinkers and their rights are to be respected.

On Thursday I journey by way of West Barnstable to Harwich, where I am met by B. F. Robbins, who from his youth up has borne the banner of liberty and excelsior. For seventeen years he was on the sea, for the last thirty years he has been a landsman. He was one of the old antislavery guard, and many is the contest for freedom in which he has borne his full share. Parker Pillsbury used to come here, and he remembers Robbins as one of the most enthusiastic of the reformers. Garrison, Phillips, the Fosters, all have been here, and the antislavery speakers were once mobbed and there was nearly a tragedy, so furious were the passions of the hour.

The Liberal spirit is all through Harwich to-day, but the old antislavery fire has died out. Slavery is dead, and there is but little clear conception of new dangers and new tyrannies in the republic. There is much indifference here as elsewhere.

I lectured here last night, but it was stormy and only a few were present. I lecture again to-night, Friday, April 14th, and hope for a larger attendance.

It is the uncertain glory of an April day. Once in a while the sun comes out, and then the clouds prevail. I am at the home of B. F. Robbins, and whatever happens I am all right. He plays the violin and his daughters the piano. So music can fill the air be it sunshine or storm, and the old-time melodies thrill the heart. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Harwich, Mass.

To My Liberal Friends.

I propose to publish a pamphlet, the opening part of which appears in THE TRUTH SEEKER this week, entitled, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I consider that we are drifting into a most dangerous religious tyranny and war. It is not simply church and theology that we must oppose, but it is religion at the root of these, which is what I have defined it to be. We must understand religion, and for the safety of the race we must destroy religion. I want this book to be widely read. It is important. Religion as the foe of humanity is not sufficiently understood. We do not realize its terrific nature. I have written this book because I feel the necessity of speaking the plain truth. I challenge contradiction of my statements. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for this book. Circulate it. Price, 25 cents per copy.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The World's Fair From a Freethinker's Standpoint.

In May we shall begin the publication of a series of letters which will be of great interest and beauty. Samuel P. Putnam will write them from Chicago, and they will be about the World's great Fair, which opens in that lively and booming town on May 1st. Mr. Putnam's description—as everyone who knows him knows—will not be the commonplace matter of the geniusless boiler-plate correspondent, but the impressions made upon a cosmopolitan poet by the aggregation of samples of the world's progress in mechanics, art, literature, knowledge. The letters will undoubtedly be big and broad, wide and deep—a picture and a panorama, a history of human advance from "that man in the dug-out" to the racial subjugation of the forces of nature—so far as these forces are subdued. The letters will be essentially a Freethinker's view of the Fair, what it shows, and what it foreshadows, and we venture to say that among the hundreds of correspondents at the Fair, and the thousands of letters to be written by them, there will be none like the writer of the Freethought views and his descriptions. Readers of his "News and Notes" will agree with us in this estimate, we know.

We shall be obliged to our friends if they will call the attention of their friends to this announcement and suggest to them that a six months' subscription will insure them the receipt of these letters, which will alone be worth many times the cost of the paper.

The Truth Seeker Company, of 28 Lafayette place, New York, sends us a copy of a book, entitled, "Crimes of Preachers." It is mainly statistical, giving the number of crimes committed by preachers in the United States and Canada, the names and addresses of the criminals, their offenses, and to what denomination they belonged. The number of preachers who departed from the paths of rectitude is given as nine hundred and seventeen (no, as two thousand four hundred and twenty.—Ed. T. S.), which is appallingly large, when it is considered that the compiler has had but a limited source of information, and a large proportion of crimes committed by gentlemen of the cloth must unavoidably have escaped his attention. The book makes very interesting reading.—Mellette, S. D., Tribune.

Communications.

Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie.—(Continued.)

DEDICATED TO THE AMERICAN CONGRESS WHICH FOR THE SAKE OF RELIGION HAS STABBED LIBERTY TO THE HEART.

If we take the church's own figures, less than one-third are religious. Fling out the cowards and hypocrites and less than one-tenth are religious.

An orthodox clergyman recently declared that in the city of Boston there are only thirty thousand regular attendants upon divine service. In New York city only three hundred thousand attend church from Sunday to Sunday. The same proportion holds in every city and in every village. Let anyone consult his own experience as to the number of church-members among his acquaintances; and of these how many are sincerely religious? Religion does not enter into the life of one hundredth part of the people we meet. How many, as Ingersoll says, simply "believe that they believe." A recent church publication declares that only three per cent of the young men of this country are in open association with the churches. I realized this paucity of religion when I was in the ministry. I thought when I left the Theological Seminary, that I certainly was in the "swim," that religion was popular, that the people wanted it. I soon discovered my mistake. The vast majority of the people didn't want religion. The majority of my congregation, and the majority of my supporters, were non-religious. They didn't care a rap for religion. Religious topics were a humdrum affair, not half so interesting as corn and potatoes. I found that secular sermons pleased the people best; plain, simple discourses on morality. Every minister knows this, and it is the burden of his life. How often does he complain of the lack of spirituality, of dull prayer-meetings, etc. How much of the church work to-day is purely literary, and sociable church fairs take the cake and the cash too. Kissing-bees are the fashion. Greet one another with a holy kiss, at twenty-five cents each, is the ritual. Preachers have to ransack newspapers to get subjects to talk about. Sensational titles are the only ones that attract. "Get there," as Sam Jones says, is the theme and spirit of every discourse, and the only way that Sam Jones gets there is to be the "end man" of a minstrel show. The church has to resort to every trick to preserve its staying qualities. Even hell-fire is played out. A scandal in the church choir is a better advertisement than a million golden harps. There is music then and the pews are full. The churches subsist to-day on purely worldly nutriment. Oyster soup does more for the churches than all the prayers of the preachers. The cooking-stove in the fashionable ecclesiastical kitchen is a more effectual calling both to saints and sinners than all the fires of damnation, or the breath of the Holy Ghost. Take the "Sewing Circle," where pious women stitch, stitch for the glory of God. That is the place for religion of course. What an opportunity for the communion of saints, for spiritual edification, for holy conversation. Surely if religion is natural and universal, the sewing-circle should be the scene of its most illustrious presence. Yet religion is not mentioned once in a million times in a sewing-circle. Anything and everything is talked about but religion. Every fashion and every scandal is discussed; but religion is untouched.

These are facts patent to every observer of modern religious life. It is affirmed, however, that civilization itself is artifice; that if you want to deal with real human nature you must go to savage life, the untutored life. This, it is said, is the natural existence, and here you find the natural universal feelings of humanity. To discover what belongs to man per se—what is original with him—one must go to primeval man, in close contact with physical nature. Here is man as nature meant him to be, and here religion is an overmastering quality, and therefore it is natural and universal.

There never was a falsier idea than the idea that the savage is a more natural man than the civilized man. A careful study of the habits physical and otherwise of savage life will show that there are more artifice, more Mrs. Grundyism, and more unnatural fashions and styles among savages than among civilized people. Civilized people are the most natural people. They live more in accordance with nature than do the savages. Civilized people even live a more outdoor life than savage people. They are in closer, finer, and every way more subtle and fruitful contact with physical nature. They know nature better, they love nature better, and they use nature better. Physical culture among civilized people far surpasses physical culture among savages. The habits of eating are more natural and simple among the former than among the latter. The civilized man can outwalk, outrun, and outswim the savage. He can endure more hardships. Irritating as are the follies of society to-day, they are a vast improvement on the follies of our rude ancestors. Is there anything natural in slitting the nose, boring the ear, daubing the cheek, flattening the head, tattooing the body? Civilization is natural. The art, the poetry, the grace and glory of it, are all natural. We distinguish between art and nature, but art is simply conscious nature, selected nature, nature molded, attuned, made harmonious; but art is evermore nature. Science is nature, and it triumphs only by its devotion to nature, by its unfolding of nature, by translating nature from the partial into the universal. The civilized man and woman are the noblest, freest, and most veritable interpreters of nature.

If religion were natural and universal, what a magnificent blossom it would be in the world's civilization, instead of the weak and puerile thing it is to-day. The verdict against religion therefore is true. A perfect civilization will cast it out, for religion indicates a partial, one-sided, and therefore a diseased condition of humanity.

Read the supreme literature of the world; how little of it is purely religious. I do not remember of one religious character in all Shakspeare—that is, one who is actuated by religious motives. The stormy passions of Shakspeare are all of this world. God and Immortality play an incidental part in his majestic dramas. It is so even with Homer. His gods are only machinery. It is the men, the heroes, that interest, and not the divinities. The two great religious poets, Dante and Milton, are but little read. Scott is mainly secular. Dickens and Thackeray are altogether so. George Eliot is somewhat religious, but "Adam Bede," which is purely human, is her most popular work. "Robert Elsmere" is read because it shows that religion is dying out and portrays the process. The secular press overpowers the religious press. Art no longer paints angels but men. The theater outranks the church. Christians pay $1 an hour to hear Ingersoll. The popularity of theological books lies in the amount of heresy which they contain. Pure orthodoxy is flung into the wastebasket.

Talmage is a representative of religion, and he appeals for help to save his temple from the auctioneer's hammer. What is the result? Out of all the wealth of this country only $250 per day is collected. That is a gage of the average interest of people in religion. Suppose it were a case of simple human charity, how much more would be contributed? Two hundred and fifty dollars per day out of the millions in circulation is a pretty fair index of the real relation of religion to the universal world.

I believe that if we could get at the heart of savage life we should find that only a few are properly religious, but these few have the knack of ruling the rest. Religion breeds fear, and fear controls. Religion is mainly a pretense and imitation among savages as among ourselves, and we shall find it so in every nation. Religion has been one vast imposition. It has the virulence of a fever and a disease. It is its nature to rule or ruin. It is like drunkenness or insanity. It insists upon a like condition in others. The ancient priest was a medicine man, and all preachers are medicine men to-day. We call them doctors of divinity. They do doctor, but not to lessen the disease but to increase it, for therein is their profit. It won't do to cure, for then religion would vanish, and the doctor have no more patients and no more pay.

Religion is a fungus growth upon humanity. It betokens bad blood. The origin of every religion is a delirium. Thomas Paine says of the Christian religion: "It begins with a dream and ends with a murder." Religion is indeed a dream, but a terrible dream—a nightmare. It must be utterly abolished. Its very beginning is wrong—unnatural. That which is natural, simple, and humane is opposed to it. As St. Paul says the natural man does not want religion. Only the spiritual man—that is, the diseased man. It is the universality of ill health that gives religion its prevalence. The mental hallucination feeds upon bodily ailments.

The very moment we grant that religion is not natural and universal, as facts do declare—as history will declare when rightly understood—we are driven to the conclusion that religion is a disease. In my analysis of religion I have shown why it is a disease, that it is an exaggerated desire—like the miser's desire for wealth—and in that very exaggeration lies the disease. The genesis of religion in the mind is like the genesis of disease in the body. It is an abnormal activity. It is partial and one-sided action. It is too much force expended in one direction. It is a destruction of harmonious balance.

Religion must be treated both as an evil and a disease; not a natural evil, but an evil which man himself has manufactured. Man makes religion as he makes intemperance, and we must treat religion as we treat intemperance. Modern science recognizes intemperance as a disease, and in treating it as a disease we adopt the wisest method of its cure. So with religion. It is something of which we must be cured, no matter how we come by it, through inheritance or otherwise; and we must recognize the necessity of a cure—that it is a disease we are dealing with, and our measures must be sanitary. One cannot get rid of a cancer by treating it as a natural growth, and we cannot destroy religion or its evil effects until we see just what religion is—a curse indeed, as I have fully demonstrated, but a curse in and through the fact that it is a disease and that it is not natural any more than any disease is natural, nor universal any more than insanity is universal. I consider it of the first importance to thus understand religion, for it gives us hope that we can destroy it, root it out, as we root out the seeds of any other disease. We must deal thus radically or we shall never remove its bitter fruit from man's pathway. Religion, whether regarded as an evil or not, has been too long accepted as something native to man. It is not native any more than the cancer or cholera is. It is not a necessary or universal evil. It is not a natural curse. It is a disease immensely fearful. Deep as hell it may be, but it can be cured, and our efforts must lie in this direction. We are not simply to abhor it, we must treat it scientifically, as we treat the cancer and the cholera. The death of religion is the triumph of hygiene.

Having shown that religion is a disease, that it is not natural and universal, but special and artificial, the aggravation and distortion of a simple natural desire, which is what constitutes a disease, as a boil on the human body is the aggravation and distortion of its simple natural elements, I now propose to show that religion is a lie. When I say that religion is a lie I do not mean to say that religion does not exist, that in itself it is nothing. It is too terribly a reality—like other diseases. Religion is a lie because the two great dogmas which itself produces and upon which it flourishes are lies—monstrous lies—namely, God and Immortality. The God-idea and the belief in Immortality do not exist in and of themselves. They are not the natural products of human reason and experience. They would never have existed if man had always been in a perfectly healthful condition. The perfectly healthful man has no need of God or Immortality. These dogmas are the result of disease, the disease of religion, and they are lies. It is commonly thought, I know, that the notions of God and Immortality are original with the human mind and that religion is the result of these notions. I claim that the cause and effect are entirely the other way. Religion is the cause, and God and Immortality are the effects. Religion is fundamental; it is the fountain-head, and the ideas of God and Immortality, church, theology, etc., all flow from this source, and without religion all these would cease to be. All are manifestations of ill health. Every church, every pulpit, every sermon, every prayer, every pope, every bishop, all the pomp and ritual of the temple, all the splendor of the cathedral, the revival, the evangelist, the Salvation Army, the cardinal's red robe, each spectacle from Talmage's mouth to the pope's toe, Moody, Sam Jones, Joe Cook, et cetera, are the variable symptoms of a vast disease. Religion is a big burning boil, preachers are pimples, churches are cancers, and piety is pus. I am not to blame for these terms. They are medical.

God and immortality are twin lies. They are born of the same parent. They nourish that parent, and they nourish one another. Neither without the other could survive.

They are lies—pure creatures of human feeling—the offspring of the enormous miseries of human existence. Man is theistic simply and solely because he is unhappy. God is born of agony, of suffering, and of pain—the fiction of the imagination to console the bitterness of man's estate. I do not wonder that men believe in a God, seeing that living in this world is such a furious struggle, and so many go to the wall and hope is lost. Millions are constantly wrecked, and torture of the mind and body, more or less, is the fortune of every human being. In a blind and miserable way people try to escape reality—shut their eyes and dream of heaven. It is like taking an opiate. It weakens, while it cures not the ills of life. It is a desperate resort. It heals not the wound. It sends the poison deeper in.

We must confront reality and make the best of it.

By courage we can win something of happiness from our dark surroundings. Only, however, by sticking to the truth. If we abandon truth we are lost indeed.

We must not abuse the intellect—make it a slave to search earth and heaven for some delightful falsehood to soothe and comfort our distress. We must accept facts, no matter how ugly they are. Better be crucified with a fact than rot with some splendid lie.

The pure intellect confronting all this world—its heights and depths, its array of stars, its carpet of flowers, its jeweled seas, its shining mountains, its flaming sun, its ocean of blue, its laws and forces, its gigantic evolutions, its sweeps of light and its bursts of splendor—finds nowhere any God, not a scintilla of evidence. It finds the world, and only the world; nothing outside of the world. It can not pierce beyond and does not wish to pierce beyond. It is satisfied with the world. The world only can explain itself. It is the heart, not the intellect, that seeks after God; for the heart wants not an explanation, but a consolation.

Search the universe; dig into the bowels of the earth; walk in the chambers of the deep; catch the lightning; analyze the finest petal; dissect the human body, the eye, the hand, the beating heart itself; multiply a thousandfold man's glorious vision, and travel among the illimitable stars, and God is not even a shadow. Illuminate man's reason with a million suns and still he knows not God. Leave this muddy vesture of decay, if you will, and stand upon Arcfurus's blazing crest; traverse the resplendent spaces while ages wing their flight, and still there is no God. Nor time, nor space reveal him. Nor history, nor science declare him. Poor, helpless God—if there is one—he seems forever imprisoned in his own immensity. He cannot manifest himself at a single point in this crowded universe. Even the worm can do better than that. The worm gives us facts, but God never does. In that respect the worm, the pebble, the sod, the snowflake, the raindrop, surpass God. Think of it, O theologian!

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Our Government and the Extradition Treaty.

It is claimed that the government of the United States represents the will of, and derives its power from, the people; it is said that the Declaration of Independence has banished the old idea that millions of men must be subjected to the caprice of one man or of a limited number of men, and enthroned the whole people as the sovereigns of the land. It is supposed that our office-holders, from the highest to the lowest—that is to say from the president to the village functionary—are only servants chosen by the people—the real masters—to attend to the affairs of the latter. It is further supposed that the servants, that is to say the office-holders, have no power of their own at all; they are only obeying the commands of their masters. Theoretically these claims are true, but the question is, do we practically govern ourselves and do our laws voice the sentiments of the people? Is democracy a fact or only a name? Let us not deceive ourselves; let us not live in the realm of fancy and soar in the sky while in reality we stand on the ground and the mud is thick under our feet. Names and appearances are often delusive. You may put chains on our hands and feet and persuade us that they are an ornament and by no means a burden, but will this alter the nature of the chains? Gilt the chains as much as you please, they are still chains. Place a man on an inhabitable island, deprive him of all means of communicating with his fellow-men, and tell him that he is the sole owner of the island, and is at liberty to use his property and person according to his own desire, will it really make him a free man? Being the only inhabitant of the island, he has no duties at all, as he cannot infringe upon the right of another man. No matter how nobly or how meanly he may act, there will be no one to praise or to blame him. Within the boundaries of the island he indeed enjoys absolute liberty, and yet to say that he is free would be a mockery.

It is true, we have no hereditary kings; no one pretends to rule us by divine right; but is the yoke of the politician easier than that of a constitutional king? On the contrary, it is even more offensive. Why should the sovereign be governed by his servant? And why is the sovereign so stupid as to keep the servant in his employ when the latter is not faithful to his trust? A government which frames laws contrary to the will of the people can not be considered a democratic government; a government which bends to the will of the Goulds and Vanderbilts is a failure, and yet every unprejudiced man must admit that, in spite of our boast of being the freest and most enlightened nation on the face of the earth, our lawmakers pay very little heed to the needs of the people. I do not mean to discuss in this article all the flaws in our government, as this would require too much space. I desire only to call attention to a single fact—the Russian-American extradition treaty. Rumors of such a treaty reached us first in 1887, but the sentiment of the people has been so strong against it that it was not allowed to see the light of the day. We thought it was dead and buried, and it seemed that no one cared for the infant even so much as to erect a headstone on the place where it was buried. But suddenly after a lapse of seven years we learn that the monster arose from the grave in all its ugliness. But who is the father or the godfather of this monster? Where does it dwell? Who is the man that has so little regard for himself as to give it a room in his own house? We don't know; all this is kept a secret. We want to know the exact wording of the treaty; we strive to learn the final fate of it, but are told by our high-minded Senators that the whole matter is a secret and cannot for the present be disclosed. Let us stop for a moment and ask, Why should any measure in which the people are interested be kept in darkness? If the government derives its power from the consent of the governed, ought not its proceedings to be open for inspection? Is it possible that the American people are in favor of such methods? Laws made in darkness, laws which are afraid of the dawn, are worthy of the despotism, misnamed the government, of Russia, but entirely unworthy of the government of the United States. The treaty has been condemned by the people long ago. Our lawmakers are aware that we are not in favor of throwing into the claws of the lion those who by word or action have displeased the government of Russia. Why then should they now negotiate a treaty with that country and, to make matters worse, keep it a secret? I say, let the voice of the people be heard. If the people want the treaty, if they take the side of the Russian autocrat against the pioneers of freedom, against those who are willing to sacrifice their lives for the good of others, let us have the treaty. But then let us cease calling ourselves a civilized nation; let us stop boasting of our love of freedom; let us expunge the word liberty from our dictionaries, and let the statue of Liberty be returned to France. Personally, I say with Victor Hugo, "Sacrifice to the mob, O poet . . . sacrifice everything to it except justice," and so I could not cease protesting against a treaty with Russia, even if it should turn out that I am the only one opposed to it; but fortunately such is not the case. As far as we can judge from the meetings held all over the country, the American people don't want the treaty; on the contrary, they denounce it in very emphatic language. Are our lawmakers an irresponsible class? Where did they get the right to disobey the will of the people?

Let us examine the treaty and see what meaning is hidden beneath its apparently innocent form. While it does not include political offenders, it says that an attempt on the life of the czar or any of the royal family is not a political crime and is therefore extraditable. If an attempt on the life of the czar is not a political offense, what is it then? Is anyone so naïve as to think that a subject of the czar would attempt to murder his sovereign for the sake of robbing him of his watch or pocketbook? It is not the man named Alexander Romanoff, but the czar, or rather the despotism represented in his person, that some of the Russian revolutionists want to assassinate. Is it really a crime to kill the tyrant who is responsible for the death and suffering of hundreds and thousands and the oppression of millions of human beings? When Prometheus stole the fire of heaven and gave it to the mortals, who were left by the gods in utter ignorance, he was chained to a rock by Brute Force. Such was his reward for having pitied poor suffering humanity. When the enlightened Russians cry, "Give us liberty!" when they dare to teach their inferior brothers the simple lesson of freedom and humanity, they are sent by Brute Force to the gallows and the Siberian mines. Shall we pile Pelion upon Ossa and help the czar to exterminate the lovers of liberty? Have we forgotten the past? Are the traditions of the Revolutionary war dead? When the yoke of England became an intolerable burden, we threw it off at the expense of a bloody war. If we have killed no king, it was simply because there was no possibility and need for it. But suppose the freedom of these states had depended upon the life or death of the king, and suppose his person had been within our reach, would our Revolutionary sires have hesitated to dispose of him? How then can we be so mean as to deliver to the Russian government men and women who are guilty only in that sense in which our forefathers were guilty? Are we ashamed of the heroes of the Revolution? Do we consider them a disgrace to humanity?

I don't say it is necessary to applaud and commend assassination in order to oppose the treaty. Many of us are undoubtedly of the opinion that the methods adopted by the Russian revolutionists are unwise and futile. But no matter what our private opinion might be, the American people can not and will not regard an assassin of the czar as a common murderer. Let us all remember it. For that reason, I say, the treaty is obnoxious even if accepted only in its literal sense; but the trouble does not cease here. According to the Russian penal code, any man who belongs to a secret society the aim of which is to overthrow the existing form of government is guilty of an attempt on the life of the czar, and we must admit that from the autocrat's standpoint of view this law is just and logical. We should not forget that the government in Russia is concentrated in the person of the czar. Alexander the Third perhaps more than any man in the world can say: "The state—I am the state." An attempt to overthrow the government means an attempt to overthrow czarism, and as this can by no possibility be done without a great struggle, it must be taken for granted that should the favorable moment arrive when the overthrowing of the government will become a reality, the life of the czar will not be spared. Consequently, every man of advanced ideas, every man who is dissatisfied with the present state of affairs in Russia, does what little he can to hasten the day of the czar's fall. That being so, the czar is perfectly right when he looks with suspicion upon the spread of liberal ideas; he is right when he regards every man who dares to dream of freedom as a possible assassin of his person. Now, should the treaty be brought into execution, the Russian government will be enabled to demand the extradition of almost every man who in some way made himself obnoxious to the czar and minions. Will the American people tolerate all this? Will they consent to let the Russian government murder and imprison men whose only crime is that they dare to think without the permission of the czar and demand liberty for themselves and their fellow-men?

"But," will say the defenders of the treaty, "the American government is not composed of babes. We are not going to be fooled by Russia. When we say murder, we mean murder and nothing else. We are not so childish as to extradite a man for having read or distributed a revolutionary pamphlet or for having discussed political questions at the secret meeting. We will extradite no man unless the Russian government can furnish satisfactory evidence that he is actually guilty of an attempt on the life of the czar or any of the royal family." To which I reply: In the first place, we have no definition what an attempt on the life of the czar means, but Russia has, and will insist that its definition should be accepted. It is time that no man can be tried for an attempt on the life of a human being unless he actually made the attempt. If the czar is to be regarded only as a human being and as such not superior to any subject of the Russian empire, there was no need of mentioning him in the treaty; but taking into consideration that special reference is made to him, the Russian government will have the right to include in the words "attempt on the life of the czar or any of the royal family" all possible and impossible offenses. In the second place, should even our government reject the Russian definition, can we trust the honesty of the Russian government? How will it be possible for us to know that Russia when demanding the extradition of a certain man will not attribute to him crimes which he never committed? Where will we get the means of examining the evidence? And suppose a man will be extradited for one offense and tried for another—what then? How shall we be able to find that out? Shall we send an official from this country to be present at the trial of every man whom we may extradite? Shall we tax ourselves to pay the salary of that official or will Russia pay it?

Let our lawmakers not act in haste; let them beware of the consequences of their actions. The treaty with Russia outrages the moral sentiment of our people. Why should we aid the czar in his endeavor to trample upon the rights of men? Shall we side with those who fight for freedom or with those who are against it? No, we cannot afford to enter into partnership with the Russian government. Every lover of humanity should protest against the treaty. Let us do all we can to keep our land free from stains; let us not redden our hands with blood; let us not sacrifice the life or liberty of any human being on the bloody altar of the Russian despot. CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

Oyster Bay, L. I., N. Y., Apr. 6, 1893.

P.S.—Since the above was written I learned that the treaty has been recalled for revision by the president of the United States. May we hope that the spirit of humanity will triumph? May we cherish the idea that our land will continue to be a refuge for the oppressed of all nations? But after all, is it desirable to have a treaty with Russia at all? While I am not in favor of sheltering common criminals, I am convinced that in a bargain with Russia we will always be cheated. No matter how plain and unmistakable the terms of the treaty will be, no matter how distinctly the line will be drawn between a common crime and a political offense, Russia will find a way of imposing upon us and will demand the expulsion of political offenders under the pretense of their being common criminals. Knowing as we do the methods of the Russian government in its dealings with the Nihilists, I am satisfied that it will be an easy task for the czar's friends to get up bogus evidence, the nature of which we shall not be able even to suspect. I don't believe in putting the tips of our fingers in the lion's mouth. He may devour the whole arm.

C. W. C.

Reply to a Bigot Bishop.

TO THE RIGHT REV. LEIGHTON COLEMAN, Bishop of Delaware: Am I dreaming or am I awake? Do the grotesque figures which ornament the head of my calendar, pinned to the wall, really signify the meaning generally ascribed to them? Or is it owing to some optical illusion that I fancy I see the announcement made that we have entered upon the eighteen hundred and ninety-third year of our era, while in fact we have not yet counted fifteen hundred and seventeen? I entertain strong doubts whether I am a contemporary of Melancthon and Luther or Charles Darwin and Herbert Spencer; whether my observations regarding the astounding progress of all civilized nations during the last few centuries, their scientific discoveries and inventions, their acknowledged pretension to the right of liberty of thought and speech, their personal freedom and their Liberal and broad-minded views of life, are true, or whether they are only strange imaginations sprung from a feverish brain. Indeed, I do not know for sure whether we are approaching the close of the nineteenth or fifteenth century, since the limits of religious discussion, which existed during the Middle Ages—a time of intellectual bondage of which we cannot but think with shudders—are to be reestablished; since the study and explanation of the laws of nature are again, as in former times, to be made dependent upon the preposterous claims so readily advanced by a class of people evidently superstitious, or else deplorably devoid of common sense! But still it must be true, my eyes are trustworthy. The four conspicuous figures—1, 8, 9, 3, on my calendar—are plainly visible and permit of no doubt that we soon shall write 1900; that the wheel of time will soon have finished another of its centennial revolutions, despite the efforts made by some incarnated fanatics to stop its natural course.

Macaulay, Stuart Mill, Carlyle, Darwin, and Tennyson; Lessing, Humboldt, and Goethe; Rousseau, Victor Hugo, and Renan, have already been among the living; they have already severed their personal connections from the people of a world which they highly honored through their brief visit—while Herbert Spencer, Huxley, and Tyndall; Haeckel, Helmholtz, and Moleschott, are daily furnishing proofs—as their dead brethren have done before them—of their gigantic intellectual capacity, imbuing with lofty ideas and virtuous aims those to whom they have occasion to impart a share of their vast knowledge and those who wish to listen to their noble teachings.

Ah, no! My mind is wandering! I do not know what I am talking of! These men imbue others with lofty ideas and virtuous aims? To their teachings should we listen? Preposterous! Abominable! Who dares giving us such advice? Who can be thoughtless enough to recommend us the reading of the works of immoral men, of men who are wrongfully looked upon and worshiped as the intellectual heroes of the nations to which they belonged? Away with them, and a host of others equally depraved; they are not deserving of our esteem, of our worship; in listening to their words we cannot purify our inclinations and ennoble our souls; on the contrary, their teachings corrupt us, because they have all, at one time or another, overstepped the limits of legitimate religious discussion in questioning the divinity of Christ and in maintaining that virtue is and ever remains virtue, whether attached to any belief or not, becoming thus—according to the code of ethics of the Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, immoral—which explanation of morality compels us, as a matter of course, to draw the inference that we lower ourselves, that we also become immoral, in confessing that we take delight in reading and propagating the works and sayings of such authors as I have mentioned by name, and such as express similar views.

Yes! ye millions and millions of enthusiastic admirers of the great authors of the last few centuries; and ye honest, pure, and charitable disbelievers in Christ's supernatural origin, whether of Christian, Jewish, Mohammedan, or Buddhist parentage; ye noble-minded and sincere believers in the divine of nature; ye that do not wish to besmear the ideal of the most high through the belief in the silly fable of the self-crucifixion of a supremely intelligent omnipotent being, ye all are immoral creatures!

What a terrible charge this is! The more terrible as it is absolutely unjustifiable, and as the one who makes it is one of "Christ's disciples," "a teacher of morality." And upon what ground is this charge maintained by him? Upon the cunning claim that the word "religion means Christianity"—undoubtedly a very witty interpretation of the term—"because the United States has since its early colonization recognized Christianity as its religion; and that, therefore, any attack upon the fundamental principles of Christianity is illegitimate, hence treasonable, and consequently immoral." Obedience to the laws of the country, charity, and the practice of virtue are matters of secondary importance. The fundamental principle of Christianity, quasi-morality, being the belief in the personality and divine origin of Christ, according to the Right Rev. Leighton Coleman "he who does not acknowledge this claim is not a Christian and cannot"—listen to the wise words of one of Christ's teachers of morality—"for this reason be accounted moral."

As to his reverence's interpretation of the term religion it is hardly worth while to consider it, because it is simply nonsensical; betraying only the desire to insidiously set a limit to the public discussion of pernicious dogmas characteristic to the Christian faith. Supposing we should accept this interpretation of the term religion and make a general application of it; then in Turkey the term religion would be synonymous with Mohammedanism and in China with Buddhism, and a discussion dissenting from the religious views of the majority of the people inhabiting the countries mentioned would be illegitimate, hence treasonable, and consequently immoral, which logical sequence inferred from the premises so arbitrarily established by his reverence should forever silence his objection to the ill treatment of Christian missionaries in foreign countries or their expulsion therefrom.

Through the other claim, regarding the belief in Christ's divinity as one of the fundamental principles of Christianity and morality, a deliberate, not to say base, insult is offered to millions of pious non-Christians and virtuous citizens of this great state, whose code of ethics—I have no hesitancy in saying after a perusal of "The Limits of Legitimate Religious Discussion," by the Right Rev. Leighton Coleman—is unquestionably far superior to that of the author of the aforesaid article. Through this article, which could hardly be equaled in the spirit of narrow-minded intolerance it breathes, he also proves beyond any reasonable doubt that he is perfectly ignorant of the means to be employed in order to realize the idea of the brotherhood of humanity, to bring about that neighborly love that makes no distinction between the descendants of the followers of Moses, Buddha, Christ, or Mohammed; which proves its affection for all regardless of their individual ideas of the mysteries of nature. Fanaticism, blind belief in the dogmas of the Christian or any other faith, will never accomplish this task; instead of creating love it rather breeds hatred and contempt; condemning its manifestation therefore I condescended to write a reply to the article in question, expecting by no means in doing so to convince the reverend author of "The Limits of Legitimate Religious Discussion" of the monstrosity of his views on morality—because the normal condition of my brain functions could justly be questioned if I should entertain such hopes—but in order to minister to the mass of careless readers an antidote to the poison they were given by him.

It was only a few weeks ago that I read in a paper edited in Chicago, and devoted to the work of conciliating religion with science (?), the following sentence: "No religion and hardly a priest now dares to rise up and say that a good life will not open his or any heaven." I may also mention that it was a funeral address which contained the words quoted. "Worse than that, thousand times worse!" I thought, smiling at the same time at the naïveté which characterizes that exclamation; and, as though I had prayed for a living proof to sustain my objection to the phrase which was the cause of my forced mirth, an essay appears in the North American Review denying to all the right to lay claim to a moral character who do not believe in the supernatural origin of Jesus. In view of the conditions existing, such and like phrases cannot but have a humorous effect upon the reader or listener; very much a like effect as would be produced by the words, "Whoever dares to touch me I'll crush between my fists," of a weak child, addressing himself to a dozen of strong men.

I said in view of existing conditions the phrase quoted by me has the opposite effect to that intended, because it is an undeniable fact, a fact in the contemplation of which the whole-souled human being must feel deeply grieved, that there still live people whose mental faculties are so deplorably thwarted—owing undoubtedly to the perverted education which they were unfortunate enough to receive—that it is an utter impossibility for them to free their minds from the preposterous religious impressions of their youth and the hereditary influences of their superstitious predecessors of a former period, in order to observe the rules regulating the law of evolution and to keep equal pace with the march of time. Much less can these mentally crippled be regarded as authorities in any intellectual combat, though they may occupy high positions and advance their views—a determination which would be deserving of our admiration if it served a better cause—because they lack the principal quality of the true thinker, inasmuch as they do not follow their intellect to whatever conclusions it may lead them. Oh, what a vast difference there is between the haughty conceit of these bigots, whose deep rooted, preconceived ideas obscure, or rather confine to extremely narrow limits, their ability to properly judge things, and the modesty of a Newton, who readily, though undoubtedly with aching heart, admitted that "there is no arguing against facts and experiment," upon being told by his friend Molyneux that the latter's observations of the nutation of the earth's axis were likely to overthrow his theory of gravitation.

Heedless of the progress humankind have made in all branches of knowledge during the last few centuries, these stanch defenders of obnoxious dogmas still adhere to the traditional views which originated among a humanity perfectly ignorant of man's station in nature. As the favored children of a personal God, which they imagine themselves to be, they still practice the ridiculous religious rites established by their superstitious predecessors of a remote age in order to thus propitiate and gain the favor of a deity that, according to the prevalent belief, takes a special delight in rewarding their good actions and punishing their evil tendencies or inclinations; proving thereby that true virtue is not known to them, that they are incapable of recognizing and appreciating that exalted virtue which exists independently of any belief and knows of no other reward but the self-content it creates in the bosoms of those who practice it—a virtue that can not but look with disdain upon a religion that holds out the hope of heaven to the good and the threat of hell to the evil-doer; a virtue that thinks it perfectly just to condemn a religious belief the fundamental principle of which, according to the Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, imposes upon its adherents the duty to deny to the followers of Moses, Buddha, Mohammed, and all other non-Christians, the right of calling themselves moral, although they may lead an exemplary life in every respect; and a virtue that considers it one of its most noble aims to expose, through public discussion, those fundamental tenets of Christianity which, through their pernicious influence, for many centuries spread terror and destitution through the whole of Europe and which so deplorably retarded, and still retard, the intellectual—hence, ethical—evolution of the great masses of our civilized nations.

I am well aware of the fact that some pious Christian idolators may accuse me of using vulgar language in discussing the merits of Christianity, but that I can conscientiously deny, because that which I have already said and that which I will have to say could only be regarded as vulgar by devout Christians, who, I have not the least doubt, would consider an attack upon some ridiculous rite or objectionable dogma of the religion of Buddha, Mohammed, or the fire-worshiper as perfectly proper, though the object of the attack is virtually one and the same.

Despite the fact that not only common sense, but also custom and rule, award the medal of morality to the virtuous, no matter what their religious views may be, it is withheld from them—by one claiming to know what constitutes true morality—if they question that vile dogma, established by a cunning priesthood, according to which "salvation" is only possible through faith in Christ. Yes! it is one of the strong "pillars" on which the church rests from whom we recently only received anew the assurance that true Christians only—such as believe in the supernatural origin of Christ—will be "saved," because they are the only moral people, while all others, as immoral creatures, will, as a matter of course, eternally be roasted in hell-fire by an extremely benevolent God. Abominable assertion! If it were not for the fact that errors are very common among individuals while humanity, as a whole, is constantly advancing in the knowledge of truth and is continually gaining greater wisdom, one would almost despair of the possibility that human society will ever reach a higher plane of morality; that it will attain a purity of character superior to that existing; so much the more is this the case if one reads, in a monthly which counts its subscribers by the ten thousands, an article from the pen of one to whose interpretation of morality and virtue millions listen; an interpretation which proves beyond any doubt that its author is a fanatic, stricken with intellectual blindness, because he is not able to perceive the fact that a good or bad action has nothing whatsoever to do with any fixed belief; that an action is good or evil in itself; and that a dogma based upon the assumption that about nineteen hundred years ago an omnipotent supreme being went through all phases of embryonic evolution to the end of saving humankind from an imaginary "sin"—a "sin" which they never committed—does not only imply extreme derision of a supposed supreme being, but it also accuses this being of an injustice which even the low-natured brute is hardly capable of; namely to take cruel revenge on the innocent child of the father by whom he has been wronged at a former time.

In conclusion I can only express the hope that the vast majority of the people of our great state are enlightened and intelligent enough to regard suggestions which remind us of the cruelties perpetrated by the members of a church in whose iron grasp the European nations trembled for centuries—and the pernicious influence of which never manifested itself plainer than when she enlisted armies of millions of soldiers to the end of extinguishing the glimmering light of a new and nobler world-idea, kindled by the Reformation of the sixteenth century—as that which they really are, as the deformed offspring of a brain suffering with that dreadful disease which is known by the name "religious fanaticism."

CORVINUS.

Liberal Societies.

"Cities and Civil Government" was the title of Dr. Lewis G. Janes's lecture before the Newark Liberal League last Sunday afternoon. The usual attentive and interested audience was present, Mr. Bird presiding.

Dr. Janes first spoke of the rise of the tribe, then the free town, and lastly the city as we know it. He spoke of its importance in ancient times when loyalty to one's city was thought more of than loyalty to one's country. The ethnological condition of the poor in our cities then engrossed the attention of the lecturer. He described the sweating system, the tenement-house district and its morals. The people for want of some better place to go are driven into saloons, thus increasing their own miserable condition. In conclusion the lecturer said:

"The ethical society, the Liberal league, the neighborhood guild, should everywhere outbid the gilded saloon in that great auction mart where human souls are the merchandise. The tenement-house should be visited and renovated and in time abolished altogether. Reading-rooms should be established, cheerfully lighted, with attractive pictures on their walls; coffee-rooms where wholesome nourishment can be obtained at all hours. All comers should be welcomed without patronage or condescension and entertainment furnished at prices low enough to compete with the neighboring saloon. Popular instruction of a secular sort, in science, hygiene, history, literature, and art should be furnished at a small fee; since gratuitous charity is never an unmixed good. Then shall the city of the future become in fact and in its totality what it should be in accordance with the philosophy of social evolution—the noblest product of man in his associated capacity, a city set upon a hill, a beacon-light to toiling humanity throughout the world."

The discussion that followed was largely restricted to giving suggestions. Mr. Wilder thought education was the best way of elevating the masses. Mr. Wakeman thought that by taking away from the people the idea of a heaven above, and teaching them of an attainable heaven on earth, much good would be accomplished. Mr. Bird in speaking of the sweating system said that the social system which had brought about such a condition of affairs should be blamed rather than the men who were at the head of the barbarous business. Messrs. Walker, Gillen, and Brill, and Mrs. Smith also made a few remarks.

Next Sunday Mr. Henry Rowley will lecture on "The Christian Scheme of Salvation."

It is commonly said that few things interest educated New Yorkers less than the city government, since they have so little share in the choosing of its chief officials and the management of its revenues. Yet when Professor Adler chose for his subject "The Difficulty of Reform in New York City," and announced that he would pay particular attention to the governmental difficulty, the same enthusiastic audience crowded Chickering Hall. One old gentleman became so excited during the lecture that having put his hat on in order that he might have his hands free to applaud, he forgot to take his chapeau off again, but so interested was the audience that this fact went unnoticed. Professor Adler said in part:

"Reformers of all ages have met with certain difficulties. Their paths are never strewn with roses; in fact, they are more often covered with sharp stones. This is especially true of reformers in this city."

"As it is important that one should know oneself, so it is important that a citizen should know his city. New York is a commercial city. Many of its best citizens are given to the accumulation of wealth. Here the men of money occupy the first position. The men of genius occupy a place of secondary importance. This is not so in Paris, London, or Berlin. One of the causes of failure of reform in this city is the lack of unity of action and feeling. In this city there is a German city, an Irish city, a Bohemian city, etc., etc. Between each of these there are social barriers that are seemingly insurmountable. There is also an absence of a center toward which all can turn. The intellectual center of Boston is Harvard College. We have nothing like it. It is true that there is in the city a great deal of brain power, but it is not focused. The men of brains are scattered about in different clubs, and these have their different cliques. Cliques is the curse of New York life. And so, owing to this want of an intellectual center, a man who has a reform to propose must, in order to be heard, appeal to that class with which he is well acquainted. Reforms that might do a world of good thus become 'class' reforms and are generally frowned on by other classes."

"The want of a social center is also to be regretted. If we had an aristocracy there would be more unity of action. True aristocracy is not founded on birth alone, which is really a consideration. There are other elements, such as prominence in science and art, service to the state, etc. The aristocracy of England holds its own because it is continually strengthening itself by taking in the men who have won distinction in science and literature. Our aristocracy has lost its power because it rolls in luxury and consists only of those who have money. It is in fact a hindrance instead of a help to reform progress."

"Our municipal government is a standing reproach. We have no more say than do the people in the heart of Africa. Out of the disorganization that I have described there has arisen an organization, which is complete in its way. It is to this organization that we are in a state of servitude. Twenty years ago the club which rules this city was the most disreputable organization on the face of the earth. It had on it a load of infamy which would have ruined any other forever. To-day it is our acknowledged master. Even if the acts of this government were excellent we would still consider it intolerable. We must remember that it must not only be a government for the people, but a government by the people. The city government is a great impediment in the way of social reform. It must be cleared out, and our only hope lies in organization."

Next Sunday Mr. W. Sheldon, of the Ethical Society of St. Louis, will speak on "The Coming Leaders and Statesmen."

Raymond S. Perrin was the lecturer before the Manhattan Liberal Club Friday evening, April 14th. The lecture was on "The Christian Religion." In opening the lecturer said: "Religion is a phase of intellectual development; no nation or community has ever developed without experiencing it. Most religions contain the grossest superstitions, and it is the extent and age of these superstitions that has led a certain school of philosophers to declare that superstition is a constant quantity. Those of us who have been brought up under Christian influences know how hard it is after years of study to throw off the various superstitions. In the Apocryphal New Testament there are mentioned fourteen miraculous cures effected by the bath water of young Jesus. No one believes these, yet the equally absurd miracles of the New Testament itself are believed by over one-half the men of the United States in spite of their education."

"What counts in the Christian religion of to-day is the principle of humanity which it has fostered more than any other religion." Mr. Perrin said that it was to this principle partly that the conversion of the Roman empire was due. "Seven-eighths of the Christian religion is false, but on account of that one-eighth which is good and true let us respect the religion. It is by that one-eighth that wonderful social and moral reforms have been wrought." In concluding the lecturer made some excellent remarks about the doctrine of immortality. He said that while it was an illogical belief and the refuge of those who cannot look the truth in the face, it was also decidedly selfish.

Dr. Foote in opposing the lecturer said he did not think the Christian religion was worth respecting. Mr. Macdonald made some remarks sui generis. Mr. Wakeman upheld the views expressed by the lecturer. The other critics were Mr. Oppenheimer and Dr. Ward.

Mr. O. P. Loomis delivered an interesting lecture on "Ancient Astronomy and Religion" Sunday afternoon at the meeting of the Brooklyn Philosophical Association. The lecturer claimed that all religions have their rise in the worship of astronomical bodies. He also explained some of the more abstruse astronomical problems. Messrs. Elwell and Silsby criticised the lecturer adversely. Mr. Rowley made some interesting remarks, ably supporting Mr. Loomis. The other critics were Mr. Hanson and Rev. D. E. Mason. Next Sunday Prof. R. E. Mayne will lecture on "The Coming Man."

Colonel Ingersoll's Lecture Engagements.

Colonel Ingersoll will make a short lecturing tour, beginning this month, and his dates are as follows:

Buffalo, N. Y.,	April 18	Columbus, O.,	May 1
Toronto, Ont.,	" 20	Dayton, O.,	" 2
Hamilton, Ont.,	" 21	Fort Wayne, Ind.,	" 3
London, Ont.,	" 22	Indianapolis, Ind.,	" 4
Rochester, N. Y.,	" 24	Evansville, Ind.,	" 5
Syracuse, N. Y.,	" 25	Terre Haute, Ind.,	" 6
Cincinnati, O.,	" 30	St. Louis, Mo.,	" 7

Liberals living in the vicinity of these cities can learn the locations of the halls and theaters from local papers. Probably most of our readers around these places will make something of a journey to hear these lectures, and they will be well repaid for their trouble.

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting-room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

Lectures and Meetings.

The Brooklyn Philosophical Association's program for this month is:

April 23d, Prof. R. E. Mayne, "The Coming Man."
April 30th, S. H. Wilder, "Science Falsely So Called."
The Association meets Sundays at 3 P. M. at Fraternity Hall, Bedford avenue and South Second street, E. D.

At the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East Fifteenth street, Friday evenings, the program for April is:

April 21st, Lizzie Ward, "Women's Skirts."
April 28th, Reuben Rush, "Life and Death."

Wouldn't Be Wooed With Prayer.

A very good young man in town, says the Atchison Daily Globe, called on a girl the other evening, and after talking a few moments asked her if she would have any objection to his offering up a prayer.

She said no, and he got down on his knees and told the Lord that he intended to ask the young woman then present to be his wife, and that he hoped he would move her to consent.

After exhorting fifteen minutes he arose to his feet, but the girl left the room and has steadily refused to see him since.—Boston Daily Globe.

Letters of Friends.

Believes in Encouraging Freethought Propaganda.

CORVALLIS, ORE., March 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $5.50 for the subscription of myself and a new subscriber, and two copies of "Crimes of Preachers." Your paper is the best publication on earth. You are deserving many compliments and much encouragement of a substantial ($'s) nature for your able and successful management of THE TRUTH SEEKER. JOHN LONG.

God Analyzed Into Nothing.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I do not think that A. Augusta Chapman has read Col. Jno. R. Kelso's "sledge-hammer logic." My advice to friend Augusta is to read "The Bible Analyzed," price $3; or "Deity Analyzed," price $1. Either may shake Augusta's faith. For sale by the Truth Seeker Company. All kinds of gods and infinit beings are analyzed in either of the above books. Kelso leaves nothing unsaid about God that is worth saying.

Respectfully, E. W. BROWN.

Pleased With Such a Rarity.

SLOVAN, WIS., March 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I had been seeking for such a paper since I left school. And now I have found it. I cannot express my delight. I did not know there was such a paper published in our free country. I assure you I will do anything in my power to enlarge your circulation. Inclosed find several names of persons who I think will subscribe for your paper. May THE TRUTH SEEKER have success. I think it will have the largest circulation of all papers some day. FERDINAND BOUDINCK.

He Shows How Weak Are the Christian Evidences.

CINCINNATI, O., Apr. 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Franklin Steiner, from Des Moines, lectured for our society on Sunday night, April 2d, to a large audience in Douglass Hall. Mr. Steiner, as your readers are aware, is making his first lecturing trip, and there seems to be no doubt that he will make a successful speaker. His lecture was a masterly arraignment of Christianity at the bar of history, and his references and citations were copious and well arranged so as to show the weakness of the Christian evidences very clearly. We can recommend him to other Liberal societies. Our society is in a flourishing condition.

ANDREW HOGG, Secretary.

Likes the Exposure of Christianity's Borrowed Character.

PORTAGE, WIS., March 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose post-office order for "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book," "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," and one photograph of Col. R. G. Ingersoll and granddaughter. My books and papers received all right. I am very much pleased with the last cartoon in THE TRUTH SEEKER of the stolen rubbish. We are gaining ground. If every person would be honest with themselves infidelity would be the popular thought of to-day. As soon as I read my paper it is sent to some friend with a wish to read and send to some of their friends. I feel in that way good will come.

Yours for the truth always,

MRS. S. RACE.

The Lectures Hit the Right Spot.

CLINTON, IA., March 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I judge it will be pleasing to yourself and the rest of the "truth seekers" to know that on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week we were treated to two very pleasing lectures by Franklin Steiner, of Des Moines. I never heard a more general favorable verdict than that given by those who listened to the lectures. The audiences seemed so completely captivated that all yawning and shuffling of feet was done away with. The weather was very unfavorable, Wednesday being a very rainy day, nevertheless we had very good audiences both evenings. And Mr. Steiner, after a warm good-bye on Friday morning, left us rejoicing. He is a bright young fellow, and it seems safe to predict a successful future for him in the lecture field.

JAMES A. GREENHILL.

Promis of Correct Pilotage Through the Sky.

MISSOULA, MONT., March 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I saw to-day what amused me, and will with your permit give it you. The Rev. J. J. Campbell, Presbyterian minister of this place, has his shingle hung out in the same block where I am doing business. It reads:

"THE REV. J. J. CAMPBELL,
Room 15 and 16, third floor."

Some wag changed it to read:

"THE REV. J. J. CAMPBELL,
Official Sky-pilot."

Right direction given or money refunded.
Men and Women joined together."

Yours, A. M. STEVENS.

God Addressed by Post-Office.

MR. EDITOR: The following letter has been mailed to "God," in the Seattle post-office, Washington, if not delivered in ten years to be returned to the writer. The following is a fac-simile of the envelope and letter (letter unsealed):

If not delivered in ten years return to Chas. F. Blackburn,
Seattle, Wash., U. S. A.,
Terrestrial Globe.

6 cent
stamp

To "JESUS CHRIST," "GOD," or "HOLY GHOST," "Heaven,"
Universe.

Via "the Christian" Route.
P. O. Box No. (7), Street No. (7)
(See Talmage, Jos. Cook, or the Pope).

SEATTLE, WASH., U. S. A.,
March 26, '93 (?)

To "GOD," "JESUS CHRIST," or "HOLY GHOST," Sir: There are a great many things that are not right going on in this world, and I respectfully ask that you, with all your omnipotence, will, at the earliest convenience, come "down" or "up," and help make things right. Much help needed! For more than twenty years I have observed an immense amount of injustice, error, crime, and wickedness, that makes me doubt your existence. Come soon and oblige,

Yours truly,
CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,
Seattle, Wash., Terrestrial Globe.

Would That the Church Would Wait for Him to Build It.

WEST HARRISVILLE, MICH., Feb. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I like your paper first-rate. I read it all through and then I send it where I think it will do the most good. I have sent some of them as much as two hundred miles from here. West Harrisville has about six hundred population and has got no church. The Christians have started to build one. They have got the frame up and they cannot go any farther for want of money, and I hope it will stay that way till I finish it, and I know it never would be finished. There is a preacher who comes here once a week. He preaches in the schoolhouse. He gets a few women and girls and two or three men who I think have a soft spot in their heads. There is only one Liberal here with me that I know of, and he takes the Boston Investigator. He is not afraid to show his colors. I am,

For liberty, EDMUND APSEY.

Important—A Divine Revelation Made!

ORILLA, March 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Send me seven copies from this on and you will oblige me. If there is any reading matter that you can send I will see that it will go into good hands.

I had a revelation from heaven the other day. There were two things I wanted to know. The first was, Did Jesus Christ ever live? The other was, Was it right for me to sue a neighbor that owed me a debt of $60? So I submitted my case to God in prayer. I went to my closet, closed my eyes, raised my face to heaven, and put the first question straight: "O God, tell me, did Christ ever live? and if so, was he God?" I remained in that position until I got tired. Not a word came. Not a thought, for or against, came to my brain. So I am left in doubt on that score. But now for the other question. I took the same position and in a loud voice asked God if I should sue an acquaintance for that $60. In a moment the answer came: "Press him and get your money." A revelation from heaven came and told me to go for him—that he had owed me long enough and if I did not get it now he would never pay me. So I obeyed the command of God, put the case in court, and in a few days will have my cash. Some of your readers may say this is all moonshine, but when they come to die they will repent and call on God to help them out of trouble the same as I did.

T. W. MOFFATT.

Try the Atonement Plan on Yourself.

BEEBE, ARK., March 21, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please let me have one more dash at superstition. I have just been reading Brother Putnam's letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Sept. 17, 1892, and it has filled me with enthusiasm. I feel that the time has come for all Freethinkers to act, talk, think, and write. There was a time when reason was unpopular, too much so to even talk about, but that time is past and the world is ready for reform. Since the writer became a Liberalist he has not only studied the mistakes of Christian dogmas, but I have talked with many church-members, and find most of them half infidels. Many say, It does look strange that Jesus should be Christ, God, and the Holy Ghost, and create men to kill him because he was so displeased with his own creation, and that he should send men to an everlasting hell for the crime of murder, when he laid the pattern himself by the sacrifice of his copartner in heaven, and that partner his own body. So say the trinity Christians. And now, my dear Christian reader, let me say to you, perhaps you, like God of old, have a large family of children, boys and girls who believe you to be a just and loving father. If one of the girls eats forbidden fruit and displeases you, suppose you get some of the boys to take you out and nail you up to a tree to appease your anger, and by so doing practice what you preach. If that same action once saved a lost and ruined world, it might save your family. One theory is just as reasonable as the other.

You say you are afraid to doubt the Bible for fear you will do wrong. Let me say, Did you ever know a good man who was afraid to have his work and his life investigated? Would a good father be angry if his son asked him if his works were all true? You say not. Well, ask God, through all the medium you have, his own book, if it is all true and good. Surely if he be a just, true, and loving God he will not damn, and if you find no contradiction and nothing but honest facts, and you have no reason to doubt, then you do not believe but you know it is true. But if you find that Matthew says a thing is one way, Mark says it is another way, and John another, each entirely different, then begin to think and ask yourself if it would not be well to look up the veracity of those four inspired gents and see if they are all reliable and truthful. Then read the four different stories about the death and resurrection. Now read St. Luke xix, 27. Then you may doubt just a little his being the son of God. God himself, and the Holy Ghost. Then read where Mary gave the whole thing away in St. Luke ii, 48. Then remember that you have been taught to believe that this was the only true, loving, merciful God who foreknew all things. Then turn back and read Num. xxxi, then you may begin to get your eyes opened, and think, "Perhaps those worthies have been writing about the wrong God." Then send for THE TRUTH SEEKER and the book called "The Bible of Bibles." Then, if you are a man or woman of reason, we may expect you to join our Freethought Federation and help us to build up moral science and true religion, which are to give light and reason to our fellows.

GEO. B. WYATT.

Hopes the Canadian Northwest Will Counterbalance Catholic Quebec.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 31, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I read your paper with pleasure, and consider the contributions of Oswald and of Macdonald valuable acquisitions. Some of the friends, however, are very dogmatic and unfair. They denounce all Christians instead of the superstitions that they teach. This is about on a par with the words of Talmage: "First, I warn you to shun the skeptic." Some others keep rehearsing the old, old stories, as though they could improve on the language of Ingersoll. Some one gets hold of a threadbare myth and dwells upon it to the extent of half a column and the discomfort of the reader.

I think you take a wrong view of annexation. It is true that in Quebec the lily-white neck of Liberty is under the orthodox hoof, but consider, learned sir, that those people are increasing rapidly, that comparatively few of them go to the Canadian northwest because of the cold climate, but that they immigrate to this country and in spite of yourself you are getting from over the border sufficient of the rosary and graven image to contaminate your school system. The Canadian Northwest will hold about fifty million people, and if annexed to this country, would, in a few years, contain enough cool-headed Scandinavians to counteract the one and a quarter million French Catholics that annexation would bring.

I am attending a business college here where lady students are numerous and old-fashioned religion is rampant. Churches became the topic of conversation one leisure hour, and when asked what church I adhered to I said I liked the Unitarian the best but saw no use in the prayers they made; that I had long since ceased to pray, never having received any good from it. Then up spake a fair follower of the messiah, and asked what I did when misfortune frowned upon me. "Fair fetich-worshiper," quoth I, respectfully, "I lean upon the arm of flesh and endeavor to retain mine equanimity." "But," queried she, "if the arm of flesh fails thee?" "If the arm of flesh fails me I cease to lean, I topple over, so to speak, and that is just what the devotee must do notwithstanding the long prayer." By way of proving special providence one lady told of a very good man who was foreordained to miss an ill-fated train by about one minute's time. The train went through a bridge and about two hundred people were lost. I told her it was saying little for the uplifting power of Christianity when only one out of so many was worth keeping on earth. Then they told me to go into my room, read the Bible, and pray, and that I might get back my faith in eternal hell, but I respectfully declined. Once I went to the mission Sunday-school on Canal street, and among the scholars there appeared to be more Italians than any other nationality, children from under the very shadow of the Vatican, where the mother of modern superstition, instead of enlightening, has sat upon the people for so many centuries; and these children are to be civilized by the superstitions that degraded their ancestors. The superintendent offered me a class to teach, but again I declined the Christian proposition.

I distribute my papers and get many a harsh look from those whom I befriend. At sight of one of the pretty pictures one gentleman shuddered and then became enraged, like Byron's angry Turk in "The Giaour"—

Then curl'd his very beard with ire,
And glared his eye with fiercer fire.

J. H. PINKERTON.

How They Got Fair-Closing Votes in Missouri.

MR. EDITOR: J. E. Remsburg lectured last night at the Haven Opera House on Sunday closing of the World's Fair. The audience was small, but the lecture immense. He told some of the methods of getting names to the Sunday-closing petitions, and I want to give your readers an idea of how they did it in Missouri.

I sometimes go to church, but not often on account of my aversion to blasphemy. I was raised in a religious family, and no doubt this is owing somewhat to my early teaching, and I scarcely ever attend church without hearing the preacher say something about the deity, such that if he would say the same about my father I would kick him outdoors.

But this time I was destined to hear a sermon on Sabbath-breaking of the regular old Puritan order, after which a paper was read with regard to Sunday closing of the World's Fair, that for bigotry and unfairness and all-round meanness I think can't be matched this side of hades.

There were less than three hundred persons in the church, four-fifths of whom were women and children, to whom the preacher appealed something in this style: "Now, my hearers, after all you have listened to to-day, do you want the World's Fair opened on Sunday? Do you want the saloons of Chicago opened on Sunday? Do you want the dance-houses, the houses of prostitution, the gambling hells, and the low resorts of vice and ruin, open on Sunday? Do you want all kinds of intoxicating liquors to be sold in the World's Fair buildings on Sunday? If not, let each and every one of you stand up!"

Of course, after such an appeal as that nearly three-fourths of the congregation arose to their feet. After they were seated, the preacher continued: "I see some in the assembly did not stand up. Now, do I understand from that that they want all these places open on the Lord's day? and want liquor to be sold in the buildings? I cannot think they do; but I will put it another way, and I trust there is not a man or woman in this house, or a monster in human shape, that will respond. But if there is I want every man, woman, and child within the sound of my voice to look so they will know him or her, and if there is one so void of shame as to respond I want you all to make it your solemn duty, and think it a privilege, to point the finger of scorn at him or her if they meet on the street; to boycott him or her; to, in fact, make it so hot for the party so responding that he or she cannot live in this Christian community; and when they go hence, as they will be compelled to, to make it your business to find out their destination, and write letters of warning to those living in such town, city, or country, of the kind of characters that are coming amongst them, so they may not be enabled to even land their goods; and so keep them moving until they find there is no place for them, and that they are vagabonds and outcasts on earth, just as they should be."

After this appeal, during the recital of which he fairly frothed at the mouth, showing all the malignancy of a freshly caged hyena, he again repeated the former list, placing, as he did before, the whole together, and then asked all who were in favor of having all these places open on Sunday, and favored the selling of liquor in the World's Fair buildings, to stand up, and remain standing until all in the house could get a good look at them. Of course no one stood up.

I, however, came near doing so, and telling him just what I thought of him, and his way of putting the proposition.

Well, the result was that a petition went from that church with a full vote for closing. And that was the way they did it in, at least, one church in Missouri.

S. T. S.

Lectures on Morals, on How Criminals Are Produced, Etc.

NORSE, TEX., March 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As we have had the pleasure of having some lectures delivered by Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, of Kansas City, Mo., allow me space in your columns for the following condensed report.

Mrs. Krekel delivered two lectures at Clifton and one at Norse on February 11th and 12th to good and attentive audiences. These lectures awakened such an interest in Liberalism—in fact, created such an enthusiasm, actually converting several persons from the darkness of orthodoxy to the glorious light of Liberalism—that we were enabled, I am gratified to say, to make further arrangements for five more lectures—two at Meridian, two at Norse, and one at Clifton.

Mrs. Krekel delivered a lecture at Meridian on March 9th. Subject: "Old and New Theories; Primitive Man's Impression; Scientific Man's Conception of Nature," to a very attentive audience. The Bosque Citizen, printed at Meridian, Tex., has this to say of the lecture: "Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, the lecturer on 'The Progress of Civilization and Science,' was greeted with an intelligent and attentive audience at Fossett Hall in this city last Thursday night. Her remarks were different from those generally heard from the stand. Her words were clean-cut, her literary and historic erudition ample in her chosen field, and her references to the sciences of antiquity and modern times striking and refreshing.

She is a graphic, vivacious speaker, and withal, good-looking. Her style and language were dignified and chaste, her elocution smooth, and her rhetoric, coupled with appropriate gestures, interesting and impressive. Several gentlemen congratulated the lady at the conclusion of her lecture. She thinks freely, and is a Freethinker, and has evidently read a large number of works inimical to established theocracy."

This I consider a very good and commendatory notice of the lecture, especially so for a country newspaper, issued in such an orthodox town as is Meridian, Tex.

Despite special efforts made by the orthodox Christians of Meridian to keep people away, Mrs. Krekel was greeted with a larger audience the second night—i. e., on Friday night, March 10th—when she delivered her excellent lecture on "Evolution of Morals." She compared the morals taught in each of the historical religions—and also its speculations—and pointed out that the moral part of each is a natural product of the time and grew out of the soil in which it flourished. But I shall not attempt to give a synopsis of her lectures. They must be heard to be appreciated.

The Bosque Eagle, another paper published at Meridian, Bosque county, Tex., says: "Mrs. Mattie Krekel's lectures last Thursday and Friday nights, at Meridian, were well attended. Mrs. Krekel is a lady of refinement, a fine reasoner, and her lectures are indeed an able effort in behalf of the sentiment of Freethinking."

Saturday night, March 11th, we had the pleasure of listening to a very good lecture on "Woman's Equality Before the Law," delivered by Mrs. Krekel at Norse. She pointed out some of the many great and oppressive legal disabilities with which woman is confronted and which she is compelled to labor under to-day even in this, our boasted land of freedom, despite the advancement made in the more equal educational facilities enjoyed to-day compared with thirty or forty years ago.

The Norse schoolhouse was nearly filled Sunday night by a very interested audience, who listened with almost breathless attention to a highly interesting lecture on "Our Criminal Class—How Produced; the Responsibility; the Remedy." This subject was treated with the skill and ability of a deep thinker, who had thoroughly mastered her subject. She pointed out how this class was mainly produced through the trinity of causes—heredity, poverty, and ignorance. Where the chief responsibility rested was clearly indicated, and effective remedies were suggested for the prevention of crime and the reformation of criminals. But I must draw my article to a close.

Mrs. Krekel closed her lectures in Bosque county, Tex., with her lecture on "Our Government—Christian Encroachments Upon Civil Liberty," delivered at Clifton on March 13th.

Mrs. Krekel has done much to forward the cause of Liberalism in our midst here. She is a well equipped and able representative and exponent of constructive Liberalism. She is not of the destructive order—merely tearing down old ideas—but instead of this she tries first to allay prejudices and avoids direct thrusts at the superstitions of the credulous, and thus averts shocking or repulsing them. She then proceeds to adroitly undermine the foundations, or to show the want of a foundation, of these old doctrines, theories, and speculations, and ably presents the indisputable facts of the recognized and undeniable truths of science. In short, opens the vision to the eternal and immutable laws of nature and of the universe—in short, presents truth, science, Liberalism.

T. THEO. COLWICK.

No Taxation Without Representation for Woman.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., Feb. 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Your noble paper has often moved my heart to such a degree that I have felt I must take the liberty to send my grateful thanks for the brave and able manner in which liberty is defended and error, bigotry, and intolerance are exposed.

It is a grand and greatly needed work in which you and your able correspondents are so courageously engaged. We prize your paper above all others, and realize its enlightening and liberating influences. We see in it a hope for the future of America. We see here patriotism strong enough to stand up against all odds and bravely speak the truth. Yet on the much-vexed woman suffrage a California correspondent exhibits more of the old-time narrow prejudices against that much-abused sex than enlightenment equal to the times. He starts off with the enunciation that "Woman will abolish what little liberty we have"—that is, of course, if she gets the ballot.

Experience is the only true knowledge which cannot be denied. Now let the anxious would-be Liberal turn his inquiring gaze on the state of Wyoming, where woman suffrage has been tried very satisfactorily. An effort was made some time ago to restore the right exclusively to the male population, but the people emphatically said No.

Theory sounds very well, and may be so served up with sophistry as to receive universal acceptance, and yet be wholly wanting when put to a practical test.

Nowhere is this more plainly and conclusively seen than on the woman question. It has been ably argued that women were incapable of higher education, that the female mind could not cope with the abstruse subjects of collegiate course. She lacked strength and depth. That theory has been abundantly exploded by actual experience. Time and again young women have carried off the prize in our highest institutions of learning in those very branches men were so sure were wholly beyond her ken.

The next beautiful theory which the unselfish gallantry of the sterner sex brings to her rescue is physical inability, and hard they have labored to prove by well-chosen words that woman's health must be irrevocably broken by the long severe strain of a university course.

But again it has been proved by actual test that there is no need of anxiety on this point, since the president of one of our leading colleges has declared that by proper physical culture carried along with the mental the girls will come out with their sheepskins and yet retain all their physical vigor.

Young men can claim no more for their powers of exertion and endurance. Let a boy start out with the aim of climbing to the topmost round of the ladder of learning, regardless of health and the demands of the physical for an equal show, and how long before nature's broken laws make protest? He'll never get there!

No man claiming for himself the name of Liberal should intrench himself behind an ancient prejudice, and expect to keep pace with the more advanced truth seeker. He will soon see cause for alarm.

Now, if your correspondent were maintaining the authority of the Bible, he would be all right. Women were allowed no privileges in the dispensation recorded in its sacred pages, and to more jealously guard against any error creeping into his holy command, God most explicitly forbid any woman writing any part or having any influence in the make-up of his holy word. The glorious claim to perfection attained by those ancient male lawgivers, no Liberal would care to share.

To many a man not endowed with a great breadth of vision a small obstruction becomes very huge. It is like a man going behind a barn to get a fine view of a lovely landscape. Whereas, if he but get away from the barn, above it, so that light from all parts of the glorious prospect may converge on the retina of his eye, his whole being will be thrilled with a delightful pleasure.

The intrinsic justice of the principle of representation before taxation, or to put it as those immortal patriots who poured out their blood and treasure in its defense, "No taxation without representation," no Liberal can afford to deny. Liberals are fighting for truth, justice, and liberty. Can half the population be slave and the other half free?

The gentleman further says, quoting from another, "She must realize the littleness of dress, novel-reading, gossip, etc., and that outside of that her mind is a blank." Truer words were never spoken, your correspondent affirms with alacrity.

Surprising fact that a gentleman professing to be up to the times in intelligence and sincerity could at one "fell swoop" encompass all womankind in that idle, thoughtless class who spend their time in an effort to be amused with the soap-bubbles of literature, or for a change in that most irksome of all pastimes, dressing themselves and talking about each other.

If this is the kind of mother that nourished the brain of this timorous Liberal we can easily understand why he has made no better progress. If such are his sisters we can heartily excuse him, begging him to take comfort, regardless of the attitude of the Freethought press on woman suffrage. For this class of females no more represent the great mass of toiling, striving womanhood than the corseted dude with his right eyeglass covered, his mouth curling clouds of tobacco smoke under his aristocratic nose, and twirling his slender cane, as he drawling expounds the merits of the latest novel or the prospects of the coming horserace or perchance the outcome of the last night's faro-game. What truth or justice classing all men in this category? just as correct and fair as that the aforesaid female represents all womankind.

The remarks of a lady schoolteacher caused the gentleman another tremor of anxiety and fright. She said, "If we could only vote, we would soon put a stop to the liquor business, and the first thing we would have a Sunday law in California." Now, this Sunday law has been tried in California, and who of us that have been here all the time could detect the slightest difference now and when we had a law? Besides, a lady schoolteacher can no more predict what the women of California would vote for than anyone else.

The women of California are a progressive, intelligent class, as much as the men. Then, as to the liquor business, what man, not directly interested in its traffic, could find fault with the first-mentioned aim of this lady's ballot had she one?

To destroy the liquor business would be to lay low at one stroke the incarnation of all villainies, the greatest foe of human happiness, the most potent factor of human slavery and degradation.

To destroy the liquor business would be to vanquish more enemies to our freedom and unbiased equality than the civil war wiped out with all its wealth of treasure and blood.

Who does not know what baneful influences have been at work for many, many years, through the medium of liquor in the hands of unscrupulous politicians. With this powerful factor and the millions of ignorant, superstitious emigrants from priest-ridden countries across the Atlantic, they have transformed the condition of our once happy country till now it were far more truthful to sing of America as the land of the coward and the home of the slave, than that old song: The land of the free and the home of the brave.

How can any American, knowing the manner of manipulating elections and its far-reaching effects for evil, find fault with any plan to rid it of its greatest evil? How can any American knowing the part the scum of Europe has had in shaping politics in our suffering land, bring the charge of ignorance and superstition against American women as a reason for unfitness for suffrage?

Have not these benighted beings, as ignorant of our free institutions as an Eskimo, been first sated with liquor, and then a ballot put into their hands, almost as soon as they landed, solely for selfish partisan purposes?

No, sir, the political machines do not favor destroying the liquor power, for with these innovations, their day would be done. Then might Liberty again lift her head, and Hope dashing the tears from her eyes be able to discover law strong and brave enough to affect equally the millionaire and the poor man.

MRS. R. B. KUFFEL.

GOLD. SILVER.
MINES AND STOCKS.
CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,
 Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.
 3mo14

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths or Religion and Social Matters.
 Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance.
 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
 Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
 THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS,
 AND
OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
 TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
 WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

26 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
1 " The Church Robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
1 " Thanksgiving.	1 " The Lord's Instruments.
1 " Sabbath Laws.	25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1 " Children and the Church.	1 " The Church and Slavery.
1 " Woman and the Church.	1 " Priests and Politics.
1 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	1 " Ireland and the Church.
1 " Studies in Natural History.	1 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
1 " The Bible and Science.	1 " The Uses of the Cross.
1 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	1 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	12 " Persecutions of the Church.
1 " The Atonement Scheme.	1 " Some Allegories.
1 " The Lord and His Works.	1 " Heaven.
1 " Prayer.	1 " Hell.
1 " The Creeds.	1 " Miscellaneous.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
 Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
 Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price 10 cents.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
 Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
 Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
 Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
 Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
 Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
 Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
 God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
 Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
 Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
 Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
 Man's True Saviors. 10c.
 Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
 Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
 Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.
 Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
 Sermon from Shakspeare's Text. 10c.
 Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. 1 by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
 What Is Right? 10c.
 What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
 Who are Christians? 10c.
 Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan of Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward," which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all. [The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Græco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 88 pages, $3.
Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.
The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 438 pages, 50c.
Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.
Universe Analyzed. 24

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN. For sale at THIS OFFICE. Price, $1.50.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.
Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.
The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener. One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and Know Her Enemies and Her Friends. Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. RAMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing." In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

DID JESUS RISE FROM THE DEAD?

The evidence for the resurrection is in this book carefully considered, and found wanting. It ought to convince every Christian of the untruthfulness of this alleged miracle, for it is certainly one of the best essays ever written on the subject. In paper, 25 cents.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFSSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continence even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Mother of Harlots; a Synopsis of Popery, as It Was and as It Is. By William Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. The object of this book is to expose popery, acquaint the people of the country with the dangerous machinations of the church in the United States, and warn them against giving it any countenance or support. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Christianity a Fiction.

THE Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

in your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By Nelson Parrshall. Chicago: Chas. Kerr & Co. Cloth, pp. 70, price 50 cents.

One of the best ways of proving that the universe was not produced by any God, is that of exhibiting the natural processes by which it did come about. Too much study cannot be spent on these processes so kindly furnishing us with said great spectacle and rare-show—a show, all will admit, greater even than the Columbian Exposition. "Evolution" is the name by which these processes have been labeled. The volume before us displays proofs of them. Let us scan its chapter-titles: The Growth of Evolutionary Thought, Practical Benefits of the Evolution Theory, Proofs from Geology, Proofs from Morphology, Proofs from Embryology, Proofs from Metamorphosis, Proofs from Rudimentary Organs, Proofs from Geographical Distribution, Proofs from Discovered Links, Proofs from Artificial Breeding, Proofs from Reversion, Proofs from Mimicry, Spontaneous Generation, A Summary of Evidence, Language and the Moral Sense, Conclusion. Among other things, the author's accounts of the transformations of various kinds of animals into other kinds are informing. Nature, he remarks, never begins any work from wholly new material, for her adaptiv genius is so great that she can transform the old into the new. The shores of the seas were the scenes of many remarkable transhapings. The ocean-born creatures were brave and hardy fellows, a whole host of Columbus as it were, and bent on becoming land-lubbers at any cost. Now, when Nature wanted to make a landsman out of one of these fishes, "she did not give him a new pair of legs at once, but left him to utilize his fins for that purpose as best he could. Of course, he made bad work of it at first; but as he was left in the hard grip of necessity it was Hobson's choice. As he was often left on shallow, muddy shores by receding tides, he began to work his fins more vigorously, until finally, after many generations, in spite of a round of fatal failures, some of his kind succeeded in adapting their fins to this new use. The mud-fish of India, the Brazilian doras, and certain catfish of tropical America, take journeys of considerable length across the dry land in this way. Thus the swim-bladders of certain of the early fishes gradually developed into lungs; the gill-arches into ears; the head enlarged; the circulation increased; a warmer current filled the veins; the tail-fin, not having much to do, dwindled to an ornamental appendage—and then and there a quadruped was born. Again, when Nature wanted a bird, she didn't make one out of raw material, as we are told, full-winged to soar away, but 'worked over' the old fabric, just as thrifty housewives do, and do so wonderfully well. Therefore, if wings are needed, the fore-limbs must go—they must be transformed into wings." That birds should have descended from reptiles seems queer enough, yet, says our writer: "Turning to the fossil world, we find innumerable examples of connecting forms. In the latter deposits, we find remains of toothed birds, having many reptilian characteristics. Reptiles were then not a fixed type, but shaded gradually from fish to bird. The Archaeopteryx, a fossil rarely found, was a true link between the birds and reptiles. Certainly, no two kinds of living things are more unlike than birds and reptiles, or more antagonistic in their natures, mutually preying on each other; and yet their relationship is clearly established. Psychologically, they have nothing in common but hate: and yet the bird is only a feathered reptile. Within three years, there was found, in the slate deposits of Bavaria, a specimen of a reptilian-bird—now preserved in the British Museum—which has a long, lizard-like tail of twenty joints. Says Professor Vogt, 'This is neither bird nor reptile, but a decided link between the two.' In the later chalk formations many fossils have been found by Professor Marsh, more bird-like in character, but still possessing teeth. The flying dragons afford another link between birds and reptiles. The front half was decidedly bird-like, but the hind legs and pelvis were strongly reptilian." In other pages we catch a glimpse of our own ancestor, not conducting himself in a manner edifying to our filial eyes: "Doubtless man lived thousands of years before he acquired what we would now call language. Nevertheless, his earliest cries and noises were the beginnings of connected speech; though no more intelligible than the chattering of apes. If we could go back to this lowest conceivable savage, what should we find? Probably this: The anthropoid ape and the man-animal not quite out of sight of each other, but evolving on divergent roads from a common ancestor. If we could have stood near the diverging point, it would have been difficult to tell which had the potency of the dominant animal who rules the world to-day. Most people who try to reason about the matter, make the mistake of attempting to bridge the chasm at once from Shakspeare to a shrimp; and they say the difference is so enormous that Evolution cannot be true. But the thoughtful student goes back step by step, age by age, until he stands side by side with a creature half upright and howling, with all the ferocious instincts of a brute, but yet man-like in form and function, his language a jumble of incoherent noises, his moral sense yet undeveloped, killing and eating all he could overpower." However, we shall not be so much shocked at this picture as some seem to be, having, to tell the truth, had right in our own age and neighborhood a plentiful experience with countless just such creatures, "howling, with all the ferocious instincts of a brute but yet man-like in form and functions," garbed in gown or coat of black, with "language a jumble of incoherent noises," and "moral sense yet undeveloped."

TRUTH IN FICTION. Twelve Tales with a Moral. By Paul Carns. Chicago: Open Court Pub. Co. White cloth, gilt stamps, gilt edges; pp. 128; price $1.

We always welcome a presentation of the truths of Rationalism in the garb of fiction. This volume constitutes one of the most commendable of such presentations that we have met for some time. Each of its twelve tales illustrates some tenet of Liberalism or doctrine of philosophy. It is not required that we should find the art with which the stories are spun to be equal to that of Voltaire. The latter's touch is of such a superlative and perhaps inimitable exquisiteness that one of two or three grades beneath may be pleasant and meritorious enough. We will say that we have enjoyed these tales very well.

The first, "The Chief's Daughter," represents a Catholic missionary learning from Indians living by Niagara falls that, in obedience to an immemorial custom, the daughter of a chieftain is about to pass over the cataract in a canoe to certain death. To the priest's remonstrances the chief replies: "Your own words bear witness against you. Christ you say has set us an example. He suffered himself to be sacrificed for mankind. So we are doing the same. Lela-wala is my only child, as Jesus the Christ was the Great Spirit's only begotten son. Why do you say that Christ's sacrifice is great and holy and praiseworthy, while our sacrifices are evil, and barbarous, and superstitious? Our custom is a holy tradition; we simply obey the command of the Great Spirit and we know that so long as our obedience continues, his blessing will be upon us and upon our children."

The second story, "After the Distribution of the Type," tells us in regard to a certain New England village that "there were two friends in that town, a smith, and a type-setter. The one was a political orator and a freethinker, the other an author and a poet; the former strong, quick, and bold, the latter given to meditation, slow, and carefully weighing his words." The quick and bold words of the former, and the carefully weighed verbalities of the latter, are forthwith made to batter and fence at each other in a debate on the soul and immortality.

"The Clock or the Watches" is an ingenious fable. A clock on a church was regulated by an old official who assumed to have been deputed to the work by Time himself. The owners of watches were forced to say that their instruments kept the time of the big clock, or to observe silence. A number of curious and laughable disputes grew out of various phases of the matter.

"The Mysterious Beetle" puts in a ridiculous light the extreme Agnosticism of some individuals—the Pyrrhonic skepticism which doubts all and will scarcely affirm anything, even that the doubter doubts.

"The Highest Trump in Argument" flourishes and inflicts the same lash.

In "The Philosopher's Martyrdom" the Agnostic notion is still under the harrow. A philosopher is represented as making an eloquent plea for the glory and excellence of ignorance. "I plead with you," he cries, "to throw off all the vanity of pretended knowledge, and hope that science can accomplish anything worth mentioning, for nothing can replace the grand revelation of our eternal, irredeemable ignorance. . . . My creed be henceforth that there is no wisdom except in ignorance." When enough fun has been had out of this philosopher's love of ignorance, he appears to be allowed to feel sure of some things to some extent, for he lays down the principle that the standard of morality and happiness is not absolute, but relative to each individual; also that our guide should be the greatest happiness of the greatest number. He is brought to a trial of his sincerity, for cast away on a cannibal isle he is reasoned to thus in his own philosophical way: "A man has to die anyhow, and he will have an easier death if he is slaughtered at the butcher's than if he die piecemeal on a sickbed. And if he is dead, I can assure you that there is no pain in being eaten, while the pleasure of eating is indubitable. You, of course, deny that there is any pleasure in eating human flesh. But that is only your one-sided view of the subject. I understand perfectly that you, in the predicament in which you are at present, are prejudiced against our institutions. But you will readily grant that we must understand better what gives us pleasure, than you do. We cannot make you the judge of what our happiness should be." Be it recorded to the everlasting credit of the philosophic fraternity, this limb of them showed no recreant feather. He was sensible enough to understand that any remonstrance would be in vain; nor would it have been a fair demand on his part to let his own views of happiness be the criterion of the happiness of others. Everybody must know best what gives him pleasure. When Thanksgiving day came he ended his life with perfect contentment, for he was conscious that he had lived up to his ethical maxim.

"The Convention of the Animals" relates that in solemn conclave assembled the Lion, the Tiger, the Elephant, the Fox, the Eagle, the Bat, the Crocodile, the Monkey, the Man, etc., deliberated as to who is the greatest, best, or noblest creature in the animal kingdom. Among the observations, one passed by the sparrow may be edifying: "The silliest animal of all animals is without question Man. Man thinks ever of the future, and seldom enjoys the present. His whole life long does he labor and worry, instead of enjoying [not 'employing,' as the Open Court printers have it] the present moment, and being of good cheer and ever in buoyant spirits." The writer, however, in the end brings forth his view that Man is the superior animal. Man, it is true, "was not the tallest creature, nor the strongest in muscular power, nor the cunningest in sly shrewdness; his locomotiv powers were not extraordinary; . . . he was not the merriest in the enjoyment of life. . . . Yet he went to work and joined hands with his brother-man. With common wants they spoke a common language. Their struggle for existence was severest among all creatures, but they comprehended the causes of their troubles one by one, and learned from their hardships. The very evils of life taught them to progress; they fought their way against odds, and took possession of the earth."

The tale entitled "The People by the Sea" illustrates a certain doctrine of immortality different from the ancient and orthodox one. It is that a person lives in his works.

The tale "Charity" reminds us, under the similitude of children feeding young robins who thereby remain unpracticed in getting their own food and unable to do so when necessity arises, that charity often does harm. The conclusion is: "There is but one charity which is commendable. It is that which gives men in need the opportunity to help themselves or to learn how to help themselves."

In "Capital and Labor" it appears that our story-teller does not look for help for the workingman to any such radical system as Socialism or Anarchism. He expects improvement rather from endeavor at individual self-betterment, under the law of the survival of the fittest. The first human beings among the manlike apes, he says, "were exceptions as much as are the capitalists to-day. They of course were more powerful than their less fortunate brothers, and it is very likely that they exercised their power over them, which may have given cause to much jealousy. But there was little use in decrying this condition; the others had to follow their example and acquire the same kind of capital until all humanity became like them so that the whole species man stands now as high above the rest of the animal world as the big millionaire in soul-values." Let everyone become a capitalist, seems to be the cardinal piece of advice issued to the people.

Two more tales are styled, "The Dross Is Discarded but Nothing Is Lost," and "Ben-Midrash the Gardener of Galilee."

It strikes us that a capital use for this collection of tales, besides its regular employment as reading-matter for adults, would be to familiarize children with the problems so jauntily dressed out in fictional fur and feather.

Mr. W. F. Jamieson sends the following letter to our readers:

"W. S. Bell's Handbook of Free-thought" is bigger than the Bible, measured by the standard of common sense. It ought to be in the hands of every Freethinker. It is a volume of 384 pages, a heavy battle-bolt against prevailing superstitions.

"It opens with a large subject—all 'Creation.' It gives the two stories, that of science and that of superstition; for is it not true that it requires more labor to dislodge error than to teach science?"

"Prophecy, miracles, and Jesus Christ are all treated in a trenchant style; while W. H. Burr's masterly compilation of 'Self-Contradictions of the Bible' are thrown into this volume bodily."

"By this time Bell is ready for the devil, who he says had 'greatness thrust upon him'."

"Bell is facetious until near the close of this Satanic chapter, then suddenly grows solemn as a Presbyterian clergyman, and asks twenty ear-splitting questions. Why will such men harrow up the souls of the saints in this cold-blooded manner? I believe that Bell merely pretends to be serious in this matter. A close observer, like an orthodox reader, can detect it between the lines. Yet his assumed seriousness harmonizes with the sanctity of the subject."

"Now, if you want to know to a certainty what the soul is not, get Bell's book. The most dazzling light of many thinkers is here focused. You can take your choice. This chapter on the soul is worth many times the price of the book, for it shows how ably learned men can write on a subject of which they literally know nothing. And that is worth a great deal. A million copies of this book ought to be circulating in the churches. There is more knowledge in it than can be had in a four years' course at college—and look at the difference in the cost!"

"Mr. Bell shows what the giants of Freethought think, as he guides you through his interesting collections of curiosities—will prove so to the strictly religious reader."

"After having settled yourself snugly on the soul, this man coolly asks twenty-five queries, which he calls 'some soul questions.' 'Good God!' as the pious Watts exclaims, why will he persist in disturbing solemn slumbers?"

"Next he comes gliding in with the design argument. Dull must be the perception of any church-member, who dares to read this book, if he does not discover the 'design' of this highly religious author."

"He reasons about God as if he were a doctor of divinity. When Bell gets through the chapter there appears to be a ringing in the head."

"Temperance, Christianity, Secularism, Infidelity, 'Objects of Orthodoxy and Liberalism,' treated so interestingly in this multum in parvo, would be read by thousands of Christians if they had a chance to get at them. There is a splendid opportunity right here for Liberals to do missionary work."

"I commenced by saying Bell's book is bigger than the Bible, and end with the assertion that it is a better book than the Bible; and nine out of ten Christians would be obliged to say so if they would only read it. This is why Freethinkers should have copies handy about the house. They should daily read aloud a portion of this truthful scripture to take the place of the old-fashioned worship."

"W. F. JAMIESON."

"Gloriana; or, The Revolution of 1900," is a cloth-bound book of 286 pages, published at $1.25. The author is Lady Florence Dixie, a woman whom we have come across a sight of times, always engaged in crying out vehemently for something or other, we forget just what—probably she allowed that point to stay too vague, a thing previously not unheard of. The preface, in a quotation, des res that

"Strife collapse like a thing disproved, Hate consume like a thing unclean."

But then, we can't help hating to see caressingly printed with two 's' as on page 6, or degradation with two 'e's as on page 23. A book should be got out correctly, in its orthoepic details and all. If Lady Florence hopes to lead in that arena of public achievement to which she ever incites her sex, she must first study details, mastery of which it is that gives success to all the hated males now distinguishing themselves in that brave theater. Battles are won not by the commander flourishing fantastic and sentimental assertions of superiority and success, but by the one clearly grasping the sordid details of ground, distance, endurance, and ammunition. Then as to that strife collapsing like a thing disproved, how can we help striving when we hear dancing described as "the light fantastic toe?" The story closes with the death of the heroin, Gloriana de Lara. She dies for woman's freedom and the salvation of her people. How much less the sacrifice demanded by the public of some women—merely to stop writing.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25; cloth, gilt, $1.50.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for blasphemy. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERATION.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE. A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9 x 13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22 x 28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

" " " " COLONEL INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN.

(A home picture.) 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 18 x 24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7 1/2 x 13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT.

An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents. INGERSOLL ON McGLYNN. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED. Paper, 3 cents. BIBLE IDOLATRY. Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE,

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1892. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Reunion at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings. This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,357 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly colored, and richly tinted, the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it. As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "Tributes" that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Eliza Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Besides these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In any season or occasion.

PRICES.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

INFIDEL DEATH- BEDS.

By
G. W. FOSTER.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others: Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Olootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.
By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

- | IRON-CLAD SERIES. | |
|--|----|
| 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 2 Secular Responsibility. C. J. Holyoake..... | 5 |
| 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... | 25 |
| Underwood..... | 10 |
| 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... | 10 |
| 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... | 15 |
| 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... | 10 |
| 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... | 10 |
| 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... | 50 |
| 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait..... | 25 |
| 13 Essays on Miracles. Dav. Hume..... | 10 |
| 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 10 |
| 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... | 5 |
| 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... | 5 |
| 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... | 5 |
| 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... | 5 |
| 23 The Christian Debt. Charles Watts..... | 5 |
| 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... | 5 |
| 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... | 5 |
| 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... | 5 |
| 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... | 5 |
| 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... | 5 |
| 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... | 5 |
| 33 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 38 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... | 10 |
| 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... | 10 |
| 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... | 5 |
| 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... | 10 |
| 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 10 |

- | MANNA SERIES. | |
|--|----|
| 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... | 5 |
| 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 5 20 Questions Without Answers..... | 5 |
| 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... | 10 |
| 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... | 10 |
| 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... | 5 |
| 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 10 A Few Words about the Devil..... | 5 |
| 11 New Life of Jacob..... | 5 |
| 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... | 10 |
| 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake..... | 10 |
| 14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... | 10 |
| 15 Lucretian Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... | 10 |
| 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... | 5 |
| 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... | 10 |

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.
A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.
Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.
rice, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A. M.

12mo. cloth, $1.00.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.
STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL
Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized,	each $2.50
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	3.00
"	{ 14 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	3.00
"	{ gilt bowl,	"
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	3.50
"	{ Oxidized,	"
"	{ sectional gilt,	"
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	3.50
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl,	2.75
"	{ gilt,	3.25
Sugar "	{ " satin,	3.00
"	{ " gilt,	3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl. "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list. My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bages, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge. Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

FOUNTAIN PEN, 10c.

A splendid writing instrument. Hard Rubber Holder, patent continuous feed, durable gold pen, perfect finish, writes 10 pages at one sitting. To advertise our line of 1000 necessary articles we send sample pen with large catalogue post-paid for 10c. 3 for 25c. BIG BARGAIN VALLEY Catalogue free. R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO. 65 Courtlandt St., N. Y. City 3teow12

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABLETS.

Small text at bottom right.

DID JEREMIAH MEAN THIS?

Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.—Jere. xxv, 32.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's

ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. 12 CENTS

News of the Week.

An example of religious bigotry that is attracting attention is the blackballing of Theodore Seligman by the Union League Club, of New York, because he is a Hebrew.

WM. BURBANK, a convert to the new Carterite sect near Kalamazoo, Mich., has been tarred and feathered for paying so much attention to religion as to leave his children without clothing and food.

PROTESTANTS in England are indignant that the lord mayor of London, at a banquet given by him at the Mansion House in honor of Cardinal Vaughan, in proposing the dual toast of the queen and the pope placed the pope's name first.

THE temperance reform notion that all liquor-selling should be done by the government has been legislated into actuality in South Carolina. That state is opening barrooms and preparing to sell all the liquor that will be allowed to be disposed of after July 1st.

ABRAHAM MARTIN, an old negro of Atchison, Kan., has had in a dream a revelation that another deluge is coming. He received commands to build an Ark and freight it with animals. He has been at work on the Ark a year. He expects the animals to begin arriving in pairs in June.

THE corpse of a servant-girl named Marie Paulik was found in the Elbe river, near Prague, Austria. The populace conceived that she had been murdered by Jews and her remains used in religious rites. They wrecked a synagog and assaulted Jews and their dwellings so furiously that troops suppressed them only with difficulty.

JOHN HILL, the seventeen-year-old negro hanged at Camden, N. J., on the 14th, for murder, at the scaffold said to his lawyer: "Good-bye, Mr. Rex. I expect to meet you and all my kind friends in heaven. Sheriff West has been very good to me and I'll soon see him in heaven." His last words were, "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus."

THE opening ceremonies of the Columbian Exposition will be:

Music—Columbian March and Hymn—John P. Paine.

Prayer.

Presentation of Chiefs of Departments and Foreign Commissioners by the Director-General.

Music—"In Praise of God"—Beethoven.

Address and Opening of the Exposition by the President.

Starting of the Machinery, During Which Time Will Be Performed the "Hallelujah Chorus"—Handel.

Official Visit to the Departments.

THE great Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City, the building of which has taken forty years, was dedicated on the 6th. Brigham Young, Jr., said that politics are as important to the Latter Day Saints as is religion and should be so considered by the Mormon church. He predicted that the destiny of the Saints is to become powerful politicians and the rulers of the world. Lorenzo Snow, president of the Twelve Apostles of the church, advised the Saints not to expect too much on the opening of the temple, as Christ would not come until the Saints were prepared to receive him properly, and that might be ten or twelve or twenty years.

DETECTIVES employed by the Pittsburgh Law and Order League have accumulated a great mass of evidence of violations of the Sunday law. They have secured the names of, and will complain against, the superintendent, officials, and stockholders of the Citizens' Traction Co., whose offense consists in running cars. Bridge toll-takers will be prosecuted. A detective in disguise visited Carnegie's Homestead mills, where he found a thousand men working; that they were doing this not of necessity, but solely of their own pleasure, and regardless of the desires of the Order League as to when they should work, was confessed by the hardened wretches. Coachmen who drive people to church may be prosecuted.

AT JENSEN, a German and Russian village of Nebraska, Frieda Pruder, a nine-year-old girl, had spasms, and lost sight and speech. A superstitious old woman pronounced the child bewitched. The child's mattress when opened was found full of feathers matted in uncanny shapes of wreaths, flowers, and birds. The old woman said that the first female that visited the house next morning would be the witch. The first one was Mrs. Miller, who called to borrow spectacles. As her husband had once vainly attempted to sell Pruder some property, it was now supposed that Mrs. Miller was moved by pique and desire of revenge. Dr. Eringer treated the child in some mysterious way, apparently by prayer. He was presently suspected of abetting the witch, and told that if he did not leave he would be burnt at the stake. He left.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 17. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 29, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

COMPARATIVE IGNORANCE—THE HEATHEN CHINESE AND THE CHRISTIAN CATHOLICS.

THE BOOK-KEEPER

WHO POSSESSES A COPY OF

Goodwin's Improved Book-Keeping and Business Manual,
AND HAS MASTERED ITS CONTENTS,

Is Qualified to Fill a Position as Head Book-keeper for the Largest Business Concern in the Country.

In this book the most striking and valuable features of the various systems of book-keeping employed in the following well-known New York houses are clearly and concisely described as well as fully and correctly illustrated:

Arnold, Constable & Co.	E. S. Jaffray & Co.	R. H. Macy & Co.
Sweetser, Pembroke & Co.	Calhoun, Robbins & Co.	Leshner, Whitman & Co.
Hilton, Hughes & Co.	Lord & Taylor.	Edward Ridley & Sons.
Austin, Nichols & Co.	Francis H. Leggett & Co.	James McCreery & Co.
Tefft, Weller & Co.	Mills & Gibb.	Stern Brothers.
The H. B. Claflin Company.	Frederick Viator & Achelis.

Any book-keeper who hopes to obtain a situation in a large wholesale or retail house, or any person who is in any way connected with such a house, will find this book OF INESTIMABLE VALUE to him.

"Your book covers, in my opinion, every point necessary for a thorough knowledge of book-keeping as it is practised in the largest houses."
—GEO. W. H. KOCH, head book-keeper for Tefft, Weller & Co., importers and jobbers of dry goods, New York City, March 3, 1888.
"I find that your book contains many important points never brought out before in a work of its kind. I consider it invaluable to the fraternity of book-keepers in general, and in particular to those who are connected with the offices of large mercantile houses."—W. H. RUSSELL, head book-keeper for The H. B. Claflin Company, importers and jobbers of dry goods, New York City, March 8, 1888.

THE YOUNG MAN Who spends from six to sixteen months and from sixty to six hundred dollars to learn book-keeping in a business college, is—to put it mildly—throwing away both time and money! For three dollars he can secure a copy of "GOODWIN'S IMPROVED BOOK-KEEPING AND BUSINESS MANUAL," from which he can obtain, within 100 hours' study (guaranteed), without the assistance of a teacher, a sufficient knowledge of book-keeping to enable him to accept and hold a situation as book-keeper for the largest business concern in the country!

MANY HUNDREDS OF PURCHASERS—who had no previous knowledge of book-keeping—have secured excellent situations directly and solely through the knowledge of book-keeping acquired from a study of this work.

"I knew nothing about Double Entry Book-keeping before I purchased your book, and had had no office experience. By following the instructions in your book I have been able not only to keep my books, but also to make all my Trial Balances, Balance Sheets, Partnership and Comparative Statements, etc., etc."—J. A. DALRYMPLE, of J. A. Dalrymple & Co., Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 8, 1889.

Up to Wednesday, April 12, 1893, there have been sold 37,967 copies of this work, from the purchasers of which 3,638 testimonials have been received. Size of book, 7 1/2 x 10 1/4 inches. Pages, 293. Printed in red and black. Richly bound. Don't fail to SAVE THIS ADVERTISEMENT, as it will not appear again. Those who possess this book and use it—ALWAYS SUCCEED!

PRICE, $3.00. Sent, post-paid, upon receipt of price. Fifteenth Edition published January, 1893.

Send for the book or for a 32-page descriptive pamphlet. Address all orders exactly as follows:

J. H. GOODWIN, Room 527, 1215 Broadway, NEW YORK.

THIS ISSUE of THE TRUTH SEEKER is sent to several thousand Freethinkers who are not now subscribers. We hope they will like the paper and authorize us to place their names on our list.

SUBSCRIBE NOW, and read S. P. Putnam's letters during the World's Fair. They will be the best of all the descriptions of the Fair. Everyone will get a hundred times his money's worth in these letters alone.

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

A Leaflet showing that the oft-repeated Christian statement that infidels do not contribute to nor found charities is a falsehood. It ought to be widely circulated to meet the calumny. Price, 5 cents; 50 cents a dozen. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo., 290pp., $1.50.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo., cloth, $1.00.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain. Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.] Price, ---- $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution," ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker. Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK--AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE! The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subtleties, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.
The Chemical Aspect.
The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.
Genesis—The Garden of Eden.
The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.
The Creation of God—Abraham.
Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.
Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.
The End of National Life.
The Christian Era.
Organic Life—Vegetable.
Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,
In General.
By the Lungs.
By the Skin.
By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.
The Elementary Substances.
Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Soul—What Is It? The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.
The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Rational Review.
Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.
The Planetary Gods.
Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.
Morals; Whence They Spring.
The Non Credo. Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.
Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.
Map of Theological Retrogression.
Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 30 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH. A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Other Newspapers

WITH THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Any of our readers who desire a New York weekly political paper can obtain one of the following in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER at reduced rates:

Tribune (Republican) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER $3 50

Tribune (Republican) semi-weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER 4 25

The Sun (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER 3 50

The World (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER 3 50

THE ARENA and THE TRUTH SEEKER Will be sent one year both for $6 00

With large picture premium with the Arena, 6 50

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year for $6 75

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 17. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 29, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - APRIL 29, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Witchcraft in England.

We described in our last number the persecution by the Christian church of those whom that institution styled witches, through the countries of continental Europe. We will now relate the course of the same persecution in England.

In England the belief in witchcraft was much less prominent than on the continent. Owing partly to its insular position and partly to the intense political life that from the earliest period animated the people, there was formed in England a fearless and self-reliant type of character essentially distinct from that which was common in Europe, eminently free from morbid and superstitious terrors, and averse to the more depressing aspects of religion. It was natural, however, that amid the conflicts of the Reformation, some of the darker superstitions should arise; and we accordingly find Cranmer, in one of his articles of visitation, directing his clergy to seek for "any that use charms, sorcery, enchantments, witchcraft, soothsaying, or any like craft invented by the devil." We find also a very few executions under Henry VIII.; but in the following reign the law on the subject was repealed, and was not renewed till the accession of Elizabeth. New laws were then made, which were executed with severity; and Jewell, when preaching before the queen, adverting to the increase of witches, expressed a hope that the penalties might be still more rigidly enforced. "May it please your grace," he added, "to understand that witches and sorcerers within these few years are marvelously increased within your grace's realm. Your grace's subjects pine away even unto death; their color fadeth, their flesh rotteth, their speech is benumbed, their senses are bereft. . . . I pray God they never practice further than upon the subject." On the whole, however, these laws were far milder than those on the continent. For the first conviction, witches who were not shown to have destroyed others by their incantations were punished only by the pillory and by imprisonment, while those who were condemned to death perished by the gallows instead of the stake. Besides this, torture, which had done so much to multiply the evidence, had always been illegal in England, and the witch-finders were compelled to content themselves with pricking their victims all over in hopes of discovering "the insensible spot," with throwing them into the water to ascertain whether they would sink or swim, and with keeping them during several successive nights without sleep, in order to compel them to confess. These three methods were habitually employed with signal success; many women were in consequence condemned, and a considerable proportion of them were hanged. But such scenes did not take place without one noble protest. A layman named Reginald Scott published, in 1584, his "Discovery of Witchcraft," in which he unmasked the imposture and the delusion of the system with a boldness that no previous writer had approached, and with an ability which few subsequent writers have equaled. Keenly, eloquently, and unflinchingly, he exposed the atrocious torments by which confessions were extorted, the laxity and injustice of the manner in which evidence was collected, the egregious absurdities that filled the writings of the inquisitors, the juggling tricks that were ascribed to the devil, and the childish folly of the magical charms. He also availed himself in a very dextrous manner of the strong Protestant feeling, in order to discredit statements that emanated from the Inquisition. But so strong was the belief in witchcraft, so fortified in its ramparts of church doctrine and biblical assurance, that it remained entirely unaffected by the attempted refutation, and when James I. mounted the throne he found the nation perfectly prepared to second him in his zeal against the witches. James, although he hated the Puritans, had caught in Scotland much of the tone of thought concerning Satanic power which the Puritans had always encouraged, and which was exhibited to the highest perfection in the Scottish mind. He was continually haunted by the subject. He had himself written a dialog upon it; he had confidently ascribed his stormy passage on his return from Denmark to the machinations of the witches, and he boasted that the devil regarded him as the most formidable of opponents. This storm was the origin of one of the most horrible of the many horrible Scotch trials on record. One Dr. Fian was suspected of having aroused the wind, and a confession was wrung from him by torture, which, however, he almost immediately afterward retracted. Every form of torture was in vain employed to vanquish his obduracy. The bones of his legs were broken into small pieces in the boot. All the torments that Scottish law knew of were successively applied. At last, the king—who personally presided over the torture—suggested a new and more horrible device. The prisoner, who had been removed during the deliberation, was brought in, and (we quote the contemporary narrative) "his nailes upon all his fingers were riven and pulled off with an instrument, called in Scottish a turkas, which in England we call a payre of pincers, and under every naile there was thrust in two needles over, even up to the heads." However, notwithstanding all this, "so deeply had the devil entered into his heart, that he utterly denied all that which he before avouched," and he was burnt unconfessed. Soon after James's accession to the throne of England, a law was enacted which subjected witches to death on the first conviction, even though they should have inflicted no injury upon their neighbors. This law was passed when Coke was attorney-general, and Bacon a member of Parliament; and twelve bishops sat upon the commission to which it was referred. The prosecutions were rapidly multiplied throughout the country, but especially in Lancashire; and at the same time the general tone of literature was strongly tinged with the superstition. Sir Thomas Browne declared that those who denied the existence of witchcraft were not only Infidels, but also, by implication, Atheists.

But, great as were the exertions made by James to extirpate witchcraft, they completely sink into insignificance before those which were made during the Commonwealth. As soon as Puritanism gained an ascendancy in the country, as soon as its ministers succeeded in imparting their gloomy tenets to the governing classes, the superstition assumed a gigantic magnitude. During the few years of the Commonwealth, there is reason to believe, says Lecky's "History of Rationalism," that more alleged witches perished in England than in the whole period before and after. Nor is this to be ascribed entirely to the judges or the legislators, for the judges in former reigns never shrank from condemning witches, and Cromwell was in most respects far superior to his predecessors. It was simply the natural result of Puritanical teaching acting on the mind, predisposing men to see Satanic influence in life, and consequently eliciting the phenomena of witchcraft. A panic on the subject spread through the country; and anecdotes of Satanic power soon crowded in from every side. The county of Suffolk was especially agitated, and the famous witchfinder, Matthew Hopkins, pronounced it to be infested with witches. A commission was accordingly issued, and two distinguished Presbyterian divines were selected by the Parliament to accompany it. It would have been impossible to take any measure more calculated to stimulate the prosecution, and we accordingly find that in Suffolk sixty persons were hanged for witchcraft in a single year. Among others, an Anglican clergyman, named Lowes, who was now verging on eighty, and who for fifty years had been an irreproachable minister of his church, fell under the suspicion. The unhappy old man was kept awake for several successive nights, and persecuted "till he was weary of his life, and was scarcely sensible of what he said or did." He was then thrown into the water, condemned, and hanged. According to the story which circulated among the members of the Established church, he maintained his innocence manfully to the end. If we believe the Puritanical account, it would appear that his brain gave way under the trial, and that his accusers extorted from him a wild romance, which was afterward, with many others, reproduced by Baxter "for the conversion of the Sadducee and the Infidel."

We have seen that the conception of witchcraft, which had existed in England from the earliest period, assumed for the first time a certain prominence amid the religious terrorism of the Reformation; that its importance gradually increased as the trials and executions directed public attention to the subject; and that it, at last, reached its climax under the gloomy theology of the Puritans. In its decline, the clergy continued to assert and defend it, when the great bulk of educated laymen had abandoned it. The skepticism on the subject arose among those who were least governed by the church, advanced with the decline of the influence of the clergy, and was commonly branded as a phase and manifestation of Infidelity.

By these clergymen, every attempt to substitute a lighter punishment for death was fiercely denounced as a direct violation of the divine law. Indeed, some churchmen went so far as to question the lawfulness of strangling the witch before she was burnt. Her crime, they said, was treason against the almighty, and therefore to punish it by any but the most agonizing deaths was an act of disrespect to him. Besides, the penalty in the Levitical code was stoning, and stoning had been pronounced by the Jewish theologians to be a still more painful death than the stake.

In 1768 John Wesley prefaced an account of an apparition that had been related by a girl named

Elizabeth Hobson, by some extremely interesting sentences on the subject. "It is true, likewise," he wrote, "that the English in general, and indeed most of the men of learning in Europe, have given up all accounts of witches and apparitions as mere old wives' fables. I am sorry for it, and I willingly take this opportunity of entering my solemn protest against this violent compliment which so many that believe the Bible pay to those who do not believe it. I owe them no such service. I take knowledge that these are at the bottom of the outcry which has been raised, and with such insolence spread through the land, in direct opposition, not only to the Bible, but to the suffrage of the wisest and best men in all ages and nations. They well know (whether Christians know it or not) that the giving up witchcraft is in effect giving up the Bible."

We have now, in this and former issues of THE TRUTH SEEKER, delineated the generation, by the fathers of the church, of the doctrine that Satan and his emissaries styled witches control weather and disease, with an account of how the scientific theories of the matter were suppressed, and how the false doctrine was based throughout on the Bible; and have narrated the persecution bred by the belief in the continent and in England. In one or more future papers we will relate the course of that persecution in Scotland, and our own United States; with the aim of furnishing Freethinkers herein with a completer exposition of the subject than has heretofore been provided them. Meanwhile, they are to reflect that the Bible and Christianity are unavoidably responsible for all these horrors; and that these frightful superstitions have declined only because of the decline of the influence of the clergy, and will naturally revive at any time whatever when that body may contrive to obtain more power.

Freethought Produces Happiness.

It is sometimes said that those Freethinkers disbelieving in a future existence must be less happy than Christians. Here there is overlooked the following vital consideration. A belief in heaven sufficiently strong to be of any value in supplying happiness can be entertained only by a people very ignorant; a people very ignorant is always in misery through inability to gratify its earthly, every-day wants and through the combativeness, injustice, and tyranny inseparable from ignorance. And as what is remote and impalpable makes a less impression upon the mind than what is near and palpable, so the dim expectations of a heaven will in such a case be far overbalanced by the actual felt ills around one every day. So here we have the two possible conditions of the race in regard to this matter. Ignorant enough to believe in heaven, but unhappy through the trouble invariably accompanying ignorance. Or, with intelligence enough to discredit the heaven and thus losing a slight source of gratification, but by the better conditions of life provided by that intelligence kept in a constant or nearly constant state of happiness. Ignorance and, on the whole, unhappiness. Or, intelligence, and, on the whole, happiness.

But this is not all. Add to this that not only is the ignorant life unhappy, but it is shorter; not only is the intelligent life happy, but it is longer. At the epoch of the Reformation, estimates Dr. Jarvis, the health officer and statistician, "the average longevity in Geneva was 21.21 years; between 1814 and 1833 it was 40.68; as large a number of persons now live to seventy years as lived to forty three hundred years ago." "In those days of shrine-cures and ghostly remedies," says Professor Draper, "the death-rate was about one in twenty-three; under the present more material practice it is about one in forty." In the ignorant Christian ages inadequate food, clothing, shelter, and sanitary regulations to obviate epidemics, reduced life to a wretched briefness; now the life-term is steadily increasing. And more. It has been asked, why may we not continue this lengthening of the life-term indefinitely? Our ability to do much in that line we have substantiated by actual facts; why doubt our ability to continue what we have commenced? And if we do so will this not be the securing of what may be called an enduring life, a future life—the very thing the Christians long for? Some think that our knowledge of chemistry and physics generally may presently enable us to control those chemical and physical processes producing what we call life, organization, disorganization, disease, decay, death. To science, they say, nothing is impossible. In that case there would be no assignable limit to life. Without pronouncing upon this opinion, we at least may point triumphantly to the actual facts that Rationalism has already lengthened life, and may confidently be expected to increase its length still more.

Another consideration ignored by the Christian getters-up of the theory which we are combating, is the fact that when people have believed in a heaven with a strength enabling them to derive happiness from the anticipation, they have also believed in a hell with a vividness of realization causing them great misery. Though in the present age the contemplation of future damnation racks but few hearts and unsettles but few minds, during the centuries when Christianity was more pervasively held it did cause sufferings inconceivable. When the belief in heaven was operative enough to afford somewhat of pleasure, the belief in hell was operative enough to produce a great deal of pain.

Persons who believe the Christian cult more productive of happiness than the Infidel, do so on the word of preachers. Whoever will read the history of the most thoroughly Christian centuries will find that beside the present comparatively Rationalized age they were gloom beside light, a dungeon-cell beside a mountain-top, inferno beside paradise.

The World's Fair Sundays.

A final decision as to closing the Columbian Exposition Sundays is now expected daily. It is to be rendered by the Fair's national commission, and local directory at Chicago.

Language suitable for characterization of the attempt to close the Exhibition Sundays is difficult of selection. Every right-thinking man feels swelling within him feelings toward the perpetrators of the outrage which are scarcely describable and which will inflame him to a redoubled warfare on churchism for many a year before their force shall have been spent.

For many Sundays workingmen have been hard at work inside the grounds of the Fair digging in the mud, draining swamps, sweating while those known as good people were at church, to enable those good people when the time should come to see the Fair on week-days. It is taxing to describe the character of the man who has the impertinence to say that those workingmen, when the Fair is finished and their work is cut down to six days only, shall not be allowed to go with their families and other workingmen to see and study the Fair which they created. When one has seen hundreds of men working every Sunday on the Fair it seems almost impossible that any sane man should oppose keeping the Fair open for them on their only usable day.

We can do little better than quote the expressions of Arthur Brisbane in the New York World, which are that those who insist on Sunday closing may be fairly divided into three classes:

"First. Hypocrites, legislators and others who vote and work for Sunday closing because they believe it will help them with a certain class of prejudiced voters.

"Second. Men who do not think very much, who are entirely selfish and who, being able to see all they want to of the Fair during the week, think it would be just as well to keep it closed on Sunday.

"Third. Perfectly well-meaning, honest people, who believe that Sunday opening is wrong because they have been told so, and who will not change their minds because they have never learned how to think."

The first two classes, says Mr. Brisbane, are of course unworthy of any consideration, the third should be kindly and tenderly repressed as an infant is when it tries to get near the fire. To Mr. Brisbane's ideas we have to add only that the persons of his third category, who "have been told so," have thus been told solely on account of accursed church and churchman.

The Church an Enemy of Our Health.

As science, feebly beginning to draw breath and stir after its long stifling by Christianity, spreads incipiently through the land, cities one after another are opening their eyes to the circumstances surrounding them as affecting their health. New York city, after yielding during decades unnumbered victims to the Moloch of Christian Ignorance, has awakened to the fact that by purifying its water supply it may greatly abate many diseases. Typhoid fever, diarrheal diseases, and cholera are largely, some mainly, propagated by the entrance into healthy bodies of germs from the bowels of the diseased. At present, the lake whence New York draws her drinking water drains a region which has been permitted to be settled by a multitude of persons, and the sewage of those individuals is transmitted unpurified to the city's water faucets. A commission is at this tardy date endeavoring to abate the nuisance. As the commission is swayed by the Tammany ring and not by physicians, it is doing its work dilatorily and bunglingly. But even this limping move in the right direction is not allowed to pass without opposition from the ancient enemy of every scientific and man-benefiting work, the church. The managers of a church at Mt. Kisco, in the city's watershed, individuals knowing all about theology but uninstructed in sanitary science, insist on their fundamental right to pollute the drinking water of New Yorkers. At proceedings in the office of Health Commissioner Daly, one day last week, E. A. Horton, who represented the Roman Catholic Church of St. Francis, opened by insisting that the Church of St. Francis had constitutional rights of drainage into Branch brook, and that it was folly to suppose that the city of New York could come in there and stop it from exercising privileges which it had bought with the land on which it stood. "Do you mean to say that you have the constitutional right to dump filth into the drinking water of New York city?" asked Lawyer Dykman. "I think we have some rights," asserted the opposing counsel. "Your client is violating the law of the state and the laws of common decency," returned Mr. Dykman, "and as pastor of the church is liable to arrest and imprisonment."

A Catholic paper, by the way, remarks: "Small-pox is epidemic in Antwerp and cholera is still prevalent in Russia. If America escapes a visit from these plagues this year, its freedom from pest will be most Providential." But the truth is that America's escape will be just in proportion as it ignores Providence, and gives itself over to the doctrine that events follow not supernatural volitions but a natural unbreakable order of cause and effect.

Religion Perpetuating Separation and Animosity.

We have occasionally pointed out that religion tends to perpetuate barriers and distinctions between the communities of the earth; and thus it does harm, for the obliteration of all such barriers is one of the most necessary features of progress; since it is requisite to the free interchange of thought, criticism, and invention, and to the extinction of sectional prejudice and spirit of war.

An example of this effect of religion is furnished by late public utterances of Jewish rabbis. Some writers in the press, influenced rather by the wish which is father to the thought than by exact observation, had been speaking of the intermingling of Jews and non-Jews as a thing of near approach, perhaps already beginning. Thereupon some protectors of Hebrew narrowness arose and vehemently denied the suggestion. Among them, H. Pereira Mendes, "minister to Spanish and Portuguese Hebrews, New York city," gives what he calls "the opinion of, without exaggeration, 999,1,000ths of my people.

"Assertion No. 1.—'That intermarriage between Jew and gentile is not prohibited,' because, for example, Moses forbade intermarriage only with the proscribed nations of Canaan. (See Ex. xxxiv, 16.) The reply to this is, that intermarriage with other than the Canaanite nations is also cited as something to be condemned, as is seen in 1 Kings xi, 1; Ezra ix, 1, where are mentioned Ammon, Moab, Egypt, and Edom. They were not of the Canaanite nations cited.

"From the Jewish standpoint, intermarriage with any people who ascribe divinity to any being except to God alone, is prohibited. We are to be 'separated' from other peoples (Lev. xxi, 24-26). How can we be 'separated' if we intermarry?"

"Assertion No. 2—'That we Hebrews are no longer a nation.' This is flatly contradicted in Jer. xxxi, 35, 36, where it says we are destined to be a nation 'forever.'

"Assertion No. 3—'That initiation into the Abrahamic covenant (circumcision) is not necessary for proselytes.'

Jewish law does insist upon the initiation referred to, and it is well that the contrary assertion should be corrected by chapter and verse. I need only quote Ex. xii, 46, where a man not initiated is even forbidden to join in the great national festival, which annually celebrates the birth of our nation. How, then, can he be received as actually one of the nation without said initiation? I quote only from the Bible, for that is in the hands of your readers. Rabbinical law is even more precise. But extended discussion, especially from such a standpoint, should be only in the Jewish religious press."

Did the Freethought sentiment of universal, non-sectarian brotherhood prevail, the Jews of Russia would not be holding and proclaiming notions like the above, and would not be separated from their Russian co-dwellers and persecuted by them. And the Russians would not be narrow-souled and fanatical Christians, and would not want to persecute. "The world is my country, to do good my religion"—when, when will this noble Rationalistic principle pervade mankind?

At Niagara Falls, on the 19th, Colonel Ingersoll was interviewed by a reporter on his impressions of the scene there. Instead of giving a burst of eloquence over its grandeur and majestic awfulness, the distinguished visitor said: "Niagara Falls is a dangerous place." "Do you mean the hackmen, Mr. Ingersoll?" "No. I mean those great rushing waters. There is nothing attractive to me in them. They are really dangerous. There is so much noise; so much tumult. It is simply a mighty force of nature—one of those tremendous powers that is to be feared for its danger. What I like in nature is a cultivated field, where men can work in the free open air, where there is quiet and repose—no turmoil, no strife, no tumult, no fearful roar or struggle for mastery. I do not like the crowded, stuffy workshop, where life is a slavery and drudgery. Give me the calm, cultivated land of waving grain, of flowers, of happiness." Mrs. Ingersoll, who accompanied her husband, was enraptured with the beauties of Niagara.

At Toronto, Can., on the 19th, Judge Armour told a jury that a certain couple could not be convicted under Canadian law for adultery. He said the law under which they were arrested had been passed to prevent Mormonism from entering the Northwest territories. It said no man could keep or have more than one wife under the same roof. "The Mormons," said the judge, "are allowed by their own laws to have as many wives as they can comfortably keep. All the women are kept under the same roof, but there is no quarreling, and each wife is equally well cared for. In Canada a man often has two women, but there is always one favorite and the other is not cared for. I may also say the two women are not kept under the same roof. But the Christian Canadian who looks after only one wife will not allow the heathen Mormon to enter this country. I have the law here before me, and as there is no evidence that the prisoner was keeping two wives he cannot be convicted under the act." The case was discharged. These animadversions upon Christians' own delinquencies, coming from the side of that sect which they persecuted and well-nigh extirpated simply out of jealousy of a religion outthrusting their own, are in the nature of a "righteous retribution."

The World's Fair From a Freethinker's Standpoint.

In May we shall begin the publication of a series of letters which will be of great interest and beauty. Samuel P. Putnam will write them from Chicago, and they will be about the World's great Fair, which opens in that lively and booming town on May 1st. Mr. Putnam's description—as every one who knows him knows—will not be the commonplace matter of the geniusless boiler-plate correspondent, but the impressions made upon a cosmopolitan poet by the aggregation of samples of the world's progress in mechanics, art, literature, knowledge. The letters will undoubtedly be big and broad, wide and deep—a picture and a panorama, a history of human advance from "that man in the dug-out" to the racial subjugation of the forces of nature—so far as these forces are subdued. The letters will be essentially a Freethinker's view of the Fair, what it shows, and what it foreshadows, and we venture to say that among the hundreds of correspondents at the Fair, and the thousands of letters to be written by them, there will be none like the writer of the Freethought views and his descriptions. Readers of his "News and Notes" will agree with us in this estimate, we know.

We shall be obliged to our friends if they will call the attention of their friends to this announcement and suggest to them that a six months' subscription will insure them the receipt of these letters, which will alone be worth many times the cost of the paper.

In the East.

News and Notes.

The uncertain April weather darkened into a storm and I did not have a great many present at the lecture, Friday evening, April 14th, at Harwich, Mass. But there are some few of the old anti-slavery band yet left, and they were not afraid to stand upon the picket line on a rainy night. Perhaps if I try Harwich again in summer weather there will be an improvement. There is a Spiritualist camp-meeting here on grounds fronting the sea and the attendance is quite large during the warm months, and the voice of Washburn and others has been heard here in unison with the music of the waves. Mr. Robbins gave me a pleasant drive along the shore and across country, where the beautiful lakes are shining in the sun. The cape here is about seven miles wide from sea to sea, and within the middle, which is called the "backbone," are a large number of lakes, from one mile to three miles in length, with wooded shores and steep bluffs, as if once on a time an immense tidal wave from the ocean had plunged with mighty fury upon the level cape and scooped out these vast reservoirs. They adorn the landscape with limpid beauty and offer, in their sylvan surroundings, a charming contrast to the boundless blue which off Harwich stretches to Europe in one unbroken tide.

Saturday morning I bid my friend Robbins and his family good-bye, having greatly enjoyed my visit among the Cape Cod folks, and I do not think one can find any better place to live than on these shores, where the standard of liberty has always been unfurled. The old Puritans were not quite so savage here as elsewhere. They felt somewhat the softening influences of the sea, especially in bright summer days, when like the blue Aegean itself flowed and sparkled the gentle waters. There has always been a Liberal spirit in this home of the wandering sailor, who from every land has brought something of knowledge and the romance of adventure, and theology has not been quite so stern. It has had to be penetrated with the glory of the sunny sea and the sunny sky.

On Saturday I return to Boston, where I have the pleasure of meeting Washburn, of the Investigator, who always gives the Secular Pilgrim good cheer. After arduous labor in the field, it is with a glow of hope that I strike Paine Memorial Hall, that lifts its gallant front against superstition. Here is a fortress that will not surrender to the enemy.

Saturday evening I go to the Boston Museum of old-time pleasant memory, and witness one of the best plays of the day, "Shore Acres," by Hearne, who plays the principal role. I was surprised and delighted to find this an outspoken Freethought play, and it takes immensely. Advanced ideas are skilfully woven in, and form a part of the romance of the drama. It is sufficient to say that the Atheist doctor—the hero and the lover—comes out ahead. It is a picture of real Yankee life, with the new thoughts of the world irradiating the olden time.

I lecture at Boston on Sunday afternoon to a fine audience. Boston always gives a generous welcome to the Freethought speaker.

I leave Boston Sunday afternoon, 5 o'clock, for Worcester, Mass., where W. B. Clark has inaugurated a successful movement. Remsburg and Washburn have been there before me, and been greeted by large audiences. I was equally fortunate myself, and after a lapse of twenty-five years I again addressed a Worcester public. The last time I spoke or preached in Worcester was in an orthodox Congregational church in 1868, when I was just entering the orthodox ministry. Great changes have occurred since then, both in Worcester and in myself. Forty-five years ago I attended the Old South church on the Common, where everything was solemn and Puritanic. I remember the dismal sermons and the tedious Sunday-school and the holy Sabbath. But times have changed. Worcester is pervaded by a Liberal spirit, and stands well to the front. There was even an exhibition open on Sunday afternoon for the benefit of the people. I met old schoolmate friends here that I have not seen for years, and I find that they are on the path of progress. Worcester is a growing city, and friend Clark is doing a noble work in bringing together its advanced elements. Other lectures will be given and the campaign carried on with greater vigor next year.

Monday I leave Worcester for Bristol, Conn., and here I find a stalwart few. I did not have a large audience at the Opera House, but it was appreciative, and I am cordially invited to return again to this place. Mr. C. F. Michal, of the Commercial House, is also proprietor of the Opera House, and he generously gave me the use of the Opera House for the lecture, and also entertained me in cordial fashion, and in every way helped to make the lectures a success. I was pleased to meet with Elliott, now of New Britain, about ten miles from Bristol. The last time I met him was at Portland, Ore., where we campaigned together. Elliott is always ready to tackle the preachers, and gives them more than they bargain for in many a debate.

I leave Bristol on Tuesday morning for New York. I make a flying visit to Larchmont Manor with Dr. E. B. Foote; have a chat with Professor Beall, of "The Brain and the Bible;" recuperate myself in the TRUTH SEEKER office looking at the new books, etc. I leave to-day, April 20th, for Dayton, O., where I lecture on Friday and Sunday morning, and at Cincinnati on Sunday evening. Then I journey to Chicago and the World's Fair.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

To My Liberal Friends.

I propose to publish a pamphlet, the middle part of which appears in THE TRUTH SEEKER this week, entitled, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I consider that we are drifting into a most dangerous religious tyranny and war. It is not simply church and theology that we must oppose, but it is religion at the root of these, which is what I have defined it to be. We must understand religion, and for the safety of the race we must destroy religion. I want this book to be widely read. It is important. Religion as the foe of humanity is not sufficiently understood. We do not realize its terrific nature. I have written this book because I feel the necessity of speaking the plain truth. I challenge contradiction of my statements. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for this book. Circulate it. Price, 25 cents per copy.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Colonel Ingersoll's Lecture Engagements.

Colonel Ingersoll will make a short lecturing tour, beginning this month, and his dates are as follows:

Buffalo, N. Y.,	April 18	Columbus, O.,	May 1
Toronto, Ont.,	" 20	Dayton, O.,	" 2
Hamilton, Ont.,	" 21	Fort Wayne, Ind.,	" 3
London, Ont.,	" 22	Indianapolis, Ind.,	" 4
Rochester, N. Y.,	" 24	Evansville, Ind.,	" 5
Syracuse, N. Y.,	" 25	Terre Haute, Ind.,	" 6
Cincinnati, O.,	" 30	St. Louis, Mo.,	" 7

Liberals living in the vicinity of these cities can learn the locations of the halls and theaters from local papers. Probably most of our readers around these places will make something of a journey to hear these lectures, and they will be well repaid for their trouble.

Book Note.

J. E. Remsburg's books continue to have a large sale. One dealer has sold nearly three thousand copies in six months. They are used extensively for missionary purposes. During the past few months the Liberals of Belvidere, Ill., have purchased three hundred copies; of Dublin, Tex.; Manchester, Conn.; Marcus, Ia.; Stillwater, Okla., and Crookston, Minn., from one hundred to one hundred and fifty copies each; Cooperstown, N. D.; Rogers, Ark.; Pine Bluff, Ark.; Norse, Tex.; Shepherd, Mich.; Findlay, O.; Cleveland, O.; Glens Falls, N. Y.; Rexford, Kan.; Gaylord, Kan.; Bruce, S. D.; Waxahachie, Tex.; Vera Cruz, Ind.; Detroit, Mich., and Toledo, O., from fifty to one hundred copies each. Nearly one thousand copies have been sent to members of Congress, and the legislatures of a half dozen states have been supplied with them.

Science and Progress.

Patent Privileges.

The Panama trial makes it probable that the Old World has been tricked out of $200,000,000 under the pretext of a profitable enterprise in the New. Ever since the discovery of facts implicating a number of prominent French Rationalists, the Roman Catholic church has kept up a howl of indignation, and may really feel sore at the infringement of her patent-rights. A freight train stretching from Rome to Cairo would barely suffice to transport the boodle which Roman Catholic priests have contrived to collect under the promise of repayment in another world.

Mountain Sanctuaries.

Just about three hundred years ago the archbishop of Granada ordered the execution of a tribe of harmless highlanders who had retained the faith of their pagan ancestors in the fastnesses of the Sierra Nevada, but traces of heresy are nevertheless said to linger in the Alpucares, where the Moors maintained a practical independence for at least fifty years after the surrender of Boabdil el Chico. The Lhesgians of the eastern Caucasus still profess the doctrines of the Koran in spite of their nominal subjection to the Russian government, and in the highlands of Savoy the followers of Peter Waldus (a Protestant of strong Unitarian proclivities) now enjoy the religious freedom which their forefathers defended against the murderous attacks of the orthodox man-hunters, who invaded their mountains at least twenty different times.

Volcanic Phenomena.

The earthquake of Sumbava (south of Borneo) during the first week of February was accompanied by a three days' rain-shower resembling a continuous cloudburst. A ledge of isolated rocks, south of the island, were swallowed by the opening of a submarine crater, and the dense clouds of steam arising from that part of the coast drifted north and seemed to be condensed in the form of rain as soon as they came in contact with the cooler air-currents of the uplands. Captain Hoesner, of Batavia, who witnessed the phenomenon from the wharves of Lombok harbor, states that its results struck him with a possible explanation of the traditional deluge. A vast tract of land has undoubtedly been submerged in the northern part of the Indian ocean, and the vapor-clouds evolved by the interaction of fire and water may have returned to earth in the form of an unprecedented rain-shower. The long chain of islands stretching from Ceylon to Papua presents the same characteristics of geological formation, and may once have formed a continuous peninsula of the Asiatic continent.

The Atonement Dogma.

Angelo Ghigi, the bandit-chief taken red-handed in the mountains of Sardinia, a few weeks ago, turns out a zealous partisan of the church, and during his trial repeatedly declined to answer the questions of a cross-examiner whose scurrilous remarks had wounded his religious sensibilities. The number of his robberies must run up in the hundreds, but as an offset he appears to have enforced fast-days and patronized the venders of relics and miracle-working images.

Notions of Beauty.

A Georgia ethnologist doubts if the "buck daries" of his native state at heart consider the prettiest Caucasian girl a peer of an Ethiopian belle in full cake-walk rig, and on the Congo the blackest, greasiest, and snub-nosiest females seem actually to hold the trump cards of the matrimonial market. The matrons of Papua rarely permit a girl of decent parentage to make her social debut before they have knocked a couple of her front teeth out, and the Brazilian botocudos split their upper lips to expose the teeth in a sort of perpetual grin which they consider the acme of personal elegance. All such things, however, are mere trifles compared to the anomalies of moral esthetics if it is true that more than one accomplished scholar prefers the nauseous rant of Howling Jeremy to the poetry of Virgil and Sophocles.

A Pricked Bladder.

The general increase of prosperity in at least thirty states of our Union naturally results in more liberal contributions of St. Peter's Pence, but that gain does not begin to outweigh the loss of moral and material prestige on the other side of the Atlantic. Greek Russia, Protestant Germany, and Freethinking France hold the hegemony of the continent as indisputably as Protestant England maintains the empire of the sea; Hungarian Protestants and North Austrian skeptics are getting the inside track in the political arena of the Danube countries, the progressive elements of Italy are radically anti-clerical, and before long the holy father will have to puff his balloon with the whining acclamations of Spanish church-beggars.

Superfluous Memorials.

About a year ago the Heine Monument Association assembled in Dusseldorf, the birthplace of the great poet, and got the municipal authorities to sanction the project of erecting a statue near the main entrance of the city park. Funds were collected all over Europe, a prominent sculptor had completed the plans of the monument, and the committee were making arrangements for the erection of the pedestal, when the bigoted mayor of Dusseldorf revoked the charter, i. e., broke his pledge to eighteen thousand subscribers of the monument fund, without a word of plausible explanation—merely pleading the "disagreement of the park commissioners," though his true motive is well known to be a desire to better his political prospects by spitlicking deference to the prejudices of the orthodox puppy now occupying the throne of Frederick the Great. An eminent lawyer informed the representatives of the association that they would have no legal remedy under the circumstances, and the next week the verdict of public opinion was voiced in a perfect storm of satires and diatribes, some of them worthy of the "German Voltaire" himself, e. g., the epigram representing Heine's spirit receiving the news from Dusseldorf, and interrupting his table-talk in the halls of Olympus long enough to remark that:

Man sieht, wie es scheint, am Rheine,
Das Licht der Welt nicht mehr

—"the times are over, it seems, when one could behold the light of the world on the Rhine." But, after all, what need of a sculptured memorial to a man whose monuments stand on the shelves of a million libraries?

An Old Flag.

The wardens of the mosque of Mehemet Ali, in Alexandria, Egypt, preserve a flag said to have waved from the tent of Amru, the conqueror of the lower Nile, in A.D. 638, i. e., more than twelve hundred years ago. The cathedral of Ravenna, indeed, pretends to possess the standard of Constantine the Great, but the piece of blue silk, exhibited under that name, has been renewed about as often as the "miraculous kerchief of Santa Veronica," of which Spain alone boasts some twenty-five duplicates.

Love's Labor Lost.

"He will be nicely cheated if there should be no hereafter," said Diderot, when he heard that a French nobleman of his acquaintance had entered a Trappist convent in the hope of reaching paradise by that peculiar road. The friends of Edwin Arnold must have remembered that anecdote on learning that the "advisers of her majesty do not favor the plan of appointing a successor to the late poet-laureate,"—and that thus, in all probability, the author of the "Light of Asia" has in vain undergone the horrible tedium of writing a trinitarian orthodox companion-piece to his great epic.

F. L. OSWALD.

A Soul for the Universe.

From the Housekeeper.

"The Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind," by James B. Alexander, is an attempt to show that all organic bodies are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments.

Arguing from the theory of the natural selection of species, the author advances the premise that mental action is but a form of physical energy under the dominion of natural law, and that in the study of animals we study man.

While giving due credit to prominent scientists, he makes good use of their research and experience and illustrates his points carefully. Beginning with a nucleated cell as a postulate, he considers everything in sea, earth, and air that affects its evolution, and notes the points of difference and similarity between it and other cells in the process of development.

The argument is, that no change of principle takes place from beginning to end, though the "change of reaction and function that supervenes upon a change of form is often of the most extreme nature;" that energy is the motion of material bodies, and that force is the measure of energy; that either is the universal agent of energy and the vehicle for its conveyance between these bodies; that they constitute the basis of its action, and their form, structure, and molecular constitution determine the manner and force of its manifestation; that its "reactions from brain cells constitute mind, and therefore in a broad sense either is the soul of the universe; ponderable matter its body."

The author's earnest thought, patient study, and personal conviction impress the reader whether he accept or reject the premise and argument. Pp. 1,056; $2.75. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Bound Volumes of The Truth Seeker.

We have a few bound volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER for the year just closed (1892) which will be sent on receipt of $4. We also have a few of previous years which can be sold for $3. Readers desirous of keeping files as received weekly can obtain the File Binder for $1.

Communications.

Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie.—(Continued.)

DEDICATED TO THE AMERICAN CONGRESS WHICH FOR THE SAKE OF RELIGION HAS STABBED LIBERTY TO THE HEART.

Theology in all its thousand tomes of waste paper has given but one argument in support of its claims, namely the argument from design. Surely if the argument from design cannot demonstrate God's existence no argument can.

But logic overthrows this argument and evolution simply annihilates it.

To prove design you must prove a beginning. You can prove design in a watch or house because you can prove the beginning of a watch and house. But if you could not prove the beginning of a watch or house, you could not prove that there was any design. A designed thing must be a begun thing. Suppose the watch and the house never began to be, suppose they existed eternally, then, of course, there would be no design in a watch or house. They always existed exactly as they are. Logic plainly declares—no beginning, no design.

Therefore, unless you can prove the beginning of the universe you cannot prove any design in it. But it is impossible to prove the beginning of the universe. We were not there, and as we were not there, and can't "get there," not even Sam Jones, how can we prove the beginning? This is logic which no one can deny.

Do you assume that because there is design, or adaptation, therefore there was a beginning? That is begging the whole question. It is putting the cart before the horse. No true logician will affirm such a proposition. Design cannot prove a beginning. It is beginning that must prove the design. But grant the proposition that design or adaptation proves beginning. Then if it proves the beginning of the universe, it proves also the beginning of God, for God is not chaos, he is adaptation, harmony, and therefore according to this proposition is a begun being. Logic is logic, and what applies to the universe applies to God. According to this proposition there must be an infinite number of Gods. Every God must be a begun being, for in every God are those "marks of design," or adaptation, which prove a beginning.

Upon whichever leg you put the argument from design it falls to the ground. The existence of God is unproved. If you say that design per se proves a beginning, then it proves God's beginning. It proves that there are millions and millions of Gods; an endless chain of cause and effect. There can be no such thing as an uncreated God, unless he is an infinite chaos. If design proves beginning, then it takes chaos to prove no beginning. The eternity of God, therefore, depends upon the disorder of his existence. If you say, as logically you should, that the beginning proves the design, not that the design proves the beginning, then theology is equally checkmated, for it is impossible to prove the beginning of the universe and therefore the necessity for a God.

Evolution annihilates design. Evolution declares simply adaptation, which is the result of environment, and is perfectly natural. Adaptation does not make environment, but environment makes adaptation. You do not need environment plus God. Environment is just as capable as God, and needs no God. No one would say that it takes an act of God to make fire produce heat. No theologian would be so foolish as to assert that. Fire produces heat, God or no God. So environment produces adaptation, God or no God. God would be a useless incumbrance in the matter. He couldn't make it any less, any more, or any different than it is. The adaptations are, because the environments are, and the adaptations are exactly as they are because the environments are exactly as they are. The least change in the environment would just to that extent change the adaptation. Where is there any need of a purpose, or tendency, outside of the environment? It wouldn't change the result in the least.

If you surrender to the environment as the sole source of the adaptation, and ask who made the environment, I might answer a fool according to his folly, and ask who made God? We should simply enter upon a war of words and leave the realm of facts. Facts exist and always will exist somehow. Existence must always have a form, and that form will be an environment. There cannot be existence without modes—that is, there cannot be existence without environments. The question, therefore, is not the origin of environment but of adaptation. What makes the adaptation? The environment altogether, and therefore God is entirely ruled out.

He is not even a silent partner. We do not need him in any capacity. To the intellect he is a nonentity.

If this God, this infinite goodness, this infinite justice, this infinite love, exists, where is he amidst the awful tragedies of human life? No sign he gives, no word, no light, no hope. Blind and still are the heavens to every prayer; millions perish, and they cry to God, and no answer comes. The babe dies upon its mother's breast; the youth is slain before the eyes of his parent; the wife sinks outraged upon her husband's breast; the old man totters to the poorhouse; the storm rushes; the lightning strikes; the waves wreck; not a moment passes but tears roll from countless eyes; homes are desolated; the little cottage burns, and the palace flames with crime; the martyr bows his head; the despot triumphs and the patriot bites the dust; liberty is in chains and justice is denied, and love seeks the confined dust. Oh, the horror and the agony of human life! Ignorance is bliss. We cannot, must not, know it all. It would make one insane. Oh, the torture of it! And where is God? Cannot he heal one wounded heart? Can he not strike one blow for justice? Can he not answer one prayer? Can he not take one grain from man's infinite mass of misery? Not one, not one. He is cold and still, invisible, wrapped in darkness. He is indeed a lie, a cruel lie, a damned lie—and the world will not be happy until his image is forever abolished. We can be happy without God, but we are only miserable with God; for what is he but the creation of our own disease?

And so to save this hideous lie, another hideous lie is invented, the lie of Immortality, the only possible salvation for the God of man's idolatry. Time condemns, discrowns, and annihilates God. Will eternity resurrect him and clear his blasted reputation? I am afraid not. Is there any guarantee that God will be more powerful or more wise hereafter than to-day? Can the infinite change and improve? If God is helpless now, why not always helpless? If the conditions of time defeat his good intentions, will the conditions of eternity be any better? Where is the gain? I want God, if at all, for present use. I would like to have him give some happiness here and now. If we have to trust God to-day, won't we always have to trust him and be forever disappointed? If God must allow wrong and suffering and every kind of horror on this "bank and shoal of time," and he is infinite, and never will be more infinite, why is not this sad necessity permanent? It does not help God at all to put off the date of reckoning. We have a right to judge him by the present scheme of things. The lie of immortality will not make any more palatable the lie of God. In fact, according to popular theology, God will be worse hereafter—more unjust, terrific, and diabolical. We can stand his deeds of omission in this world, and be thankful it is no worse. But how about eternal hell-fire? The little band of saints playing on golden harps, whose music will be drowned by the shrieks of a million times their number—is that a vindication of God's justice and love? Will that put the crown of glory on his brow—the flames of torment and almost universal ruin? I had rather take my chances here, and be a sinner here under God's frown than a saint hereafter under God's smile. Bad as this world is, the heaven of orthodoxy is more evil still. There is some love here, and joy. We do have some human sympathy and are not altogether crushed. But what is the hereafter? A burning hell and a heaven more damnable still; for the saint hereafter is meaner than the devil himself, since without a twinge of pain he can look upon the eternal torments of his own child. Theologians lie for the glory of God, but they only make him a greater fiend.

Even if immortality were of advantage to God, or to man, there is not a particle of evidence to prove it. Like God himself it is merely an assumption, a dream of the imagination. No Bible and no church has ever given a glimpse of light into the infinite unknown. Death to us is a wall and human experience has never passed beyond it. We may dream and we may hope, and that is all. The Bible claims to bring immortality to light, but it is a claim that is absolutely worthless. The only proof of immortality is the resurrection of Jesus, and there is no valid historic evidence of this. There is no proof that Jesus was ever born, no proof that he ever died, and therefore there can be no proof that he was raised from the dead. Even if Jesus were raised from the dead there is no proof that anybody else will be raised from the dead, for by the assumption Jesus is a God, and therefore his resurrection would only prove immortality of a God, and not of man.

There is no natural proof of immortality. The dead are silent. All the love and all the tears of the millions living have never made the dead speak. No voice is heard from the illimitable deeps. The best and the wisest stand at the grave in utter ignorance. Let us accept the fact bravely and patiently. Why utter a lie? We know this life, and we can know nothing beyond. Death is an awful tragedy. We cannot escape it; and we can not make it any the less a tragedy. We can cover the grave with flowers, but only the light of this world falls upon those beaming tokens. We see no angel springing from the sod.

As it is impossible in the very nature of things to prove the existence of God, so it is equally impossible to prove immortality. To affirm any proof of immortality is to lie, and this is the lie of religion—a lie to save its God from utter abhorrence.

How about the phenomena of Spiritualism? Does not that prove immortality? Well, if it did, the church, the representative of religion, rejects such proof. These phenomena are of the devil, say the priests, for the priests know that if Spiritualism is true, then their occupation is forever gone—for then immortality is no longer a matter of faith, but of knowledge, and knowledge is the eternal foe of the priest.

A scientific belief in immortality, as I have already said, is entirely different from a religious belief. They are really opposed to each other.

I do not deny the phenomena of Spiritualism. They have been asserted by too many honest and intelligent people, and the explanation offered by the Spiritualist is a very good "working hypothesis."

But is it any more than a working hypothesis? And is it therefore knowledge? Is it not a belief, a belief founded on evidence, a reasonable belief if you will, but is it, and can it ever be, more than a belief?

I ask my Spiritualist friend—that is, if he is a secular and scientific Spiritualist—to be candid in this matter. Of course I do not expect candor from a religious Spiritualist, for like all other religious people he will not reason. He will simply assume.

Admitting all the phenomena of Spiritualism, what does it prove at the most? It proves the present existence of an invisible spiritual world in contact with this present visible material world.

Is not this all?

The scientific Spiritualist will admit that the phenomena cannot prove future endless existence—only future existence. Therefore even with Spiritualism the demonstration of Immortality is impossible. But I affirm that Spiritualism cannot even prove a future existence—only present existence. Suppose I see a ghost, an actual ghost; what does it prove? Simply that the ghost is now living; but it doesn't prove that the ghost will live forever, or even that the ghost will be alive to-morrow. We may both be dead, ghost and I, before another sun arises. Why not?

Now, if the ghost cannot prove his own immortality, how is it possible for the ghost to prove my immortality? Suppose I see a million ghosts, or a million spirits, or ten thousand million spirits, what does it prove? Simply that these ghosts and these spirits exist now; but it does not prove that they always will exist. It is therefore impossible to prove the immortality of ghosts and spirits. The fact that a spirit exists to-day does not prove that it will exist to-morrow any more than my existence to-day proves that I will exist to-morrow. To assume natural immortality for a spirit is just as illogical as to assume natural immortality for the body. Grant whatever the Spiritualist claims, that this visible physical world is surrounded by a vast spiritual world, with millions of spirits, wise and otherwise, in its vast realms, will any scientific Spiritualist tell me that he has a particle of proof that this spiritual world will exist forever any more than that this physical world will exist forever? Imposing and wonderful in power and splendor as this invisible world is, compared with the immensities of universal space it is but a wave of the sea. Ten thousand million years are but a billow on the ocean of time. What presumption to affirm immortality of any form of existence, spiritual or otherwise, that may come within our experience! Our experience is only finite, and must always be finite, and it cannot prove anything beyond the finite either in time or space.

The scientific Spiritualist must admit that with all his phenomena immortality is still only a dream and a belief.

The survival of death as we now know it, does not prove a survival amidst all the infinite changes of existence. We do not know what cataclysm may come when we have shuffled off this mortal coil. We may escape one shipwreck but it doesn't follow that we will escape another.

Honestly, my Spiritualist friend, can you guarantee immortal existence? Assuredly not. You can only guarantee a continued existence, but who knows but what a spirit hereafter is as liable to death as this body to-day?

Therefore search the universe; listen to the voices of a million spirits; hear the symphonies of angels and archangels; and yet there is not one particle of proof of immortality. Therefore to assert proof of immortality is a lie and must be a lie equally with God himself. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Our London Letter.

The question "Is Christianity Played Out?" has been voluminously discussed in the pages of a daily paper, with the usual result that nothing definite has been decided—the disputants each more or less ably maintaining his own opinion the only correct one. The difficult point about it is that no agreement can be arrived at as to the definition of the word "Christianity," each writer having his own idea on that particular, so that it is utterly impossible for a dispassionate reader to arrive at any conclusion on the matter. Such a discussion must be very entertaining, if not instructive, to, say a Mohammedan or Hindoo, and can scarcely be convincing to such a one to find any inducement to receive a religion in which the professed believers have no common ground. What "Christianity" is has never been, and perhaps never can be, decided, as it is such a contradictory religion, and the book that pretends to teach it can be produced to support totally contradictory creeds, such as no other "sacred" book can do, which perhaps is a proof of its inspiration, as it is so simple that no one but the greatest simpletons can even pretend to understand it. The subject filled up the vacant columns at a dull time of the year and aired the views of certain prominent literary and other people. It would be interesting to the curious to know whether the idea emanated spontaneously from Robert Buchanan or from the editor of the paper, though there should not be much doubt on that point.

Of course the irrepressible Dr. Parker must put in his oar, and in a series of paragraphs to an evening paper has given his views of the writers, but as this egotistical individual is himself pretty well played out, his opinions are valueless. His weekly notes and comments, which he eloquently terms "Pistol Shots," are very peculiar, both in their views and diction; evidently this genius is aiming at an original style, which he has succeeded in attaining and is not likely to have many imitators. When the articles first appeared many people were of the opinion that it was a new kind of a joke on the part of the newspaper people, but it seems they are only responsible for the insertion and not the matter.

The Rev. Michael Paget Baxter, well known as a prophet of the millennium, turns out to be also a trader of a rather fishy nature. It seems he was in the habit of collecting money to enable him to give free dinners to the poor; and this amiable philanthropist bought the food at an establishment of which his son was dummy proprietor, and which eventually found itself in the bankruptcy court. This Baxter is a most guileless Christian, for according to his own account he advanced capital to his son, who was but a lad, to start him in the provision business, and never troubled any further about it, in fact did not know where his son or the business was, and no doubt felt greatly aggrieved and injured that wicked people should endeavor to show that he was a partner in the concern. It came out in the course of evidence that this dear innocent man of God was implicated in another shady transaction, but as his time is always taken up in penning the book of Daniel and the Revelations, he must have been a victim to the evil designs of wicked worldlings, and will now rejoice exceedingly in the anticipation of an exceeding great reward to recompense him for the prosecutions prompted no doubt by the devil.

The elect have met with much trouble of late. Even "King Solomon's Sect" has been worried only just because one of the disciples obeyed the voice of the Lord and left his wife for another woman, who was a believer; whilst the wife was but a scoffer, for when the husband, to recompense her for his desertion, sent a brother in the faith to take his place, this unbeliever would not accept him although he came in the name of the Lord, and had the temerity to sue the husband for support, which an ungodly magistrate granted. Great will be their punishment hereafter.

There is a village named Blackboro in the county of Norfolk which is plunged in the greatest spiritual darkness. It can scarcely be credited, but we hav it on the authority of the good vicar, who was presented to the charge by his father a short time back, that the church of God—that is, of course, the Established church by act of Parliament—has never been able to gain any footing in this heathen place, which is entirely given over to Dissenters and such like wicked idolators who do not worship Christ; and this must be very grievous to the pious Christian pastor, who happens to be the son of a “converted” Jew, and who, therefore, would be greatly shocked that the Nazarene should be despised and rejected. Perhaps, however, this shocking dissent may have some effect on the amount of the parson’s income, which is no doubt the reason for his expressions of feeling, for it is well known that parsons will not care whom people worship as long as they pay up for the support of the church.

Dr. Hageman, a former master of two public schools, and who is now a rector and canon, has been bothered for money by some wretched man who took shares in a bogus land company he helped to promote and direct, and the worthy pluralist actually lost the case, and will have to pay the money back out of his own pocket. Verily it is sad to see how in these last days the pious are persecuted. Satan must surely be let loose, and troublous times are consequently coming upon the blood-washed saints. J. D.

Hav We a “Spiritual Sense?”

To A. AUGUSTA CHAPMAN, Esteemed Friend: As THE TRUTH SEEKER editorially remarked, there are few champions of the church who defend their faith better than you do. Yet permit me in kindness to say, while you are brilliant, versatil, and earnest, you are also sadly ambiguous and flighty, do not thoroughly analyze your ideas, but jump at conclusions which you can and do not explain.

To prove my assertion I quote from your last letter: “When we contemplate existence, not only the world without but the yet greater world within. . . . You [I] fail to perceive the vast difference in the essential nature of spirit and matter.

God is spirit. . . . God is in the Temple of His Holiness, i. e. His Divine Humanity in which alone He is apprehensible to human minds. . . . In the heavens He appears as a sun. To human thought He presents himself in human form. . . . Infinit Love, Infinit Wisdom, and Infinit Power constitute the Divine Trinity, whence are derived the qualities of omniscience, omnipotence, and omnipresence;” etc., all of which is unmeaning and contrary to well-established facts, as I will endeavor to prove.

But before proceeding to this easy task I must notice your argument concerning my request to analyze your ideas. You say: “Is my idea something or nothing? If nothing how can it be analyzed? If something it must be matter according to your logic.” This argument more than any other proves the fact that you are not penetrative or analytical enough in your thoughts and expressions. In denying the existence of bodies, forms, or entities not material, this does not by any means imply that we must deny conditions, laws, processes, or operations, based upon or produced by material forms, which yet in themselves are not material. For instance, music, art, science, literature, mathematics, as well as thoughts, ideas, freedom or slavery, are powerful factors in producing innumerable results, yet all these have no existence per se. The small canvas, “The Angelus,” worth $100,000, for material alone constituting this work of art did not cost $5, but by the skilful manipulation of brush and colors the artist produced a form of matter so rare and sublime that while it lasts it is worth a fortune. Yet this picture has no existence per se; the artist’s thoughts and deeds are not material, and he has not added a single particle of matter not existing in his canvas, paints, and oils before he commenced his work. Should the painting be destroyed by fire not a vestige of his art would remain.

So music, science, literature, liberty, etc., have no existence per se; yet all of them can be defined and are powerful factors in changing our environments or in contributing to our welfare.

So when I request you to analyze your thoughts, I do not mean that you should place them literally in a crucible or apply the scalpel or microscope, but simply that you elucidate and define them as closely as possible. We are not in class-meeting now, or writing for pious readers, but for those who demand perspicuity and sense.

Because when you speak of a “greater world within than without,” I do not understand you. The universe is without, 1,500,000,000 of people are without—not mentioning the countless numbers on other planets—and there is absolutely nothing within us except us, unless it is air. But being a very complex, subtle, automatic organism, we are capable of intense feelings, acute mental power, and often possessed of a morbid imagination. But there is absolutely nothing in us except the air we breathe, the food we eat, the magnetism and electricity, the chemistry of our bodies generating the blood within our veins, that’s all. This constitutes the life and generates the mental force of our bodies. When we cease to breathe, when this life-fluid ceases to circulate, when this machine stops, the causes which produced such mental force exist no more; our ideas, feelings, etc., then vanish, and soon the constituents of our bodies will have assumed other forms. Then the forms of matter we now represent will exist no more.

You say: “You have not yet learned to think spiritually, and fail to perceive the difference between spirit and matter.” Permit me to reply that all the most ignorant God- and fetich-worshippers of the world “think spiritually,” and the difference between yourself, Swedenborg, Parker, Channing, Savage, Thomas, Swing, and the Bushman is one of degree only, not of kind. To “think spiritually” we have only to think superficially, conform to conventional and inherited thought; blindly and obediently accept the theories of our ancestors, as presented by any particular church; take for granted the existence of an “Infinit Spirit” or “God,” of minor or finite spirits, of immortality, etc., without proof, that is all. But it is the same fetich-worship after all. You call it “spiritual,” but how can you think of spirits, both great and small, except clothed in incarnate form? You cannot do it. When you think of your God—think of him with your utmost spirituelle capacity, you have to think of him in the garb of man or you cannot think of him at all. If you should think of him in the habiliments of your own sex, you would instantly see the absurdity of such spiritual vision and reject it, yet draped in mantle and trousers you worship “Him.”

You admit: “To human affection ‘He’ presents Himself in human form;” do not accuse me then of unjustly defining your belief. I am simply analyzing your ideas, which you have failed to do yourself. I desire to convince you that the highest conception possible of a God is of anthropomorphic form (which, personally—could I be persuaded to worship at all and “think spiritual”—I would not drape at all, but invest with all the charms and exquisit and chaste outlines of your own sex), and that you cannot, neither can the greatest “divine” living, nor have our greatest idealists in the past been able to, conceive a God otherwise, but generally have pictured him seated in an easy-chair, attired in tailor-made clothes! (I wonder who made his clothes before he made the first tailor!)

But while conceding that your God “to human thought presents Himself in human form,” you also insist that “God is a spirit, . . . in the heavens He appears as a Sun.” Now, kindly harmonize these conflicting ideas. Do you mean he is the sun of our planetary system? You can not mean this, as you also invest your God with attributes of “Infinit Love, Wisdom, and Power,” none of which exist in the sun. Or do you mean he is another sun, which appears as our sun? How do you know this? Have you “spiritually discerned” him so? If so, what part of the heavens do you locate “Him” in? And why don’t you make this important discovery known to the world, so our astronomers may corroborate your testimony that a God, which appears as a sun, exists in a certain place in the sky?

But if this conception of a God is correct, how can a God, which appears as a sun, also present himself to us in human form? Could our sun do such a thing? Or, if like a sun, could he (don’t you notice the inconsistency of using the personal pronoun here?) possibly possess human attributes such as love, wisdom, sense of sound and vision, etc.?

If a human form, how can he be the ruler of the universe? or if a sun—or any other than a human form—how can he possibly possess human attributes to govern, love, protect, judge, reward, and punish mankind? So you see, my esteemed spirituelle disputant, that in either case your conceptions of a God cannot possibly be a God and all it implies.

Are not your conflicting thoughts proof that your “spiritual vision” is simply an effort of a morbid imagination—prompted by inherited notions of the absolute existence of a God—to grasp something which positively can not and does not exist in the universe; and that if you applied a penetrative and analytical system of thought to the subject, you would seek and find within the realms of nature the powers and potencies producing all phenomena?

Says Tyndall: “The notion of an atom-manufacturer and artificer of souls, raises the doubt whether those who entertain it were ever really penetrated by the solemnity of the problem for which they offer such solution.”

You further ask: “Does not dogmatic assumption, either on the positive or negative side of any question, look very much like presumption?” Certainly not. Dogmatic assumption of the knowable, of truth and fact, is always in order. To assert that twice two is four; that heavy bodies tend to fall; that we live; that nature exists, and all facts which can be absolutely demonstrated or proved by analogy—all this may be dogmatically affirmed consistently with modesty and proper conduct. It is only when theorists affirm doctrines beyond proof and contrary to knowledge, reason, and analogy that such affirmations and their persistent defense become rank dogmatism.

To insist that when we die we are dead, is not dogmatism; but to insist that when we die we survive the dissolution of our bodies and, contrary to all other forms of nature, live forever—this is dogmatism; because the self-evident fact is that we are dead; this requires no proof. But the continuous affirmation that, in spite of our apparent death, we still live—this is dogmatism; because during six thousand years it has been affirmed but never proved.

To insist that Napoleon, Luther, and Caesar lived is not dogmatism, because history claims they were men bred and born as men of to-day. To insist that Christ lived is dogmatism because it is claimed a God, not a man, was his father. To deny the former would be dogmatic; to dogmatically deny the latter is justifiable, because men are not bred and born without human fathers to-day.

So, to affirm the supremacy of nature, its eternity, infinitude, and self-existence, is not dogmatism, because this is a self-evident fact. It requires no proof. This is within the limitations of our knowledge; all beyond is idle speculation, wild theory, originating in the brains of ape-men, and upon which the whole world of worshippers is to-day at war. But the existence of the universe to-day absolutely proves its eternal existence, because the contrary implies, at some remote period, a beginning of nature, a creation of everything from nothing, a stupendous miracle, an eternity of naught, vacuum, preceding a comparatively very brief period of universal motion, life, and activity—an absurdity!

To affirm a “Creator” anterior, exterior, and superior to nature, not to deny such a being, is rank dogmatism. Because upon those affirming devolves the burden of proof, which, however, has never been forthcoming, and ninety-nine-hundredths of all strenuously deny what the other one-hundredth believe. Every such conception can be proved to be grossly absurd and illogical, and I challenge the world to produce any concept of any God which I cannot prove to be on a par with crudest fetich-worship. If such a being existed we would know it. “He Himself” would supply the proof. But such proof has never been and will never be forthcoming because this hypothesis was only advanced to explain that which science, logic, and reason now fully explain without such theory.

Therefore the Materialist is the least dogmatic of all philosophers, and modestly confining his belief to the demonstrable is fully justified in affirming what he knows, sees, and can infer directly or from analogy. Theists and Spiritists, on the other hand, in augmenting the mysteries of nature by adding a “Supreme Being,” which to be a God and all it implies must be vastly greater and more potent than nature, then leaving this being entirely unproved, cap the climax of dogmatism.

Now a few words concerning my dogmatic affirmation that personality must be identical with the physique of man and that it cannot exist without. When Ingersoll eulogized Lincoln it was his character he praised, his virtues and talents, not his physique, I concede, but you must admit that all the former are purely attributes of the latter and cannot exist separate and apart from the body. And now even, when you “spiritually discern” Mr. Lincoln as you suppose him to exist in the “spirit-world” you can think of him only as of such physique as he possessed in life. And you cannot by any transcendent gift given you by nature over ordinary mortals think or conceive of Mr. Lincoln otherwise. If you do, it’s not Lincoln, but something else. Divest your phantom of this and what is left? Nothing!

You again complacently insist that because I affirm that personal attributes, character, also liberty, etc., are not material entities, I hold they are nothing. Not at all. Certainly a pound, yard, or gallon of honesty, nobility, love, or freedom can not be purchased, yet, as explained above, such attributes and conditions may exist—so to speak—concomitant with personality.

The problem you must solve is: Can the attributes, functions, and characteristics of a human being exist apart from or survive his physique? Affirming, you must prove it. From the Popular Science Monthly I quote: "In the human body there are 263 bones, 500 muscles, 30 pounds of blood. The heart beats 4,200 times per hour, and at each beat $2\frac{1}{2}$ ounces of blood are thrown out of it, or $7\frac{1}{2}$ tons per day. We inhale through the lungs 24,000 gallons of air per day. The brain weighs 3 pounds 8 ounces. The nerves with their minute branches number 10,000,000. The skin is composed of 3 layers and is subject to atmospheric pressure of 40,000 pounds," etc. This constitutes, this is, man. Now, my learned friend, if such is the construction of man's physique, if all this physical anatomy and complex organism is a necessity to the existence of man during life, kindly inform me how we can exist now and live during all eternity without it. Is this physique a necessity to the origin of man? Is it a necessity to man during life, or is it superfluous? Is it not a fact that each fiber, nerve, muscle, artery, organ, and bone is for a purpose, a cause of some effect, and an absolute necessity to man's perfect existence? If a bullet penetrates the heart death ensues. If we but cut a single nerve we may be blind or deaf; how, then, in the name of reason, can we survive the dissolution of the entire body?

The fact is, man is the body and without such body no man exists. And what you "spiritually discern" is not a "spirit body," but a physical body which you see in your memory and in your imagination. If to the existence of any human form a three-ply skin, capable of resisting an atmospheric pressure of 40,000 pounds, is an absolute necessity, it becomes self-evident that "spirits" which do not weigh a solitary grain can have no existence in our atmosphere or anywhere else. They would collapse like a soap-bubble the very moment they "escaped" from the safe protection of a physical body.

In closing, my dear friend, permit me to give you assurance that I am anxious indeed to "think spiritually," as you say I must before I can learn about infinit and finite spirits. And as I have learned that you are a preacher and one of the most proficient, kindly state terms, and I will comply with all conditions. But the A B C of your science I would expect to be an explanation of "spirit" in the abstract: What constitutes a spirit externally and internally? What gives it man's outline, color, warmth, life, etc.? How does it respire, digest and assimilate food, resist atmospheric pressure, sickness, death, and exist in statu quo during all eternity?

Last week I heard the great Paderewski in the Auditorium, Chicago. I concede to none of the thousands present greater appreciation of his genius and accomplishments than I possess myself. His rhapsodies kept me in continual ecstasy, and I was nearer "heaven" than I ever expect to be again. But suppose, when the artist had struck his last key and retired from the stage, some one had said, "I see him there and hear him yet," would he "spiritually discern" facts, or simply recall the artist and his performance in memory?

Rochelle, Ill.

OTTO WETTSTEIN.

Liberal Societies.

The meeting of the Young Men's Debating Club, of Newark, was held Saturday evening. Mr. Saxon read a paper on "Spiritualism" in which he declared it to be a "perfect philosophy" which was doing away with Christianity. He also related several of his "experiences." The adverse critics were Messrs. Gillen, Bird, and Walker. Mr. Shaw supported the essayist. At the next meeting the governmental control of railroads will be discussed.

"The Coming Man" was the title of Professor Mayne's lecture before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association last Sunday afternoon. The statement that the coming man would be religious roused the ire of the critics, who treated the lecturer without mercy. Among those who were especially caustic in their remarks were Messrs. Nichol, St. John, Hanson, and Elwell. The society will hold but three more meetings, after which it will adjourn till October.

Mrs. L. C. Ward gave the members of the Manhattan Liberal Club the benefit of some advanced views on the subject of woman's skirts, Friday evening, April 21st. The lecturer appeared in the costume she advocated. It resembles very much the loose chausses worn by the Turkish women. Most of the critics thought the abolition of skirts would be a benefit to women. Among those who spoke were Mrs. Donlevy, Dr. Foote, C. R. Welkir, Mrs. Britton, and Mr. Wakeman.

W. L. Sheldon, of St. Louis, took the platform in Chickering Hall last Sunday morning and delivered a lecture on "Coming Leaders and Statesmen." Among other things the lecturer said:

"This country has had a peculiar political experience during the last century. There has been nothing like it in the history of the world. We have had great statesmen, but there are none to-day. Webster ranks with Bismarck, or any other statesman Europe has ever produced. It does not matter to-day what kind of statesmen we have at Washington so long as we have a good secretary of treasury."

"We are second-class people as citizens, and therefore have second-class political leaders. We ask why it is that we have no great leaders or statesmen like Hamilton, Clay, Webster, and Calhoun; the reason is that we don't want them. If a great leader comes to the front, we thrust him aside in favor of the second-class man. There are men like Gould in this country, because we worship his wealth and want to get just as much, if we can. We have turned our country into a business corporation. There is no more sentiment, and love for country is fast dying out."

"Why do we have no Shakespeares to-day? We prefer the operetta. The reason we have no artists like Angelo is that we prefer the chromo. We could have great religious leaders, men like St. Paul, on earth to-day if there was a demand for them. But we like the sensationalism of the modern preacher. If Tammany does not govern to suit you, it is yourself who is to blame. You make Tammany possible. You say you despise its leaders, yet you point them out to strangers and talk about them in the daytime and dream about them at night."

"The saddest, darkest blot on humanity is the Australian ballot law. That law means that the votes of our citizens were in the market, and so we have to be locked up when we vote so that no one can tell whom we vote for. When you have your first-rate citizens you will find your great leader, and when you have your lovers of first-rate dramas you will have your Shakespeares."

Next Sunday Professor Adler will lecture on "The Results of the Work of the Ethical Society."

The announcement that Mr. Henry Rowley would lecture drew a large number of people into the rooms of the Newark Liberal League. Several Christians misled by the title of the lecture, "The Christian Scheme of Salvation," wandered in, and probably would have wandered out had not the forcibleness and logic of the speaker held them spellbound. In opening Mr. Rowley said:

"The Christian sects are divided by small controversial differences, but are united (Unitarians excepted) on this one central dogma, 'Christ died for sinners; he tasted death for everyone.' The gigantic scheme of salvation is called the atonement. It is the keystone of Christianity, but Christ had nothing to do with it. Paul is responsible for its biblical authority, and the metaphysical Christian fathers and priests for its present perfection and perpetuation. At the very outset of Christianity it began to engender narrow views. Peter said that salvation was meant for the Jews only; Paul said the Jews first, then the gentiles."

"Origen and St. Augustine held the opinion that the death of Christ was the price paid to the devil. Athanasius upset this and showed the ransom was paid to God. Now let us go back and see the reason of this. Once upon a time there was a perfect God and he created a perfect man. This man disobeyed the specific commands of God, and thereby outraged the divine justice and brought himself under condemnation. This is the original sin which tainted the human race. The eating of that nice ripe apple by a human being, a finite, was a sin of infinit proportions and could only be obliterated by a sacrifice of infinit merit. Now there was no one with whom he could negotiate such a tremendous sacrifice except his son (which was himself). Christ agreed, became man, was executed, went to hell for three days, made a return visit to the earth, went to heaven, and has not been heard of since."

"If God is all-powerful he could have made man impervious to temptation and sin. He knew that Adam would have a penchant for apples and should have strengthened him. He did not, therefore he is to blame, for he produced a bad article. The atonement was an act of cruelty and injustice. Christ was innocent, God was guilty. The atonement was a farce. If Christ were God, he could not suffer. If he were a man he had not the divine merits necessary to satisfy outraged deity."

Messrs. Bird, Mayo, Brill, Burton, and Mrs. Smith made some interesting remarks. Mr.

Walker's address was as usual full of original humor. Dr. Hands amused the audience by his extreme simplicity. He is a firm believer in the Adam-apple story, and insisted upon inflicting his version of it upon the audience. He was finally quieted. Mr. Parker was another gentleman who did not agree with the lecturer. After telling what he "knew," this gentleman gave as an excuse for speaking that he "stood up in order that Mr. Rowley might have some one to knock down." Mr. Rowley in replying said he had no desire to knock anyone down; he would be well pleased, however, if Mr. Parker would try to educate himself.

Next Sunday Reuben Rush will lecture on "Life and Death."

Lectures and Meetings.

The Brooklyn Philosophical Association's last lecture for this month is:

April 30th, S. H. Wilder, "Science Falsely So Called."

The Association meets Sundays at 3 P. M. at Fraternity Hall, Bedford avenue and South Second street, E. D.

At the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East Fifteenth street, Friday evenings, the last lecture for April is:

April 28th, Reuben Rush, "Life and Death."

The twenty-second annual convention of the American Labor Reform League meets in Science Hall, 141 Eighth street, New York, Sunday and Monday, May 7th and 8th, day and evening; R. W. Hume, A. L. Rawson, Geo. F. Train, Wm. Hanson, Dr. E. P. Miller, John A. Lant, C. L. Swartz, Col. Henry Beeny, and other speakers expected.

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting-room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to ask it.

It Explains the Phenomena of Nature.

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

"The Dynamic Theory," by J. B. Alexander. It is about a generation since the ideas of the selection of species by natural causes took such form as to constitute theory. Although Darwin has received the credit of this theory, and no doubt deserves it, yet the fact is the theory was unfolding itself to many people at the same time. The great body of accumulated natural facts that constitute a part of the environment of all well-informed people, impressed itself upon many and evolved in their brains simultaneous reactions. A. R. Wallace was almost as ready as Darwin, and would have announced the theory but for his anticipation. So ready was the rationalist world that the idea was received without hesitation, requiring but the announcement and simple explanation. The history of this theory is a good illustration of the dynamic theory. Things come about naturally, when due forces become organized to operate upon properly organized instruments. The complete acceptance of this theory largely withdrew attention from the facts and causes underlying selection. Some of these facts presented themselves in the explicated discussions of the theory, but too little account was taken of them.

It is the author's endeavor in this volume to demonstrate that organisms instead of being handmade and purposive, are machine-built machines, operated by forces outside of themselves. Especial care has been taken to ascertain the relationship of man to the other animals, and to point out their resemblances and contrasts. To this end he has cited a large number of facts that cannot fail to interest every intelligent person whether he agrees with the writer or not, in his conclusions. He elaborates upon mental phenomena and the machinery for their production; the brain is shown to be the organ of environment and a mind-forming instrument. Our ancestors looked too high for the explanation of sensation and mind. They did not regard them as physical phenomena or as connected with the motions of material and familiar bodies. The true course of knowledge is from below upward; progress is slow where this principle is ignored. The advancement of this generation has been assisted by a partial emancipation from the vicious metaphysical methods of the past. The study of dynamic agencies and the inferences justified by the inductive method of considering them furnishes all the real knowledge of cause and effect that is to day possessed. Being involved in the effects of the various dynamic agencies the study of them becomes a matter of interest to all; and it is a duty everyone owes himself to pursue such study as far as practicable.

The facts here presented are drawn from the most reliable resources, including many of the most brilliant names in science. The author has done his work conscientiously, and has endeavored to present his ideas in the most reliable and praiseworthy manner.

Letters of Friends.

One of Paine's Many Converts.

TORONTO, ONT., Apr. 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please let me know the price of the new book that is just out, "The Creation of God," by Dr. Jacob Hartmann—as I would like to get it very much—and oblige a subscriber to your valuable paper, the good old TRUTH SEEKER? And I thought it would not be out of place to say right here that I became a Freethinker by reading Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," one of the best books I ever had the pleasure of reading. This is the first letter that I have sent to your paper, and it will not be the last, I hope. I think that is all I shall say at present, and will now close with best wishes for that most fearless paper, the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. May it live forever. One cannot say too much in its favor.

Trusting to hear from you soon,

Yours for Freethought and liberty,
B. T. CUPPLES.

Taylor's Book Explains Christianity's Origin.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Apr. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have read and reread T. B. Wakeman's "True Genesis of Christianity," but find a much clearer and more satisfactory explanation in Taylor's "Diegesis." Mr. Wakeman bases Christianity on an expectation of the Jews followed by an ecstatic craze and an era of visionary or imaginary realities; but the "Diegesis" has an explanation far more reasonable and probable, although he rejects the effort to trace Christianity back to Egypt and even India. The evidence adduced by Taylor seems sufficient to fully account for this blighting curse which has infected the world so long; and while the name of this hoary-headed superstition was changed for that of Christianity nearly nineteen hundred years ago, the doctrines that name now represents are evidently much older and find root in early antiquity. Taylor's "Diegesis" and Heston's illustration in your issue of March 25th apparently have more weight than Wakeman's "True Genesis of Christianity."
C. SEVERANCE.

Schemes for Diffusing Freethought.

COLUMBUS, O., Apr. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As a friend to your paper I hereby submit a plan whereby I think its circulation may be increased. Suppose you send my paper to me through a news-agent that I may name, allowing him to place it on sale, and at the end of say six days, or when sold, he is to order me another copy, and if not sold within the allotted time, I to take it off his hands; and so on, the paper coming along just as it always does under subscription, the newsdealer to reap the profit on all he sells; I simply insuring him from loss in having papers left on hand.

How does the idea strike you? and how many of your subscribers will agree to help the cause along by this means? No one will suffer any hardship after the plan gets to work, as THE TRUTH SEEKER, like good wine, does not impair with age.

Please consider the idea, and if you think it worthy propose it to your readers. I would be glad to hear from you in the matter.
JOSEPH SIMPSON.

[The plan is good, but there is a better one. If anyone knows a newsdealer who will expose THE TRUTH SEEKER for sale, keeping it where it can be seen by his customers, we will send him two or three copies weekly, and receive back all he does not sell, crediting him with them. The price of the paper to dealers in this way is five cents each copy. We shall be grateful to those who will introduce the paper in this way.—Ed. T. S.]

Thinks Canadian Annexation Would Aggravate Our Troubles.

SEATTLE, WASH., March 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In an article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 25th as to what would be the outcome of annexation of Canada to the United States, the view is right in my opinion but does not go far enough. I admit it is hard to give a true picture of a people that might be said to stand supreme in filth, superstition, and ignorance. Ignorance is father to filth and superstition, and the priest father to ignorance.

It would be hard indeed to have to put up with a race of people amongst us who have to observe and abstain from work on every saint's day mentioned in the Roman calendar, or forfeit by fine to the priest the price of their day's labor. It seems very unnecessary, also very undesirable, to think of Canada's annexation, as most of Canada's sons and daughters worth having become Americans by choice, and we should rather rejoice that we have not the Christian bigots of Canada having a hand in our politics, as we have enough bigotry amongst us to contend with.

Even in this imaginarily secular state of Washington we have Christian bigotry enough to keep the press from publishing anything derogatory to the church. It was well seen here when Mr. Charlesworth was amongst us that the press dare not give facts as to the outcome of the debate with the great theological lion of the state of Washington, Clark Braden, who turned out scarcely a half-grown whelp, but with very sharp teeth when cornered.

With best wishes for THE TRUTH SEEKER and all who read it, and wishing a speedy return of Mr. Charlesworth amongst us here, I remain,
Yours for Liberty,
JOHN R. RITCHIE.

Expresses Enthusiasm for Pioneers.

WHITEHALL, WIS., March 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for one year's subscription for your valuable paper. You will see that I am a new subscriber, and when I tell you that your paper is highly valued here, you may be sure that there are not a few people in this neck o' woods who have had a sniff of the pure, wholesome, and untainted atmosphere that is sure to follow in the wake of Reynolds-Rensburg-Putnam thunder-showers.

We are talking of organizing a Liberal club at this place, and although our prospects are very bright at present, nothing definite has been done further than to sound a few of the prominent.

We have some good material here, men who have been posting themselves for years on this subject, who are a terror to the arguments of orthodox saints. Men who, while the writer was innocently, trustingly sailing under the false colors of the M. E. (most economical) church, were fighting the good fight, never faltering, ever hoping that the time would shortly come when the dark bandage of superstition would be removed from the eyes of some or all of the poor mortals who were groping in darkness blacker than midnight. All honor to them. Noble men, who sacrificed their claims to fashionable society, that they and we might be able to carry aloft the banner of Freethought and Freedom. We must never forget them. We can never fully repay them, but we can keep the grass from growing in the paths that they trod. Pioneers—Bruno, Voltaire, Paine! Worthy trio! What magnificent material were they composed of!

I will send you the names soon of persons who I think would be pleased to take your paper.
CHAS. A. ECKER.

What Will Mars Think of God's Loving Only This Planet?

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., March 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose the following clipping from the Minneapolis Evening Journal of March 13th. I know not at this writing where or in what form the original ideas of Professor Dolbear were expressed:

HEY, THERE, MARS!

Professor Dolbear, the electrician, says we have arrived at that point where there is nothing to prevent our signaling other planets. He asserts that a search-light of a million or more candle-power thrown toward Mars from the top of a very high mountain, where the atmospheric absorption of the light rays would be reduced to a minimum, would clear our atmosphere and speed away through space, reaching the distant planet in about four minutes. "If no response was made," he says, "it might signify only that there was no observer there when we were signaling, or that there was no electric light known there or no telescope." The fact that a shaft of light can be sent this stupendous distance is the most amazing thing. We are indeed on the verge of surprising things.

The thought that struck me at once on reading this article was that one of the first messages likely to be transmitted to the planet Mars was that "greatest message" the "gospel," and that the next one would most likely be a missionary tract. Then the thought struck me again, What would they do with that phrase "God so loved the world?" and how would they fix up hundreds of other similarly distracting passages in both the Old and the New Testaments? Here is some food for reflection of the thoughtful.

Yours truly,
E. D. DAVIS.

This Warms the Heart to Continue Work.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My love for the principles of Freethought prompt me to again communicate with you by mail and renew my subscription to what I consider the most wonderful paper of our age. Every new edition surpasses the one preceding it. Putnam's "News and Notes" are excellent. The foreign news is grand, but let us have more of it. Charlesworth with his Freethought Federation is a rising star, surpassing all others in brilliancy—the defender of right, the destroyer of wrong, and the long-felt want of the Freethought home. Let all Freethinkers immediately become members of the Freethought Federation of America. It is our ultimate hope by which we may obtain justice to our cause. If you do not become a member you will be neglecting your duty to humanity. It costs nothing to join.

Your editorials are excellent, for their depth of thought and the true basis on which your arguments are founded. Wettstein, the ever truthful, fair, accurate, and subventaneous reasoner, has a comfortable dwelling-place, along with A. Augusta Chapman (our future Freethinker) in the minds of all Freethinkers. Lucy Colman, the emancipator of slavery, the alleviator of pain; Susan H. Wixon, the intellectual generator and formulator of the cerebral faculties of what will constitute the finest family of human intellectual and moral entities that will be presented to the eyes of the next generation; Reynolds, Rensburg, Jamieson, Bell, and Steiner, the noble patriots whose sole ambition seems to be the dissemination of the seeds of knowledge, the elimination from the plane of life of everything below par, the enemies of hypocrisy, and the preservers and constructors of everything that is noble and refined in the heart of humanity, will all forever find a green spot in the memory of American Freethinkers.

Inclosed find $4-$3 for another year's subscription (due September 1st) and the balance for the following books: "Infidels and Charity," five cents; "The Myth of the Great Deluge," McCann, fifteen cents; "Dwight L. Moody," by Susan H. Wixon, five cents; "A Short History of the Bible," by Keeler, seventy-five cents. I would be glad to receive the issues of the Truth Seeker Library of the year 1893.

Yours in Freethought forever,
PHILIP H. ROSENTHAL.

Jerry Simpson Declared Culpable.

COLUMBUS, KAN., Apr. 15, 1893.

TO THE HON. JERRY SIMPSON, M. C. from Kansas: Your letter to John T. Powell, as to why you voted to close the World's Fair, impels me to write you an open letter. I wrote a letter to Hon. Mr. Clover, member of Congress from this district, imploring him to be consistent and independent, and vote to keep the Fair open. I am grieved to know he, and you too, voted to close the Fair on Sunday, which you had no right to do. And in the end, I think both your voting and your letter to Mr. Powell will be a boomerang, a rope to hang you politically and officially. What a noble contrast to yours was the vote of Senator Peffer, of Kansas, against closing the Fair on Sunday. I voted to help elect you in good faith that you would represent the people, not religious organizations, who are enemies to Truth, Equal Rights, Liberty, and Humanity; also because I supposed you had manhood, great mental ability, and a mind to think and vote without regard to religious organizations and petitions that lied and misrepresented as to numbers most outrageously. But you are "weighed in the balance and found wanting," as well as Mr. Clover. The reasons you give to Mr. Powell, that you would have changed your vote had it come to that, were as obvious and prominent as they are now. The truth is that, like others who voted as you did, or at least some others, you were more anxious to be popular and retain and attain office, than to vote to keep church and state apart, as the only way to preserve our liberties. You ought to know that Congress had no right to vote on that or any other religious subject; and in doing so you violated the oath you took to obey the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, and the Natural Rights of Man. Every man who voted as you did ought to have forfeited his office at once, and gone home in dishonor and disgrace. You have sold out; like Esau you have sold your birthright, and the people's birthrights, for "a mess of pottage." Again I condemn and criticize you for leaving your seat in the house—also Senator Perkins—and coming to Topeka to fish and scheme for the nomination for United States Senator—you drawing your pay all the time for serving the people and leaving your post of duty to serve yourself. It is no palliation for you to say that other officials do so. It is a deplorable fact that the higher the office and the greater the pay, the more the official can leave his post and place of duty. The laborer whose cause you pretend to advocate and champion gets no pay when away from his work, and must be at his post or forfeit his place. So it should be with all the people's servants. You say to Mr. Powell, "I shall pursue what I consider my duty, regardless of whether you support me or not." If the course you have taken is your "duty," then your ideal of duty differs from mine. I had, before you voted to close the World's Fair, "taken much stock" in you, and it was up much above par, but alas it is now, with me, at a big discount.

J. H. COOK.

Why Adam Could Not Have Been Made of Dust.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., Apr. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Some time ago I wrote an article that came out in print in one of our home papers, wherein I said Adam was not made of dust, and breathed into, which made him a living soul, because at the date of Adam our globe was beneath water and not a pound of dust existed anywhere. Thereupon I received a letter from a person who signed his name "Believer," and wanted to know of me how I "found out that at the date of Adam our globe was beneath the waters." He further desired to know whether I "was present." In reply I said to him that his question made me think his memory must be out of order, else I could not account why he should not recollect the day when we together inhabited the moon. Can't you recollect, brother, the day when we employed our time at the moon in catching lightning-bugs for our great electric-light works? Don't you remember at the completion of our electric plant at the moon, that all on a sudden the earth like a magnet drew the moon down to the earth, in which we nearly lost our life by drowning? Don't you recollect this collision of the moon with the earth which frightened you almost to death when you saw the earth beneath the waters—scared at a death by drowning? Don't you remember your delight when you saw the deep furrows the moon cut as it dredged along, which caused the ocean and Gulf Stream on earth? Don't you remember this great disaster, wherein all the inhabitants of the moon were misplaced as it plowed up the mud from the depth of the ocean, making dry land and deepening the ocean and the Gulf Stream all at the same time, thus dividing the mud from the waters? Don't you remember the earth by this drainage process was made habitable for all that were lost in the disaster from the moon? Don't you remember how you lamented that the moon got depopulated? Now, my dear "Believer," if you can't recollect anything of this little affair we shall never trust you again with anything important. I do not believe in trusting a person with no memory. From my narration we learn the moon fitted our earth for the habitation of man, woman, and child, for beast, bird, insect, etc. The moon kept dredging and scooping up this mud from the depth of the ocean, and by this excellent drainage process our earth became dry and habitable. Every man, woman, and child, beast, bird, and insect, that was lost from the moon was picked up by the earth and became an inhabitant of our earth. Grasses and fruit were enabled to grow upon the drained land for the subsistence of all living beings. After the moon had performed its labor in draining the earth, when it had divided the water from the mud it went again heavenward. The light which we receive from the moon is due to our electric plant which we erected before the disaster took place.

AUGUST BUESING.

Approves of Putting God Out of His Own Universe.

GENEVA, MINN., March 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I will now seat myself and write you a few words in regard to Free-thought here. I find a great many Free-thinkers here. I find many who do not fear to express their honest opinions on religious matters, but will not read a Liberal paper or book. Why it is I cannot understand. I am glad to see how Mr. Putnam is spreading Freethought. I hope the Federation will succeed in annihilating superstition. I like the way you and Otto Wettstein and others have shoved Mr. God Almighty out of the universe. Stand by your colors, and if his godship goes to come back give it to him. Mr. Heston is doing exceedingly well. I guess Mr. Anderson and Miss Chapman are "downed."

Yours for the cause of humanity,
MERTON HINES.

Eloquent Secular Funeral Address.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is an account of the services of the late Mrs. Ellen Harker. I thought as she was very well known in the Freethought ranks an account of the services would be appreciated by the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

I inclose a short address by Voltairine de Cleyre, also a poem read by George Longford at the funeral, and a newspaper account of her bequests.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty,
JAS. B. ELLIOTT.

MRS. ELLEN HARKER.—Born in Wilmington, Del. Died in Reading, Pa. Age seventy-five years.

"Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath,
The stars to set—but all,
Thou hast all seasons for thine own, O Death!"

Mrs. Harker, the oldest member of Friendship Liberal League and the Ladies' Liberal League, is dead. Her cheerful voice, her happy smiles, are things of the past; her busy hands and brain are at rest.

She was a brave woman, possessed of a good education; was born but once, lived in this world for nearly fourscore years as maid, mother, and widow. Her life was devoted to her children and friends. She spent her time in uprooting the weeds of selfishness and sowing the seeds of love and science—surrounding the cradle with joy and taking from the coffin its gloom. She was never blessed with the grace of God. The narrow creeds were early outgrown. The "Age of Reason" was her standard of ethics, Thomas Paine her hero; and she always took an active part in the celebration of his birthday.

She had no fear of death and did not believe in the resurrection. Many years ago she decided to have her body cremated, and repeated the wish in her will. She was always steadfast. Never in all her years did she care for the odium of the "respectable," believing that one in the right was a majority. She passed peacefully into the great unknown.

"A busy life has ended,
A cheerful voice is hushed,
A happy home made vacant,
Her fragile body—dust."

J. B. ELLIOTT.

ADDRESS BY VOLTAIRINE DE CLEYRE.

FRIENDS: To those who die in the beautiful fullness of beautiful years death is a lovely, a beautiful thing. Its sadness is like the sadness of the autumn shine that melts, and melts, and melts into the kissing shadows of the night. So she died—this mother, this lover and friend of us all. Into that tremulous, mystic, mighty number; that puissant, pregnant shadow from which all souls float up and form, and back to which they float and mix again, she has gone down. Full of the beauty of perfected days, full of the strength of service and right ways, full of the rest of a settled spirit, full of long-proved trust in the faith of truth, of human freedom, she has gone down to the great Sea of Life, to the great Under Soul that ebbs and pulses through this race of ours, bearing these rich gifts in her hands—gifts that shall flower and fruit in many another soul hereafter, when she, and we, and all that live and love to-day, are vanished and forgotten. I said the sadness lying over her was the softened sadness that comes when something that has rounded out the measure of its life departs. It is not that bitter grief which rends when something young is shocked and shredded from its unfinished task, but the melancholy which droops around the spirit when one who has passed the leaf-time and the flower-time passes away too, in the purple haze beyond the time of the falling fruit, leaving the benison of all its sweet behind.

And none can say how far that benison may reach. Shall a foot stumble on the path of freedom, it shall take courage and rise up and go upright upon the path, not knowing that long ago her feet stumbled there, and her strong soul battled there, and her heart took courage of itself and overcame, and sent down the gift of overcoming to the future years. This small, delicate, white hand, so cold now, so very, very quiet now—which of us knows how far its touch may reach, loving, caressing, protecting, warning, defending? For the end of the touch of a hand is not to-day, nor to-morrow, nor to-morrow. According to the spirit in which it is given it shall live moments or eons. And we who knew her know that when we touched her we touched real sympathy, right candor, and strong fearlessness. I did not know her so well as some of you, but I too hold the memory of a long, lingering clasp with which she pressed my hand once when she had given me a bunch of flowers. I felt better then for having felt that touch—I feel better now remembering it. I knew that I had come in contact not only with a gentle hand, but with something greater that does not change in all this slipping world of change, and I was grateful for it. Out of her earnest eyes shone an unflickering light, and written all over her dear old face—over all its lines and seams and traces of years—was one strong word—"steadfast." Never swerving one hair from what she deemed the truth; never bending before gods, or creeds, or men; never suing at any shrine; never searching help from any outside power; but always, in her own quiet, courageous heart, she walked alike through the fields of pleasure or over the rocks of pain—steadfast, steadfast.

O you whom she loved, take that word with you! Her body goes back to our mother to-day—back as she wished, to the light and the air; but that word she carved her life into, take it and bear it forever with you.

It shall be a light in the dark, dark days;
It shall be a rift in the clouds that frown;
It shall be a voice guiding all your ways;
A thread through the treacherous, tangle-some maze,
From the far, fair heights of the truth coming down.

Beautiful, silvery, silken Death—
So soft, so still, so long longed-for!
Thou givest rest where thou takest breath.
Thou takest brown leaves and givest a wreath
Of the fairest, whitest flowers that are.

Peace is the name of the great pale rose
That opens and broods o'er the brow of the dead;
Silence the lily-white bud that blows
Where the sweet, cold eyes will never unclose,
And the mouth curves yet with a shadow of red.

Cruel, O Death, are thy wings and winds!
But thy flowers are wonderful, white, and rare.
We weep sad salt where our pain begins,
But we bless the silence her pain upbids,
And the great pale rose on her silver hair.

Thou hast given her back to the Mother—
All—
Mother-lover of women and men—
One day we shall lie with her under one pall—
The wild, wide sky and the clear wind-call,
The gold and crystal of sun and rain.

O dear dead body, our eyelids swell
Red with the sorrowful tears of us!
Thou shalt not know, none ever shall tell
The long, sad song of this last farewell,
Though it ring on through all the years of us.

Nay, it is good—for now thou art free;
And freedom—sure thou didst worship it.

A tired wave slipping back to the sea,
Thou goest, bearing our love with thee.
Well that no pain follow thee—well and fit.

POEM DELIVERED BY GEO. LONGFORD.

All Nature, self-existent, power innate,
Life-givers and takes, forms solves as adaptate.
Nature obeys, vice disobeys, her laws;
In short, all good this only evil draws!
No good or ill by supernatural cause.
Let not imagination take its flight
Upward to fancied regions for delight.
Science and virtue lead to happiness;
Known truths, not future faith, give real bliss.

She had no fear, because she'd not
Or faith or hope in Juggernaut,
Nor Foh, Grand Lama, Bouth, nor Zend,
Nor Bible systems without end,
Nor Alcoran, nor Mormon views,
Nor any creed that priest-followers use.
Each class, self-pure, condemns the rest,
Enlightened minds the whole detest.
In strongest faith no virtue lies,
And unbelief no vice implies.
A bare opinion hurts no man,
Then prove it hurts a God who can.
To others do, to others give.
As you'd have done, or would receive.

A MIND OF HER OWN.

Which She Manifested by Desiring to be Cremated and to Promulgate Free-thought, and by Disinheriting a Son-in-Law.

The following amounts were disposed of by wills which were admitted to probate on Saturday: . . . Ellen J. Harker, $21,900.

The last-named testatrix directed that her body be cremated, and wished Robert G. Ingersoll to conduct the funeral services. She devised $1,000 in trust, the income to be paid for five years to Friendship Liberal League, No. 257, of which she was a member, for the support of the meetings of the league, and further directed that her executors shall hold the amount for five years as a nucleus fund for the building of a hall or temple in Philadelphia, which shall be owned by the league and used for the dissemination of Freethought, and more particularly to secure the complete separation of church and state in this country.

At the expiration of five years after her decease she devised the amount to the league absolutely forever, provided that within five years a fund of not less than $24,000 shall be absolutely raised and paid over in cash into the treasury of the league to build a hall or temple as aforesaid, proper proof of which shall be presented to the executor before the $1,000 shall be paid over. If at the expiration of five years the league shall not have raised the fund for the purpose, the bequest is to become null and void and lapse into the residuary estate. The testatrix further declared: . . .

A Visit to Cincinnati—The Ohio Liberal Society.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Apr. 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have been on a six weeks' trip, and my hardest deprivation has been to be denied seeing THE TRUTH SEEKER. One reached me through the kindness of Dr. de Lespinasse.

A week ago, while in Indiana, I thought I would run in to Cincinnati over Sunday. My first call was made on my esteemed friend, Dr. E. S. McLeod, one of the warmest friends and supporters of the Liberal cause during his residence in Chicago. The doctor is doing well, and besides a large practice, holds a professorship in the Cincinnati Medical College. For natural talent, scholarship, and profound research there are few men the equal of E. S. McLeod. When quite a young man he was one of the faculty of the Iowa State University, and withal is a true-blue Liberal and a whole-souled fellow. The quartet of faithful workers for Freethought in Cincinnati is headed by "Deacon" Light, ably assisted by Andrew Hogg, Mr. Silverman, and Dr. McLeod.

Sunday morning I am the first to greet Mr. Steiner, and was soon joined by our friend Silverman. We all called on Dr. McLeod and a program was arranged for our afternoon entertainment. Dr. McLeod agreed to take me in charge and the other friends were to see to Mr. Steiner. Early after dinner the doctor called at the Palace Hotel with a carriage in which was seated one of the fairest daughters of the Crescent City, whose name I cannot recall, but whose cheery presence added charmingly to a most delightful drive. Passing rapidly by the close, smoky, murky, low-lying portion of the city, we ascend Walnut Hills, past Eden Park, Burnett Woods, to Clifton, the urban city par excellence. Dom Pedro, when entertained in Cincinnati, pronounced this natural scenery, heightened by the imposing effect of palatial residences, wooded slopes, terraced lawns, and natural lakes, the ideal spot he had seen on earth. It certainly is lovely almost beyond expression, for all that wealth can contribute to add to natural beauty has been done. To view these magnificent palaces is certainly a pleasure, but to contemplate how those who build them live is anything but assuaging. In those castles of the barons of business is stored the labor of thousands upon thousands of human beings, while those who should possess this wealth, by right of producing it, live in squalid tenements in those dirty, dingy streets in the valley two hundred feet below. However, to destroy our pleasure is to think. Thinking is a pernicious practice, which as yet the majority of mankind seldom indulge in or these terrible inequalities could never be. From the contemplation of social injustice we are whirled to the Museum of Art, a magnificent structure of which any city might justly feel proud.

Among the marbles we are attracted to several by Hiram Powers, by his son, and other sculptors of equal celebrity. We take a hurried glance at the canvases. Here are some originals by Rubens, Vandyke, and others. The doctor drew my attention to a large canvas by Benjamin West—a scene from "Hamlet," where Laertes and Ophelia are before the guilty king and queen. This work is strongly, tragically drawn. Each facial expression would suffice for an essay on character, and the detail of the picture is perfect. The largest canvas portrays the scene of Jesus riding into Jerusalem on a jackass. My friend the doctor remarks that "the jackass is the salvation of the picture." Certainly his is the only intelligent expression in the lot. The hour of closing hastens our departure with regrets.

The evening finds us at Douglass Hall, where a large audience regularly attends the meetings of the Ohio Liberal Society, which society—New York possibly excepted—has the largest Freethought gatherings in this country. Douglass Hall is a model in everything but ventilation, and as it is crowded every Sunday night, that becomes a serious drawback. Within the membership of this society is excellent vocal and instrumental talent, with which the audience were regaled prior to the introduction of the lecturer.

President Geo. E. Light ideally and literally fills the chair to perfection. He introduced Mr. Franklin Steiner, who spoke on "Popular Evidences in Favor of Christianity Tested." His lecture is argumentative, terse, forcible, and logical, and Franklin Steiner is bound to take front rank among the lecturers in the Liberal field. During the lecture the audience frequently manifested their appreciation of the speaker's pertinent points, and at its conclusion he was the recipient of unstinted applause.

A discussion followed, participated in by the writer, Dr. McLeod, a "reformed" preacher, and President Light; and a brilliant little lady made an excellent extempore address—Mary L. Geffs.

For large audiences, interest, harmony, and general activity the Ohio Liberal Society far outranks Chicago to-day. Chicago once could lay claim to supremacy as the center of Liberal work. It can do so no longer. Cincinnati has forged away ahead. Its society is a splendid one. All those in it work for the cause, not for themselves. The workers are also the contributors. People who cannot financially assist a cause can seldom inspire others to do it for them. It has fine literary and forensic talent right in its membership. None have any mercenary motives, for all are well able to support themselves as well as the society, and they do it liberally. The society is flourishing financially. There all is harmony and good feeling and small chance for hypocrisy or treachery to diminish its usefulness. May it live long and prosper, is the earnest desire of

E. A. STEVENS.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Put Out to Sea.

Put out to sea, sailor, put out to sea!
Fear not the howling winds, but cut the cable free.
All the freight aboard, sailor, aland no longer be;
Leave the poor old rotten dock and put out to sea!

Trust to the Freethought frigate, unfurl every sail;
Faster the craft will boom, the fiercer the gale.
Heed not the rolling waves though surging they be;
Hold the helm by compass well, and put out to sea.

Bright gleams the morning, sailor, lift up the eye;
Superstition disappearing, Reason's realm is high!
On the mizzen-peak, sailor, let your pennon be—"Freethought forever!" and put out to sea.
Tyngsboro, Mass. JOHN PR. SCOTT GUILD.

Fruits.

There are many different kinds of fruits such as the apple, pear, peach, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, plums, and grapes, and many more, which grow in the North. In the South are also fruits which grow in the North, and some that do not grow there, such as the orange, banana, lemons, figs, dates. The fruits are canned in the summer, and are very nice in winter when we cannot get them off the trees. All the fruits are gone for this year. The fruits are shipped North in the spring because they get ripe in the South sooner than they do in the North. Nearly all the people like fruits. All the fruit trees bloom in the spring and shed their bloom, and then the young fruits grow and get ripe. The peach tree is among the first to bloom.

GERTRUDE H. STIGALL.

Never.

"There never was a good war, nor a bad peace."—Franklin.

This is one of the pithy sayings of "Our Ben," and true as truth can be. War is never justifiable. It is never right to strike a brother or a sister, or a friend or a foe. It is always ignorance that breeds war. It is ignorance that gives the first blow and ignorance that strikes back. All differences should be settled by arbitration. The time will come when a whip will be a relic of antiquity, and swords and guns will be found only in museums. Then we shall honor and pension our peacemakers, inventors, teachers. The hangmen will depart to the everlasting shades, and jails and prisons will be converted into school-houses and lecture rooms.

AUNT ELMINA.

What Followed.

A young man, arrested for swindling his employer out of $30,000, sat alone in a criminal's cell, out of which daylight had faded. Covering on his hard bed, he pictured to himself the world outside, full of warmth and life and comfort. The question came to him sharply: "How came you here?"

Was it really for the stealing of that sum?

Yes and no.

Looking back twenty years, he saw himself a schoolboy ten years old. He remembered one lovely June day, with the roses in full bloom over the porch, and the dress his mother wore while at her work, and the laborers in the wheat fields.

Freshest of all, he remembered his Uncle John—such a queer, kind, forgetful old man. That very morning his uncle had sent him to pay a bill at the country store, and there were seventy-two cents left, and Uncle John did not ask him for it. When they met that noon, this boy, now in prison, stood there under the blue sky and a great temptation came. He said to himself: "Shall I give it back or shall I wait till he asks for it? If he never asks, that is his lookout. If he does, why, I can get it again together."

He never gave back the money.

A theft of $30,000 brought this young man to a prison door; but when a boy he turned that way years before, when he sold his honesty for seventy-two cents.

That night he sat disgraced and an open criminal in his chilly cell.

Uncle John was long ago dead.

The old home was desolate, his mother broken-hearted. The prisoner knew that what brought him there was not the man's deed alone, but the boy's.

Had the ten-year-old boy been true to honor, life now would have been different. One little cheating was the first of many, until his character was eaten out, could bear no test, and he wrecked manliness and his life.

Correspondence.

McCoy, Ore., March 26, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I am eleven years old. I live in McCoy. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I like to read the Children's Corner. I go to school, and study reading, spelling, arithmetic, mental arithmetic, geography, and grammar. I am in the seventh A grade. There is one church in McCoy. It is a Presbyterian church. Well, I will close now, as my letter is growing long. If this letter escapes the wastebasket I will write again.

From your sincere friend,

DORIS SEARS

Lodi, Cal., March 12, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Children's Corner. I live on a farm of three hundred and eighty acres of land. I have four pet cats. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for three years, and I like to read the Children's Corner. I am seven years old and soon will be eight. I go to school and study reading, arithmetic, spelling, and language.

Well, as my letter is getting quite long I will close. If this escapes the wastebasket I will try again.

From your little Liberal friend,

HAZEL M. HOGAN.

[A bright girl is Hazel.—Ed. C. C.]

Turner, Ore., March 14, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON AND YOUNG PEOPLE: We have had a good deal of snow for Oregon this winter. The snow lay on for over two weeks. Things have started to grow now.

How many of the Cornerites like pets? I do, for one. We have three little Japanese "chin" puppies nearly six months old—one of them, Flossie, weighs three and a half pounds, and is a light seal brown, with tan-colored legs and no tail to speak of; one big collie dog; six canary birds; two white rats with red eyes; one blue "Maltese" kitten; one "mouser" cat, and one pet hen. Truly yours,

KATIE D. MATTESON.

[Quite a family of pets.—Ed. C. C.]

BRACKETT, TEX., March 21, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for as long as I can remember, and I am twelve years old. I like to read the paper very much, especially the Children's Corner. I go to school, and I think my brothers and sisters and myself are the only Freethinkers in the whole school. I have two brothers and three sisters. One of my brothers and two of my sisters go to school.

My father is one of the trustees, and when one of the teachers began to say the Lord's prayer he had it stopped. Hoping that my letter will not find its way to the wastebasket, I am your little Freethinker friend,

MAY WHITELEY.

[Such a nice little letter as the above will never find the wastebasket.—Ed. C. C.]

LONG LAKE, MINN., March 30, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Seeing no letters from this part of the country, I thought I would write one to make a start. This is my first letter to the Corner; and I hope it will not be the last one.

My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and thinks it a good paper. We all like to read the Children's Corner. I am thirteen years old and go to school. My studies are language, reading, history, geography, spelling, and arithmetic.

We have "The Story Hour," "Apples of Gold," and "All in a Lifetime," and think they are nice books. I have three brothers and two sisters; my youngest brother plays the violin, and one of my sisters is taking music lessons.

We live near a lovely lake on a big farm, and make much maple syrup every spring. Well, I will close with best wishes to the Corner.

Your Liberal friend,

CARRIE WOLSELD.

BALTIMORE, MD., March 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: It gives me so much pleasure to read the letters in the Children's Corner that it encourages me to try once more, as a few lines from me might interest some of the other readers. We all enjoyed the letters you wrote while abroad, especially those about Scotland, Wallace, and Edwin Ruthven. I am named after the latter and was born in that country. And we were glad you returned safe home. Father and mother enjoy reading THE TRUTH SEEKER; they are both Freethinkers, and never go to church. We have the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" and "Thomas Paine's Complete Works" and a good many of Robert Ingersoll's lectures; also a large portrait of that great orator. He is to deliver a lecture here on the 28th of this month. Mother and I hope to hear him. It is getting late, so I will close.

Yours for Freethought,

EDWIN R. FRIEND.

P.S.—I would like to hear from some of the children in the Corner. E. R. F.

[Correspondents will notice the postscript and act accordingly.—Ed. C. C.]

NEW YORK, March 3, 1893.

MISS WIXON: In THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 18th a letter is published from the pen of Mr. Albert Sandberg, of Nunach, Cal., dated Jan. 24, 1893, which in substance says that "women will abolish what little liberty we have" if they are allowed to vote. I suppose that by the word "women," Mr. Sandberg means the American ladies.

I have allowed two numbers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, of February 25th last and 4th inst., to appear without contradicting Mr. Sandberg's assertion, expecting to see one or more American gentlemen come out in the defense of the American ladies; but since such has not been the case, allow me to ask Mr. Sandberg: Who voted in favor of having the Chicago Fair opened on Sundays, against the clergy and members of Congress that want the World's Fair closed? In the board of lady managers all except one voted in favor of its being opened on Sundays. In other countries I don't deny the danger which Mr. Sandberg sees, exists; but not here.

The result in the vote of the lady managers suffices to prove that Mr. Sandberg's fears are groundless.

JOSEPH FELIX GONZALES.

HARLAN, IA., March 21, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: Father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a good many years. I like to read the letters in the Children's Corner. This is my first letter. If any of the boys or girls will write to me I will be glad to answer. All around here are Christians, or rather church-members. Nobody comes to see us, because we are Freethinkers and think for ourselves. Papa is going to sell, and go somewhere else, when he can get $40 an acre. He is deaf, and spends most of his time reading and writing when he is not at work. About five years ago he was walking to town on the railroad track, and could not hear the cars, which ran into him, knocked him off the track, and broke two or three ribs. There is a little Freethinking girl in town that was made to join church. One day the preacher's wife told her to pray and she would believe. She said that she had prayed and prayed and it didn't do any more good than praying to a corn-cob!

I said that nobody came to visit us—that is, nobody around here comes. I will close for fear my letter will not be published.

I hope that some day this will be a free country, and it will if we do our best to make it so. ARTIE P. BAKER.

[Just about as much good to pray to a corn-cob. Frederick Douglass prayed to be free, but never accomplished anything until he prayed with his feet and walked into freedom.—Ed. C. C.]

GORE BAY, MANITOULEN ISLE,

March 22, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is the first time I have written to you, but I hope it will not be the last. Papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and we both like it very much. I go to school. I am in the Fourth Reader and the senior fourth class. I study reading, writing, spelling, literature, geography, and history. I take music lessons, and my teacher's name is Mrs. Sutherland. Do you not think the Freethinkers ought to know as much about the Bible as Christians? I do. I am going to a girl's birthday taffy-pulling to-morrow night—and she will be fourteen years old. Her name is Maud Jackson. I will be twelve years old on the last day of April. I go to the Methodist Sunday-school, and I like my teacher very much. I got a lot of Christmas presents last Christmas. I gave mamma a little breakfast-cup and papa a tobacco-pouch. I got a set of furs, a silver watch, a pair of kid gloves, a pair of china models, a pair of china babies, a sleigh, a very large doll, a pair of vases, two plush albums, a gold watch-chain, a cup and saucer, a silk handkerchief, and a silver mug.

I like to read, but papa says I read too much. Papa has been a Freethinker and taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for fourteen years. Ma sang a solo at two Christmas festivals, and I gave a recitation at the Methodist festival; it was entitled "Little Nellie's Christmas Eve." It had one hundred and ninety-four lines. I am an only child and have no pets. I have had a parrot, a bird, about a bushel of cats, and one dog. Do you not think I ought to have a pet of some kind? I do, anyway. I have a tricycle, a doll carriage, two cradles, eight dolls, and many other toys. There is a new dock being built here; it is only a few steps from our place. Papa owns the town hall, but the Mechanics' Institute is occupying it now. I would like some of the Cornerites to write to me. My address is Gore Bay, Manitoulen Isle, Ont. I think I will come to a close now, so good-bye.

From your little truth seeker,
GRACE BRAZENOR.

P.S.—Do the Cornerites have badges, and have you got to pay for them, for I should like to get one? G. B.

[No, the Cornerites do not have badges especially for them. Such a favored child of fortune as Gracie should have one of Otto Wettstein's beautiful badges advertised in THE TRUTH SEEKER. So indeed should all Freethinkers wear this badge, little and big. Some one has spoken of a badge to be worn at the World's Fair, that Liberals may recognize each other at once, and nothing can be prettier than the Wettstein badge. It is more enduring than a ribbon, and is a thing of beauty at all times.—Ed. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers: 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF
ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages; 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 82 pages; 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages; 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Greco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages; 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages; 20c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price 25 cents.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral. We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFSSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL.

3mo14

MINERAL.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 834 pages, $2.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

universe Analyzed. 25

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. C. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA.

OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

Nowadays that people have waxed distrustful of the ethical commands of Jehovah—such as to sell your tainted meat to your neighbors, to rape the womenfolk of your conquered enemies, to stone to death Sunday fuel-gatherers, etc.—they are setting about investigating ethics for themselves. A good piece of literature to aid them is the International Journal of Ethics. This quarterly magazine contains in its April number "The Relation Between Ethics and Economics," by J. S. Mackenzie; "Self-Development and Self-Surrender," by Mrs. Sophie Bryant; "The Principles and Chief Dangers of the Administration of Charity," by Bernard Bosanquet; "The Ethics of an Eternal Being," by Thomas Davidson; "Reform Within the Limits of Existing Law," by Wm. M. Salter; "Freedom: Its Relation to the Proof of Determinism," with Discussions and Book Reviews. Subscription, $2.50; single number, 65 cents.

Hail to the best writings of Benj. R. Tucker, selected and printed by that famous American exponent of Anarchism in a volume entitled, "Instead of a Book, by a Man Too Busy to Write One." The printing of this work's 512 pages is as neat as its reasonings are, in the opinion of many, tattered and slovenly. All will admit that the style is very clear even if they think that the social system advocated isn't. And withal the reader is blessed with a frontispiece portrait of Mr. Tucker. First we have selections grouped under the heading of "The Individual, Society, and the State." Next "Money and Interest" are roughly handled in a number of pieces. Then our system concerning "Land and Rent" receives a broadside of twenty or so guns. The next antagonist is "Socialism," against which is hurled a battering-charge of a dozen excerpts from Mr. Tucker's inditing in Liberty and elsewhere. "Communism" comes in for a similar bombardment. "Methods" and "Miscellaneous" cover the remainder of the hostilities. No doubt much good may be observingly distilled from the book. All Freethinkers esteem liberty and individualism good even though they deem Anarchy bad, and they will be glad to learn from this book or anything else how to extend those glorious conditions to the utmost possible limit at every point. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Watts & Co., London, Eng., have issued a small book as a convenience to persons desirous of learning what Freethought literature it is advisable to buy. It consists of a list of standard works such as are required by Freethinkers. The price of each book is given, and a brief description of its contents. The title is "A Rationalist Bibliography." Works on evolution are given, such as "The Story of Creation," by Edward Clodd; Darwin's "Origin of Species" and "Descent of Man;" "Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy," by John Fiske; Haeckel's "History of Creation" and "History of the Evolution of Man;" Huxley "On the Origin of Species" and on "Man's Place in Nature;" "Mental Evolution in Animals," by G. J. Romanes; Spencer's "First Principles" and other works, and Wallace's "Darwinism." Books upon early man are indicated as follows: "The Childhood of the World," by Edward Clodd; "Human Origins," by Samuel Laing; "The Origin of Civilization and the Primitive Condition of Man," by Sir John Lubbock; "Prehistoric Times," by the same author; "Antiquity of Man," by Charles Lyell; "The Primitive Family," by N. Stareke; "Anthropology," by E. B. Tylor, and "Primitive Culture," by the same author. Then, the subject of ancient mythology, religion, folklore, etc., as illustrated in monuments, language, and so on, has been given some books such as "Egyptian Belief and Modern Thought," in which J. Bonwick traces the Egyptian elements of Christianity; "Myths and Dreams," by E. Clodd; "Introduction to the Science of Comparative Mythology and Folklore," by Rev. Sir George Cox; "Bible Myths," giving the origin of biblical stories in preceding religious legends; "Evolution of the Idea of God, according to Anthropology and History," by Count Goblet d'Alviella; "Myth, Ritual, and Religion," by Andrew Lang; "Chips from a German Workshop," in which Max Müller handles the religion, myths, traditions, and customs of Hindoos, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Germans, Celts, and other peoples; "The Science of Language," by the same author; "Introduction to Science of Religion," by the same author, and

"Fresh Light from the Ancient Monuments," by A. H. Sayce. A class of books difficult to separate from the above is that treating of the religions of the world—that is, of the developed and leading religions as distinguished from the foregoing religious beginnings and nebulae. In this line we find "Religions of India," by A. Barth; "Lectures on National Religions and Universal Religions," by Kuenen; "Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion, as Illustrated by the Religions of India," by Max Müller; "On the Religion of Ancient Egypt," by P. le Page Renouf; "On the Native Religions of Mexico and Peru," by Dr. Reville; "On the Origin and Growth of Religion as Illustrated by Celtic Heathendom," by Prof. J. Rhys; "On the Religion of Ancient Assyria and Babylonia," by Prof. A. Sayce; pamphlets on "Non-Christian Religious Systems," embracing "Buddhism," "Confucianism," "The Koran," "Hinduism," and "Islam." Works devoted to anatomizing, and showing the perniciousness of, religion in general, are: Alger's "Critical History of the Doctrine of a Future Life;" Amberley's "Analysis of Religious Belief;" "A Concise History of Religion," by F. J. Gould; "The Trial of Theism," by G. J. Holyoake; "The Supernatural: Its Origin, Nature, and Evolution," by John H. King; "Manual of the Science of Religion," by C. de la Saussaye; "Natural Religion," by Prof. J. R. Seeley; Spencer's "Ecclesiastical Institutions;" "Outlines of the History of Religion," by C. P. Tiele, and John Stuart Mill's "Three Essays on Religion," viz. Nature, The Utility of Religion, and Theism. Books on Christianity in particular are, in part, Bradlaugh's "Genesis: Its Authorship and Authenticity;" Brewer's "Dictionary of Miracles;" Colenso's "The Pentateuch and the Book of Joshua Critically Examined;" Davidson's "Introduction to the New Testament;" Canon Driver's "Introduction to the Literature of the Old Testament;" Greg's "Creed of Christendom;" Renan's "Influence of the Institutions, Thought, and Culture of Rome on Christianity and the Development of the Catholic Church;" Constance Howell's "Biography of Jesus Christ," a work for young Freethinkers, the verdict of which is that it was a great misfortune for the world that Jesus was born; "The Old and New Testament Examined," by "Julian;" Kuenen's "The Religion of Israel;" Mackay's "Rise and Progress of Christianity;" Meredith's "The Prophet of Nazareth;" Momerie's "The Corruption of the Church;" "The Practical Value of Christianity," by Nichols and Dymond, containing one essay from the orthodox and one from the Freethought viewpoint in answer to the question, "What would be the effect of the abolition of Christianity?" Paine's "Age of Reason;" Ingersoll's works; Renan's "Life of Jesus;" J. M. Robertson's "Christ and Krishna;" Saladin's "God and His Book;" Scott's "English Life of Jesus;" Strauss's "Life of Jesus;" Strauss's "The Old Faith and the New," and "Supernatural Religion," anonymous. We are not without works, either, on Agnosticism, the method and prospects of science, proposed substitutes for Christianity, rational religions of the future, etc. Books of this sort are mentioned thus: "Agnostic Problems," by R. Bithell; "A Handbook of Scientific Agnosticism," by the same author; "Homilies of Science," by Paul Carus; Comte's "Catechism of Positive Religion;" Descartes' "Discourse on Method;" F. J. Gould's "Stepping-stones to Agnosticism;" "The Creed of Science," by W. Graham; "Modern Science and Modern Thought," by Samuel Laing; "Problems of the Future, and Essays," by the same author; "The Service of Man," by J. Cotter Morrison; "On Compromise," by John Morley; "The Grammar of Science," by Karl Pearson; "Agnostic First Principles," by Albert Simmons; "An Agnostic's Apology, and Other Essays," by Leslie Stephen; "Thoughts on Science, Theology, and Ethics," by John Wilson, A.M. There are also given in this bibliography lines of works on philosophy, history, and ethics, but our space limits preclude their enumeration, and inquirers into Rationalism will have to procure the volume. It is in paper covers and contains 20 pages, selling at 25 cents. After all, this bibliography has failed to include a large number of valuable works. The book catalog of the Truth Seeker Company mentions many classical Freethought books not herein given. The publishers of this English list, indeed, state that it is incomplete, only "an instalment," and promise to issue an enlarged and complete work soon. The forthcoming bibliography will, moreover, have its books classified according to subjects. In the present pamphlet they are merely set down alphabetically, and the topical arrangement given in this column we were forced to construct ourselves. Appropos of bibliographies, the best one for Freethought youth that we have ever seen is that supplied by Frederic May Holland in the "Children's Corner" of a late TRUTH SEEKER, and we counsel friends who still possess that issue of the paper to preserve Mr. Holland's list.

A timely pamphlet is "America's Compact with Despotism in Russia." It is by William M. Salter, a writer whose contributions to this paper are doubtless remembered by their justness of thought and clearness of diction. Mr. Salter starts with the remark that we ordinarily suppose our governing representatives to be doing right; to be, as standing in the place of the fathers of the republic, animated by the love of liberty and the hatred of oppression. But, our author goes on to say, "it is possible that they should err, it is possible that they should temporarily even forget the great principles for which a free people should stand, and when this happens it is not only the right, it is the duty, of the private citizens to protest. In my judgment such a situation has now arisen. The United States is now entering into a compact with a despotic government which cannot be sanctioned by, and could not have originated with, those who are supremely solicitous for the cause of freedom and the rights of man. I refer to the treaty with Russia."

Moreover, Mr. Salter goes on to say, it is not, to speak exactly, a treaty with Russia, but with despotism in Russia. For "the Russian people are not represented by their government; it is not a government by them, but over them; it does not exist by their consent, nor does it serve their interest. Force established it, and force maintains it. The Russian people are not without lovable traits, and nothing that I shall say must be construed against them; could a treaty be made with them to protect them from oppression, no one would object; but the aim of this treaty, in which our government has consciously or unconsciously acquiesced, is to make the grip of the oppressor still stronger upon them."

The author wishes it understood in the first place that almost all treaties between civilized countries provide that those guilty of political crime shall be regarded differently from usual offenders, and not returned by the country in which they have taken refuge. "The crime may be outwardly the same as common crime; it may be taking life or destroying property, but if it is done in civil war or in the course of insurrection or political commotions, it is placed in a distinct category, and though it may be punished more severely than common crime in the country in which it takes place, it is viewed with different eyes outside. Governments, it is felt, are fallible institutions; they may even be unjust, oppressive, iniquitous; they have not the sanctity about them, that immediate unconditional claim on our respect, which human life, in itself considered, has; offenses against them may be serious to the government concerned, but not necessarily to the outside world. In any case the company of modern civilized peoples is agreed that there should be no extradition of political criminals. We ourselves as a people were once engaged in a political crime; our forefathers were guilty of treason to the English government; they killed English officers; had they been unsuccessful, some of them, the leaders, would probably have been executed. But we can hardly regard the crime as a very heinous one, nor did the world at large think so at the time. To attack men as representatives of a government is a totally different thing from attacking them as private individuals; to kill from private malice is common murder; to kill to overthrow a government may be wise, may be unwise, may be right, may be wrong; however this may be, it is another sort of act, and is differently treated in the law of nations."

Now, the trouble is that the treaty with Russia declares that the political offense of assaulting the life of the czar shall be reckoned the same as a similar attack on any common citizen. This is its language: "An attempt upon the life either of the head of government, or against that of any member of his family, when such attempt comprises the act either of murder, or of assassination, or of poisoning, shall not be considered a political offense, or an act connected with such an offense."

But, points out Mr. Salter, the czar is not a private individual merely, and with his private life we have nothing to do. Charles I. of England was an exemplary man, according to ordinary standards, even benevolent and of great purity of character; but this did not prevent him from being a tyrant. The question is, What is the czar as the head of the Russian government—what is any czar, so long as the present system of government is continued? For the question is not a personal one at all. There is an ethics of government as well as of private life; there are right and wrong ways of ruling, and to rule in such a way as to suppress the liberties of the people is a high crime, according to the conscience of civilization. What is the czar as the Russian government—for, according to the Russian constitution, the czar and the government are one and the same thing?

That the government represented by the czar is such as to provoke and deserve righteous rebellion, Mr. Salter easily evidences. There are some assemblies elected by the people, but these assemblies can do nothing of which the czar does not approve, so that anything like laws really representative of the people's will do not exist. The press is under strict censorship. From 1865 to 1880 (during the so-called Liberal administration of the predecessor of the present czar), the Press Council gave one hundred and sixty-seven warnings and suspended fifty-two newspapers. There is scarcely an independent, certainly no outspoken Liberal, organ to-day. The spirit of Alexander III. is practically the same as that of Catherine II., who in speaking of Radischev, the first Russian Liberal, said that "worse than Pongachev [a notorious Russian rebel] he praises Franklin"—and who proceeded to sentence him to death for publishing his "Journey from St. Petersburg to Moscow," which drew a gloomy picture of the state of Russia at that time, and demanded as a remedy representative government, the abolition of serfdom, freedom of the press and conscience, open trial by jury, etc. (though the sentence was commuted to exile to Siberia). There is no religious freedom. The persecution of Stundists, Lutherans, Hebrews, and in short all who diverge from the established Greek Catholic church, is unrelenting and most cruel. And now, when a Russian of Liberal mind protests against all this; when he asks for reforms; when, above all, he tries to enlighten the peasantry or the working class, and to make them honorably discontented with their lot, what is the result? Three years ago a Russian woman of education, the editor of a magazine published in St. Petersburg, sent a letter to the czar, calling upon him, in moderate and dignified language, to institute freedom of speech, inviolability of personal rights, freedom of assembly, open courts, ample opportunities for education suited to all capacities, prevention of administrative license, and a national assembly, in which all classes shall be represented by delegates of their own choosing—these as the only things that would save the state.

"You are an autocratic czar," she wrote, "restrained only by the laws which you yourself make and alter, or by officials who do not execute them, but whom you yourself appoint. One word from you and there will be a change in Russia which will leave a bright page in history."

She closed with these words:

"Your majesty is one of the mightiest monarchs of the world. I am only a working unit in the hundred million whose fate you hold in your hands; but, nevertheless, I feel that it is my moral right and my duty to say to you what I have said."

What was the reply of the czar? She was arrested and sentenced to exile in Siberia.

A few years earlier there were agrarian troubles in one of the northern districts. Some of the notables of the district were invited by the czar to explain the trouble, and submit plans for its relief. These men lived a long way from the courts, and did not know that telling the truth was out of fashion. They replied in good faith, saying that the grievances were well founded, and submitted a plan for their redress which entailed the institution of a local elective assembly. What was the result? One and all were arrested; some were sent to Siberia, some to fortresses on the Baltic, and not one of them was again seen in that district.

Further exposition of the abhorribleness of Holy Russia, and the infamy of the proposed treaty and the shamefulness of our Senate's action on it, must be obtained from the pamphlet itself. It contains 24 pages, is published by the Lippincott Co. of Philadelphia, and sells at 15 cents a copy.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

A PECULIAR PROPHECY—CURING THE INCURABLE.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By O. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG;

ALSO THE LAST JUDGMENT, as witnessed by him in 1757.

Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 108 pp.) sent by mail for $2.00. Address exactly Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society, Deltp. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY. 6teow17

AGENTS WANTED.

We want agents to sell our rare Mexican Cactus and coins; will send three different kinds of samples for $1. and one coin with each order. Address TEXAS CACTUS COMPANY, H. G. STILLWELL, Manager, 208 San Antonio St., El Paso, Texas. 4t17

SLEEPING ROOM FOR TWO,

With privilege of books and papers, 50 cents each; two persons, 75 cents a night.

JOHN C. SPRONG, 1717 La Salle st., Chicago

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager, 6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the best engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

COL. ELLIOT SHEPARD, out of an estate of $1,850,000, bequeathed $150,000 for Presbyterian propaganda, and $100,000 to St. Paul's Institute at Tarsus, Asia Minor.

E. ROSS SMITH, of Evanston, Ind., who murdered his sweetheart and himself, left a letter in which he said: "I have asked help from him on high, but as usual I got the opposite of that for which I prayed."

COLONEL DAWNEY of the British Coldstream Guards, lately a member of Parliament, has formed in Yorkshire a corps of gentleman volunteers to join the Ulster forces which are to resist Catholic tyranny in the event of Home Rule.

RAILROADS have decided to offer reduced rates to the World's Fair only on round-trip tickets. This reduced rate will be one of 20 per cent abatement, viz., 22-10 cents a mile. Excursions may be accommodated at 1 or 1-2 cent a mile.

A CASE of sudden death inflicted as a judgment of God occurred at New York city on the 17th. In the pulpit of the Zion Baptist church, colored, Deacon Johnson had just said, "I strayed from the church, but now I am back in the fold," when he fell dead.

THE Pittsburgh publishers who are being prosecuted by the Law and Order League for issuing Sunday papers, will appeal to the supreme court. They hold that the late decision would make liable even stockholders of the Pennsylvania railroad who reside in the state for running Sunday trains.

THE Mohammedans, of Turkish and Arab nationality, who have settled in Worcester, Mass., in celebrating a festival asked some neighboring Armenians, who are Catholics, to participate. During the festivities a Catholic cut a cross in a tablecloth. At sight of the hated symbol the Mohammedans rose in ire, and one hundred persons fell to fighting with stones, clubs, knives, and revolvers.

AMONG the plunder of an arrested thief in New York city were found two Bibles. The judge said: "Do you not know that within those sacred pages are express commands and admonitions against such acts as you are guilty of?" "Yes, judge, yer honor," replied the thief. "That's why I took 'em. It wasn't to steal; but I just wanted to own a Bible to read those admonitions. I was led to it, judge, through my pious propensities."

LIEUT. CHAS. A. TOTTON, U.S.A., formerly military instructor at Yale, by his study of Bible prophecies is enabled to perceive in the late accident to John Brown's statue a token of the immediate end of the world. He writes: "God of heaven sends a warning to the inhabitants: The angel that fell from heaven on Saturday afternoon and struck the left arm off the Horace Greeley statue of John Brown was no accident, hence the incident should make nativ-born Americans on each side of the line, if there be any left who have not yet received the 'mark of the beast,' seek for the interpretation. Its meaning is this: 'The old order changes.' Here endeth the second woe. And behold the third cometh quickly."

IN Belgium a revolution that might have involved Europe in international wars has been narrowly averted. Long-continued agitations of the masses for universal suffrage led to riots which were growing into a parallel of the French Revolution, when the parliament in affright granted the demand. The mob, led by Socialists, would probably have been able to turn the guns of the regular army against the Civic Guard and the police. If the government had called German aid to its maintenance, France, unable to view such an extension of German influence and perhaps dominion, would have put her troops in motion in twenty-four hours. The suffrage granted is not yet fully satisfactory to the masses, for while each man is given one vote a property-owner has more than one.

CATHOLICS in the City of Mexico are excited over what they allege is an attempt of the Mexican government to prevent a young lady from proceeding to the United States to enter a convent there. Mexico, tired of conventualism and all Catholic institutions, has had for some years what are called the Reform laws prohibiting convents and forbidding females to take the veil. Miss Jesusa Lopez, a merchant's daughter, started for a land more favorable to Catholics, the United States, and was to take the veil at Lafayette, La. After traveling nine hundred miles, she was arrested at Saltillo and brought back. The authorities ascribe the action to her brothers, who were opposed to her entering a convent; but Catholics accuse the authorities themselves, who, they say, desire to treat the case as a violation of the Reform laws.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 18. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 6, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE GREEDY ROMAN OCTOPUS.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure

by

Ridicule.

By WATSON HESTON.

Exposure

by

Facts.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

PLEASE govern me as little as possible.
—Lord Bramwell.

ALL things tend to flow to him who can make the best use of them, even away from their legal owner.—Thoreau.

THERE are three things that a man must do—tell what he thinks, keep still, or lie. The respectable way is to lie.—Ingersoll.

In what case is it permitted us to reproach a man for the disorders of his life? Perhaps in this case alone: when his conduct is inconsistent with his teachings. We might fairly contrast the sermons of a certain famous preacher of our time with the thefts which he committed upon Lord Galloway, and with his gallant intrigues. We might compare the sermons of the celebrated chaplain of the Invalides and those of Fautin, curate of Versailles, with the suits brought against them for having seduced and plundered their penitents. We might compare the conduct of so many popes and bishops with the religion which they sustained by fire and sword. We might exhibit, on the one hand, their rapins, their illegitimate children, their assassinations, and, on the other, their bulls and their pastoral addresses. Writing on such subjects, we are excusable if we fail in charity, which requires us to conceal the faults of our brethren.—Voltaire.

The first man can have been no rational being, that is to say, no man in the present sense of the word; he was rather a hybrid creature between man and beast, and from a savage anthropophagist has gradually worked his way up to his present position, through very protracted periods of time, by the well-known natural influences, and all the while in a constant struggle for his existence. To the civilized and cultured man, who has always his own form before his eyes, it may seem difficult to descend in thought into those wild depths of his primal and natural origin and condition; but a glance at so many of his human brothers who have lagged behind or stood still on the road towards a higher human condition, and a rapid survey of the great results of prehistoric science, will be amply sufficient to make him forget the childish fable about the creation of the ready-made man. Nor will his sense of human dignity be affected by this, if he remembers the admirable words of a French writer: "It is better to be an ennobled animal than a degenerate Adam," and if he bears in mind that among all the forms brought forth by the working of natural forces through long and toilsome evolution, he is, after all, the highest and, comparatively speaking, the most perfect.—Büchner.

From the earliest times of which we have any knowledge, Naturalism and Supernaturalism have, consciously or unconsciously, competed and struggled with one another; and the varying fortunes of the contest are written in the records of the course of civilization, from those of Egypt and Babylonia, six thousand years ago, down to those of our own time and people. Those records inform us that, so far as men have paid attention to Nature, they have been rewarded for their pains. They have developed the Arts which have furnished the conditions of civilized existence; and the Sciences, which have been a progressive revelation of reality and have afforded the best discipline of the mind in the methods of discovering truth. They have accumulated a vast body of universally accepted knowledge; and the conceptions of man and of society, of morals and of law, based upon that knowledge, are every day more and more, either openly or tacitly, acknowledged to be the foundations of right action. History also tells us that the field of the supernatural has rewarded its cultivators with a harvest, perhaps not less luxuriant, but of a different character. It has produced an almost infinite diversity of Religions. These, if we set aside the ethical concomitants upon which natural knowledge also has a claim, are composed of information about Supernature; they tell us of the attributes of supernatural beings, of their relations to Nature, and of the operations by which their interference with the ordinary course of events can be secured or averted. It does not appear, however, that history indicates a widening of the influence of supernaturalism on practice, with the onward flow of time. On the contrary, the acquaintance of mankind with the supernatural appears the more extensive and the more exact, and the influence of supernatural doctrines upon conduct the greater, the further back we go in time and the lower the stage of civilization submitted to investigation. Historically, indeed, there would seem to be an inverse relation between supernatural and natural knowledge. As the latter has widened, gained in precision and in trustworthiness, so has the former shrunk, grown vague and questionable.—Huxley.

New Publications.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE!

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Je us; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Bod ; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification: The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Other Newspapers

WITH The Truth Seeker.

Any of our readers who desire a New York weekly political paper can obtain one of the following in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER at reduced rates:

Tribune (Republican) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, $3 50
Tribune (Republican) semi-weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 4 25
The Sun (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 3 50
The World (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 3 50
THE ARENA and THE TRUTH SEEKER Will be sent one year both for $6 00
With large picture premium with the Arena, 6 50
THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year for $6 75

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 18. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, May 6, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - MAY 6, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Witchcraft in Scotland.

In pursuance of our design to provide Freethinkers with a more exhaustive history of the witchcraft superstition than has heretofore been obtainable by them, we will devote this week's treatment to an account of that belief in Scotland. We imagine that Christians when they find their church to have been so mistaken on this thing, will begin to suspect that it may now be equally mistaken on other things.

In England, we related last week, the witchcraft fanaticism had been bridled and repressed. There was one country, however, in which it obtained an absolute ascendancy. There was one country in which the Puritan ministers succeeded in molding alike the character and the habits of the nation, and in disseminating their harsh and gloomy tenets through every section of society. While England was breaking loose from her most ancient superstitions, and advancing with gigantic strides along the paths of knowledge, Scotland still cowered in helpless subjection before her clergy. This body kept the Scottish people in a state of miserable thralldom which is thus graphically described by Lecky's "History of Rationalism: Never was a mental servitude more complete, and never was a tyranny maintained with more inexorable barbarity. Supported by public opinion, the Scottish ministers succeeded in overawing all opposition, in prohibiting the faintest expression of adverse opinions, in prying into and controlling the most private concerns of domestic life; in compelling everyone to conform absolutely to all the ecclesiastical regulations they enjoined; and in, at last, directing the whole scope and current of legislation. They maintained their ascendancy over the popular mind by a system of religious terrorism, which we can now barely conceive. The misery of man, the anger of the almighty, the fearful power and continual presence of Satan, the agonies of hell, were the constant subjects of their preaching. All the most ghastly forms of human suffering were accumulated as faint images of the eternal doom of the immense majority of mankind. Countless miracles were represented as taking place within the land, but they were almost all of them miracles of terror. Disease, storm, famine, every awful calamity that fell upon mankind, or blasted the produce of the soil, was attributed to the direct intervention of spirits; and Satan himself was represented as constantly appearing in a visible form upon the earth.

It was, says Buckle's "History of Civilization," believed that the world was overrun by evil spirits, who not only went up and down the earth, but also lived in the air, and whose business it was to tempt and hurt mankind. Their number was infinite, and they were to be found at all places and in all seasons. At their head was Satan himself, whose delight it was to appear in person, ensnaring or terrifying everyone he met. With this object, he assumed various forms. One day he would visit the earth as a black dog; on another day, as a raven; on another, he would be heard in the distance roaring like a bull. He appeared sometimes as a white man in black clothes; and sometimes he came as a black man in black clothes, when it was remarked that his voice was ghastly, that he wore no shoes, and that one of his feet was cloven. His stratagems were endless. For, in the opinion of divines, his cunning increased with his age; and having been studying for more than five thousand years, he had now attained to unexampled dexterity. He could, and he did, seize both men and women, and carry them away through the air. Usually, he wore the garb of laymen, but it was said that, on more than one occasion, he had impudently attired himself as a minister of the gospel. At all events, in one dress or other, he frequently appeared to the clergy, and tried to coax them over to his side. In that, of course, he failed; but out of the ministry few indeed could withstand him. He could raise storms and tempests; he could work, not only on the mind, but also on the organs of the body, making men hear and see whatever he chose. Of his victims, some he prompted to commit suicide, others to commit murder. Still, formidable as he was, no Christian was considered to have attained to a full religious experience, unless he had literally seen him, talked to him, and fought with him. The clergy were constantly preaching about him, and preparing their audience for an interview with their great enemy. The consequence was, that the people became almost crazed with fear. Whenever the preacher mentioned Satan, the consternation was so great that the church resounded with sighs and groans. The aspect of a Scotch congregation in those days is, indeed, hard for us to conceive. Not unfrequently the people, benumbed and stupefied with awe, were rooted to their seats by the horrible fascination exercised over them, which compelled them to listen, though they are described as gasping for breath, and with their hair standing on end. Such impressions were not easily effaced. Images of terror were left on the mind, and followed the people to their homes, and in their daily pursuits. They believed that the devil was always, and literally, at hand; that he was haunting them, speaking to them, and tempting them. There was no escape. Go where they would, he was there. Such teaching produced its natural effects. In a land where credulity was universal, in a land where the intellect was numbed and palsied by these awful contemplations, where almost every form of amusement was suppressed, and where the thoughts of men were concentrated with an undivided energy on theological conceptions, such teaching necessarily created the superstition of witchcraft. Witchcraft was but one form of the panic it produced; it was but the reflection by a diseased imagination of the popular theology. We accordingly find that it assumed the most frightful proportions and the darkest character. In other lands, the superstition was at least mixed with much of imposture; in Scotland it appears to have been entirely undiluted. It was produced by the teaching of the clergy, and it was everywhere fostered by their persecution. Eagerly, passionately, with a thirst for blood that knew no mercy, with a zeal that never tired, did they accomplish their task. Assembled in solemn synod, the college of Aberdeen, in 1603, enjoined every minister to take two of the elders of his parish to make "a subtle and privy inquisition," and to question all the parishioners upon oath as to their knowledge of witches. Boxes were placed in the churches for the express purpose of receiving the accusations. When a woman had fallen under suspicion, the minister from the pulpit denounced her by name, exhorted his parishioners to give evidence against her, and prohibited anyone from sheltering her. In the same spirit he exerted the power which was given him by a parochial organization, elaborated perhaps more skilfully than any other in Europe. Under these circumstances, the witch-cases seem to have fallen almost entirely into the hands of the clergy. They were the leading commissioners. Before them the confessions were taken. They were the accusing witnesses or the directors of the tortures by which these confessions were elicited.

And when we read the nature of these tortures; when we remember that they were inflicted, for the most part, on old and feeble and half-doting women, it is difficult to repress a feeling of the deepest abhorrence for those men who caused and who encouraged them. If the witch was obdurate, the first, and it was said the most effectual, method of obtaining confession was by what was termed "waking her." An iron bridle or hoop was bound across her face with four prongs, which were thrust into her mouth. It was fastened behind to the wall by a chain, in such a manner that the victim was unable to lie down; and in this position she was sometimes kept for several days, while men were constantly with her to prevent her from closing her eyes for a moment in sleep. Partly in order to effect this object, and partly to discover the insensible mark which was the sure sign of a witch, long pins were thrust into her body. At the same time, as it was a saying in Scotland that a witch would never confess while she could drink, excessive thirst was often added to her tortures. Some prisoners have been waked for five nights; one, it is said, even for nine. "One of the most powerful incentives to confession was systematically to deprive the suspected witch of the refreshment of her natural sleep. . . . Iron collars, or witches' bridles, are still preserved in various parts of Scotland, which had been used for such iniquitous purposes. These instruments were so constructed that, by means of a hoop which passed over the head, a piece of iron having four points or prongs was forcibly thrust into the mouth, two of these being directed to the tongue and palate, the others pointing outward to each cheek. This infernal machine was secured by a padlock. At the back of the collar was fixed a ring, by which to attach the witch to a staple in the wall of her cell. Thus equipped, and night and day waked and watched by some skilful person appointed by her inquisitors, the unhappy creature, after a few days of such discipline, maddened by the misery of her forlorn and helpless state, would be rendered fit for confessing anything, in order to be rid of the dregs of her wretched life. At intervals fresh examinations took place, and these were repeated from time to time until her "contumacy," as it was termed, was subdued. The clergy and kirk sessions appear to have been the unwearied instruments of "purging the land of witchcraft;" and to them, in the first instance, all the complaints and informations were made" (Pitcairn, vol. i, part 2, p. 50).

The physical and mental suffering of such a process was sufficient to overcome the resolution of many, and to distract the understanding of not a few. But other and perhaps worse tortures were in reserve. The three principal that were habitually applied, were the pennywinkis, the boots, and the caschielawis. The first was a kind of thumb-screw; the second was a frame in which the leg was inserted and in which it was broken by wedges, driven in by a hammer; the third was also an iron frame for the leg, which was from time to time heated over a brazier. Fire-matches were sometimes applied to the body of the victim. We read, in a contemporary legal register, of one man who was kept for forty-eight hours in "vehement tortour" in the caschielawis; and of another who was in the same frightful machine for eleven days and eleven nights, whose legs were broken daily for fourteen days in the boots, and who was so scourged that the whole skin was torn from his body.

How many confessions were extorted, and how many victims perished, by these means, it is now impossible to say. A vast number of depositions and confessions are preserved, but they were taken only before a single court, and many others took cognizance of the crime. We know that in 1662 more than one hundred and fifty persons were accused of witchcraft; and that in the preceding year no less than fourteen commissions had been issued for the trials. After these facts, it is scarcely necessary to notice how one traveler casually mentions having seen nine women burning together at Leith in 1664, or how, in 1678, nine others were condemned in a single day. The charges were, indeed, of the most comprehensive order, and the wildest fancies of Sprenger and Nider were defended by the Presbyterian divines. In most Catholic countries, it was a grievance of the clergy that the civil power refused to execute the witches who employed their power only in curing disease. In Scotland such persons were unscrupulously put to death. The witches were commonly strangled before they were burnt, but this merciful provision was very frequently omitted. An earl of Mar (who appears to have been the only person sensible of the inhumanity of the proceedings) tells how, with a piercing yell, some women once broke half-burnt from the slow fire that consumed them, struggled for a few moments with despairing energy among the spectators, but soon with shrieks of blasphemy and wild protestations of innocence sank writhing in agony amid the flames.

These atrocious doings, which the clergy stand ready to repeat at any time when given the power, were of such multitude and extent that we find we shall have to defer the relation of them in America to some other week in the near future.

The World's Fair.

On the 1st day of this month the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago was formally opened. All the exhibits have not arrived and been arranged, and will not be for a month, but there are already many attractions, and the magnificent architecture can now be viewed with perhaps better advantage than later and is in itself worth long regard. The lateness of the opening is scarcely censurable, in view of the fact that all great exhibitions have thus been belated. The energy of the management in overcoming the obstacles which once seemed disheartening, and the taste everywhere pervading, ask our utmost praise. The Fair will be a noble work. It will be, in the words of one describer, "a spectacular marvel and an educational, architectural, and industrial stimulant, such as the earth has never beheld." Grand, beautiful, triumphant, and hope-giving will it be. Hurrah for our World's Fair! All hail to the great Columbian Exposition!

The blemish fixed upon this great work, otherwise so splendid, by religion, is unfortunate. Supernaturalism, other-worldliness, which helped not one iota to achieve this undertaking, is recognized and honored throughout it; while naturalism, this-worldliness, which alone has done every stroke of labor toward its accomplishment, is left in scorned ignominy. In the opening ceremonies, for instance, religion played a chief part. The blessings of heaven on the enterprise were invoked by W. H. Milburn, chaplain of the national House of Representatives. The music on that occasion was largely of a religious character.

Then, there is the closing of the gates Sundays—the inconsiderate, domineering, selfish, defrauding, impertinent, outrageous, and thrice abominable closing. This we hope will be revoked; Mr. Putnam writes that the chances for its being so are about even; but we ourselves cannot help deeming them greater against revocation than for it. On the 25th ult. General St. Clair, of the national commission, and who will lead in the Sunday-opening movement, said: "If the local directory takes the proper step and sends us an amended resolution for opening the Fair on Sunday I believe the commission will pass it. A fair vote of our body has never yet been taken. I think the sentiment of a majority of the commission is for Sunday opening. Whether they will be willing to vote for it in the face of the action of Congress is a question. Congress has violated its contract with the Fair, and I think I can make the commissioners see it in the right light." Several other commissioners declared themselves in favor of Sunday opening. Judge Martindale, of Indianapolis, proposed a sort of compromise. He said: "Open the Fair on Sunday, but shut down all the machinery and have religious services and sacred music for those who desire them." On the following day, the 26th ult., sixty members of the national commission were present when President Palmer called the meeting to order at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Commissioner Joseph Eiboreck offered a resolution that the Sunday-opening question be referred to the local directory, of which Mr. Higinbotham is president. The resolution was debated and adopted, and the directory, it was agreed, should decide whether the act of Congress requiring Sunday closing must be enforced. On the next day, the 27th ult., the local directory held a long secret meeting. The Sunday-opening question was touched upon indirectly, and after the meeting it was given out that the board was in favor of opening on Sunday, though no formal action had been taken. It was announced that the judiciary committee of the national commission, of which Senator William Lindsay, of Kentucky, is president, is also investigating the legality of the act of Congress requiring Sunday closing. On the following day, the 28th ult., the national commission again took a hand in the matter. After failing to do anything decisive, it adjourned till the 1st inst.

The people of our country are being given a useful education in ecclesiastical ways and manners by the press. This noble institution is active in pointing out the shamefully immoral character of the church's action. Chicago, the newspapers remark, is full of preparation for debauchery, and in order that vice may have full opportunity to work its evil will, the Exposition grounds, with their enlightening, refining, and educating influences, are to be closed every Sunday, while the gorgeous temples of vice and crime are to be kept wide open. "Thus far," says one of the gallant newspapers mentioned above, "the grounds have been open on Sunday because the blight of Congressional hypocrisy could not fall upon the Fair before the date of its formal opening. The gate receipts have amounted to $250,000, the greater part of which came from the multitudes of Sunday visitors. After the 1st of May all these multitudes and the thousands that will presently be added to the throng will find the gates closed on Sunday and must turn for entertainment to the gorgeously decorated and ingeniously attractive hells of the Plaisance and the town. There was never a worse thing done for morality by any legislative act than was done by Congress when it ordered the closing of the Fair on Sunday. Had its purpose been to render the great gathering fruitful of vicious teaching, efficient in the corruption of innocence and richly profitable to crime, it could not have proceeded to its aim by a more direct road than that of Sunday closing."

Ex-Senator Ingalls, writing from the Exposition a few days before its opening, says—after an elaborately finished description which will for rhetorical merit find no rival till Mr. Putnam begins his letters to this paper—that "public interest increases and the number of visitors grows daily. It is largest on Sundays. The intolerant bigotry which dictates its closing on that day will deprive multitudes of their only opportunity to obtain the advantage and pleasure of the greatest object-lessons of the century."

Holy Russia Not Good Enough to Treat With.

The czar has signed the Russian extradition treaty, and ratifications have been exchanged by the United States minister and the Russian foreign office. To put the treaty in effect there is now wanting only the official proclamation of President Cleveland.

The consummation of this treaty, which now is highly probable, will be nothing less than a crime against humanity. Our opinion on it, expressed more fully in previous issues, is shared by the enlightened press of the country with scarcely an exception. The New York Times, for instance, whose views always command high consideration, takes the ground even that this country cannot properly enter into an extradition treaty of any nature whatever with the government of the czar. It objects, it says, "not to this or that article, but to the conclusion of any treaty of extradition whatever with a power like Russia. We can no more conclude such a treaty with the czar than with the shah of Persia. In either case, we do not surrender a fugitive to justice, but to the caprice of a ruler, of a magistrate who is the instrument of the ruler, or of a drum-head court-martial. We should stultify ourselves and outrage humanity by concluding such an agreement with such a power."

The same just-thinking journal, too, properly deems that in such a case as this the "executive session," or secret session, of the Senate was "an outrage akin to the secret trials of Russia." Two or three weeks ago the Times made this demand: "The debate upon the treaty must be open, and every Senator who ventures to advocate it should be compelled to give his reasons to his countrymen. It would be curious to see what arguments could be produced in favor of such an instrument that would bear publicity. As a matter of fact, the only chance for ratification is that Senators who may have been induced, by arguments that they do not care to avow, into favoring it should be enabled to cast a silent vote in its support." But the protest of the Times with all the other organs of intelligent opinion passed unheeded by our arrogant Senate. Very different is the passage of this legislation, and the fathering of it upon the populace who do not want it, from a genuine government of, by, and for the people.

The same journal quoted above says: "If Russia wishes to be put, in respect of the extradition of fugitives from justice, on a footing with civilized nations, Russia must reform her criminal procedure so as to offer to the innocent the same protection that is assured by the practice of civilized nations." But, we wish to remark upon this, Russia cannot "reform her criminal procedure" till the people are bright and informed, and this they can not be till there is lifted from over them the muffling and stifling cloud of Christianity.

That this religion of Christianity is more thoroughly believed and observed by the Russian people than by any other in Europe, and that at the same time that people is the most unhappy and barbarous in Europe, and with a government so evil that it cannot decently be admitted to treaty with other nations, we hope will be marked by everyone whose notice is attracted to this present affair of extradition.

Of a well-remembered picture in THE TRUTH SEEKER the Independent says: "THE TRUTH SEEKER is an Infidel paper, which is engaged weekly in giving caricatures of scripture subjects in not too artistic half-page pictures. A recent issue carries on the first page a representation of a stream of desperate characters—liars, thieves, perjurers, murderers—entering 'the fold of Christ.' It is called 'The Sinner's Hope and Last Refuge of the Vile.' The picture is not a caricature. It truthfully represents a great Christian doctrine. There is salvation for thieves and liars and murderers. This is a great and glorious truth. It is indeed the 'sinner's hope,' the 'last refuge of the vile.' It is in this that the divinity of the Christian scheme of salvation appears. The vilest may enter the fold of Christ, leaving their vileness at the gate. Unbelief is fatalistic. It holds that the vile can never be anything but vile. The Christian doctrine is a nobler and truer doctrine. It has hope and the power of reformation in it. For once THE TRUTH SEEKER has drawn better than it knew."

We are of course overjoyed to please our contemporary of Congregational leanings, and aside from a correction, we will only remark that if the pious like the doctrine of vicarious atonement decent folk will leave them to it. The correction is that the statement that unbelievers hold that the vile can never be otherwise is an absolute falsehood. And against this reckless assertion by the Independent we put this from the London Spectator, and leave the American pietist to ponder upon it: "At least half the Atheists in England—we are not at present using the word in disparagement, but only to describe those who reject all idea of the supernatural—are philanthropists, and, we doubt not, a large section of them are entirely sincere. They wish heartily to advance the human race, of course always premising that the road taken is the one laid down on their maps, and for that end are willing not only to give lavishly, but to suffer a good deal. Martyrdom they have seldom had to meet—though there are instances even of that, a few of the hotter Abolitionists having, we believe, been non-believers—but some of them, we do not doubt, if they could be certain of giving the millions a dead-heave upward, would cheerfully resign their lives, and that without the solace of expecting any other. There are many Atheists now with hot philanthropy in them, and they are philanthropists, not in spite of, but because of their Atheism; because they cannot endure to behold sufferings which, if there be no God, are purposeless; because they rely on themselves alone to mitigate misery; and because they are dominated by the instinctive longing of man for an ideal, and can see it only, in the bewildering complexity of human affairs, in unselfish benevolence. They must, like the rest, have a heaven, and they strain toward the only heaven they can intellectually acknowledge, a world governed only by pure reason, and therefore, as they think, free of poverty, pain, and foolishness alike."

In the East.

News and Notes.

The Secular Society of Dayton, O., is doing good work. It meets every Sunday, and addresses on all subjects are given by local talent and by lecturers from abroad, and these subjects are discussed by those present from every standpoint. I gave a lecture on Sunday morning to a fair audience. More would have been present had there been a longer time to advertise the lecture. Under the circumstances only two or three days' notice could be given. I am sure of a much greater attendance at some future time.

Dayton is a fine city of about seventy-five thousand inhabitants. It is quite a business and manufacturing center. The country about is excellent. The church element apparently is strong, there being about seventy-five religious edifices, in which a great deal of untaxed wealth is consecrated to the glory of the next world. Along with this is a vast amount of Liberal thought, but to a certain extent indifferent.

But there are a few at this post who are enthusiastic for Freethought—Judge Thompson, president of the society, Mr. B. Pickering, Mr. and Mrs. Fealy, Scout Allison, and others, all of whom are able to speak upon the platform, and who represent a cultured and radical element. Scout Allison has been twenty-four years upon the plains in the service of the government, and has seen much of the workings of the ecclesiastical tribe upon the frontier. He has already contributed something of his experiences to the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

On Saturday Judge Thompson kindly accompanied me to the Soldiers' Home, a magnificent institution indeed, so far as outward appearances are concerned. The buildings must have cost nearly $1,000,000. Among them is a splendid church edifice—the upper part for Protestant and the lower part for Catholic worship, Chaplains are also maintained at the expense of government. The whole domain includes six hundred and forty acres—beautiful lands, mostly under cultivation. From the main site there is an extensive view of the city. As you enter the grounds a lovely lake greets the vision, with waterfalls from the encircling banks. A summer garden glows with tropical luxuriance beneath a glassy roof. On a wide eminence towers the flag-staff, with the colors flying. Beneath it ring out the martial strains over the green sward and majestic groves. The barracks, busy with life, with nearly four thousand soldiers in them, the officers' quarters, the machine buildings, the vast dining rooms, the hospital, etc., make a picturesque view. Here the invalid soldier, who has lost his ambition, who desires to do nothing, can have a comfortable home, plenty to eat, and clothes to wear. He can sit all day long and dream and smoke his pipe, and fight his battles over again, and calmly await death. It looks very nice on the outside, a paradise to the casual view. But after all, what is such an existence worth to the mind that desires action? It is much better than the orthodox heaven, I grant, but give me the heretic's hell, the storm and unrest and uncertainty of liberty, to this "nirvana" of the Soldiers' Home, which is as near to the fulfillment of Buddha's philosophy as one can find in this world without actually dying. For my part I had rather be "snuffed out" than to do nothing in this charming retreat. It is a pleasant afternoon stroll through these stately, magnificent scenes; but give me a log cabin and a little potato patch to this splendid idleness.

The effects of "Christian civilization" are seen in the transaction recently at Delaware Wesleyan College—one of the most élite and famous Methodist and Christian institutions in the land. It was a dastardly and brutal action, worthy of the "Dark Continent." Nine members of the sophomore class seized and bound and then branded the faces of five members of the freshman class and disfigured them for life. A more cruel, a more savage, a more infamous act has not been perpetrated in the dens of vice and crime; and yet this was done by religious men in a religious institution. This was done by pious Christian young men; done where the Bible is read and prayers are uttered every day and the "gospel" is preached. Such are the refining influences of Christianity. This illustrates and proves my affirmation that "Religion is a Curse, a Disease, and a Lie." I could not ask for a better confirmation. The people throughout this section are indignant at these atrocities. I quote the following from the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, which shows that this is no exceptional occurrence in this Christian seat of learning:

It now seems a matter of fact to the citizens here that such things are not punished as they should be. It was only a couple of months ago that about one hundred of the students, dressed in their nightshirts, went to the Monnett Hall (the young ladies' seminary) about 12 o'clock and held a ghost dance, howling and yelling and singing unbecoming songs in the presence of the young ladies. This was certainly a most outrageous and indecent performance, but it was suppressed and nothing said, only through the papers. No one was expelled or even suspended, although most of the boys were known and confessed, but they were let stay if they would promise not to do it again, and of course they promised.

Another event was the stealing of the college grade-book. The person who did the deed broke open the door and took the book and kept it a long time and then returned it. The faculty talked of offering a reward, but none was offered. They searched the fraternity halls and made a big fuss, and when the thief was found he just promised not to say anything, and is still in college, as important as anyone.

Another was the stealing of the guns from the college armory. The guns were taken out and hid in the snow. The thieves were found and they promised not to do it again. They are still here.

Another cruel action has just come to light. On Monday night about forty of the girls of Monnett Hall took about five others and proceeded to initiate them in a manner similar to the way the boys carried out their plan. They got the girls down in the basement in the wee hours of the morning, and there they performed their cruel deed. They likewise used nitrate of silver and printed pictures on the victims' arms and breasts, which caused much pain and agony, and will leave scars for life.

The faculty have done nothing in regard to the matter, nor are they likely to, from all reports. It was probably because of this that the boys have grown so bold.

The actions of the young women are most severely criticised by the people and students. It was certainly a disgrace to themselves, the college, and especially to their parents, who are sending them to school to get an education. It is because of these actions and cruel pranks that the citizens are so outspoken and bitter.

I call the attention of the New York Independent to this beautiful effect of "religious culture."

On Sunday afternoon I go to Cincinnati and am greeted with a crowded house at Douglass Hall. Nowhere on my route do I find more enthusiasm than at Cincinnati. The Liberals here know how to do things. They run on the broad-gauge principle. During the winter they have had an exceedingly interesting course of lectures. The audience is a live audience, and after the lecturer is through they discuss the subject presented with vast diversities of opinion. It is a splendid arena of debate. The union has exercised a marked influence in this city. It passed a set of ringing resolutions in opposition to the Russian treaty, and these resolutions were published at length and with approval in the leading dailies. The Union grapples with live questions, and is not afraid to stand boldly for reform. Geo. E. Light is now president; Andrew Hogg, secretary. They have stalwart supporters. John R. Charlesworth will give the closing lecture the last Sunday in May. There will be a big attendance. Such success is encouraging, and the influence of Cincinnati will be felt all over the land.

I reached Chicago on Monday. The weather has been simply awful. Yesterday (Thursday) it cleared off, and I took a look at the World's Fair. It seems impossible to get it ready for exhibition under a month. All is confusion, but they are pushing things vigorously. The Sunday question is not yet settled. They are fighting over it among the commissioners. It will be a bone of contention all through the Fair. It doesn't seem possible that bigotry can triumph in this case. At the present moment the chances are about even that it will be open. Those who are in favor of Sunday opening are growing more indignant every day and the number is increasing. A more determined effort than ever will be made for fair play. Yesterday the matter was referred to the judiciary committee.

I hereby announce that the Freethought International Congress will be held in the month of September next. The place and date of meeting will be hereafter published. All delegates and members of Freethought societies throughout the world are invited to be present. They will be entitled to seats and votes in the Congress. The Freethought Federation of America will arrange for the Congress, and a cordial welcome is extended to its allies.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Chicago, Ill., Apr. 28, 1893.

To My Liberal Friends.

I propose to publish a pamphlet, the last part of which appears in THE TRUTH SEEKER this week, entitled, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I consider that we are drifting into a most dangerous religious tyranny and war. It is not simply church and theology that we must oppose, but it is religion at the root of these, which is what I have defined it to be. We must understand religion, and for the safety of the race we must destroy religion. I want this book to be widely read. It is important. Religion as the foe of humanity is not sufficiently understood. We do not realize its terrific nature. I have written this book because I feel the necessity of speaking the plain truth. I challenge contradiction of my statements. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for this book. Circulate it. Price, 25 cents per copy.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The World's Fair From a Freethinker's Standpoint.

Next week we shall begin the publication of a series of letters which will be of great interest and beauty. Samuel P. Putnam will write them from Chicago, and they will be about the World's great Fair. Mr. Putnam's description—as everyone who knows him knows—will not be the commonplace matter of the geniusless boiler-plate correspondent, but the impressions made upon a cosmopolitan poet by the aggregation of samples of the world's progress in mechanics, art, literature, knowledge. The letters will undoubtedly be big and broad, wide and deep—a picture and a panorama, a history of human advance from "that man in the dug-out" to the racial subjugation of the forces of nature—so far as these forces are subdued. The letters will be essentially a Freethinker's view of the Fair, what it shows, and what it foreshadows, and we venture to say that among the hundreds of correspondents at the Fair, and the thousands of letters to be written by them, there will be none like the writer of the Freethought views and his descriptions. Readers of his "News and Notes" will agree with us in this estimate, we know.

We shall be obliged to our friends if they will call the attention of their friends to this announcement and suggest to them that a six months' subscription will insure them the receipt of these letters, which will alone be worth many times the cost of the paper.

Communications.

Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie.—(Concluded.)

DEDICATED TO THE AMERICAN CONGRESS WHICH FOR THE SAKE OF RELIGION HAS STABBED LIBERTY TO THE HEART.

Religion is not satisfied with what Spiritualism can scientifically give—continued existence. It desires endless existence, absolute immortality; such is its spiritual greed and colossal egotism. Tell the religious man that he will live ten million years in heaven and play on a golden harp and wear a crown and be happy, but that at the end of that immense period he will sink into nothingness; why, the religious man will be perfectly miserable. He will say all is vanity and vexation of spirit. Only ten million years. That won't do. I must have eternity. That is the everlasting cry of the supremely egoistic man, the cry of religion.

I want it understood that between religion and common-sense Spiritualism there is no identity in any way.

It will thus be seen how radically identical are the dogmas of God and Immortality. Without God there is no Immortality, and without Immortality there is no God. God needs Immortality to save his reputation, and Immortality needs God as its only possible guarantee, for only an infinite God can make endless existence certain to a finite being.

These are twin lies born of religion, born of a disease. They are not the beautiful gifts of science, the radiance of health, but the huge symptoms of an abnormal desire—the imagery of "life's fitful fever." But worse still, religion has not only made these lies professedly for the sake of human happiness, but out of these lies it has created the monster Fear. Religion has made cowards of mankind. It has made multitudes bend the knee in superstitious terror. It has made them slaves of king and priest. Of all the curses of which religion is the source, the greatest of all is this curse of fear, out of which comes the cowardice and hypocrisy of the world. Who does not hate the hypocrite? and yet the hypocrite is the direct offspring of religion. Who does not condemn the coward? and yet religion is the mother of cowardice. If those who are really religious by temperament and nature were simply satisfied with being religious and would let the rest of mankind—the large majority of mankind—abide in non-religious, every-day, comfortable well-being, I would not take time to attack it. But such is the nature of religion that it imperiously draws the sword, and would compel all the world to be religious likewise—in outward form at least, if not in real sentiment. But not satisfied with the sword, with the dungeon, with the fagot, with the thumbscrew, with all the cunning appliances for bodily torture, with devilish and supreme ingenuity religion has endeavored to torture with spiritual agonies, and it has terrifically succeeded. The bodily torture of man sinks into insignificance almost when compared with the mental torture, the awful fear, which religion has inflicted, in order that its own power may be unassailable. It has invented God and immortality, worse than a million thumbscrews, more hideous than the dungeon-house, more dreadful than a flaming sword. This God, the God of love, of justice—so called—this God, according to religion, is a God of wrath, a terrible war-God, a destroyer, a devil and a fiend beyond words to picture. He creates a heaven in the midst of infinite despair. He plunges the vast majority of the human race into eternal hell; he separates parent and child, brother and sister, wife and husband, and compels the one to sing praises for the damnation of the other. He makes the universe a tremendous prison-house. He makes man a slave, a machine, chained to a miserable doom whether he is lost or saved. For what is salvation but the picture of an eternal hell from whence we have barely escaped—"a brand plucked from the burning?" Thus God, who should be infinite justice and infinite love, is transformed to infinite hate and infinite wrong, and immortality that might be a beautiful dream becomes an endless horror, a stupendous scene of cruelty, of malignity, of crime; and so fear, the vilest, the most debasing, the most bitter fruit of religion, is born in the human heart, and this fair earth itself becomes a dim vast vale of tears. Death is the king of terrors, instead of a sweet rest in nature's bosom. Life is a torment, for duty loses its tenderness and becomes a barren path—merely obedience to a tyrant's will. Virtue is stripped of its bloom and beauty and becomes a slavish struggle for the salvation of the "soul"—the "soul," a lie born also of the nightmare of religion. For there is no "soul" any more than there is a God. Who can measure the damnable nature of religion in thus making eternity itself the instrument of its unutterable agonies?

I do not deny immortality—I do not know. But if you believe in immortality; believe in that which is beautiful and glorious; believe in eternal hope and eternal progress; believe in that which is the bloom and blossom of all that is best and noblest here; believe in the triumph of sweet human virtues and tender human loves; in the triumph of liberty, of justice, of nobility, of generosity; believe in that which will give consolation amidst the struggles and disappointments of this life; believe in beauty, goodness, truth unending—believe in these things if you will, but do not believe in the hell and heaven, the God and devil, of religion. If you must, out of human weakness, fling a picture beyond the grave, let it be a picture entrancing with all the shining qualities that make this life itself so splendid. Let it give you courage to be more manly, more upright; to have a heart for any fate; but do not accept an cringing terror, with a slave's mind, with craven spirit, the heaven that religion promises—a heaven not fit for a civilized human being—fit only for a savage. A heaven which floats on the bosom of hell, is supported by hell, is really only the supplement of hell, and without hell would cease to be.

The God of heaven, the God of religion—what a colossal pauper he is! Did you ever think of it? What a beggar God is, and only a beggar—begging even the widow's mite; yea, and taking the widow's mite without compunction. Look at the army of beggars, all over the world, begging for the king of kings. An innumerable army. Tramp, tramp, tramp—no end to the procession. There's the mitred pope—a beggar always. There's the bishop, the archbishop, the cardinal, the priest—all beggars. There's a hundred thousand clergymen beggars, all begging for God. Churches, altars, incense, music, painted windows—all are for the purpose of begging, begging for this great pauper of the skies. And what has he done for man—this beggar on a throne? Nothing. He has not given mankind one fact, one ray of light, one invention, one discovery. He has not healed one ill of human life. He has never stopped a crime or punished a crime. He has never made one blade of grass to grow, or one rose to bloom. He has never soothed one fevered brow. He has never saved from disease, from conflagration, from the storm and battle. He has never furnished food, shelter, or clothing to starving, naked, and perishing millions. He has done nothing, this tinsel monarch of the skies, and yet he begs continually. He is reduced to such extremities that he can put only one oyster in his church soup; he must even sell the kisses of fair maidens. He must resort to the grab-bag, and raffle, and ice-cream (mostly starch). He must even gamble—this pauper God. Oh, the humbug of religion and the humbug of God, when he does nothing but beg, and gives nothing in return for the millions that are poured into his templed coffers!

Have I not proved my proposition that religion is a curse, a disease, and a lie—everyway evil and evil only? In its very essence it is wrong, and can only result in wrong. History will affirm all that I have declared, and to-day we have an exhibition of the cruel nature of religion—that it is utterly incapable of being civilized and must be abolished altogether.

I dedicate this essay to Congress out of the indignation of my heart. I should never have written it but for the most disgraceful act of the century.

The American Congress has bowed down in absolute surrender to this curse, this disease, and this lie, and closed the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday.

In all the history of man there was never a more cowardly, contemptible, and degrading act.

It is pitiful to see the poor savage bow down to his fetish, his little wooden god, his snake, or cat, or calf; but how infinitely more pitiful it is amidst the intellectual glories of to-day to see the representatives of a great people bow down to this monster curse, disease, and lie—stab liberty to the heart, and perpetrate an infamous crime. The only consolation is that like Mokanna religion has shown its hideous face, and from this time forth its worshippers will diminish by the million.

The working-people of this country now know that religion is their foe and not their friend. The mask is thrown off. The despot is revealed, the enemy of liberty and progress.

Behold the picture—the beautiful World's Fair. None of us will ever see its like again. It is an incarnate dream of beauty. It is a poem in manifold color and form. It is the grace of all the world, the flower of every land. It is man's masterpiece irradiating his long and toilsome struggle. It is the bloom of mighty centuries out of darkness, conflict, and undying hope. Behold its gorgeous panorama, its superb buildings, its shining domes, its spacious roofs, its walls and towers that fling back the effulgence of the sun amidst nature's sweetest scenes of grass and flowers and water. Oh, what loveliness for man to enjoy. What a blessing on his arduous path. What an ennoblement to his toil. What a reward for his countless labors on sea and land—art is there which has drunk in the glory of the stars—art which has watched the misty mountain-top, the sounding cataract, the gleaming seas, the budding rose, the spraying fount, the forest's green. Art which has studied the deep heart of man, and mirrored in lustrous forms and tender face, in colors sweet and varied, in melodies sublime, the treasures it has found. Science is there radiant with a thousand victories, bringing from East and West and North and South its unnumbered trophies. Industry is there, with its great arms, swinging in song, whirling in music, rejoicing in splendor, giving gifts to all. This is the World's Fair, the ideal city of man's brightest civilization, where beauty reigns, where delight smiles on every path and each scene is an enchantment. What a place for the weary and the worn, the suffering and the disappointed; not for those who ride in carriages but for those who walk the humble paths of toil.

Behold the picture over against this embodied glory of man's genius. See the dark and smoky workshop, the grimy face, the drops of sweat, the toiling arm, the dusty feet. See the lurid flames, the hissing iron, the huge machinery. Day after day it is the same, smoke and darkness, toil and dust, and sometimes death itself. Look into the homes of these million workers. See them crowded together in the gloomy tenement, no flowers, no sunshine, no blue sky, no refreshing rest. See the pale mother, bent and worn. See the emaciated child. See the fever and disease, the want, the hunger of body and of mind. See the bare table, the unfurnished wall, the miserable couch. See the cobwebbed window through which only desolation peers. See despair in a thousand faces. See the weary limb, the lack-luster eye, the drawn lip, the listless hand. See birth and death in mingling horror. This is the world of poverty; and labor, which makes magnificent the face of earth, is doomed much of it to find its reward in this dreary prison-house.

Behold these contrasting pictures, the World's Fair, and the world of labor and of poverty, and so close, that the one is ready to give all its treasures for the consolation and joy of the other. These hard, sad scenes of poverty and toil can be made beautiful with the glory and the enlightenment of man's greatest achievements. What a blessing, what a wonder, and what a hope for the terrible martyrdom of millions.

But, behold, between these two worlds, the world of art, of science, of music, of delight, and the world of suffering and darkness, stalks this cruel monster, this curse, this disease, this lie—Religion—and holding the sword in one hand bolts and bars the gates of this paradise with the other, and thrusts back into vice, into ignorance, into misery, into despair, the multitudes whose weary toils have made possible this magnificence of to-day. This treasure which has been pressed from their life-blood is shut from their eyes, their hearts, their hope. They must labor in sweat and pain, they must go to their unlovely homes, they and wife and little ones pining for light and air, for some sweet glimpse of higher things, for the inspiration and joy of man's vast and splendid career, they must be cabined, cribbed, confined. Upon their dark lot presses religion's iron rule, and makes it more miserable than ever. Between them and the beautiful world which ought to be their inheritance, at least one day in the week, is this curse of the ages more detestable than Milton's picture of Death itself.

Talk of civilizing religion; it cannot be done. You may paint it and veneer it and ornament it. You may mingle it with philosophy and poetry and art. Amid the softening influences of progress one may forget its "scarlet thread," its path of blood; but its nature is always the same. It can not be made of any service to man.

What will we do without religion? is the cry. Can the world survive its loss? Yes, it can survive the loss of religion as it can survive the loss of the cholera, the smallpox, and the itch.

What will we have in the place of it? Morality and Science. What better can we have?

Morality without religion will be more perfect and beautiful than ever—plain simple morality—regard for one another's rights, regard for one another's happiness, universal liberty, universal justice, every-day morality, not heights and depths, not heaven and hell, but "on the square." That is the whole of it. Integrity, truthfulness, generosity, manliness, courage, temperance, what better can be found in all the ecstasies of religion? Don't trouble yourself with the "infinite" and "absolute," with the "general" and "the universal" or any "supreme being," but simply do your duty to the individuals with whom you come in contact. Morality is between individuals, not between ideas, nor between individuals and an idea, but between individuals and individuals. Morality cannot transcend the particular. Do the duty that lies next to you. That is all. Do not create out of your heated fancy any false relations between you and God. No such relations exist. We owe nothing to God, and apparently he owes nothing to us. If he does he has never paid it. It is for him to settle with us, not for us to settle with him. When he makes himself manifest as an individual along the pathway of our daily life, then, and not till then, will we consider his claims.

We can understand our human relations. They are finite and comprehensible. It only confuses us to import the God-idea. It makes darkness instead of light. To import God into morality is like importing God into mathematics. God would be an impertinence in mathematics. He is equally an impertinence in morality. Think of a mathematician trying to solve a problem by the aid of God. A triangle has certain relations with all other forms, but what "God-relation" has it? And he would be a crazy mathematician who would invent a "God-relation" for the triangle. What nonsense it would be to talk about the "attitude" of a triangle toward the "infinite." There is no such thing. It is equally nonsensical to talk about man's "attitude" toward the "infinite." There is no such thing. The relations of man are numberless. We may not be able to discover them all, but every relation of man is a finite relation, as every relation of a triangle must be a finite relation.

The God-idea is not only useless, it is injurious. It is demoralizing. It obscures reality. It gives us false conceptions of ourselves and of others. It is a mirage. Leave out God and study humanity. Know thyself, is the grandest wisdom; and to know thyself it is necessary to know others and to recognize always the relations which exist between us and others, and out of these relations to behold the perfect bloom of ethical beauty. Morality is the continuous expression of equality and fraternity.

Morality requires no temples, no altars, no ritual, no churches, no popes, no priests, no Bibles, no gods, no prayers, and no sermons. It requires no vast expenditures, no processions, no swelling music, no Auto da fe, no Inquisition, no torture, and no fire. It does not beg, it does not rob, it does not murder. It demands no sword, no miter, no crucifix, no pealing bell, no gorgeous pew, no collection-box, and no missionary fund. It demands only the common earth and skies, the fireside, the home circle, the genial neighborhood. It demands only the ordinary highway, the handshake and the good morning, work and happy play, the evening's gentle rest, the voice of little children, and the common sense of all. How happy the world will be when morality prevails, when no rights are invaded, when the inevitable ills of life are met with mutual sympathy; when self-respect is the universal grace, ennobling each and all—the humblest with the greatest. Religion has blackened the world; morality will give it golden days.

And Science—what grandeur is revealed in that noble world. Science the victorious foe of religion and the glory of the human race. Science the enlightener, the guide, the minister of ten thousand gifts. In science alone is the true self-sacrifice, the real surrender, the absolute abandonment to truth itself, regardless of all consequence, all fortune, all good and ill. Religion labors for the subjective, thinks only of the subjective, is devoted only to the subjective, to that within, the ego, the self, higher or lower, as you may call it, but self still, and not truth, not reality, except by mere chance.

Science labors for the objective, for that which is without, for simple truth, for reality, for facts. It surrenders to facts, to every fact, be it ugly or beautiful. The man of science does not seek personal happiness, he is not searching after facts that will please him. He is not endeavoring to gratify some ideal. He sacrifices that which is most alluring to his subjective being, in order to find a fact. The fact he accepts, although it overthrows his most cherished dreams. What nobleness of devotion. It is easy enough to give up houses and lands for the sake of truth, but to give up some inward glory, some dear fancy, some charming hope, some exalted splendor woven of poetry and music and delight, to give up a supreme joy, that which might soften and glorify death itself, to absolutely, without reserve, surrender this for the sake of truth, the objective truth, this is indeed the sublime self-sacrifice of man—impossible to religion; but it is the natural spirit of science, for no one indeed can be a man of science when he allows the least personal inclination to bias his judgment.

It will thus be seen that science and religion are diametrically opposed. It is impossible to harmonize them. The one is the very essence of selfishness; the other is the very essence of unselfishness. The one is subjective, the other objective; the one is pure egoism, the other is pure altruism; the one runs to a disease and a lie; the other is abounding health and magnificent truth.

How beautiful is the way of science through all the world's history. How gentle, how patient, how brave, how charitable in the true sense, it has ever been. How ready to help; how eager to do and to dare. It is afraid of nothing, of no dark depths or rugged heights, of no desert or wild beast, poisonous insect or serpent's fang. It shrinks from no efforts. It shirks no task. It dares suffering, persecution, martyrdom, and death. It has been imprisoned, and through the prison bars hath read the lofty heavens, and revealed their glory. It hath been chained and yet it has filled the world with light. See the million happy homes it hath made; all the jeweled harvest-fields that shine beneath its footstep. Behold its pathway over the seas, the white sail, the glittering column, along a thousand leagues of beaming waters. See it meet the storm with spirit undismayed. See it grasp the lightnings and these fiery couriers bear our message with the soft pulse of an infant through the vast chambers of the deep; see it conquer the invisible world and heaven's swift breath carries our speech afar. See the iron horse, more brilliant than the chariots of old, make the peasant's journey more victorious than that of a king; hear the click, the gentle click, of that curious machine which has done more to emancipate woman than a million prayers or ten thousand billion sermons under the auspices of St. Paul; hear the music of the hammer and the anvil, watch the breath of the mighty furnace, look upon the molten streams of red-hot iron, see the glorious shapes arise more beneficent than any archangel; behold the million spindles while delicate and superb robes appear to clothe man's nakedness, far surpassing the fig-leaves of Jehovah's Eden; handle the polished instruments that conquer disease and stay death, more radiant than the golden harps; see nature's wildest haunts and earth's profoundest caverns contributing their riches to man's enjoyment, and see the rolling stars, planets and suns, innumerable systems, orbs that perhaps perished millions of years ago and yet blaze upon our vision to-night. Ah, what might we not behold if we could analyze those brilliant waves of light, and read the message from those enormous and distant realms. In these constellated spaces science has unfolded a fairy world indeed, even as in the tiny film and grain of sand other worlds equally beautiful, as measureless to the glance, she unrolls in spacious scenes.

I would say, let Science reign, but Science does not want to reign. She desires no sword and no crown. Evermore she is the servant of humanity. Patiently she labors, scorning nothing, fearing nothing, hating nothing, and loving the truth.

What shall we put in the place of religion, the curse, the disease, and the lie?

I have answered it, and may the working-people of this republic whose rights have been so basely invaded, understand henceforth the true benefactor of this world.

S. P. PUTNAM.

From Spain.

[The scandalous conduct of the priest-ridden Spanish government, as exhibited in its treatment of the international Freethought congress at Madrid last year, has no doubt made many of our readers ask whether Africa really was bounded on the north by the Pyrenees mountains. As an answer to this question we present the following article by the well-known German-American Freethinker, Mrs. Hedwig Henrich-Wilhelmi, originally contributed to Correspondenzblatt des Deutschen Freidenker-Bundes. Mrs. Henrich-Wilhelmi has visited Spain on various occasions and hence is a competent judge of Spanish affairs.—G. NELSON, TRANSLATOR.]

"Separation of church and state" is so prominent a cry of our times that no matter how often suppressed it is heard anew; but perhaps louder and more frequently in Spain—the land where the prosperity-destroying influence of the double-headed hydra state-and-church power, the concordat and Inquisition, is felt more than in any other civilized country. A quarter of a century has not passed since Spain—thanks to the short period of the republic (1869-1871)—proclaimed absolute liberty of conscience, a privilege which since the return of the Bourbons to the throne exists as "religious toleration" only. Still, no matter what we do call it, in the minute a country permits different religious cults to be practiced publicly within its borders, in that minute the state religion has ceased to exist as such and has become a mere object of individual belief. What is left as a connecting link between the church and the state is but the instinct of power, of absolutism, which for thousands of years has existed in them and become an actual fossil. Yet the union is no more and the present conditions are not calculated to satisfy either party. The church, which has been used to rule over kings and nations, cannot possibly enjoy its present subservience to the laws of the state, nor can the state feel pleased by having to pay the salaries of rebellious servants out of its own purse.

But, as usual, the principal sufferer under this unnatural union is the people. In the name of religion the state directs the spiritual welfare of the people in school and home, and in the name of the state the clergy extorts its enormous income from the people, and this in a twofold way—first, indirectly as a salary drawn from the amount of state taxes laid upon the people, secondly, directly as fees paid by the believing sheep.

All other state officials must as equivalent for their salaries render their official services free to their fellow-citizens, but not so with the church. From the mere fact of her existence she is entitled to the pecuniary recognition of the state, yet, at the same time, for any service rendered to the people, no matter whether that service is included in her "office" or not, she demands extra pay.

Only a short time ago it was obligatory upon all to be baptized, confirmed, married, and buried with clerical assistance, and even yet in many places people are obliged to subject themselves and their children to these church ceremonies, if they do not wish to be denied their rights as citizens and ruin their private business. For every child baptized, for every parent blessed, the church demands cash or its equivalents. She gives no Lord's supper, no death sacrament, she goes to no funeral, says no mass for the dead, except for pay. The begging-purse is always a-going. Every birth, marriage, or death certificate—which is demanded by the state—costs the poor a heavy tribute to the church. So far, all right, inasmuch as the clergy are but workers in the Lord's vineyard, and hence live on those who partake in the fruits of their labor; besides, the clerics must live, and any workman is worth his hire. But if it is all right that the priest exact a contribution from each believer, why is he paid by the state also?

This question is raised every year in the Spanish Cortes, when the debate on the miserable financial status and the necessary cutting down of government expenses begins. The Spanish government treasury is yearly called upon to pay to army and navy 140,000,000 pesetas (a peseta is about twenty cents); to the clergy, 42,000,000; to education, 9,000,000; while in England the educational budget is 150,000,000, in France 178,000,000, and in the United States 140,000,000 pesetas. Need we wonder then that the last Spanish census (1887) gives but thirty three per cent of the people as being able to read and write?

In this priest-ridden land the condition of schools and prisons is almost beyond belief. With the exception of universities, academies, and seminaries, there is a total lack of school buildings. Even in Madrid, the capital, the schoolchildren are packed into small, cheap buildings, that do not come near the standard demanded by hygiene or pedagogy.

For prisons there is a yearly sum of 25,000 pesetas set aside; while for the erection of a new, and even from a religious standpoint entirely superfluous, cathedral at Madrid, 100,000 pesetas were given; besides, 500,000 pesetas were appropriated for repairs of different churches, bishops' palaces, and parsonages.

It is a well-known fact that Spain is always on the verge of national bankruptcy. The government is always in arrears in the salaries of its minor officers, who, like the common laborers, receive but miserable pay. There are officials who receive but $10 in monthly salary, and yet even these the government owes half a year's pay. The court physicians—a corporation called into existence under the most splendid auspices about thirty years ago—have waited for twenty-eight years for their pay. Public benevolent institutions, such as hospitals, poorhouses, and orphan and lunacy asylums, receive hardly sufficient help to enable them to exist; in the hospitals there are frequently food and medicine famins lasting for several days. But the countless bishops and archbishops receive a yearly salary ranging from 20,000 to 45,000 pesetas, and they are paid regularly, for the magnates of the church do not give the state long credit.

Spain has but few railroads and good roads. In 1885 it had but 35,000 kilometers (one kilometer is 11,000 inches) of roads, while France had in 1879 952,000 kilometers. Spain has 9,000 kilometers of railroad; France, 33,000 kilometers. But as an offset Spain has since 1841, when the buying of church property began, paid to the clergy in salaries the enormous sum of 2,000,000,000 pesetas.

According to a concordat concluded under the reign of Queen Isabella II. (she upon whom was conferred, as pay, the papal order of "the Rose of Virtue") no other religion than the Roman Catholic is to be tolerated in Spain, nor anything taught in the schools which is contrary to the dogmas of the Catholic church, nor any book offered for sale which is not deemed good by the clergy. Yet in spite of the concordat the Spanish constitution guarantees absolute liberty of conscience, the University professors have full liberty to teach what they please, and the press is not subjected to the pleasure of a priestly censor. Just as the state has liberated itself from the moral control of the concordat, could it not also liberate itself from the enormous material duties toward the clergy?—and this through one radical measure which would make all Roman concordats nil, and which ought to be strongly recommended to non-Catholic countries also, namely, through an absolute separation of church and state, such as is found at the present time in the United States, Brazil, Mexico, and most of the English colonies? [A separation such as is found in the United States is hardly to be recommended. All Freethinkers know why.—Translator.]

Religious corporations have the same rights to enjoy, but also the same duties to perform, as any secular corporation. The clergy is to be supported by those who demand its service, and not from the state treasury nor from taxes laid on those who do not feel either a real or an imaginary need for having their "spiritual welfare" attended to.

HEDWIG HENRICH-WILHELM.

The Sabbath and Liquor-Drinking at San Antonio, Tex.

The expected, the long-foreseen by the thoughtful, has come to pass.

Sam Jones, that mountebank and slang preacher, was here last fall, and spread his gospel (?) to the tune of $2,000 for one week. Now we have, as a direct result cropping out in this most beautiful city by the "historic Alamo," a set of fanatical hypocrites who want to make it their business, by means of sneaking and "ways that are dark," to enforce the Sunday law!

As our city is of such a cosmopolitan character it would be hard to make the plea from the standpoint of religion, hence these narrow-minded pietists hide their bigotry behind an obnoxious law.

Late trials of officers in New Orleans, La., for non-enforcement of Sunday law resulted in their acquittal, with the final decision of the supreme court that "if the law could not be enforced it should be considered a dead letter."

Some weeks ago a mass-meeting was called to meet at the Grand Opera House for taking preliminary measures in the proposed enforcement, but a guard at the door asked every comer: "Are you in favor of the enforcement?" An answer in the affirmative would be the pass for admission to the "mass meeting." Since, there was a committee of twenty-five, which had dwindled down to five at a later conclave, General (?) Fleming presiding. The embonpoint of this presiding genius entitles him to the position in prayer-meeting, where a long-drawn and pious countenance of the "I thank thee, Lord, that I am not like the other sinners or these publicans" style is in order. It would cover pages of only stale stuff to relate all the trickery resorted to, the long-winded prayers, "The Lord is with us," etc. But taking the Bible as the inspiration from God to man, we find such an incongruity of sentiment in that book from Genesis to Revelation as would make Moses or that dreamer on the isle of Patmos blush in shame if they could see the construction put upon the nonsense accredited to them by these latter-day fanatics. Brother Fleming is requested to kindly study his Bible, and for a guidance to truth he is respectfully requested to note a few quotations from his "guide to salvation."

Gen. xlix, 11, 12: Jacob blessing Judah: "Binding his foal unto the vine and his ass's colt unto the choice vine; he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes. His eyes shall be red with wine and his teeth white with milk."

Deut. vii, 13: God, through Moses, said to his chosen people: "And he will love thee and bless thee and multiply thee; and he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine," etc.

Now, Brother Fleming, as a good attorney, please color this from your God's law to your own case!

Deut. xi, 14: "That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season that thou mayest gather in thy wine, corn, and oil."

Deut. xiv, 26: "And thou shalt bestow that money . . . or for wine, or for strong drink," etc., etc.

This is the desired text-book of Brother Fleming, et al, for the children, to educate them in temperance and moral principles!

Deut. xv, 14: "Thou shalt furnish him liberally . . . and out of thy wine-press."

Deut. xxviii, 39, 51, tells the chosen people that their wine and oil shall be taken from them if they disobey God's commands. This Deuteronomy recommends itself to the Christian temperance unions. It was certainly written by an advocate of the flowing bowl, whoever the "inspirator" may have been.

Judges ix, 13: "And the vine said unto them, Should I leave my wine, which cheereth God and man?" etc.

Thus, God, the "original Prohibitionist," drinks wine, else how could it cheer him?

2 Sam. vi, 19: "And he dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to women as men, to every one a cake of bread and a good piece of flesh and a flagon of wine."

It is hard to tell what Lozier and Foster, of Iowa, or our Brothers Fleming or McClure, would have done had they been present when "David the man after God's own heart" dealt it out to all men and women.

2 Sam. xvi, 2: "And wine that such as faint in the wilderness may drink."

This application has been good in practical effects in Kansas and Iowa, when "fainting in the wilderness" has been the common occurrence, to judge from the thriving business of the drugstores in those states, for this was the Lord's prescription.

2 Chron. ii, 10: "And behold I will give to thy servants . . . twenty thousand baths of wine," etc.

This was one-fourth of payment to the artisans, subjects of the king of Tyre, which Solomon, that "wisest of all men," agreed to pay them for the building of the house of God. It may have been specially blessed by the Lord and rendered non-intoxicating, otherwise it might have been, in the words of "Brother St. John," "payment in liquid damnation."

Now, unless God made a mistake when he called Solomon the wisest of all men (this temple was for that same God) it is but fair to conclude that God regarded wine as a legal tender, thus sanctifying its use.

Neh. v, 11: "Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money and the corn, the wine and the oil, that ye exact of them."

Neh. x, 39: "For the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, . . . and we will not forsake the house of our God."

Wine was an acceptable gift whether old or new, or whether tendered as a holy offering or for anything else.

Psalms civ, 15: "And wine that maketh glad the heart of man," etc. If the pious brethren of San Antonio will read the connecting lines to this quotation they may get angry at the Lord because they could not apply the law to him.

Prov. iii, 10: "So shall thy barns be filled with plenty and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."

Prov. xxxi, 6, 7: "Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy heart; let him drink and forget his poverty and remember his misery no more."

Here are two verses in a book, the inspired work of, or written by, a wine-loving God, which in themselves have led thousands to drinking; and this statement is only a very mild one in comparison with the facts in the case.

Eccles. ix, 7: "Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works."

Song of Solomon i, 2: "Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth; for thy love is better than wine."

This shows that next to love wine is the best thing on earth. This is the opinion of most bacchanalian experts. Solomon seems to have spoken from experience.

Song of Solomon v, 1: "I have drunk my wine with my milk; eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O believers."

Solomon must have been the inventor of milk punch.

Song of Solomon viii, 2: "I would cause thee to drink of spiced wine, of the juice of my pomegranate." Is this metaphor?

Isa. i, 22: "Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water."

Isa. xxiv, 7: "The new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merry-hearted do sigh."

God punished his chosen people by cutting off their vintage, and if God regards the loss of wine as a deprivation it must be good to have and to keep, notwithstanding the opinions of Brothers Fleming and McClure and the other saints (?). Verse 9: They shall not drink wine with a song, etc. God punished them by taking away their wine on the same principle that the old Calvinistic doctrine teaches predestination—no matter how good a man be if he has been predestined to be destroyed for inherent evil in childhood, then why try to be good?

Isa. lv, 1: "Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."

Isa. lxii, 8: "The Lord hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, . . . And the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for which thou hast labored."

Revs. Dow, Stevenson, our own brothers Fleming, McClure, etc., might suggest to the Lord that: as wine is an evil thing and the Bible a great text-book of morals, the great stronghold of temperance, and so essential to the training of children; therefore, the Lord should have said that the enemies of his people should take the wine from them, as the depriving of such would make them better and happier. But on the contrary he ranks wine with corn and swears an oath that the people shall have them both.

Jer. xxxi, 12: "Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil," etc.

Jer. xl, 10: "But ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits and oil," etc.

Jer. xlviii, 33: "And joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field and from the land of Moab and I have caused wine to fail from the wine-presses."

Dan. i, 5: "And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat and of the wine which he drank, so nourishing them three years," etc.

God plainly implies here that wine is nourishing! The only argument that Brother Fleming, et al, and the Christian Temperance people in addition, may offer about these lessons, so opposite to their modern teachings, is, "They were not written under inspiration;" or have the pious brethren any other shallow, empty excuses for repudiation of this text?

Hosea ix, 2: "The flour and the wine-press shall not feed them, and the new wine shall fail in her."

This is given as a punishment for transgressions of the law.

Hosea xiv, 7: "They shall revive as the corn and grow as the wine; the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon."

There could not have been much dislike against the wine if even the aroma of it was pleasing to the Lord.

Joel i, 5-13: Speaking of the plagues in the way of worms, locusts, etc., the meat and drink offerings are cut off from the house of the Lord, and thus the prophet says: "Gird yourselves and lament, ye priests, howl ye ministers of the altar."

Will our fanatic revolutionists criticize these into temperance admonitions?

Joel iii, 18: "And it shall come to pass in that day that the mountains shall drop down new wine and the hills shall flow with milk," etc.

Here, again, great blessings are offered to be given in the form of "an abundance" of wine. All Hebrew prophets looked with favor upon wine and wine-drinking, and the punishment meted out was the one of cutting off the wine and it may possibly be the wish of Brother Fleming, McClure, et al, to visit wholesale destruction upon the vineyards and barley fields and upbraid the Lord for his mistake in creating them.

Amos ix, 14: " . . . They shall drink wine."

Micah vi, 15, gives as punishment the withdrawing of the wine and oil, etc.

What incongruity when the God of the Bible disapproves of the use of intoxicants while at the same time he is telling his chosen people that he will punish them for disobedience by destroying their corn, their wine, etc.

Zech. ix, 17: "For how great is his goodness and how great is his beauty; corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids."

Rather a singular apportionment of his bounty, unless corn means something stronger than wine.

Matt. xi, 19: "The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, a friend to publicans and sinners. But wisdom is justified of her children."

The very opposit of this argument comes in Luke vii, 33-35: "John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say he hath a devil," etc.

Fine contrasts, these! What do they teach? The determination for every man to think and act for himself is the fundamental idea of the great Nazarene. He was no extremist for or against such total abstinence or temperance as our brethren of to-day would have us think.

In Luke x, 34, we find that the good Samaritan had a supply of wine for the wounded stranger.

John ii, 3-11: "And when they wanted wine," etc. This is the great miracle at the wedding feast of Cana and it was the "first" miracle which he performed, and was considered as proof of his divinity by his disciples. He did this to manifest his glory, his supernatural powers and origin; either this is true or the Bible false. True or not, it has been the most powerful argument against abstinence; it has resulted directly in making drunkards, as well as indirectly in making hypocrites and Jesuitical sophists.

Col. ii, 16: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days."

In other words, be your own judges in all these matters; submit to no dictation; be just and consistent to yourself. Wonder how the salvation and Bible Prohibitionists will put their misconstruction on this quotation?

1 Tim. v, 23: "Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities."

These few words in the Bible have led to the consumption of more wine and caused more intemperance than any other equal number of words in any language in any book.

E. C. Walker, in "Bible Temperance," says in connection with this: "We find that the Bible pleads for temperance are outvoted more than five to one by those in favor of the use of intoxicants. The record is an astonishingly bad one for the Bible as a total abstinence and prohibition work, and should put to the blush all of its worshipers and apologists who have been so foolish or unscrupulous as to claim that it is indispensable to the temperance cause and in the education of our children. Both claims are absurd."

Thus much for the use of wine and drink, now a few words regarding "the Sunday." There is no authority whatsoever as to the observation of Sunday. Jesus never taught it, but on the contrary repudiated the Sabbath and never said a word about a new day of ceremonies and worship.

"One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike, let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."

By the edict of Constantine, A.D. 321, the "Dies Soli" (Day of the Sun), was made the legal day for worship for the "sects of Christians," to which Constantine had been converted after one of his campaigns of extermination against these same Christians. He had won a victory, and all his Christian prisoners were tied to stakes and coated with combustible materials, and fired to shine as torches at some of the nightly revels. Then at the end of these he got delirious, or to use a modern term, "snakes," and had that grand raving vision, with "In hoc signo vinces," which has been so pliantly constructed into a glorification and sanctification of that murderer by the church.

Immediately in connection may be cited a part of this edict (see "Code Justinian," lib. 3, title 12, Sec. 2 and 3). This is the first legal edict regulating the Sabbath. It says:

"Let all the judges and town people, and the occupation of all trades, rest on the venerable Day of the Sun; but let those who are situated in the country freely and at full liberty attend to their business, for it often happens that no other day is so fit for sowing corn or planting vines," etc.

Dr. Schaff, in his "History of the Christian Church," makes pertinent distinction between "Dies Domini" and "Dies Soli—that is, 'the Lord's day' and 'Day of the sun.'" They were the days appointed by a heathen tyrant, to Apollo (Phœbus), an imaginary deity.

San Antonio, Tex.

Please renew your subscription and obtain another subscriber.

Liberal Societies.

The Newark Liberal League gave Mr. Reuben Rush last Sunday a hearty welcome on his first appearance before that society. His lecture was in the main identical with his address before the Manhattan. The critics were Mr. Bird, Mr. Rush, Mrs. Smith, Mr. Walker, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Brill.

Mr. S. H. Wilder in his lecture last Sunday before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association tried to show that the discoveries of science only go to show how true religion is. The lecturer picked Mr. Tyndall's Belfast address to pieces, and showed, to his own satisfaction at least, that Mr. Tyndall made many fallacious statements.

Mr. Rowley was as brilliant as usual. He showed the lecturer that "there were more things in heaven and earth" than he had ever dreamed of in his philosophy. The other critics were Messrs. Elwell, Nichols, and St. John.

The next meeting of the society will take place in the Long Island College, and Reuben Rush will lecture on "Reason and Religion."

Mr. Reuben Rush lectured before the Manhattan Liberal Club Friday evening on "Life and Death." Mr. Rush is perhaps one of the youngest speakers on the Liberal platform. He has been connected with the Boston Investigator for two years. This is his first appearance in this vicinity. In opening the lecturer said:

"When we find a person who knows, or thinks he knows because he believes, a great deal about a future life, we have generally found a person who knows little or nothing concerning this life. For eighteen centuries man has been so busy learning so much about his soul that is not so, that he has learned very little about his body that is so. Humbled by religion, millions have made this life miserable, and have wasted enough energy in their pursuit of a rainbow heaven to make something like a heaven here.

"We are told by the Christians that we are called into existence by an infinit, infallible God; that this God put the soul in us. What is the soul? We are told it is mentality, thought. I cannot believe that this mind, or soul, will survive the body when I know it does not survive a temporary disability. Will the Christian tell me where the mind of the man goes when he meets with an accident and becomes unconscious? We come into this world and bring nothing with us, and I cannot see that during our stay here we accumulate anything to take away with us.

"The true purpose of this conscious existence, which begins at the cradle and closes at the grave, is, according to the Christians, to do homage to God, through earthly agencies. How much does mankind gain by this kind of teaching? You might attend church forever and read the Bible until you could stand it no longer, and you would be no wiser. All we know in science has come from sources outside of religious influences. All that we have ever got that is of any service to us has come from the broad road of Materialism. The Christian church has trod the narrow path—dark and dingy. That narrow road makes narrow minds. At every milestone of that road are heaped up the skulls of victims, who have taken a 'short cut to salvation.' On the broad road man is taught to do his duty to fellow-men and let the gods take care of themselves."

The critics were Mr. Macdonald, Mr. Wakeman, Mr. Gustafson, and Dr. Weeks. Mr. Wakeman praised the lecturer for his plain statement of facts. Next week Caroline Le Row will lecture on "The Plus and Minus of Life."

"The Ethical Society in New York City" was the subject of Prof. Felix Adler's lecture in Chickering Hall last Sunday morning. The professor said:

"There is a saying of Heraclitus that 'the death of the gods is our life.' Like most of the sayings of this philosopher, this is capable of many interpretations. One interpretation is that in the dissolution of religious beliefs, thought is concentrated on this life.

"This ethical movement, if it has any significance at all, has the significance of a problem which is of world-wide importance. Our attitude is not that of opposition to religious belief. What we ask is that men should stand by their guns—hold to their colors. It is our desire to bring out, not radical ideas, but simply truthfulness. I have been told that a lady who had left the church merely from lassitude was so moved by these lectures that she returned to the church. I was glad to hear this.

"Truthfulness admits of gradations, so does falsehood. The latter is a concomitant vice. Its blackness depends on its companions. There is no falsehood greater than a religious falsehood; and yet how many people think nothing of believing one thing and saying they believe another; or how many preserve a discreet and diplomatic silence. This wide-spread religious hypocrisy can be easily explained, but it is hard to justify. The reason it is connived at is that Agnosticism has set in. Every statement regarding things not material is not demonstrable, nor is it refutable. But it is the duty of the Agnostic to declare his negative position to the world, irrespective of the results. The truth will make us nobler, though it may not make us happier. The reason some Agnostics give for not telling their belief is that there are minds that are not able to stand the truth as well as they are. This is misplaced kindness. It is true there are minds which are in that state of development in which religion is necessary; but to those whose intellects are at variance with their sentiments, the truth should be told even if sufferings are inflicted by so doing. The Agnostics are right when they say we cannot have a scientific proof of things not material. But I believe we can have a moral certainty of ultimate things.

"I have frequently heard the Ethical Society described as a charitable society. Charity is a single virtue, and is but one of our many objects."

In concluding Professor Adler urged the non-members as well as members to unite in their efforts to swell the fund for the erection of a new home. He said it was absolutely necessary that larger quarters be provided.

Next Sunday Professor Adler will lecture, by request, on "Sir Thomas More."

Sunday Closing Forces "Sabbath Breaking."

After discussing the question, "Should we work Sundays and rest Saturdays, that we may attend the World's Fair?" the Chicago Question Club adopted the following resolutions at its last meeting, which were published in the leading Chicago newspapers:

WHEREAS, Self-righteous "frands" killed Bruno, Socrates, and Christ, and crushed progressive thought with thumbscrew, rack, and stake;

WHEREAS, Centuries of "Blue laws" fettered science, because its truths revealed their fraudulence;

WHEREAS, Branding knowledge evil, they close the World's Fair Sundays to keep toilers ignorant and subservient;

Resolved, That duty to posterity and ourselves impels us to garner knowledge the World's Fair now affords, and help dispel the superstitious ignorance that enthralled mankind;

Resolved, That we therefore should work Sundays and rest Saturdays, that we may attend the World's Fair.

"Have landlords a moral right to pocket increased ground-rents?" will be the question discussed next Sunday.

Lectures and Meetings.

J. E. REMSBURG is now lecturing in Kansas. He has forty engagements to fill in that state.

At the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East Fifteenth street, Friday evenings, the program for the month of May is:

May 5th, Caroline B. Le Row, "The Plus and Minus of Life."

May 12th, Dr. Lewis G. Janes, "Darwin and Spencer."

May 19th, Alex. Gustafson, "Our Labor Crisis—How to Win."

May 26th, Prof. Duren J. H. Ward, "Social Progress vs. Human Inertia (Misoneism)."

MR. FRANKLIN STEINER lectured twice in Newton, Ia., April 16th, to large audiences. Mr. Elias Moffit thinks strongly of building a Freethought hall in Newton on a business lot he owns there. If he does this, there will be two Freethought halls in Iowa. Sunday, May 7th, Mr. Steiner lectures three times in Grinnell—morning, afternoon, and evening. Subjects: "The Principles of Secularism, or Morality Without Christianity;" "Why I Do Not Believe the Bible to be the Word of God;" and "Popular Evidences in Favor of Christianity Tested."

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting-room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

Letters of Friends.

Calls It Good Food for the Reason.

READING, PA., Apr. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your excellent editorial writing is the best food for man's reason. I would not be without it. Wishing you success,
Yours, REV. D. KLINE.

Many Years Spent Aiding Civilization.

LITCHFIELD, ILL., March 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have read THE TRUTH SEEKER for seventeen years and I do not know how to get along without it. I am seventy-two years old, and I expect to read it as long as I can pay for it.

Yours truly, ALEXANDER ROBSON.

Having Ceased to Help God, Let Us Help Man.

LINWOOD, O., Apr. 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: To your urgent request I cheerfully respond.

May all your debtors do the same, And thus preserve an honest name, While on the road to truth you plod, Striving to help man—not God.

Yours truly, C. D. WALLACE.

Desires More Currency.

LAKE HOWELL, FLA., Apr. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Money is almost impossible to get; but I do not see how I can get along without THE TRUTH SEEKER as long as I can raise a nickel. I wish I was able to help you, but I can hardly help myself at present; but the future looks brighter with me. If we could only have more money per capita in circulation it would be better for the working folks.

Yours truly, J. DENNING.

Letter From a Man Not Fit for Decent Society.

PARKER, KAN., Apr. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: We have just had a cyclone which has nearly destroyed our little town, and I am here trying to secure funds to assist the homeless people. A friend told me this morning that I was not fit to be in decent society, because I said God did not send the storm, or if the Gods did they had better be chained up and let the women and men run the business. So much for religion.

Fraternally,
WILBUR F. DALLAS.

Imagin the Effect of Eighty Thousand Ingersolls.

BROOKSIDE, N. J., Apr. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: A few months ago I ordered a work by Helen H. Gardener, and Volney's "Ruins." Both are good books. Inclosed find $1 for your valuable TRUTH SEEKER four months. I believe if we had eighty thousand Robert G. Ingersolls in these United States, instead of priests and preachers, it would be a very good change to the better. I have read a number of Ingersoll's wise sayings, and love him.

Yours for Truth,
JESSE S. CLARKE.

A Gentle Lady.

ELIZABETHVILLE, PA., Apr. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: If one more TRUTH SEEKER comes to this office for Dr. N. W. Stroup I shall expose your infamous publication and will punish the printers of this soul-damning paper to the full extent of the law. I MEAN JUST WHAT I SAY. If it COSTS me $1,000 I will stop your paper. If you want to go to HELL don't try to drag others with you. Let one more paper entitled TRUTH SEEKER come and I will set the ball a-rolling.

If we have any law against obscene literature I will find it.

MRS. DR. N. W. STROUP.

A True Lover of the Liberty of His Fellows.

MT. JACKSON, VA., Apr. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I do not wish to miss the best paper now published, as long as I can see to read the good things I find in the good old TRUTH SEEKER, so please find check for $5. Use for THE TRUTH SEEKER $3. S. P. Putnam's pamphlet, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie"—send two of these pamphlets, fifty cents. And send two of "Crimes of Preachers," fifty cents. Put the remaining $1 where you think it will do the most good for Liberty and Equal Rights to all.

LEONARD WALTERS.

Has Become Enabled to Refute the Design Argument.

DRESDEN, ONT., Apr. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I consider your paper a mine of wisdom. Contributions from the pens of such able writers as Putnam, Wettstein, and the incomparable Ingersoll, etc., make THE TRUTH SEEKER worth more than money to any inquiring mind. I was delighted with your masterly exposition of the design fallacy, for never having read anything on the design argument, it was hard for me to refute it. Being born and raised in the land of the "unco guid," and hearing nothing but orthodox slush, it is a pleasure for me to get rid of it. I would not like to miss any copies of the paper.

P. F. CLARK.

P. O. Notice—Unclaimed Letters.

ST. NICHOLAS, PA., Apr. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The letter addressed to Jesus Christ, by Chas. T. Blackburn, of Seattle, Wash., will no doubt some time arrive at its proper destination, as it has already reached Pottsville, Pa., and is being advertised by the postmaster there, which you will see by the following clipping from the Daily Miners' Journal of Pottsville, Pa.

Please help it along and oblige,

Yours, R. B. PLATT.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS.

List of unclaimed letters remaining in Pottsville post-office April 21, 1893:

Bauer, Jacob.	Jessup, Christ.
Bewley, Frank.	Jamison, Charles.
Buchanan, Edw.	Lucid, Mrs. John.

Encouragement to Immorality.

CLEVELAND, O., Apr. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for one year's subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER, and for your temporal consolation the following variation of an old hymn laden with comfort for the tardy:

Life is the time to serve the Lord;
The time to insure the great reward;
But while the lamp holds out to burn
The biggest rascal can return.

A man through life in sin can revel,
Steal, lie, and cheat, and serve the devil;
And when life's clock has passed eleven
Experience religion and go to heaven.

I offer the above as a fine inducement to aged sinners to leave Liberal bequests to the church. Yours truly, F. T. IVES.

Sorry That Freethought Was Not Found in Youth.

MILL CITY, PA., Apr. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER suits me first-rate. I love to read it. Of all the papers I have taken or read it suits me best. I am now in my seventieth year, and the only regret I have is that I could not have had THE TRUTH SEEKER twenty years ago. I was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church some thirty years ago, but I saw so much base, low, contemptible meanness, that I stepped down and out. Brother Arnold, our pastor at one time, undertook to play Henry Ward Beecher with one of the sisters, but she kicked and the reverend gentleman left between two days. I don't know but that he was some kin to Benedict Arnold of Revolutionary fame.

WM. OWEN.

We Have Converted a Printing-Office.

OFFICE OF THE WEEKLY GLEANER,

W. W. AMES, Proprietor.

DE RUYTER, N. Y., March 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Let me urge that, as an evangelizing move, you exchange with as many publishers as possible. All the printers who graduated from this printing-office—seven or eight—have gone out radical Freethinkers, and able to hold their own fairly well in argument with the Lord's people. I attribute their advanced views to THE TRUTH SEEKER's quiet work, which, if there be no other fruits, has been profitable indeed to these young men. I would trust any one of them in preference to the most devout Sunday-school scholar in town.

Remsburg was with us one night, February 6th—the worst night of the winter. The storm alone prevented a large house. Those present were more than paid, and his lecture, "False Claims," carried consternation into the orthodox ranks. Not one of the six preachers here attended, though two of them have "done him up" since—on hearsay. A good lecture will be well received here at any time.

The Methodists have just closed a three weeks' revival with most discouraging results. Only two converts were made. The "whipping-in" process was mainly used, but the listeners in general declined to be intimidated. The two lady evangelists stirred up anew the fires of hell and shook the unconverted over the roaring flames, but they barely flinched; perhaps they're turning salamanders. Ingersoll has so effectually banked the fires of hell that it's hard work to get much service out of them now.

Success to THE TRUTH SEEKER.

W. W. AMES.

The Long, Lean Finger of Christian Scorn.

ROWLAND, ORE., March 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am the only subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER at Rowland. There are quite a number of Liberal-minded people here, but they are afraid to declare themselves such for fear the long, lean, skinny finger of Scorn will be pointed at them.

The "sky-pilots," however, find rather short picking in the orthodox pasture hereabouts. I do not know of their making a convert in this community in five years. Hoping that success may attend the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, and long life to Heston, Putnam, Charlesworth, Peck, and the whole army of noble patriots who are fighting for the right of free speech, free press, and free thought, I am,

Respectfully, F. M. KIZER.

Thinks the South Very Chnrchly.

GUM RIDGE, MISS., March 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Hoping this will find you at your best humor—I am one of old Bennett's subscribers yet. As I wrote you before, I am living on an island in the Mississippi river. When I am through with reading THE TRUTH SEEKER it travels up and down the river, also my books I ordered from you. Here Freethinkers have a hard road to travel. No longer ago than last week a follower of the meek was like to kick me in the mouth, in the city of Natchez. If our people try to improve this world they surely should start in the South. It is surely the most priest-ridden part of our country.

Peck's article of "What I Know About God" and Otto Wettstein's letter to Mrs. Chapman are as good as any Liberal man wants to read.

EMIL GUEDON.

Phrenology vs. Christianity.

NEW YORK CITY, Apr. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed are three names and addresses to which please send sample copies of your paper. The last-named gentleman is a Liberal but has probably never seen your paper. The second is the principal of the college of same address. To the first-named gentleman please send your catalog also. He and I had some controversy about religion last fall, while we were both attending a course of lectures in the Phrenological Institute on Twenty-first street, this city. The last thing he said to me about theology was, "Any man who does not believe in theology is a fool." At that time I was still a liberal Christian, but have since become an Infidel in the broadest sense of the term. I spoke to him about Dr. Beall's book, "The Brain and the Bible," and told him to get it and read it. This week I received a letter from him requesting me to send him the title of the book, the price mailed, and the publisher's address. I have a letter under way for him at the present writing, which will make him think. I did not become an Infidel in a hurry. I weighed religion a long time against every branch of science with which I became conversant, and found it wanting in every case. I have gathered enough knowledge to know that every supernatural creed is a humbug. But I consider that my studies in this direction have only just begun. I expect to take a very active part in our cause in the near future. I am a young man yet, but before I am ten years older some of the Christian ministers will wish that I had never been born. I shall use phrenology largely, because I regard this as the most dangerous science that Christianity will have to deal with in the future. It made me a total disbeliever in God and the devil. And I shall cause others to become Infidels by its aid. Yours for Truth, PETER LEIST.

The Morality of Christian Is Not Superior to That of Other Peoples.

CORNWALL, IDA., Apr. 13, E.M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will not find money for books and new subscribers. Nevertheless I wish it could be so, for I have been wanting a number of your books, especially the pictorial ones, for quite a while, and I have tried to get you new subscribers, but money is too scarce, although property value is plenty. Nowhere does grain grow better than here, but on account of high interest—fifteen and eighteen per cent—and high rates for transportation, caused mostly, I think, by the plutocratic single or gold standard, we are hard-up people. We can find some fault, too, with God's so-called infinite mercy. The way he handles the elements is very cruel, especially on the poor animals. This is a very late spring. Most people are out of feed, or on account of rain or snow every day making the roads bad feed cannot be hauled. If Brother Heston was here now he could see horses and cattle humped up around without feed while our merciful God is sending down the snow and rain upon them, for a blessing, I presume. How would that be for a picture?

I paste the pictures on cloth, using flour and water for paste. I then tack them on a large tree beside the road in sight of my house. It is a pleasure for me to open the door just a little and watch men look at those pictures. Sometimes they take their book and pencil out of pocket and write down the references, etc., and perhaps write over the picture. Here is one of their arguments: "How much better are those nations which haven't the Bible—Asia, Africa, the sea islands, etc.?" I suppose the writer thought that was a stunner. I intended to refer him to the superior morality of the Eskimo, etc., but the picture was torn down before I got at it. Suppose you give us an editorial on the above argument or question.

A. L. McFARLANE.

Defiance Sent to a Preacher.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Apr. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The following letter to a Baptist clergyman of Hammondsport, N. Y., conveys its own meaning and tells its own story. The writer takes this means of attempting to lead the reverend gentleman into an open-field fight, where other than his own statements as to his ability to squelch an Infidel may be made.

J. B. SWETT.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Apr. 19, 1893.

REV. COLWELL TOWNSEND, Dear Sir: You doubtless remember that during your last visit to my place of business I made no reference to religious topics. I did not refer to the subject for the reason that I wished to avoid giving you offense, as upon a former occasion, by the expression of a difference, quite radical, between us. It has lately come to my ears, from two or three different sources, that you have boasted of squelching me in argument upon the subject. Now, I do not care to have any further discussion with you unless other ears or eyes than our own may be enabled to hear or read what passes between us. If you have really made this boast, I would like to renew this discussion in such a manner that others, and those to whom you have made this boast, may have an opportunity to judge for themselves which of us is really squelched. I will discuss the matter with you through the columns of any newspaper that will allow the controversy, or in any public place except a church, for in the latter I would not receive fair treatment or impartial hearing.

I will herewith give you an opportunity to begin the battle by defying you to prove that all supernatural religions are not descended directly from paganism and fostered by priestcraft and superstition alone. I defy you to show that these religions are not based on falsehood and are, and always have been, a curse to the human race. I challenge you to show that the Bible is not opposed to science, reason, and fact, and to produce a solitary conclusive proof that Jesus Christ ever existed. I will attempt to bring out points in the controversy which I will ask you to refute by facts and not by a brainless and unsatisfactory appeal to blind faith in improbable things, or in things which you or any other man never knew anything about. Yours truly, J. B. SWETT.

Who Will Reply What the Soul Is?

WESTMINSTER, CAL., March 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I want to talk a little. I like your paper well. It is just splendid. I do not know what I would do without it. It causes me to think and investigate. It has caused me to be wiser, and richer, not in gold and silver but in reason. It has caused me to be a Liberal—if I understand what a Liberal is. It has set my reason free. But still I am a slave. I am a slave to circumstances. The men control the liberties of the people when they control the means by which the people live. People here tell me if I would practice what I preach I would be the best man in the world. I tell them I cannot, and I am not honest, and cannot be under the present social system, because the present social and religious system offers a premium on sin and dishonesty. Everybody tries to get the advantage of me in business or in trade, so in order to protect myself and family I have to take the same advantage of others, so the strongest takes from the weakest—the result, nations of robbers.

Now I want to ask you a question or two: 1. Has a baby a soul when it is born? 2. Is not the reason the soul? 3. With the growth of reason is there a growth of soul? 4. If a man's reason is large and good, and his powers of thought are great, it must follow that his soul is great. Give me some of your thoughts on these points.

In conclusion, it seems to me, if I ever did have a soul it has grown within the last few years, since I cut loose from all the isms. The result—religion binds the reason, binds the soul. Only Liberals have souls. Your friend in confusion,

R. A. MARTIN.

Death of an Admirable Character.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Apr. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: One of Chicago's noted characters—a man possessed of wonderful artistic perception and brilliancy of execution, amounting to genius, a bold, fearless, and unfaltering freethinker, and a devoted friend of the writer—passed away Friday, March 25th, after a severe but brief illness.

It was the desire of the deceased and his family that I should, if possible, make the funeral address and pay the last tribute to my departed friend, but, much to my regret, neither telegrams nor letters reached me in time. M. M. Mangasarian, the eloquent speaker of the Ethical Society, kindly tendered his services.

In large letters, "Died in His Unbelief" appears over the article in the Chicago Times of the 28th ult., as though that were something strange. Harris was determined that no professional orthodox preacher should ever desecrate his funeral. In fact, his wife and family were all freethinkers, and that is another case where the church could not ghoul-like steal a march on the Liberal dead. His death marks a triumph over the church. For every instance of public record where the freethinker on his dying bed sets at naught the scarecrows of the church rebounds against the manipulators of mummeries and weakens the faith of the orthodox and gives courage to those who are shivering on the brink of doubt.

Harris had many evidences of genius. His wit, irony, and sarcasm made him loved and feared. For woe to the unfortunate against whom he aimed his shafts of ridicule. His delight, above all others, was to entangle in argument some orthodox individual, and when Harris got through with him the said individual would not quite realize whether he was, as the saying is, "afoot or a-horseback." Domestically Mr. Harris was kind, indulgent, generous. Mentally THE TRUTH SEEKER was his gospel, and he loved and revered its Editor. He was personally acquainted with Charlesworth and Putnam, both of whom he has entertained.

Whatever faults he might have possessed, Mr. Harris was, if a friend at all, one of the truest that ever lived. No higher eulogy can be awarded any man than that. To Mrs. Harris and others of the family I sincerely tender my most earnest solicitude in their hour of trial. Mr. Harris's life was devoted to reproducing the beauties of nature and he did so with a master hand. Could any life be better employed? Honest, earnest, bold, defiant, and true to his principles, let us cling to the consolation that all that is good, grand, noble, and beautiful is secure from the moldering touch of time. That every generous deed and noble impulse of the heart will be an inspiration for those he has left behind to emulate.

E. A. STEVENS.

Accusations of Financial and Other Tyrannies.

OXANNA, ALA., Apr. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: IN THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 8th is an article by L. G. Reed, under the head of "Socialism." Now, I will stop to notice but one point in the article, and that is where he brings in the mechanic who saves $1 a week wherewith to buy him a home. I infer from what he has said about that mechanic that he would have us think that if all wage-workers followed the example of that mechanic they would all soon have homes, and be happy and contented, and we would not hear anything more of Anarchy, Socialism, or Communism.

Now let us apply common sense to this subject and see how it would work for all wage-earners to resolve to save at least $1 a week out of their earnings. Say there are sixteen million wage-workers in this country, and at the end of the year they have each saved up $52; multiply this by sixteen million and you have $832,000,000; but $50 is only a small beginning for a sum sufficient to build any sort of a home; so we will let the wage-workers go on for another fifty-two weeks, saving up $1 each week and hoarding it away, and now we are getting along nicely, for we have $1,664,000,000, and the millennium is almost in sight; but, hold on, have we not overlooked something? Our wage-earners have saved up about twice as much money as there was in circulation in the whole country when they began saving; where the devil did they get all that money? For we all know that before the end of the first year's saving every factory in the country would have to shut down, every store close, and the merchants be broken, for there is not $1 afloat in all the land; the wage-earners have every dollar of it; but as Mr. Reed would say, What of it? it is all in the family.

Mr. Reed says: "The fact is that imprudence and incompetence are the principal breeders, in this country at least, of Socialists."

What does the imprudence and incompetence consist in? Does it consist on the part of the wage-earners in spending their earnings? We have just seen their attempt to economize, and lay by $1 a week to buy them a home, and they have brought on the worst panic this country ever saw. If there is not money enough in circulation in the country so that wage-earners can save enough to get them a home, what are you going to do about it?

Here is a little thing that is of no consequence to the laboring people of this country, for all that the laborer needs in this country is a chance to vote. Give him a chance to vote for either of the two old parties and he is happy.

In 1862, the British bankers sent one of their number over to this country with a circular, to propagate among our bankers, instructing them how to manage the finances of this country for the benefit of both the British and American bankers. The circular started out in this way: "The war is going to abolish chattel slavery; the European system of slavery, led on by England, is wage slavery; and we control wages by controlling the money; and you will see to it that the greenbacks, as they are called, are not allowed to circulate for any great length of time after the close of the war, for the volume is so large that we cannot control them." There you have it all in a nutshell. The balance of the circular went on to give the necessary instructions for slaughtering the greenbacks, and the work was finally accomplished. The greenbacks were burnt up, and bonds given out in their stead; and the good work went on till the great panic of 1873, and we have been having glorious times ever since.

The money power bought up the Associated Press about that time, and the Associated Press has been busy backing up all this robbing and plundering; and such papers as dare to expose the "cussedness" that has been going on in Congress from the beginning of the war to the present hour cannot live for want of patronage. With the average voter a lie is just as good as the truth; and unfortunately a lie will travel one hundred miles while Truth is getting its boots on.

From the time the bankers began to buy up Congress in 1862, Congress has been nothing but a political job-shop; they have stolen about all the public land and given it to the railroads, and exempted it from taxation; and the American presidency has degenerated to nothing but a gilded dog-collar; and the money power and the great corporations own the president and Congress just as absolutely as any farmer ever owned a bull.

Congress stands ready to grant anything the church asks for. It has made the church a gift of $2,500,000 with which to buy up and control the World's Fair.

"Damn the Constitution," says Congress; "the public be damned!" says Vanderbilt; and thus the good work goes on.

The next move on the part of the church will be to demand of Congress a bill to stop THE TRUTH SEEKER from publishing its cartoons, and other restrictions that will finally stop its publication; and Grover Cleveland is just the man to sign all such bills.

The outlook is glorious; but let us keep right on trying to find a remedy in one or the other of the two old parties; let us keep dodging from one party to the other till—till—well, we will all see what, in the near future. GEO. GEER.

Woman's Voting Would Be a Death-blow to Liberty.

HOWICK, QUE., March 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Since the cause of woman's rights is being agitated, I have often felt impelled to grab my pen and sling out my opinion, but on a second thought have always succeeded in composing myself in time to spare you and the readers of your tolerant paper one of those irksome tasks too often inflicted on good people; but after reading the last argument on this important question—produced by Miss, or Mrs., Laura Knox in THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 26th—I am afraid I will have to be heard at last, otherwise I might never recover from the shock received at the hand of this fair defender of her sex (I might say "church" instead of "sex"). She points her guns at Mr. Albert Sandberg in her anxiety to shoot him. Mr. Sandberg was not the guilty party. The first objector to Laura Knox's vote was one of her own sex, and she is probably as wise and certainly as honest as Laura Knox. She knows so well what the likes of Laura Knox would do with a vote that she is willing to sacrifice her own right of suffrage rather than let her less fortunate sisters ruin the country. Mr. Sandberg says Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, of San José, Cal., has won his life-long admiration in bringing forward her objection to woman's suffrage. She has mine too. She is certainly worth the highest consideration of every honest man and woman for her honesty and abnegation.

Mrs. Laura Knox's style of writing being so far ahead of her mode of reasoning gives me great misgivings as to her candor. I suspect her to be an orthodox Christian lady under a very poor disguise, often making a man of straw for the sole pleasure of shooting at something she calls man. She manages to ask one question worthy of some consideration—viz., If women are not fit to vote now, how are they to be prepared for that important function? And I fear the only answer will be "Emancipate them." But I say, Do not be in too much of a hurry about it.

Madam Knox might have spared herself the trouble of denying that the clergy originated the idea of woman's rights, as nobody says they did. She admits that the preachers (seeing that it is to their advantage) are beginning to sanction the reform. That is all that anybody claims. She also very pertinently asks how many men are fit to cast a judicious vote. Very well, Miss or Mrs. Knox, we admit the number is small—only about twenty per cent—but prospects for improvement are very good. But let the women commence to vote now and the already small number of judicious votes is reduced to five per cent and the prospects for improvement are indefinitely lost.

It is a notable fact that the great lights of the Woman's Right party, such as Mrs. Colman, Mrs. Slenker, Miss Gardener, Miss Wixon, and others, have not yet attempted to answer Mrs. Schwartz's objection, and if they ever do it will not be a corroboration of Laura Knox's letter.

They are wise, honest, and true. Their aim is not necessarily to overthrow their opponent, but to find out what is right and to obtain it, hence they will treat the objection with caution. But let me quote the last portion of Mrs. Knox's letter: "The idea," she says, "of a writer calling himself Liberal when he is trying to prohibit people from making Sunday laws!" Oh, Laura, Laura, what do you mean by "Liberal!" If it means one that allows others to dictate to him as to what he shall or shall not do on Sunday or any other day, I am not a Liberal and do not know where there is one. I hope you do not call those who do the dictating "Liberals;" and surely those who tamely submit to be so dictated to are more properly called "slaves."

Fellow-Liberals, just look at it and see what woman's suffrage would do to-day. We all know that the votes of the ignorant women would all be in the hands of their lord, the priest, and those blessed (?) with orthodox learning would not only vote with the clergy, but by their ability and superior energy would constitute a power on the wrong side of the house that could not at present be counterbalanced by our (much wiser but too few in number) learned Liberal women.

It is certainly a great injustice to deny the women the right of suffrage, but they are denied many other rights that should be granted first, and are allowed some privileges that must be withdrawn before they will learn enough of human nature to be competent voters. I say give women the right to do anything that they can do that men have the right to do, but they must in the mean time be made responsible for their actions, as it would not do to let them venture in any kind of undertaking and hold their fathers and their husbands responsible for all possible blunders.

After some experience in personal responsibility women may become competent voters, but give them the ballot to-day and we may ring the death-knell of all justice and liberty. Laura Knox's letter is a good sample of what would then be called "justice and liberty."

Miss Gardener once related a conversation she had with an orthodox woman's rightist wherein she asked this good Christian lady if after passing the Sunday-closing act she would not also vote for an act to force people to go to church. "Certainly," replied she, "people should be forced to go to church until they know enough to go of their own accord." Miss Gardener very properly remarked that she instinctively heard the clink of the chains of an Inquisition. If Miss Gardener reads Laura Knox's letter she will surely have a recurrence of the shocking sensation.

Oh, what a power there is in early training, that one imbued with an idea in infancy will sooner change the meaning of words than discover that the idea may possibly be wrong!

It is hardly credible that one able to write such a fine letter as Laura Knox did should not only favor a law to enable a few bigots to rob everybody of their liberty one day out of every seven, but even call a man il-Liberal for objecting to such tyranny.

The only hope for reform is in the schools. As long as all creed-bound ignoramuses of all religious denominations will have the right to cowardly take advantage of tender age and indelibly stamp in the minds of helpless children all they believe, reform must be very slow. After mature age is reached under such a training hardly one out of a thousand has the courage to open his eyes and see things as they are.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty,
CHAS. LAPEROCHE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Farmer John.

BY SUSAN H. WIXON.

John is a farmer, and holds the plow,
Planting the corn and milking the cow;
He harrows and rakes and tends the grain,
He digs and hoes, again and again;
So faithful and true to every trust,
I'm moved to say, and say it I must.
That of all the lads the sun shines on,
Not one is better than Farmer John.

John is up with the earliest dawn,
And catches the bluebird's sweetest song;
Through the pink and gold of morning sky
He inhales the clover's sweetest sigh;
He views the millet and scans the oats
While the linnet sings in thrilling notes
That of all the lads the sun shines on,
Not one is better than farmer John.

You should see the cows come at his call—
They know his footsteps from spring to fall;
There is Minnie, Grace, and Katie, too,
Nannie and Bessie and dainty Sue;
If those cows could speak, I know they'd say
To-day, to-morrow, and every day,
That of all the lads the sun shines on,
Not one is better than farmer John.

Then the horses, Katie and Fan so neat,
They know every by-way, every street
From Bowenville to the market-place;
And they know, also, each kindly face,
And oftentimes with a gleeful neigh,
Almost as plain as the words can say,
Now of all the lads the sun shines on,
Not one is better than farmer John.

John has not time for dress and display,
For he is a toiler every day;
But, for splendid eyes and glowing cheeks,
You may search the world for weeks and weeks,
And then, you'll agree with what I say,
That, although he works hard every day,
Yet, of all the lads the sun shines on,
Not one is better than farmer John.

John is a thinker, a scholar, too,
With faith and courage to dare and do;
With a heart as tender and as true
As the rose just bathed in morning dew;
Manly and loyal, upright and free,
Nature makes men of such lads as he,
And, I am sure that the sun shines on
No worthier one than farmer John.

John's hand is brown, but is true as steel,
A strong, firm hand, and its clasp is leal;
It could never lead a child astray;
But only straight in the better way;
And if you knew John from day to day,
You would not think it too much to say,
That of all the lads the sun shines on,
Not one is nobler than farmer John.

—The Story Hour.

The Monkey and the Crocodile.

A free translation from a Buddhist fable.

A monkey was one fine bright morning perched high up on the spreading branch of a cashew-tree, which was, however, devoid of nuts—so dear to the taste of all monkeys—and thinking of the time when another crop of the tasty fruit would be maturing, when a crocodile floated lazily on the surface of the lake beneath him, and catching sight of his form amongst the leafy branches of the tree, accosted him with friendly greetings and inquiries after his health. To these the monkey gave a cheerful reply, and very soon fell into a lively conversation.

The burthen of the monkey's discourse was nuts, of which the big creature beneath him took advantage by dwelling upon the number and fruitfulness of the nut-bearing trees in his vicinity; he declared that the branches of the fruit-trees were positively bending to the ground under the weight of the thousands of nuts upon them. This, of course, excited the curiosity and greed of the monkey, who at length inquired of the crocodile where this wonderfully fertile land was to be found, and what was about the distance to it; how long would it take him to reach thither, and a number of other questions, showing his intense anxiety for information on the subject. The other assured him that the distance to it was nothing to speak of; at any rate, it had not taken him long to swim there at a very leisurely pace. Having thus whetted the monkey's appetite for information, he assured him that he could not possibly find it without a guide; but that if the monkey would mount his back he should be only too pleased to carry him to the spot where he could have his fill of glorious ripe nuts of various kinds.

The offer was too tempting to be resisted, and smacking his lips in anticipation of the glorious feast he was about to enjoy, he leaped on the crocodile's back, and away the pair went skimming along the surface of the great lake which spread out before them like a sea.

When they had paddled along for the better part of an hour, the monkey began to ask a number of questions of the crocodile as to how much longer they would be on their journey, when they would come in sight of the nut-bearing trees, and other similar inquiries. At length the crocodile, no doubt feeling that he had kept silence long enough, assured the monkey that the story of the nuts was all a "hum," and that the real purpose of his journey to his home amongst the mangroves was to give his wife a much-coveted treat, for she had for some time past had an insatiable longing for the grilled heart of a monkey, and now he was about to gratify her taste.

This speech naturally took the monkey aback—in fact, it struck him "all of a heap," as the saying goes—but so far from being disconcerted, he replied, after a pause: "Why, old fellow, did you not mention this before I left my tree? I can't possibly oblige you with my heart."

"And, pray, why not?" rejoined the big swimmer.

"Well," said the ready-witted little creature, "to be plain with you, I left my heart behind me."

"Nonsense," was the reply; "how did that happen?"

"There's no such thing as nonsense about it, old fellow. It happened in this way. I was out last night late, at a great tomasha, and on my way got drenched with rain; and as I felt that I had caught a chill, I took my heart out this morning and hung it on a branch of that big tree, where you found me, to dry."

"What is to be done?" inquired the saurian in a despondent tone.

"The only course that I can see," replied the other, "is just to paddle me back to the tree."

After thinking it over a while, the big brute turned leisurely round and in due course reached the tree, upon which, leaping from the back of the other, the monkey sprang to one of the branches and began laughing as though he would split his sides.

"Go home, old boy, and tell your wife that she has lost a supper because you could not keep your own counsel. Ta-ta."

And the sulky old crocodile swam moodily away.

MORAL.

Keep your own counsel and avoid incautious speech. E. DOS SANTOS.
Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Correspondence.

DRESDEN, IND., Apr. 1, 1893.

MISS WIXON: This is my first trial to write to the Corner. I am fourteen years old, and am staying with an uncle who takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I like to read the paper very well. My mother is living, but she is a Christian, but I am not. I heard a Christian say that every infidel ought to be hanged. I believe if people let such fellows have their way they would soon run things back into the Dark Ages. Yours respectfully,

EVERT PAGE.

NEW CASTLE, WASH., March 24, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: It is a very long time since I wrote to the Children's Corner. It was my birthday yesterday. I am fourteen years old. There was a preacher in this town last week. He came here to convert the people of New Castle, but he never converted. He told some big lies. He said he was once working on a saw-mill in the Rocky mountains and a pile of lumber fell on him at 3 o'clock in the morning and stayed there till sunset. Then God took pity on him and lifted the pile of lumber off and set him on his feet, then the lumber fell down again. I would like to correspond with some of the boys of the Corner. For fear my letter will be too long, I will close. Yours truly, LOUIS NEWMAN.

BERTRAND, NEB., March 14, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I have written three or four letters to the Corner, but concluded they were not worth the space in the Corner, so they went into my wastebasket. I take music lessons. We have purchased a new home in Bertrand. They commence school here with prayer and sing hymns. The scholars laugh and cut up during the exercises. I go to church once in a while, but do not attend Sunday-school. There are quite a number of Freethinkers in Bertrand. A man at our house said he would not allow himself to read any of Mr. Ingersoll's writings because he was afraid he would be led astray. His mother had always taught him different. Respectfully yours, MAUD A. OLMSTED.

[Maud need not be discouraged. She writes very well.—ED. C. C.]

COALING, ALA., Apr. 2, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON AND FRIENDS OF THE CORNER: As I have nothing else to do to-day, I will endeavor to write again to the Corner.

We are having beautiful weather at present. The cold gray clouds of winter have given their place to the warm spring sunshine. We hear again the singing of the birds. The leaves are putting forth, making the woods green, and the flowers are blooming again. How gladly I welcome the return of spring, with the music of birds, the blooming of flowers, and the warm sunshine.

I have been reading with interest Mr. S. P. Putnam's "News and Notes" in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and most especially his travels in Florida. From the description Mr. Putnam gives it must be a beautiful country. I think Mr. Putnam is a splendid writer. I admire very much his way of writing and wish him a grand success in the noble cause in which he is working.

I have read Mr. Charlesworth's letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 1st in which he gives a description of his reception at Gridley, Ore. Well, I think a Free-thought lecturer would meet with about the same reception in this priest-ridden community. A few years ago, when my father began to take THE TRUTH SEEKER and speak his opinions, there was not a Freethinker here. Freethought had hardly been heard of. Now there are a good many around here, but the most of them are afraid to speak their opinions; but still there are a few outspoken Liberals here.

I long to see the mist and fog of orthodoxy dispelled by the sun of science. I ever remain,

Yours in the cause of Freethought,
WALTER R. WARD.

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT, March 3, 1893.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: You will no doubt be surprised to see the above address, and also to receive a letter from me after so long a silence. I have often wished to write to you, but I am now attending school and am very busy. This morning father got me up at such an unearthly hour that I have half an hour to spare, so I am writing you a few lines. The farm which father had rented was sold, so we made up our minds to go out to Australia, but on arriving here we were so pleased with the place that we resolved to remain; and now father has started business and all looks well. The weather is beautiful, the trees are all in blossom, and everything looks bright and spring-like.

This is such a nice place to live in—much more civilized than Turkey. It is more European and everything well ordered. We live next to the museum in which there are so many curious old things, and a great many mummies. Mother and the boys have been to visit it, but I have not been yet. Here we are able to attend lectures, which are indeed a treat, especially for me, as we never had anything of the kind in Salonica. My brothers have asked me to ask you to be kind enough to send them some used postage-stamps, as they are both collectors. And if any of your friends want any Egyptian ones I could send you as many as you like. I should so like to have your photograph if you would not mind sending me it. Charley and Henry both attend the French school, College St. Louis. I go to the Scotch school, where I am very happy. I am studying English, French, and Italian, and we are going to see about dancing-lessons this week. I am so fond of it. I dare say I have grown a good deal since I last wrote to you. I am five feet, five inches—half a head taller than mother. I must end now, as school-time is approaching. Mother sends you her kind regards. Good-bye. Please write as soon as you find time. I remain, Yours sincerely, DAISY SUTER.

An Ignorant Sire.

Father (wishing to impress the lesson): "Now, my son, tell me why I punished you."

Son: "That's it—you've pounded the life out of me, an' now you don't know what you done it for."—Puck.

Little Dot: "I wish I was a boy."

Little Dick: "Why?"

Little Dot: "'Cause a girl always feels so wicked when she does anything wrong, an' a boy don't. Boys just goes right along an' has a good time."

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.

3mo14

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing. Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book. Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan of Tomathoz. By Hador Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hador Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 20c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Graeco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c.; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.
A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BAZL. Price, 25 cents.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll..... 25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor..... 15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart..... 40
The Holy Bible Abridged..... 30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg..... 10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS CHRIST
CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 10 cents

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin

In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism.

In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. An Agnostic's View. By Don Allen. New York: The Truth Seeker Co. Pp. 161. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

There is no book that we have presented to the public with more pleasure than we feel in submitting this. It selects for treatment one of the most important of the alleged events on which the Christian doctrine rests. This subject it gives the minute and exhaustive examination that it deserves. It searches so diligently and penetratingly every path and line of thought on the question that one who reads it will need no further study of the matter. Every theory is scrutinized, every proffered explanation turned inside out, every bit of evidence weighed. Sometimes a Free-thinker with but a general and untechnical knowledge of Christian matters, though he possess a wise and correct estimate on them is silenced by a clergyman who has had nothing to do but learn their smallest particulars and will perplex a disputant not ready with name and date, chapter and verse. It would, we suppose, be well if every Free-thinker would so familiarize himself with the minutiae of some one of the pivotal problems of Christianity that on that one, at least, he could meet any comer and pursue its disproof, step by step and detail by detail, to finality. As it is said that a man should aim to learn something about everything and everything about some one thing, so we may venture to opine that a Free-thinker inclined to spread his faith controversially should learn something about all Christian issues and everything about some one of them. We may here and there pick out, among the dogmas of Christianity, one so vital to the existence of that religion that the disproof of that alone is sufficient to discredit utterly the whole system, without any consideration whatever of the other phases of the faith. For instance, once disprove the existence of a God by general considerations, by a priori reasoning, and we may neglect the whole of the other phases of our religion, such as historical Christianity, the annals of ecclesiasticism, etc. An equally mortal place, through which one may reach Christianity's heart, is the side on which appears the dogma of the fall of man. Let it be shown that man did not, six thousand years ago, fall from perfection; but instead, perhaps six million years ago, started, from the imperfection of an ape or some such creature, on the upward course of evolution which has brought him to his present noble estate—let this be shown and the cornerstone of Christianity is gone and the superstructure topples in irretrievable ruin. If man ate no apple he does not need to be rescued from the consequences of eating one; if he did not fall he does not require to be helped up again; if he did not commit mortal sin he will have to have no relief for the punishment of mortal sin; if there was no Eden there was no call for a Calvary; no Adam no Christ. Another dogma as essential to the existence of the Christian faith is that of the resurrection of Jesus. If Jesus, the god, did not rise, no hope is there that the mere earthlings his believers will be able to do so. So the point that Jesus did rise from the dead should be proved by Christians to the utmost of demonstration before they should venture to ask their fellows to accept their creed. But the author of the book before us shows that Christians have not done this. And furthermore, not content with proving that the gospel account of the resurrection errs, he points out a way in which, it seems to him highly probable, it came to err. He explains not only that the evangelists made a mistake, but also the way in which they came to make it.

The manner in which this is done has a peculiar lawyerly character, of which we can transmit no notion in words and which will have to be perceived through perusal. The whole argument reads oddly like the forensic summing-up of a voluminous case at law.

We will note that the diction is the extreme of simplicity and clearness. The writer is a fellow of Ingersoll in taste for brief and plain Anglo-Saxon phraseology, words of one syllable.

The conduct of the reasoning is everywhere that of the most inviolate honesty. The lawyerly tone that we noted is that, be it provided, of an honest lawyer. Candor, fairness, and a sweet patience speak in every line.

This book, important in its theme, in ratiocination sage and judicial, simple enough in style for boy's reading, and warmed and beautified by a winning amiability, will, we believe, prove one of the most satisfactory ones to place in Christians' hands ever issued.

Among the considerations with which the writer sets out, is the one that the belief of the Christian world in the resurrection of Jesus had its origin when the human mind was not so critical as it now is; when the human mind was more given to believing marvels and wonders than at present. It became a fixture in the mind of Christians at such a time, and has been handed down to the present day. Of even greater significance is the next reflection, viz.:

"If one were to tell to an average Christian that he saw a man arise from the dead at the present day, the Christian would think the narrator either knowingly told an untruth, or that he was mistaken—had been imposed upon by a fraud. But if you put the occurrence eighteen hundred years ago, then it becomes an actual fact, and it is sinful to disbelieve it. Now, is there any reason in this? Were people any more truthful in those days than at present? I think not. Were they any more competent to judge of the correctness of such a story than they are to-day? I think not. Then why are we compelled to believe a thing alleged to have occurred eighteen hundred years ago, when we would not believe a similar thing were it alleged to have occurred in our own day?"

The author next enlarges on the antecedent unlikelihood that anyone should rise from the dead. That Jesus died and was buried we readily enough believe, for the like we see to be of daily occurrence, but to believe that he arose again is a far more difficult matter. In all the world's history, no such other case is believed to have occurred. It is against the experience of all mankind during all the ages, hence it is harder to believe. On account of this difficulty in believing it the resurrection should have been made plainer to the mind than the death and burial of our savior, but in the gospel story it is exactly the reverse.

Next is combated the assertion that the age of the resurrection story proves its truth. But, interposes the author, before anything can be claimed for a story on account of its age, you have got to show that free discussion of it, pro and con, has been allowed and carried on during this time. Then if it has come through this time and discussion unscathed, something can be claimed for it on account of its age. But if free discussion has been prohibited during most of the time, then the age of the story becomes a circumstance against it rather than for it.

A few pages farther on there is made a radical affirmation which demands of the reader a pause for reflection. It is:

"The occurrence of a thing as improbable as a resurrection ought not to be admitted unless it is proved beyond a reasonable doubt, and I will here remark that it is absolutely impossible to prove beyond a reasonable doubt anything that is as incredible as a resurrection, upon the testimony of witnesses to a single occurrence, however honest the witnesses might be, for it is more likely that the witnesses were mistaken, than that such an improbable event actually took place. To render it even probable it would require that it be susceptible of a repetition under different circumstances, and before other witnesses where different measures could be brought to bear to prevent a possibility of a fraud. If it stood the test of all these conditions we might then think we had a probable case, otherwise we would not have even that."

Presently, after these preliminary considerations, we arrive at the introduction of the author's special theory, to set forth which the book was written. We will here transcribe this opening statement of the theory, putting in italic its vital portion for easy recognition and vivid imprinting on the mind. The author first makes the remark: "Before admitting a resurrection the evidence should be so strong that it is absolutely incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that the resurrection actually occurred, but if the evidence can be explained by any other reasonable hypothesis the unreasonable one of a resurrection should be abandoned as untenable." Then the writer asks, Can we furnish such a reasonable hypothesis to account for the disappearance of the body of Jesus?" The reply follows:

"We think we can. We think we can furnish not only a reasonable hypothesis to account for the disappearance, but we can no doubt furnish the correct one, or one that will explain all the material facts connected with the disappearance. We present this as a theory, believing it to be the correct one, but if, when it is examined by competent critics, it should be shown that it does not explain all the material facts, or in other words, if it is shown to be untenable, nothing will be proved or disproved in reference to the resurrection. That will remain as it was, and the only thing that will be shown by exploding this theory is that the writer was mistaken, or in other words, he was tracing another false clue. Our theory of the so-called resurrection is founded mainly upon the Gospel record, and as that is supposed to be inspired it certainly ought to be good evidence. We think we can thereby be able to convince any unprejudiced person that the body of Jesus was by the orders of Pilate taken out of the sepulcher in which it was laid—that the Roman guards were knowing to the fact when it occurred—that it was secreted elsewhere in order to quiet the tumult that had been raised on account of the crucifixion—that it had the effect for which it was intended, and that is all there was of this pretended resurrection. We think the gospel history bears out this statement. What are the evidences that point to this conclusion? I answer that all the circumstances connected with the disappearance seem to point to it. The necessities of the time seem to point to it. The fact that it disappeared while surrounded by a Roman guard indicates it. There being no evidence of any investigation—nobody punished—can be accounted for only on the theory that the body was taken away by Pilate's orders."

The author next says that "in order to bring this matter fairly before the mind of the reader, it will be necessary to review the circumstances connected with the accusation, trial, and burial of Jesus." Here he enters on that lengthy examination of these matters which is, in our opinion, when once begun by a reader one of the most absorbing and fascinating undertakings in which a person can engage. However our readers or ourselves may desire to have given here an exposition of the reasonings used, a more satisfying account of the support which our author gives his position, it is obvious that it cannot find space. We will, however, make room for the headings interspersed through the book, distributing it into what may be called chapters. These, we believe, will give a better idea of the contents than anything else:

The Christian Dogma of Salvation.
Difference Between Believing and Knowing.
The Christian Belief.
Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair?
A False Clue.
The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth.
A Claim that the Burthen of Proof is Changed.
Our Theory.
The Accusation, Trial, and Burial of Jesus.
Pontius Pilate.
The Indictment Against Jesus.
Pilate's First Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus.
Pilate Had Also Had Previous Experience of the Same Kind.
Another Sedition.

(Continued on next page.)

Liberty

NOT THE DAUGHTER BUT THE MOTHER OF ORDER

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

The Pioneer Organ of Anarchism in America.

BENJ. R. TUCKER, Editor.

Two Dollars a Year. Single Copies Four Cents.

A thoughtful, resolute, unique, uncompromising, untrifled, consistent, severely critical, able, fair, and honest exponent of the doctrine that Equal Liberty is the necessary basis of Social Harmony. A journal edited to suit its editor, not its readers. If it suits its readers, so much the better.

"LIBERTY is the prettiest paper printed in this country, and it is just the right size."—JOHN SWINTON.

"LIBERTY is a consistent foe of authority, dealing its trenchant blows on every side with a logic that is so clear and incisive that it pleases the reader while confounding his preconceptions. . . . Its success is the more remarkable because it is one of the very few periodicals which seek no commercial notices or puffs, and has been steadily ignored by the public press."—ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.

UNPARALLELED PREMIUM!

The Most Valuable Ever Offered by a Newspaper!

ALL SUBSCRIBERS TO LIBERTY

GIVEN THE BENEFIT OF

WHOLESALE PRICES

ON PURCHASES OF

Books, Periodicals, and Stationery.

Every person sending $2.00 in payment for one year's subscription to LIBERTY receives, as long as he remains a subscriber, the following valuable privileges:

I. All Books Published in the United States (except the publications of Benj. R. Tucker) will be mailed on receipt of wholesale price plus postage, an average saving of at least 30 per cent.

II. All Books Published in Great Britain (and on such books there is a duty of 25 per cent) will be mailed at the uniform rate of 25 cents to the shilling, free of duty and free of postage.

III. All Books Published in France in the French language will be mailed at the uniform rate of 20 cents to the franc, free of postage.

Any person can, by taking advantage of this offer, save from $2 to $5 a year, even if his purchases of books, periodicals, and stationery amount to no more than $10 a year.

Any person whose purchases amount to $50 a year can in the same way save from $10 to $25 a year.

Therefore it will pay anyone whose annual purchases amount to $10 to subscribe for LIBERTY at an annual cost of $2, EVEN IF HE DOES NOT WANT THE PAPER AT ALL.

One of LIBERTY's subscribers, in the month of April, ordered books which at retail prices would have cost $110.15, but paid for them only $79.78, this saving of $30.37 costing only the subscription price of LIBERTY, $2.

THREE BOOKS GIVEN AWAY EVERY WEEK

A COMPETITION OPEN

TO ALL PERSONS WHOMSOEVER.

LIBERTY gives away three books every week to persons selected at random, whether subscribers or not. Any person whomsoever may compete. The applicant should write his or her name and address on a postal card, stating whether Mr., Mrs., or Miss, and, below the address, the title of the book wanted (the applicant may choose any book desired, provided the retail price does not exceed $1.00), with author, publisher, and price if known. This postal card should be mailed to LIBERTY, Box 312, New York City. Each applicant may send any number of cards; and he may name the same book on each card, or he may name different books. But no person will receive more than one book in one week. All applicants, whether successful or unsuccessful, are entitled to put in fresh applications each week, being thus allowed fifty-two trials a year. All the cards will, at the end of each week, be placed in a receptacle, and three of them selected by lot. Each of the three persons selected must then, in order to receive the book post-paid, make formal application to LIBERTY by mail. On receipt of such application, the book will be promptly forwarded. The names and addresses of the successful applicants, with the names of the books forwarded, will be announced in LIBERTY, weekly.

THE SOCIOLOGICAL INDEX.

LIBERTY devotes its fourth page regularly to a department called The Sociological Index, in which it catalogues from week to week the important articles on sociological and kindred topics appearing in American, English, French and other newspapers and periodicals, and offers these articles for sale at reasonable prices, thus enabling everyone interested in these subjects to know regularly what is being published upon them, and to easily obtain such of this literature as he may desire. It also catalogues the new books on the same subjects.

Send all Subscriptions and Letters to Benj. R. Tucker, 120 Liberty St., (top floor), New York City.

Pilate's Caution.
 Pilate's Second Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus.
 Pilate's Third Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus.
 Christ Before Herod.
 Pilate's Fourth Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus.
 A New Indictment Against Jesus.
 Pilate's Fifth Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus.
 In What Language Was the Trial of Jesus Conducted?
 Pilate Shows His Authority.
 Pilate's Ruse Proves a Failure.
 "From Thenceforth Pilate Sought to Release Him."
 Pilate Makes a Sally at Their National Pride.
 He Makes One More Effort to Save the Life of Jesus.
 Pilate's Reasons for Yielding.
 Pilate Writes the Inscription.
 Pilate Refuses to Change It.
 One Other Example of Pilate's Policy.
 Joseph Requests the Body.
 Pilate's Quiet Evening.
 He is Disturbed by the Chief Priests.
 The Unreasonable Demands of the Chief Priests.
 Were These Guards Hired by the Priests?
 The Number of Men Composing That Guard.
 Pilate's Conference With His Cabinet.
 Pilate Determines to Secrete the Body.
 Pilate's Bloodless Victory.
 Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body.
 Other Things Which Confirm the Theory.
 Pilate's Seal.
 Where Were the Roman Guards?
 The Grave-clothes.
 St. Matthew's Account of the Resurrection.
 Why the Angel Sat on the Stone.
 Mary's Visit.

The Watch Reports to the Chief Priests.
 A Soft Snap.
 A Willing Victim.
 Angels.
 The Burial Was Temporary.
 Renan's Theory.
 Another Theory.
 The Disciples Were Deceived.
 The Identification.
 Those Conferences Were Secret.
 The Resurrection a "Jumped" Conclusion.
 The Ascension.
 Why Did Jesus Disappear?
 Other Strange Phenomena.
 The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrections.
 A Further Object in Starting that Story.
 What Became of the Roman Guards?
 The Origin of the Story.
 St. Paul's Account.
 St. Paul's Conversion.
 The Cause of Paul's Conversion.
 The Orthodox Idea of Paul's Conversion.
 Reasoning by Analogy.
 The Future Actions of the Disciples.
 Farewell to Pilate.
 Pilate's Removal From Office.
 But the Removal of Pilate Did Not Better Matters in Judea.
 Pilate Foresaw the Conflict.
 Pilate Made no Report.
 The Trouble That Occurred in Rome Over Caesar's Body.
 A Modern Example.
 The Apostles' Preaching.
 The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story.
 The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers.
 Miracle-Workers.
 Other Arguments Answered.
 Is the Resurrection Well Attested?
 Inspiration.
 "It is Safer to Believe Than Not to Believe."
 Conclusion.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS,
 HISTORY, STATISTICS,
 AND
OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
 TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF
 THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON
 WITH PORTRAIT OF
 THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 2 represent The Church Robbing the People.
 3 represent Thanksgiving.
 4 represent Sabbath Laws.
 5 represent Children and the Church.
 6 represent Woman and the Church.
 7 represent The Church and Thomas Paine.
 8 represent Studies in Natural History.
 9 represent The Bible and Science.
 10 represent The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 11 represent Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 12 represent The Atonement Scheme.
 13 represent The Lord and His Works.
 14 represent Prayer.
 15 represent The Creeds.
 16 represent Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 3 represent Missionaries.
 4 represent The Lord's Instruments.
 5 represent Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 6 represent The Church and Slavery.
 7 represent Priests and Politics.
 8 represent Ireland and the Church.
 9 represent Church's Idea of Civilization.
 10 represent The Uses of the Cross.
 11 represent Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 12 represent Persecutions of the Church.
 13 represent Some Allegories.
 14 represent Heaven.
 15 represent Hell.
 16 represent Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
 Vicars of Christ and Viceregents of God.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By
 G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Brissais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingston Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolez, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Heth- ington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Jean Meslier, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joana Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
- 3 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... 5
- 4 Underwood..... 25
- 5 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
- 6 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
- 7 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
- 8 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
- 9 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
- 10 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural and Portrait..... 25
- 11 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
- 12 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 13 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 14 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 15 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
- 16 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
- 17 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 18 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
- 19 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
- 20 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
- 21 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
- 22 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
- 23 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
- 24 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 25 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 26 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
- 27 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 28 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 29 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 5
- 30 Science and Bible Antagonism. C. Watts..... 10
- 31 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
- 32 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
- 33 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 5
- 2 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 3 20. Questions Without Answers..... 5
- 4 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
- 5 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
- 6 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
- 7 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 8 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
- 9 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 10
- 10 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake..... 10
- 11 Acts of the Apostles: A. H. H..... 10
- 12 Lucidous Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
- 13 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 14 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 15 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 16 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 17 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 18 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 30 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.
 It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT. Patent Escapement and regulator. Lantern Pinion. 240 beats to minute. No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz.; exactly like cut. Post-paid for $1.50, 3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & STOREKEEPERS send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.
 ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
 65 COURTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT O. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized,	each $2.50
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	3.00
"	{ 14 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	3.00
"	{ gilt bowl,	"
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	3.50
"	{ sectional gilt,	"
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl,	2.75
"	{ gilt "	3.25
Sugar "	{ satin "	3.00
"	{ gilt "	3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Ba ges, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer. (If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy. Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. B. BAKER & Co., Atty's, Washington, D.C.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
 For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER
 AND BOWELS, TAKE
 RIPANS TABLETS.
 SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

A GENTLE REMINDER.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

- Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
- Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
- Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
- Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
- Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
- Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
- Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
- Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
- Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
- Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
- Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
- Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
- Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
- Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
- Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
- Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

EAGLE BRAND.

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO., Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York. 13t18

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS HELL

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG;

THE LAST JUDGMENT,

as witnessed by him in 1757. Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 108 pp.) sent by mail for $1.00. Address exactly Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society, Dept. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY. 6teow17

AGENTS WANTED.

We want agents to sell our rare Mexican Cactus and Coins; will send three different kinds of samples for $1, and one coin with each order. Address TEXAS CACTUS COMPANY, H. G. STILLWELL, Manager, 208 San Antonio St., El Paso, Texas. 4t17

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

THERE have been riots between Catholics and Orangemen in Belfast and other Irish towns.

MAYOR RANKIN of Elizabeth, N. J., has ordered the chief of police to close candy and cigar stores Sundays.

NONE of the great sovereigns of the world will visit the World's Fair. Indeed, steamship companies report little increase in passenger traffic.

CHINAMEN in the United States have been excused from supplying photographs of themselves, and are not even coming forward to make the registry still demanded.

IN Jersey City, N. J., young hoodlums broke into a Jewish synagogue and did damage to the cost of $2,000, but politicians and a Catholic priest prevented legal punishment.

FAMIN is destroying uncounted numbers in God-loved but nevertheless very destitute Russia. In the government (i. e., province) of Perm, people are dying by the hundreds. In some villages endeavor to bury the dead has ceased.

THE Presbyterian minister of Ecclefechan, Carlyle's nativ place, has excused himself for not sending in a report on "the religion and morals" of his parishioners on the ground that "there is neither religion nor morals in the district."

THE report of the Chicago health department shows the value of sanitation. During six years the mortality from typhoid fever has been reduced 35 per cent; that from all preventable diseases, 22 per cent. The total death-rate of Chicago in 1892 was lower than that of any other city of its size in the world.

At the Troy, N. Y., presbytery Rev. T. P. Sawin startled his hearers by saying: "I do not like the idea of Calvinism. Calvin was a murderer and a scoundrel. He said many good things and these I will accept, but the church should be an exponent of the gospel and not of Calvinism."

THE people of Dennisville, N. J., are to organize a law and order society for the purpose of making the Jews from the Woodbine, the Baron Hirsch colony, show proper respect for Sunday. Many of the Hebrews of the colony are accustomed to chop and haul wood on Sunday and bring their carts and wagons through Dennisville, much to the scandal of the villagers.

MORGAN, ex-national commissioner of Indian schools, whose term expired on the 1st, and who was appointed by Harrison and hated by Catholics, has become corresponding secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, and in addresses to church meetings condemns the methods of the Catholics in establishing Indian schools; asserts that Catholic influence was used to defeat Harrison at the last election because of his preference for the common as opposed to the parochial school in the education of Indians; and declares it to be the policy of the Catholics to take charge of America, and that they regard as justifiable any means to that end.

At Hackensack, N. J., a band of nine religious fanatics, headed by Huntsman T. Mnason, who had attempted to found a new sect, have been arrested and imprisoned. Their neighbors had been scandalized by their working Sundays, and had previously had two of them imprisoned for this offense. Finally the townspeople set out to rid the neighborhood of the innovators in good earnest, and got them all arrested. One article of the indictment charges the schismatics with conspiring to cheat and defraud Herman Storms out of his property. Another count is: "The conspirators deny, ridicule, and curse all regular religion and religious customs, recognize no Sabbath, and set up a false god of their own, declaring the said Mnason to be the only true and living God."

OF the system of liquor-selling soon to be instituted in South Carolina, Governor Tillman of that state gives this account: "Under the new law, which goes into effect July 15th, there will be no barrooms in the state. Whisky will be dispensed or sold to consumers only by bonded officers in the different counties in sealed packages ranging from half a pint to four gallons. No package will be permitted to be opened on the premises. The only requirement for any citizen to obtain whisky or other stimulants is that he shall sign an order or request stating the amount and kind wanted. Liquor is not to be sold to minors or habitual drunkards. Beer and wine are included. The local officers obtain their liquors from a state commissioner, who purchases all the liquors sold in the state and puts them into sealed packages for distribution. All the goods purchased must be analyzed by the state chemist, and their purity guaranteed."

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 19. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 13, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE NEW SIAMESE TWINS ON EXHIBITION AT CHICAGO.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure

by

Ridicule.

By WATSON HESTON.

Exposure

by

Facts.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address. THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor Study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles awry."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism I. peached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain. Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE!

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,
In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Je-us; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Bod; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification: The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ

IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for 50 cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.

Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Other Newspapers WITH The Truth Seeker.

Any of our readers who desire a New York weekly political paper can obtain one of the following in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER at reduced rates:

Tribune (Republican) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, $3 50
Tribune (Republican) semi-weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 4 25
The Sun (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 3 50
The World (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, 3 50
THE ARENA and THE TRUTH SEEKER Will be sent one year both for $6 00
With large picture premium with the ARENA, 6 50
THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year for $6 75

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 19. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 13, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - - MAY 13, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

The Credit for Columbus's Discovery.

Roman Catholics are turning to account the present enthusiasm over Columbus's discovery. They are diligently declaring throughout the country that Catholicism was the mother of that discovery. They assert that much credit should redound to their religion from the fact that Columbus, with the individuals who enabled him to sail and the nation whence he sailed, belonged to that faith. One Catholic journal, for instance, says: "The recent Columbus celebrations will be of immense advantage to the church, especially in the United States." The paper cites the above-mentioned supposed claims to the gratitude of the modern world, and then goes on to indicate how the church will benefit by the part which she will take in the Fair. It says: "Among the things to be exhibited at Chicago, figuratively speaking, will be the Roman Catholic church, and that exhibit will certainly prove to her advantage if it is properly presented to the American mind. The justice, the simplicity, the beauty and majesty of her doctrines cannot fail to attract. The esthetic side, too, her liturgy and ritual and music, will no doubt please many." This Catholic review of the situation omits to mention, what others point to chiefly, that the Roman church will render foremost of all its displays its school exhibit. For this it has been granted immense space, and it intends to make it so impressiv as to persuade onlookers that the Catholic church in the United States is exceeding earnest and able in the education of youth. The effect, it hopes, will be of prime efficacy in leading Americans to acquiesce in some system of state-supported Catholic schools. The same article proceeds to express a belief that, with proper management, "the Columbus celebrations may be of immense influence in preparing the way for a closer union of all mankind in one universal Christian republic, and for the final conversion of the world." Another Catholic article thus summarizes the attentions that our governing bodies, etc., have paid the papal church:

"When Mr. Chauncey Depew, inviting Archbishop Corrigan to make an address at the dedication of the New York state building in Jackson park, Chicago, gave as reason that it was under the auspices of the Catholic church that the discoverer went forth to his incomparable work, he voiced a sentiment which is uppermost in all sincere hearts, and stated a fact of which history leaves no doubt. The universal enthusiasm with which the quadro-centenary of the discovery has been celebrated by foreign Catholic nations, and notably by the two most concerned, Italy and Spain; the preëminent part which Catholics of the United States have taken in the festivities of this month in every city of the land, not only within the walls of their churches, but also in civic street parades and in banquet halls, give ground to the sentiment, and are evidences of the fact. The recognition given to the sentiment and the fact by the state of New York, in the invitation to the archbishop of the greatest city of the republic to honor by his presence and words that state's contribution to the Chicago festivities of last week and the national group of Exhibition buildings, has been emphasized by the nation at large in the invitation tendered to Archbishop Ireland to inaugurate the work of the Congress Auxiliary of the World's Fair, by an oration delivered in the auditorium before the intellectual élite of the land on the night of Friday, the 21st; again emphasized in the invitation given Cardinal Gibbons to conclude with prayer the dedicatory ceremonies in Jackson park on the morning of the same day; most especially emphasized in the invitation given by the secretary of state to Leo XIII. to send a personal representative to the inauguration ceremonies, and also emphasized in the reception given Mgr. Satolli, the pope's legate, on his arrival in the port of New York, when the administration bestowed on him unusual demonstrations of most gratifying courtesies."

Then, within the last few days another incident affording the Catholics matter of self-gratulation has occurred. How delightful, they exclaim, that when the duke de Veragua, the eleventh in descent from Columbus by blood, landed in New York with elaborate ceremonial and welcome, his first act was to return thanks to God before the altars of St. Patrick's cathedral, and his next to visit Catholic institutions.

But the Catholic church deserves of all this gratitude and honoring not one jot. Its connection with America's discovery was as a matter of fact such as to call not for thanks but for the most unqualified reprobation. It was not a forwarder of that discovery, but a thoroughgoing opponent of it. It strove most earnestly to prevent the discovery; and did, we may in all reason infer, defer it to a period centuries after it would otherwise have taken place.

The fact that Columbus, with some of his helpers, were believers in Catholicism is properly to be reckoned, in respect of its use as evidence for the worth of that religion, as of but infinitesimal value. Clergymen attribute to their religion everything good done in a nation which in general believes that faith; but they can legitimately ascribe to it only that which is performed as a clear outcome of it, and not those deeds flowing from other factors of human endeavor. The essence of religion is dependence on control of events by supernatural beings, and by humans through supplication of those beings; while the fundamental conception of Infidelity, this-worldliness, Rationalism, is the government of events by natural law in a sequence of cause and effect, and the necessity of men themselves producing certain causes in order that they may obtain the accompanying desired effects. Plain is it, then, that to religion can be ascribed only those events produced by supernatural agencies, with those due to the influence of religious belief on the character of men; while to anti-supernaturalism, Infidelity, Secularism, must be set down all works born of man's dependence on his own efforts under natural law. It is obvious that Columbus's discovery belongs to the latter of the two classes, and should be credited not in the least to Catholicism but wholly to naturalism. In few words, Columbus's discovery was in no degree made by supernatural agents or through supernatural means, and hence supernaturalism merits none of its credit; it was made wholly by natural agents through natural means, and hence naturalism merits all of its credit.

It is permissible to add Columbus's feat in with the other achievements of Catholics, and advance the total with a view to showing that peoples under Catholicism are made successful and great by that belief. Catholics frequently enumerate the list of meritorious deeds of believers in their religion, and infer thence a beneficent effect inherent in that belief. But this inference is as sophistical as the one in our preceding paragraph. Catholics may, by extending their drag-net over very many peoples and very many centuries, collect a number of great doers which at first seems respectable. But to a comparison of Catholicism with Freethought in this respect, a setting off of this list against one collected from an equal number of Freethought peoples and centuries is required. And what would be the comparative proportions of such a list as the latter we need not deign to discuss when we perceive that the great men and deeds among but a handful of Freethinkers and during but a few recent generations far outnumber those of the whole vast field and course of Catholicism.

Before entering on a history of how the church combated the discovery of America, we will pause to note that the character of Columbus, and of the persons involved in his enterprise, was far from the admirable one pretended by Catholics. Columbus—it is not pretty, but is the duty of a TRUTH SEEKER, to say—previous to his American voyage was during considerable portions of his career a pirate. He was an unscrupulous, fierce, and rude adventurer. His learning was scanty. The quality that he personally contributed to the discovery was that of daring; the learning and profound reasoning which brought forth the idea that the feat was possible, belonged elsewhere. To the brain, the mind, that had conceived the idea of the roundness of the earth, he was the arm, the hand. Daring deserves some commendation; but it is a quality far from uncommon, and requires praise little out of the ordinary. The hand justly claims a part of our eulogy for a feat that it executes at the behest of the brain; but it may claim only a small part; the brain must receive by far the greater. And the mind which had conceived the idea that animated this hand, this Columbus, was a mind not Catholic, but that of the Greek philosophers who had surmised the earth's rotundity before Christianity was born, and of the Mohammedan Moors approaching Columbus's time, and a few Christian thinkers who on this one thing were bold enough to dissent from the teachings of their Bible and church. Leaving this point, let us note a certain characteristic of Columbus, quoting the words from a late account of his life: "He evidently concurred in the opinion that all the nations who did not acknowledge the Christian faith were destitute of natural rights, and that the sternest measures might be used for their conversion and the severest punishments inflicted upon them if obstinate in unbelief. In this spirit of bigotry he considered himself justified in making captives of the Indians and transporting them to Spain to have them taught the doctrines of Christianity and in selling them for slaves if they pretended to resist his invasions." Before quitting this aspect of the subject, a word on the king and queen who supplied the expeditionary ships. The "saintly queen," Isabella, celebrated by Prescott and others, was a cruel mother, a hated wife, the oppressor of the helpless Jews, the author of the Inquisition. She had no pity for the countless Hebrew women and children whom she drove from her realm; she even robbed them in their flight of their jewels and their gold. King Ferdinand, worthy of his wife, left his daughter Katherine to suffer from want in England; he was cold, cruel, immoral; a faithless husband, a treacherous ally, a dangerous friend. If one feels to celebrate these personages, Columbus and his immediate aiders, in our present festivities, he should, we think, be satisfied with doing so with an allowance, an abatement; he will best, we deem, glorify but a part of their mental make-up, their courage and executive abilities, letting pass their so numerous faults. Taken altogether, their characters are not advisable for extolment and imitation when so many better can be found. Or one may celebrate the noble endeavor and auspicious fortune, in general, that have made possible our magnificent Exposition. Or he may tender his homage and congratulations to those men of the last few centuries who have been the real fathers of our present high estate, men great and good—different pretty much altogether, it must be allowed, from the rude children of fanatic Spain. There need be no lack of objects for gratitude and exaltation at this glorious moment in the world's history; perhaps the greatest difficulty would be to choose among so many; we suggest merely that more advantageous subjects can be had than the extremely faultful characters proffered by the Catholics and accepted by the unfortunate many.

Previous to setting about an account of the long struggle of the church to suppress the doctrine that the earth is round and a voyage like that of Columbus practicable, we will notice some views expressed by Eugene Lawrence in Harper's Magazine. In Mr. Lawrence's article—called by Catholics an "infamous paper"—he says that it is to the Arabs and the Jews, hated of Christians, that we probably owe the discovery of America. From them, he calls to our mind, the Spaniards and Portuguese learned all that they knew of civilization. The Arabs from the ninth to the twelfth century were the rulers of the sea, the founders of European commerce. The adventurous Arab sailors were found on every hand. It is from them that Portugal and Spain learned the art of ship-building, as most of the other arts. The Bohemian travelers in 1466 found the Spaniards everywhere clothed in Arab dress, imitating the Arab manners, riding Arab horses, and the kings surrounded by Arab guards. Splendid Cordova and matchless Granada still ruled the taste of the peninsula. Even the chief terms of business and of naval affairs, of police and finance, the Spaniards borrowed from the Arabs. The maravedi, an Arab coin, was used in the time of Columbus to express all their moneyed transactions. It was at Lisbon that Columbus planned his voyage. And long before, when Lisbon was a flourishing Arab city, intelligent and splendid, Edrisi (ii, 26, 27) relates that an expedition was sent out from its port to explore the dark and unknown ocean. The commanders were brothers known as the Almagrigrins, or the Wandering Brothers. They must have set sail before the year 1150. They crossed the Atlantic, it is said, visited unknown islands, and discovered new lands. After a weary voyage of many months they returned in safety. A street was named after them in Moorish Lisbon, called the street of the Almagrigrins. Possibly the attempt might have been renewed, and a Moorish city might have sprung up in Cuba or Hispaniola, at Philadelphia or New York. But soon the conquering Christians took Lisbon, and checked its advance in knowledge. For many centuries it was given up to war and superstition. At length it revived the Moorish instincts of trade and commerce. Lisbon became the center of discovery, and Columbus, learning its traditions, in all probability learned with the rest the story of the Almagrigrins, and was thereby animated in his own attempt. Leaving aside the foregoing conjecture, that Columbus but finished an enterprise begun by Christless Moors, we will advert to the fact that Columbus himself tells us his attention was first drawn to his great venture by the writings of Averroes. Now, Averroes, the great Mohammedan scientist, was of all the abominations of the church the one declared by them the most detestable. To hinder the progress of his Rationalistic and scientific thinkings through Europe, the champions of the supernatural threw themselves against his great name with the most desperate fury. He was held worse than a Mohammedan, viler than a heathen, and the Averroists his followers were loathed as "men who deny Genesis and bark at Christ." Such and so unchristian were the sources of that conception which controlled the wild and desperate adventurer Columbus when he pointed the heads of the Pinta, the Nina, and the Santa Maria toward American shores.

That the Christian church up to the time of Columbus taught that the earth is flat instead of round and circumnavigable; that it grounded this doctrine throughout on texts from that ever-flowing fount of delusion, the Bible; and that it suppressed rational inquiries into the matter and persecuted the investigators, is a thing so well worth contemplating that we will set it forth in detail in our next paper.

Crowds Clamor for Sunday Admission.

The week preceding last Sunday was confused with contradictory rumors as to whether the Columbian Exposition would be open on that sanctified day.

Roused by reports that it would be closed, Charles W. Chingman, who represents ten thousand shares of stock in the Columbian Exposition Company, served notice in writing upon the directors that the gates of the Fair must not be closed on that or any succeeding Sunday. If they are Mr. Chingman threatens to begin legal proceedings.

On the other hand, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Christian Endeavor Society, the American Sabbath Union, and other like organizations of busybodies, poured in threats of retribution if the Fair were open. Editor Wells of the Golden Rule, the organ of the Christian Endeavor Society, said that fully one million members of that organization have signed pledges not to patronize the Fair if it is opened on Sunday. Other menaces of Christian boycott were made.

At last, on Saturday, President Higinbotham announced that the Fair would be closed on the morrow in the full sense of the term. None except those who had important business on the grounds would be admitted. Even a commissioner or director who was merely sight-seeing or showing friends around would be shut out. "I shall issue no order to keep the gates closed," said Mr. Higinbotham. "That is unnecessary. The gates will be closed to-night, and will remain closed to-morrow. If they were to be opened to-morrow an order would be necessary. This rule for to-morrow is strict. Even members of the press will be excluded."

This Sunday-closing order, be it understood, applied only to last Sunday. Mr. Higinbotham would say nothing about the Sunday following. The gates may be open then. There is to be a meeting of the Board of Directors on Friday, the 12th, a day or two after our going to press, and the question will be discussed. It is the general belief that at that meeting the advocates of a seven-days-a-week Fair will win.

The slow action on this question is due to the conflict between the Columbian Exposition directory and the national commission. This Fair is a triple-headed concern. The local board, as the Columbian directory is called, often steps on the toes of the national commission, and the national commission gets in the way of the local board. Besides these there is a board of control. There are three chiefs of the Fair, President Higinbotham, President Palmer, and Director-General Davis. Such a complicated machine necessarily moves with great slowness, and there is many a hitch when one set of wheels runs against another set of wheels. The local board and the national commission disagree on the Sunday-opening question. A majority of the members of the national commission are against it. But a motion to open the Fair on Sunday would win in the local board. The national commission is infamously given to demagogism. There are United States Senators and others on it and they fear their rural constituents. It is the general opinion that this body does not really care whether the gates are open on Sunday or not, but it wants to put itself on record as voting against opening them. If with that it can wash its hands of the matter it will be satisfied. It is willing to throw all further responsibility on the local board. If the latter opens the gates and the national commissioners cannot be held responsible by country constituents they are not going to say anything. But in the mean time they want to know whether they can be held accountable for any such action on the part of the local board.

Nine out of every ten persons are convinced that the Fair will be open every Sunday in two or three weeks. Public opinion is overwhelmingly in favor of opening the gates on Sunday.

The women managers lent the weight of their authority to Sunday opening. At a meeting Mrs. J. Frank Ball, of Delaware, offered a resolution that the Women's Building be closed on Sunday, even if the World's Fair gates were open, to show the respect of the women managers for the American Sabbath. A shout of "No!" "No!" almost masculine in its volume, was at once set up. Mrs. Ryan, of Texas, moved that Mrs. Ball's resolution be tabled, and the motion was carried.

On the day of which we are speaking, Saturday, a dispatch came from Chicago saying that in event of opening on any Sunday "an injunction will be sought in the courts by Sabbatarians, citing the terms of the Congress's souvenir coin grant of $2,500,000 as a condition precedent to the closing of the Fair on Sunday. The Directors, who have spent many days consulting eminent lawyers, will reply that though they took the grant of $2,500,000, the terms thereof, so far as Sunday closing is concerned, were voided by Congress in taking back $570,000 of it for awards, when it had agreed to make a separate appropriation therefor, and, the issue being joined, the question will be left to a Chicago judge. This official can and will endear himself to the Liberals and estrange the Sabbatarian vote by deciding that the Fair shall be open, or he can decide the reverse with vice-versa results. There is an uneasiness among the Sunday-opening advocates as to what he will do."

Another dispatch read:

"The real opening of the Fair will be about June 1st. That is, it will be ready then, and it is the general impression, whether it is a mistaken belief or not, that the Fair will be open on Sundays by that time. The intervening period can be employed profitably in sending exhibits there and putting them in place.

"On the Midway Plaisance there is dissatisfaction over the present rule about Sunday. These people count upon large profits from Sunday crowds. Mr. Bloom, the manager of the Austrian village, expects his patronage on Sunday to equal that of the week-days. Prof. Carl Hagenbeck, who brought a big menagerie all the way from Hamburg, looks upon Sunday as his chief support, and the others who have attractions along the Midway Plaisance concur with them. The Fair people have figured on big profits from it in case Sunday opening should be the rule. After to-day there are twenty-five Sundays before the Fair closes. They have calculated upon an average Sunday attendance of three hundred thousand—that is, of paying visitors. This may be an overestimate, but such are the figures of the Fair management. This would mean $150,000 every Sunday from admissions, or $3,750,000 for the twenty-five Sundays, while the revenues from the restaurants, gondolas, electric lunches, wheeled chairs, and other concessions, from all of which the Fair gets a percentage, would carry the total well beyond $4,000,000. Even should the Fair by opening the gates on Sunday lose the $2,500,000 of Congressional aid it would make money, unless the managers are at fault with their figures."

Other communications conveyed the conjectures of Chicagoans that the gates were to be closed for once in order that public sentiment against closing, which, it was expected, would be aroused, would be so great as to show clearly that the demand for an open Sunday is general. One dispatch, for instance, read:

"The ambiguity about the continuance of work on the Fair may be intentional, however, and it is even said that to make Sunday closing as obnoxious as possible, the local directory will enforce the closing rule to-morrow to the strictest letter, and allow neither workmen, exhibitors, holders of concessions, foreign commissioners, state and national commissioners, nor directors themselves to enter the gates. Such a policy would cause the loss to the Fair of twenty-four hours, which in its present backward state it can ill afford to suffer, and would result in a general chorus of protest and blame. If it is carried out in all its severity to-morrow the day of complete Sunday opening will, of course, be appreciably hastened; but it would undoubtedly be sacrificing, unduly and indefensibly, the necessary advancement of the Exposition for the directory to insist on so rigorous an enforcement of the wish of Congress, simply to gain a point on the opposition in the national commission, which sees legal obstacles in the way of Sunday opening, by subjecting the protesting commissioners to the odium of delaying the Fair and bringing additional discomfort and inconvenience on every director, commissioner, concessionaire, and exhibitor."

But the Fair was closed, and as a consequence Stony Island avenue, the thoroughfare that skirts the World's Columbian Exposition grounds on the west, was the scene of a remarkable series of demonstrations. Nearly one hundred thousand persons from Chicago and vicinity wanted to get into the grounds. They were not deadheads, but were willing and anxious to pay for entering the Fair grounds. So clamorous did they become that the city police were sent for, the Columbian Guards not being considered capable of coping with a hundred thousand angry men and women. It was a great day, and the like of it was never seen in Chicago before. Although the newspapers announced that morning that no persons not possessing passes should be admitted to the grounds, and that positively no paid admissions were to be received by the gatekeepers, there was an enormous crowd of women and children on Stony Island avenue, opposite the various gates, clamoring for admission. It was in vain that the men on duty at the gates explained that the Exposition was closed for the day and that no one not possessing a pass could be admitted. The explanation only made matters worse, and hundreds of brawny workingmen, who said they were determined to see the Fair to-day because, as they said, they had no time to see it any other day, pressed against the gates and swore they would get in somehow. The Columbian Guards were called out, but the crowd cared nothing for them. In the presence of the crowd, which was constantly increasing, the Exposition force would not have stood much show. There were some suggestions for calling out the firemen on the Exposition grounds to throw water on the crowd and disperse it in that way, but the firemen intimated very sharply that their duties were to put out fires and save property, and not to deluge people who wanted to get into the grounds, no matter how hot they might be. Then the police were called upon, word being sent to the Woodlawn and other stations from the Exposition grounds that the mob was growing stronger and angrier every moment. In a short time there was a sharp rattle of patrol wagons, and a strong body of city patrolmen was on the ground ready for business. Although the crowd had more respect for the police than the Columbian Guard, there was no disposition to get away from the gates, and the officers, forming into a solid column, tried the experiment of shoving the people away. It was very exhausting and very annoying work, and the police soon got tired of it and resorted to their clubs. Many a sore head was the result, but the siege of the gates was raised and the gatekeepers breathed easier. However, men, and even women and children, hung around the gates until it was dark, offering money to the gatemen for admission, and seemed determined not to go away until they had gained entrance to the White City.

A dispatch characterizes the affair thus:

"It was a most remarkable demonstration, and the advocates of Sunday opening on the board of directors are very much encouraged. They say the demonstration to-day shows that the workmen of Chicago and the people of other towns in the vicinity as well want the Fair open on Sundays, and for that reason they propose to force a ballot in the directory upon the subject at the earliest possible moment.

"It is thought the result will be that the directory will vote for Sunday opening, and as soon as that is done the question will be brought into the courts by those who are opposed to opening the gates on the first day of the week.

"The police estimate of the crowd that besieged the gates to-day was one hundred and fifty thousand, but one hundred thousand is another estimate. Altogether it was a demonstration so entirely unexpected that even the strongest advocates of Sunday opening were taken by surprise.

"One of the strong advocates of Sunday opening said to-night: 'If the Fair is allowed to open on Sundays there will be 500,000 persons in attendance on bright days. It is a shame to keep the people out when they have shown in so many ways that they want Sunday opening. They should have it.'

"President Higinbotham said the demonstration to-day was a great surprise to him and Director-General Davis said the same. They didn't discuss the subject at any length, but both are strong advocates of Sunday opening."

We are gladdened by the prospect that the Fair will probably be opened, and the wretched sectists who don't want anybody to enjoy what they can't enjoy themselves defeated. We are mightily pleased with the brave throng who demanded last Sunday admission to the works that they themselves have created or paid for. Hurrah for the bold hearts! And open the gates!

World's Fair Notes.

Chicago has been on tiptoe of expectation the past week, waiting for the clouds to roll by. She has prayed to all the gods, but not one of them seems to interfere with nature's eternal course. It rains and rains, and the mud grows deep and sticketh closer than a brother. A little sunshine here and there gilds the misty landscape, but soon disappears amidst falling torrents. Chicago is defiant, however, and pushes forward the World's Fair with amazing energy. The young giant of the West will not be put down even by cyclones and floods. Finding it useless to trust in providence, she trusts in herself with infinitesimal grit.

A million eyes on Monday morning peer into the foggy streets seeking for a ray of sunshine. But until 10 o'clock it is an even chance between storm and brightness. Nevertheless the vast crowds like a sea roll to the gates of the White City. Five hundred thousand people from morn until noon overflow the horse-cars, the elevated railways, and the hundred trains of the Illinois Central. Every seven minutes a locomotive thunders away with its living freight that will never again take so wondrous a journey to so marvelous a scene. We sweep on with the rest as if by an irresistible impulse. We view the vast procession with flaunting colors, keeping time to the glorious music. We pass the gigantic statue of Columbus fronting the city with perpetual benediction. On we go, mingling with pilgrims from every land, the orient and the occident, to the jeweled shrine where every race is forgotten. The sun is just out in soft splendor over the wide expanse as we reach the thronged and brilliant esplanade with tower and domes surging upward as if to greet an unclouded sky. We are in the portals of the White City where Greek and Gothic architecture mingle in harmonious poise; where superb forms with trumpet and wing seem to be living with the heaving mass below; where golden domes and spires appear to create a light of their own without the touch of the invisible sun; where the great lake beneath the luminous pavilion of clouds, with a thousand ships upon its breast presents a metropolis of its own, and where colors in rich variety are like gems upon the massive walls. Look where you will there are people—on the roofs, the windows, the scaffolding, on parapet and pillar. They cluster and swarm and climb and dangle like bees, two hundred feet over your head. Every available space a yard high, wherever foot can press or hand hold, is occupied. In every direction black masses stream upon the sight, rolling, tumbling, like so many billows. Two hundred thousand people confront the president when he reaches the grand platform. Beside him is Carter Harrison, Director-General Davis, Duke Veragua, and a hundred other celebrities representing almost all the nations of the earth on this gala day. Above is the great dome of the Administration Building; in front are three tall masts upon whose tops in golden sheen are the three caravels, models of the three ships in which Columbus set forth upon his fateful journey. Beneath an immense sounding-board in the rear of the platform is seated the orchestra. In front boils and bubbles the great multitude as if it were on the top of a vast volcano. The murmur of uncounted voices is heard. Some are trying to get in and some are trying to get out. Occasionally the ranks press too close and a woman faints. She is deftly borne to the ambulance while the crowd keeps on roaring and pushing. Everyone is covered with mud. It is six inches deep. The Secular Pilgrim takes his chances with the rest. He is not among the dignitaries, but with the democratic masses. He is covered with real estate. He is obliged to stand on tiptoe to see anything. Once in a while Charlesworth's stalwart arms lift him up and he catches a bird's-eye view of the tumultuous surroundings. It is at times a struggle for existence, and if your ribs are not crushed in it is fortunate. Still, everyone is good-natured. It's no use to get mad. The only way is to laugh, and grow thin, if possible. It wouldn't do to grow fat. If a two-hundred-pounder rolls against you, you must simply roll against the next man, and tell him you couldn't help it. He will believe you. When the music burst forth there was something of a pause in the vast contortions of the multitude, as if like a huge snake it had been charmed to a gentle motion by the melodious breath. The music swelled to magnificent strains of triumph and of glory; martial strains, pathetic strains, telling the story of man's martyrdom and victory. And then, alas, droned the prayer, so long, so tedious, so useless. Nobody could hear it, not even God. The people didn't want the performance. It made them tired. "Why don't he stop?" was the universal exclamation. But he didn't stop, for you see he was uttering that prayer for the press. It would look nice in print. I don't suppose one ever prayed to so vast an audience and had so few listeners. He could not be heard a dozen feet away. They say that President Cleveland joined audibly in the Lord's prayer at the close. Well, it's just like him. He's getting to be awfully pious. Does that mean a third term and colossal ambition? I do distrust these fellows that pray. Yes, it's pray and prey, that's what it is. The petition was ended at last, and the corrected manuscript handed to the reporters. I presume God will be very much interested when he reads the "proof." Next vibrates the poem, and as this was written by Croffut, a pretty good Liberal, it is rather excellent; as good as any poem ever written for such an occasion. It was musical, charming, and embodied a pleasant fancy. It had some noble passages, and was radiant with that excellent quality, brevity. Of course nobody can write a supreme lyric by invitation of a committee. I don't think any Exposition poetry will be immortal, save as a relic; not as rhythm, or life. After the poem, the director-general made a straightforward, interesting address. It simply gave the facts of the case, which are in themselves sufficiently impressive. He said:

The department of finance of the Illinois corporation has provided for the great work upward of $20,000,000. The department of works and its many bureaus of artists, architects, engineers, and builders have transformed these grounds, which, twenty-one months ago, were an unsightly, uninviting, and unoccupied stretch of landscape, into the beauty and splendor of to-day. They have conspicuously performed their functions, and these grand avenues, these Venetian waterways, the finished landscapes, the fountains and sculptures and colonnades and these grand palaces stand out as a monument to their genius and their skill, supplemented by the labor of that grand army of skilled artisans and workmen, all citizens of this republic.

The chiefs of the great departments, who have exploited this mighty enterprise and gathered here the exhibits forming the picture that is set in this magnificent frame, have confirmed the wisdom of their selection. No state or territory of the Union has escaped their voices; no land on the globe that has a language but has been visited and the invitation of the president of the United States personally presented. Fortunately, at the inception of this enterprise our government was, and still is, at peace with the whole world. Commissioners were sent to Europe, to Asia, to Australia, British North America, and to the islands of the seas; so that to-day the whole world knows and is familiar with the significance of the great peace festival we are about to inaugurate upon this campus, and all the nations join in celebrating the event which it commemorates.

This inclosure, containing nearly seven hundred acres covered by more than four hundred structures, from the small state pavilion occupying an ordinary building site to the colossal structure of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building covering thirty acres, is filled and crowded with a display of the achievements and products of the mind and hand of man such as has never before been presented to mortal vision.

The habits, customs, and life of the peoples of our own and foreign lands are shown in the variegated Plaisance; those stately buildings on the north are filled with the historical treasures and natural products of our several states. The artistic, characteristic, and beautiful edifices, the headquarters of foreign commissions, surrounding the Gallery of Fine Arts, which in itself will be an agreeable surprise to the American beholder, constitute the grand central zone of social and friendly amenities among the different peoples of the earth.

Surrounding this grand plaza where we stand and reaching from the north pond to the extreme south is the great mechanical, scientific, industrial, and agricultural exhibition of the resources and products of the world. These have been secured from the four quarters of the globe and placed in systematic order under the supervision of these great departments, and while all the material upon the grounds is not yet in place, I am gratified to be able to present to the president of the United States at this time the official catalog containing a description and the location of the exhibits of four thousand participants in the Exposition. The number of exhibitors will exceed sixty thousand when everything is in place.

The citizens of our country are proud and always will be proud of the action of the Congress of the United States of America in authorizing and directing this celebration to take place for the appropriation of more than $5,000,000 in its aid, and for the unswerving support and encouragement of the officers of the government.

(Continued on page 296.)

Communications.

Address by J. J. McCabe.

DELIVERED AT THE ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE ALBANY JEFFERSON SOCIAL CLUB ON APRIL 13TH, THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF THOMAS JEFFERSON.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: To-day we celebrate the one-hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson, the greatest political philosopher and statesman that our country has ever produced. Gifted by nature with all those faculties which are indispensable in the composition of a great, intellectual, and judicious patriot and leader of men, education took deep root, the moral sentiments and noble aspirations of the embryo statesman found their affinities and formed their attachments, in the greatest man that ever breathed the wholesome air of old Virginia.

Not more than once in a lifetime does a great master, a profound preceptor, find a student on whom he ventures to lavish all the wealth of his knowledge, experience, and thoughtful speculations in the realm of philosophy and science.

Dr. William Small, professor of mathematics in the College of William and Mary, had such a pupil in Thomas Jefferson, and never was teacher better requited for his care, never was hope reposed in more fruitful soil or anticipation better realized.

After leaving college, Jefferson studied law under the celebrated George Withe, of Virginia, and was called to the bar in 1766. Three years after this event, at the age of twenty-five, he entered the House of Burgesses of Virginia and joined the Revolutionary party. In 1774 he published a "Summary View of the Rights of British America," a bold, independent pamphlet addressed to the king. In 1775 he was elected a member of the Continental Congress and in the following year drafted the Declaration of Independence.

Between 1777 and 1779 he was employed on a commission for revising the laws of Virginia, the labor of the commission falling almost entirely on Jefferson. The revision of these laws wrought a complete revolution in jurisprudence in the matter of the relation of the state to the religious convictions and the physical obligations of the individual. Henceforth mental freedom and the liberty of speech and the press should not only be tolerated, but they must be protected, by the laws of Virginia. The essential elements of the Virginia statute for religious freedom were afterward incorporated in the Constitution of the United States. Before Jefferson's statute for religious freedom became a part of the law, there were many white men in Virginia who had no rights or privileges that even a negro was bound to respect. Every company of emigrants that had landed on American soil brought their household gods and superstitions with them, with recollections of the intolerant and barbarous precedents established by their religious adversaries; consequently, when they established themselves on the land they also established their religion by law, with the view of not permitting any other to exist in the province. The patriarchs, prophets, and kings of the Hebrews became their patron saints, and all that part of the Jewish code that had been assimilated by the English and Scotch reformers was engrafted on the civil law with fearful penalties attached for violations or evasions. Roman Catholicism in Maryland, too weak on account of its environments to prohibit the exercise of other forms than its own, contented itself in the enactment of laws against blasphemy or free speech.

It was to overthrow this demon of religious insanity and to beget a spirit of fraternal sympathy and good-will among the people of the American colonies that Jefferson aimed, when he laid the cornerstone of the future American republic while acting in a representative capacity as a law-maker for the people of Virginia. In 1779 he was elected governor of his native province, then a state by virtue of the existing Revolution and the Declaration of Independence; and in 1781 he composed the celebrated "Notes on Virginia." In November, 1783, he again took his seat in the Continental Congress, and in May following he was appointed minister plenipotentiary to act with Franklin and Adams in the negotiation of commercial treaties with the governments of Europe.

In 1785 he was appointed minister to France, performing the duties of the office with great credit to himself and the people of the United States till 1789, when he returned to America and was placed by President Washington at the head of the department of state.

In 1797 he became vice-president and in 1801 president of the United States. Having been prepared for discharge of the duties of that exalted position by an experience and philosophical education which has never fallen to the lot of any other man, his two terms of eight years in administering the government form the most glorious epoch in the history of our country. From the establishment of the government down to the present day no man has occupied the presidential chair who was a truer patriot. No man has ever lived whose individuality was more deeply impressed on the institutions of his country than Thomas Jefferson. He founded a party on a theory of government republican in form and democratic in principle, which, if properly comprehended and appreciated by those who call themselves his followers, neither the ravages of time, nor the assaults and machinations of ambition, cupidity, or corporate interests, could ever prevail against. He was no machine politician. He believed and taught that the welfare of the republic depended on the exercise by every citizen of the most independent and intelligent action in wielding the franchise bestowed on him by the laws of the country. A political organization depending for its success on the amount of patronage that it would be able to bestow on its adherents, would be regarded by him as a band of conspirators. In a great republic like our own, where progressive measures should not only be initiated but carried to a successful issue before being thought of in the Old World, through agitation and the free intelligent action of the people, it is the principle or measure proposed that the intelligent American citizen should always vote for, but not to keep certain men in office merely because they are labeled with the name of any party. A political organization nominally connected with but practically separated from one of the great national parties, based on the spoils system, if its influence and power should be extended beyond its local habitation by means of affiliating branches or ambitious demagogues becomes a menace to liberty, progress, and good government. If its demands are not complied with, it may combine with the political opponents of the party of which it pretends to be a subordinate part in order to secure the spoils and patronage of office.

Consequently it can have no regard for public sentiment or moral principles. It will multiply offices and utterly destroy all respect for law. In it the demagog will thrive and the political dictator amass fortunes of ill-gotten wealth.

Yes, Jefferson would have regarded political organization for the purpose of power and spoliation as a conspiracy against a free, liberal democratic form of government. He was in favor of the abolition of slavery and labored fearlessly to have the institution destroyed before it became strong enough to be a disturbing element in national affairs. Although he inherited many slaves he treated them humanely and finally gave them all certificates of freedom.

He added to the national domain a tract of territory greater in extent than that contained in the original thirteen colonies. He desired that the institutions which he had so prominent a hand in founding should be extended to the isthmus of Darien with all the adjacent islands on the south, and to the Arctic ocean on the north.

Although the population of the country was comparatively small in his day, and the military arm of the government weak, yet his foreign policy was firm, strong, and independent.

He encouraged the development of the arts and sciences to the end that the American people might perfect their independence of all foreign monopolies, institutions, and disturbing influences. On the expiration of his second term as president he immediately retired to his residence at Monticello. Although he now disconnected himself from the perplexing cares of official life forever, yet the mind that had made the most indelible impression on the institutions of the country was still fresh and vigorous, and while he devoted much of his time to literary pursuits, the advancement of science, and the founding of the University of Virginia, still the welfare of the country, the progress of political events, and the drift of public sentiment on all important questions were matters that the greatest statesman of the age could not fail to be deeply interested in.

Although far removed from the actual scenes of political strife, practically he was present by counsel, advice, and public correspondence until July 4, 1826, when he passed serenely away on the fifteenth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

In stature and person Jefferson was six feet two inches tall, very erect and well formed, but spare. He was simple and unaffected in manner and temperate in habits. Such was the author of the Declaration of Independence; the father of the statute for religious freedom; the founder of the University of Virginia; the great political philosopher and statesman; the aggressive champion of American institutions; the exemplar of republican democracy; the sagacious and heroic president; the fearless and honest public citizen—Thomas Jefferson.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Free-thinkers.

The annual congress of the Belgian Freethought Federation will be held at Liège on May 21st and 22d. The definite program of the congress has not been published yet, but two subjects are certain to come up for consideration, viz.: "The Legal Status of Woman," and "Reports of the Political Activity of Freethought Societies."

During the first three months of this year Spain witnessed 289 first-class bull-fights in which 1,594 bulls were killed, and 307 minor exhibits in which were killed 1,407 young bulls, while two picadores have lost their lives, and sixteen espadas and banderillos have sustained severe injuries. On an average about fifteen horses lose their lives at each exhibition. Spain, as our readers are aware, is a very pious and most Christian country.

Mr. Pedro Rodriguez, of Aguilas, Spain, has received an addition to his family in the shape of a girl baby. This in itself is a common occurrence, but we take pleasure in congratulating Mr. Rodriguez, inasmuch as this is his fourth child, and none of the others have had any religious mummeries performed over them. This is much in Spain, and it would be well if American Freethinkers, who have less to fear, would "go and do likewise" with their children. Show your manhood and independence.

A new Freethought society has seen the light of day at Vienna, Austria. It is founded by Miss Clara Stockinger, and meets twice a month to listen and debate on a given subject. Owing to that funny "absolute-liberty-of-conscience" paragraph in the Austrian constitution, this society is a private one, which gives two monthly dinner-parties. The old society, founded by our friend Edward Schwella, has existed over six years and has over two hundred members. It would be well for our Austrian friends to make one society of the two, and then pull together.

Since Mrs. Anna B. Wicksell has taken charge of the business management of Fritänkaren the financial status of this paper has considerably improved. The Swedish Freethinkers are to be congratulated upon the acquisition of so competent a lady manager, for while a cause is young, and its adherents have to fight for recognition or even existence, every dollar counts. Fritänkaren, which is as heretofore edited by our friend Viktor E. Lennstrand, has improved continually since its first appearance, and we advise our Swedish-American friends to subscribe for their newly arrived countrymen who are unable to read the English language.

The German Freethought Federation will hold its annual congress on May 27th to 29th at Carlsruhe. Saturday and Sunday forenoon will be devoted to business. Sunday afternoon Prof. Ludwig Büchner, of Darmstadt, author of "Force and Matter," a most excellent work, will deliver an address on the subject of "Freethought and the Social Question." He will be followed by Dr. Rüdtt, of Heidelberg, who will give a discourse "From the History of Religious Mysteries." In the evening there will be a banquet, with instrumental music, singing, declamations, and speeches. On Monday, the last day, there will be an excursion to either Heidelberg or Baden-Baden.

Reading the letter headed "God Addressed by Post-Office" in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 22d recalled to mind a letter published in a late number of the English Salvation Army organ, the War Cry. The letter found in that paper is copied from one sent from heaven to General Booth. It is written by the angels that escorted Lot out from Sodom, and it states that the War Cry has a large number of readers in heaven and that religious papers and magazines are in great demand. Still, for safety's sake, St. Peter, or some other celestial coon, is delegated as censor of the press and permits nothing but what is orthodox and moral. Have our readers ever studied the advertising pages of a religious journal?

The Swedish daily paper Ystad's Allehande contains some "moral" precepts given by a religious teacher to his pupils. We give but a few of these:

A girl must not borrow a knife or anything else from a boy, for it is a sin.

A girl must not look at a boy, or a boy at a girl, for it is a sin.

Boys and girls must not go a-sleighriding together, for it is a sin.

A boy must not touch a girl, for it is a sin.

You should not read any books but the catechism and the Bible, and to do otherwise is a sin.

You must not say adieu, for it is a sin.

Reading this we do not doubt the statement that a new messiah, No. 1,000 and something, by name Lindquist, has made his appearance in central Sweden and is gaining many followers.

Palmira Añón, a staunch Spanish Freethinker, died at Requena, Spain. His family lot was in the Catholic burial-ground, but the church refused the admittance of his remains. The mayor of the city was appealed to and he decided in favor of the deceased's family, and the body of P. Añón was deposited with secular rites, and under police protection. The following day a mob, consisting of priests, monks, and fanatical Catholics, exhumed the coffin and threw it and its contents outside the cemetery. This high-handed proceeding has caused great indignation, and, the mayor being unable to compel the Catholics to show common decency, the higher authorities have been appealed to. In Spain they have a semi-union of church and state.

In Sweden Freethought is "humming," and not alone are meetings held and lectures delivered in Stockholm, but several lecturers are continually traveling the country. We are pleased to correct a misstatement of ours which appeared in these columns a short time ago, stating that the Freethought movement seems to have lost its vigor and shows itself in the capital only. During the past couple of weeks we have received several letters from Sweden and have been informed of the true state of affairs. Our previous statement was founded upon only rarely finding announcements of lectures in the provinces. We are sure our Swedish brethren have the full respect and sympathy of their American confrères. GUSTAV NELSON.

Dialog.

Infidel. Is your God infinit in wisdom and power? Christian. He is.

I. Does he at all times know what ought to be done? C. He does.

I. Does he always do just what ought to be done? C. He does.

I. Why do you pray to him? C. Because he is unchangeable.

I. Is he omnipotent? C. He is.

I. Did he create evil? C. He did (Isa. xlv, 7).

I. What for? C. Because he wanted to.

I. If he is omnipotent why doesn't he kill the devil? C. Because when he made all things, he made a bottomless pit; and put him in. As a matter of course, the devil, finding no bottom anywhere, kept on traveling till he came out on the other side.

I. When God made hell and forgot to put a bottom in it, did he know that the devil would get out? C. He did.

I. Did God afterward find any more use for this bottomless pit? C. He did. And leased it to the devil for an endless period of time, to fill it and immortalize it with his own offspring.

I. Did the voice of God ever walk? C. It did.

I. Where? C. In the garden of Eden.

I. Is God omnipresent? C. He is.

I. When young Adam played the game of hide-and-God-go-seek, did he know God's voice was looking for him? C. He did, and went and hid behind some trees.

I. Did God's voice find Adam? C. It did, after calling several times to him.

I. Why did God go down in the cool of the day, when he is omnipresent? C. To tell him that he ate of the forbidden fruit, and that he was naked; and to make him a new suit of clothes.

I. Did God do anything else on that particular occasion? C. He did, he put two high officers in the garden, and then cursed Adam and sent him adrift, which he will do with all the cursed Infidels.

I. Did God ever have a wrestling with Jacob? C. He did (Gen. xxxii, 24, 27).

I. Who got the best of that fight? C. Jacob had the best of it till near the break of day, then through a strategical movement God disjoined his thigh; and even then had to ask Jacob to let him go.

I. Why did God break Jacob's leg? C. Because he is an all-merciful and all-loving father.

I. Do you believe the caricature on infinit wisdom to be blasphemous? C. I do.

I. Did God ever get angry and swear? C. He did (Ps. xcv, 11). It is easy to see then why swearing is so common in Christian countries.

I. Did God ever ride upon horses? C. He did (Hab. iii, 8).

I. Can you tell me in what part of the universe those horses are kept, and who grooms them, etc.? C. God's ways are past finding out.

I. Did God ever tell anybody to buy liquor and get beastly drunk? C. He did (Jer. xxv, 27; Deut. xiv, 26).

I. Did that all-loving and merciful God say, cursed is he that keepeth back his sword from blood? C. Jer. xlviii, 10.

I. Did the heavenly father ever tell mothers and fathers to eat their own children? C. He did (Lev. xxvi, 29).

I. If God was to tell you to eat your own offspring, would you do it? C. You are asking too many impertinent questions. D. A. MELL.

Lordsburg, Cal.

My Creed.

What is my creed I scarce myself can tell.

It is no written law that I obey;

I fear no angry God nor endless hell

To wait for us poor creatures of a day;

I do not seek the Bible's ancient love

For perfect purity's unending power—

Those men who lived and sinned in days of yore

Can scarcely help us in the present hour.

No church with vain and idle pomp I seek,

Where canting hypocrites kneel down and pray,

Who sin unstintingly throughout the week

And save their virtues for the Sabbath day.

What is the church but fashion's idle hall,

Where pious sinners play at being good,

Who turn away from duty's joyless call

And close their hearts to struggling brotherhood.

All around I see a suffering earth,

So choked by sin that truth can scarcely grow;

Where happiness must perish in its birth,

And sweetest songs are touched by notes of woe;

From every side come cries of grief and pain,

Where life is but a weary weight of years,

With many losses and so little gain,

Whose only birthright is the gift of years.

I do not scorn the souls whose efforts fail;

Whose guileless feet have sometimes gone astray,

For deeper sins hide 'neath religion's veil.

Baptismal waters cannot wash away;

I do not say, believe or thou art lost;

What right have I to judge my fellow-man?

What power have I to judge the tempest-tossed?

He is the saint who does the best he can.

Within my temple by the stream and wood

Sweet Nature teaches of the flight of time,

I learn to worship all the pure and good,

And truth is sacred in its might sublime.

That great unseen I adore

That fills the universe above, below;

That guides the planets by its unseen power,

Creates a world or bids a daisy grow.

This is my creed—perhaps it is no creed,

But—he is wise whose honor is his law,

Who helps a fellow-being in his need;

And preaches not of heaven's narrow door;

An honest man (this is the greatest praise),

Whose deeds are many and whose words are few—

This is the light on which I fix my gaze,

This is my one and only creed—be true.

IRENE LORRAINE COWAN.

The Kind of Man John Remsburg Is.

The Leavenworth, Kan., Daily Times in its issue for Sunday, April 23d, contains sketches of several noted Kansans, among them J. E. Remsburg, whom it disposes of as follows:

Kansas seems to be turning out her share of prodigies, of men and women who have won national distinction in their special lines.

Prominent among these is John E. Remsburg, of Oak Mills, a hamlet about half-way between the two cities of Leavenworth and Atchison. The latter city has always claimed him, but without reason, for he belongs quite as much to Leavenworth as to Atchison.

Mr. Remsburg is the second most gifted, brilliant, and entertaining Liberal or Freethought lecturer in America if not in the world. The mantle of Colonel Ingersoll seems to be falling upon his shoulders, and well he has earned it and gracefully he wears it.

Twelve years ago the Turners of this city celebrated an anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine and Mr. Remsburg was the orator of the occasion. Since then he has delivered over twenty-five hundred lectures. To do this he traveled nearly two hundred thousand miles, in forty-eight states, territories, and provinces and lectured in one thousand different cities and villages, including all the large cities of the United States and Canada.

Many of Mr. Remsburg's lectures have been printed in book form and have a wide circulation. One that attracted much attention and discussion four years ago was his work—"Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian?" This was brought out by the repeated and persistent declaration, on the part of overzealous church people, that Lincoln was a Christian.

Mr. Remsburg collected and presented such an array of facts, such a crushing weight of unquestionable evidence, as to settle the question beyond the shadow of a doubt. The positive testimony of one such witness as Hon. W. H. Herndon, Lincoln's old law partner, ought to have been sufficient, but Mr. Remsburg went beyond and obtained a perfect avalanche of evidence showing that the great statesman was not only not a Christian in any sense of the word, but he was a positive disbeliever in the peculiar dogmas of that system of faith, all the silly fictions invented about his piety to the contrary notwithstanding.

But the world has made rapid progress in the last fifty years and it no longer concerns itself about a man's theological views or professions. If he is an honest man he fills the bill, no difference whether he believes in one, three, or four gods, or none at all. A man does not have to be a Christian in order to be honest, moral, or religious, nor to be a good father, husband, son, or citizen. Some of the best and most lovable men and women in the world have no more use for creeds and dogmas than they have for the cobwebs and sweepings of an old garret.

When scandal-mongers complained to Lincoln that Grant drank whisky he asked them what brand he drank, saying he wanted to buy a barrel of it for every general in the army. A tree should be judged by the fruit it bears. "Deeds and not creeds" is to-day the measure of human fitness. "Every man his own creed-maker," is the prevailing idea. Goodness for goodness's sake—for the love of goodness—and not goodness inspired by the lash or the fear of hell.

As a gentleman and a scholar, Mr. Remsburg will not fail, wherever he goes, to reflect credit upon the state which claims him as her citizen. The demands upon his time are so great as to frequently make it difficult to give dates under a month or two ahead and he is often obliged to decline calls. For some weeks past he has been lecturing in Texas and Arkansas.

If there is a place on earth that needs his services it is the latter state. About five years ago the very remarkable political-religious phenomenon occurred in that state of the two parties each nominating and running seven preachers on their state tickets. One had led off with seven preachers, in order to get a scoop on the vote of that many sects, and that rendered it necessary for the other to follow suit or throw up the sponge. Everybody in Arkansas belongs to the church. As a paradise for preachers it undoubtedly presents attractions unsurpassed anywhere in the known world.

Mr. Remsburg's son George is an enthusiastic student of geology, archaeology, and paleontology, and has made researches and written several interesting papers upon discoveries made by himself in this section relating to prehistoric races.

Deaths.

Erie Monroe Power, son of Mrs. Power, of the Ironclad Age, died April 27th. He was nineteen years of age. The "Farewell" was at his mother's residence on the 30th, the oration being by W. H. Nott, M.D. To Mrs. Power we offer sympathy deep and hearty.

On April 21, 1893, Thomas Cheeny, a native of Ohio, eighty-five years old, was buried without the intervention of the Christian clergy, at Petaluma, Cal. It was his request that he have a secular funeral, and his son Thomas, at whose house he breathed his last, fully complied with his request. Philip Caven read an appropriate selection over his grave. Mr. Cheeny went to California in 1850, returned to Illinois and brought out his family in 1854, and has resided in that state ever since. He is buried alongside his wife, whom he outlived about fifteen years. In accordance with his desires, his body was placed in a redwood coffin and conveyed to the grave in a farm wagon that had been on the ranch for years.

Can Serve the "Infinit One" by Reading The Truth Seeker.

James B. Weaver's paper, the Farmers' Tribune, says:

No man can fairly and honestly reach any decision who has not carefully studied both sides of the question.

The honest and just arbiter, the broad-minded, truth-seeking man is always guided by the dictates of his reason, and never by the blind instructions of faith.

In the opinion of the writer, in all things reason should take precedence over faith—in things secular and things spiritual.

We do not consider ourselves enlightened until we have studied both sides of a secular question. Is it not equally important to an enlightened understanding to study both sides of spiritual and religious questions?

Why should any man accept any tenet, doctrine, or creed without first inquiring into the why and wherefore of it? Why should any man accept any particular religious belief without first submitting the whence and whither of it to the inspection of reason?

If the Christian religion expresses the inexorable law of the master spirit of the universe, as a great many think it does, then it is the religion to which we owe our support, and we can best give that support, and best battle for that religion by keeping posted and thoroughly read up on the argument of its enemies.

And if that religion is not inspired by the infinit being, as a great many men think it isn't, we will best serve ourselves, best serve the world, and best serve the infinit one who is responsible for our existence, by seeking the True Religion.

We can only do this successfully by investigating "the other side."

We do not know of any better means to become thus enlightened than by subscribing for THE TRUTH SEEKER, published in New York, and the leading Freethought journal of the day.

"Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, by R. G. Ingersoll," is the name of a nice little volume sent us by The Truth Seeker Co. of 28 Lafayette Place, New York. Every admirer of the quaint old poet and every lover of elegant and pure diction should procure a copy of this book.—Mellette, S. D., Tribune.

(Continued from page 293.)

To the states of the Union we are largely indebted for active and substantial support. A sum in excess of $6,000,000 has been raised and expended by the states and territories for their official use in promoting their own interests conjointly with the general success of the exhibition.

To the foreign nations who have a representation upon these grounds never before witnessed at any exposition, as shown by the grand exhibits they have brought here and the hundreds of official representatives of foreign governments who are present on this occasion, we bow in grateful thanks. More than $6,000,000 have been officially appropriated for these commissions in furtherance of their participation in the Exposition. The great nations of Europe and their dependencies are all represented upon these grounds. The governments of Asia and Africa and the republics of the Western hemisphere with but few exceptions are here represented.

To the citizens and corporation of the city of Chicago, who have furnished $11,000,000 as a contribution, and in addition have lent the management $5,000,000 more, are due the grateful acknowledgments of our own people, and of all the honored guests who share with us the advantages of this great international festival.

To the tens of thousands of exhibitors who have contributed on a larger scale than all others combined we are under the deepest obligations for their interest and cooperation. To the women of Chicago and our great land, whose prompt, spontaneous, and enthusiastic cooperation in our work turned the eyes of the world toward the Exposition as toward a new star of the East—an inspiration for womanhood everywhere—we extend our cordial and unstinted recognition.

It is our hope that this great Exposition may inaugurate a new era of moral and material progress and our fervent aspiration that the association of the nations here may secure not only warmer and stronger friendships but lasting peace throughout the world.

The grand, concerted illustration of modern progress which is here presented for the encouragement of art, of science, of industry, of commerce, has necessitated an expenditure, including the outlay of our exhibitors, largely in excess of $100,000,000. We have given it our constant thought, our most devoted service, our best energy; and now, in this central city of this great republic on the continent discovered by Columbus, it only remains for you, Mr. President, in your opinion the Exposition here presented is commensurate in dignity with what the world should expect of our great country, to direct that it shall be opened to the public, and when you touch this magic key, the ponderous machinery will start in its revolutions and the activities of this Exposition will begin.

The president was then welcomed with prolonged cheers by the immense multitude, with the waving of handkerchiefs, hats, umbrellas, mingled with many irreverent ejaculations, such as, "How are you, Grover?" etc. The president was in good voice, but could not be heard twenty-five feet away. He made the following brief address:

I am here to join my fellow-citizens in the congratulations which befit this occasion. Surrounded by the stupendous results of American enterprise and activity, and in view of magnificent evidences of American skill and intelligence, we need not fear that these congratulations will be exaggerated. We stand to-day in the presence of the oldest nations of the world and point to the great achievements we here exhibit, asking no allowance on the score of youth.

The enthusiasm with which we contemplate our work intensifies the warmth of the greeting we extend to those who have come from foreign lands to illustrate with us the growth and progress of human endeavor in the direction of a higher civilization.

We who believe that popular education and the stimulation of the best impulses of our citizens lead the way to a realization of the proud national destiny which our faith promises gladly welcome the opportunity here afforded us to see the results accomplished by efforts which have been exerted longer than ours in the field of man's improvement, while in appreciative return we exhibit the unparalleled advancement and wonderful accomplishments of a young nation, and present the triumphs of a vigorous, self-reliant, and independent people. We have built these splendid edifices, but we have also built the magnificent fabric of a popular government, whose grand proportions are seen throughout the world. We have made and here gathered together objects of use and beauty, the products of American skill and invention. We have also made men who rule themselves.

It is an exalted mission in which we and our guests from other lands are engaged, and we cooperate in the inauguration of an enterprise devoted to human enlightenment; and in the undertaking we here enter upon we exemplify in the noblest sense the brotherhood of nations.

Let us hold fast to the meaning that underlies this ceremony, and let us not lose the impressiveness of this moment. As by a touch the machinery that gives life to this vast Exposition is now set in motion, so at the same instant let our hopes and aspirations awaken forces which in all time to come shall influence the welfare, the dignity, and the freedom of mankind.

Then, amidst a wondrous stillness, as if the whole vast scene of lake and sky, of buildings, of people, were a mirror, throbbled the most eloquent moment of all; more eloquent than any president or king, or all the dignitaries of the world; more eloquent than any voice or picture, or strain of mighty music; more eloquent than any epic ever poured from human lips. With graceful gesture the chief magistrate of the republic, the chosen representative of millions of people in this august century, pressed the little button which held in leash the stupendous mechanical forces of the World's Fair, and instantly, as if by magic, sound and color vied in giving unsurpassed glory to the scenes upon which for a space out of the blue heavens the sun sent its effulgent rays, making the clouds beautiful and the golden dome resplendent. The machinery, hitherto pulseless, moved with life, like a planet awakening to its evolutions. The Star Spangled Banner was swiftly unfurled, and the Spanish and Columbian colors greeted it, and the flags of a hundred nations from every point swept the breeze, while in from the lake rolled the boom of heavy guns. Innumerable whistles rent the air, and two hundred thousand people joined in the acclaim. The drapery fell from the magnificent, gilded "Statue of the Republic," and like a glorious apparition, history and prophecy in one, it stood forth in its illustrious beauty. There was a tidal wave of enthusiasm, an indescribable emotion of joy and wonder, as the great panorama was unfolded, while over all surged the strains of "America," the sweet thunders of the orchestra rolling with the chorus of the jubilant throng. And then, as if to throw a touch of strange melancholy into the exultant scene, along the highest balcony of the Administration Building trailed a body of Cody's Indians, in war paint and gorgeous feathers and glittering costume, survivals of the primitive glory of an ancient race, to whom all this magnificence has brought death instead of life. Their homes are disappearing, their hunting-fields, their very existence; they are the sacrifice that renders possible this exceeding greatness. To them all these mighty sounds are a requiem, these pennons a funeral drapery. They must pass away that something grander might flourish. In their barbaric splendor against this blaze of civilization do we behold the tragedy of history, the desolations of evolution. Where is God? It is man against man, and the stronger wins.

The great World's Fair is open, and open it will be, I believe, seven days in the week. In spite of all the formality and nonsense and humbug connected with it, in spite of religious bigotry and wire-pulling and political rascality, this great World's Fair in the heart of it is for Free thought and humanity. It will give us many a noble and inspiring lesson. It will teach not miracle but evolution, not prayer but industry, not religion but science. Superficially viewed it may seem to be nothing but a big show where priest and president play their gaudy roles, but this is only the froth and foam, no part of the real process, of the "deep and sweeping thoughts that lead the world at last to freedom." We must penetrate beneath the surface. In this World's Fair are deeply flowing currents, splendors and powers of human genius that are for progress and progress only. These inner meanings I shall seek to unfold as I traverse from day to day this fairyland of modern science, this epitome of all the world.

The exhibits are in a very imperfect state at present. This is not the fault of the management. The weather has been simply terrible. Besides, under any circumstances it would be almost impossible for such a vast number of exhibits to be ready. I should not advise anyone to visit Chicago until June—or later, if they want to see all there is to be in the World's Fair, and see it at its best. For those who are already here there is enough to be seen. One is amply repaid for his visit, and expenditure of time and money.

In this week's chapter I only give a general outline—the prelude. Hereafter I shall follow a carefully studied route in my descriptions of the World's Fair, and if those who come here for a day, or for a week, or for a month, will follow this route they will find it the most expeditious, and the most comprehensive journey through this vast Exposition, by which they can see the most of its four hundred buildings and thousands of exhibits. Especially must those who visit the Fair only a day or two, or a week, have a carefully marked-out route and follow it closely. If they plunge into this mass of wonders without forethought, they will be simply overwhelmed, and have but a confused idea of the immense spectacle. If those who read these notes will study beforehand the route I have planned they will, I am sure, have a clear, connected, and well-defined picture of the Fair, which will be to them a lasting possession. They will know what they have seen and remember it distinctly, and this is all-important. For those who do not attend the Fair I shall give the very best descriptions I can of its infinite variety.

So hereafter I shall take my fellow-travelers of the Ideal Truthseeker Company through the Midway Plaisance; the Woman's Building, Horticultural Hall, the vista of State buildings, the Children's Building, the official headquarters of foreign nations, the Art Palace, the Fishery Building, the Manufactures and Liberal Arts, Mines and Mining, Transportation, Administration, Agricultural Buildings, etc. It will be a rich and rare journey for all of us—and we shall not look upon its like again.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

An Explanation to the Liberal Public.

When I met Mr. Remsburg in Washington, and he made known to me his plan for a great International Congress, I heartily approved of it, as the best way by which all the Liberals of America could unite in a most important enterprise. I gladly yielded the post of honor to Judge Waite, president of the American Secular Union, and was willing in the subordinate capacity of secretary to do all the work, and without any guarantee of pay, devote my energies to the affairs of the Congress, which could only be made a success by the most persevering labors. The movement was cordially indorsed by all the committee appointed by Mr. Remsburg—a representative committee through whose united influence the greatest of Free thought gatherings was assured. I corresponded with Judge Waite, and offered him without reserve my enthusiastic support. It was thought best to have a meeting of the committee. Judge Waite conferred with me in regard to this, and desired my opinion as to the most favorable place for the meeting. Understanding that Mr. Shaw and Mrs. Lulu Monroe Powers could not be present at the meeting, and that Mr. Green while indorsing the movement would not be able on account of health to render active service, it seemed to me by all odds that New York city was the point. Mr. Macdonald and myself would already be there. Mr. Washburn and Miss Wixon could easily come with but little expense. It was as convenient as any point for Captain Adams. However, Judge Waite selected Buffalo, no doubt with the best of motives, but it was a most unfortunate selection. The only one really accommodated was Mr. Ellis, of Toronto.

While in Montreal Captain Adams told me that he had but little expectation of attending the meeting, and when I said good-bye to him, at my last inquiry, would he be at Buffalo? he only shook his head. I was therefore thoroughly under the impression that he would not attend. When I arrived in Boston and consulted with Washburn I found that he was not going, on account of business at home and the expense. Miss Wixon was engaged to give an address and could not go. It would cost these two members of committee and Mr. Macdonald and myself about $125 to attend the meeting. This is quite a sum for four Liberals not rich in this world's goods to pay out for the congress. Mr. Macdonald and myself wanted to be sure that something would be done. On Monday morning, therefore, Mr. Macdonald telegraphed to Judge Waite, at Chicago, asking whether anyone would be there. No reply was sent to this telegram, and Mr. Macdonald repeated his telegram to Judge Waite at Buffalo, and again to H. L. Green, and saying he and I would come on if anybody was there. No reply to these inquiries was received until Wednesday evening, when Mr. Waite sent word that the committee movement was abandoned. Had he replied to any one of the telegrams Mr. Macdonald and myself would have been at Buffalo. Instead, without consulting anyone, he and Mr. Ellis and Mr. Adams decided to "abandon the committee movement."

The Liberals of this country know how busily I am kept at work. I did not arrive in New York until Tuesday at noon. It was then necessary for me to examine the proofs of my new book, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie," and prepare it for publication, and I could not possibly do this in less than twenty-four hours. If I had gone to Buffalo I should have been compelled to return to New York to finish this important business.

With all these misunderstandings, perplexities, uncertainties, and difficulties, only three members of the committee met—Judge Waite, Captain Adams, and Mr. Ellis—and these three instead of originating a plan of work and consulting, either by telegram or letter, with the other members of the committee, informally met, resolved to abandon the committee movement, and so telegraphed to Mr. Macdonald. This action to me was incomprehensible. Being for years in the pioneer work I could not see any reason for abandoning a great movement simply because only a minority of the committee were present. Time and time again have committees met without a quorum—as the national board of commissioners of the World's Fair did the other day. But is that any reason for discouragement and dissolution? Could not the committee have waited a few hours, telegraphed for Macdonald and myself, who would have come, and then pushed things? Had Judge Waite been through the trials and disappointments that I have been through for the last few years in the Free thought field he would not have been so willing to abandon a movement at a critical point, and give up as hopeless a task which, notwithstanding poverty of means, might have come to a glorious consummation.

However, the deed is done. The withdrawal of three members from the committee movement nullifies its usefulness. I have endeavored without success to induce Judge Waite to reconsider his action. He writes me as follows: "I shall have nothing more to do with the committee movement. You will have the International Congress all to yourself, with no disturbing elements."

There is nothing left then except for the Free-thought Federation of America to issue a call for the International Congress as originally contemplated. No stone has been left unturned so far as the Federation is concerned for a union of our forces. I am altogether in favor of that, while I must be left free to adopt my own method and push on in lines of action which perhaps others do not approve. The Federation has its special work—namely, the organization of direct political force, the formation of a voting body of Freethinkers. All Liberals are not in favor of this. Many believe in other methods. There is no need of any opposition. Let each work in his own way. The field is broad.

The committee movement having been so universally approved, and having been so suddenly and strangely abandoned, I have felt it due to the Liberal public to make this explanation. I accuse no one's motives. I think a great mistake has been made, but I do not throw the burden of blame upon anyone.

The Federation will take up the work abandoned by the committee, and with the means at hand, in spite of all difficulties, will work for the International Congress. It will do its level best whatever may be the result. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Chicago, Ill., Apr. 28, 1893.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

TO THE FREETHINKERS OF AMERICA: There has not been during the present century a grander opportunity for the gathering together of Freethinkers from every clime than is now presented by the great World's Fair at Chicago. It is an opportunity of unequalled importance, and one which every Freethinker should take advantage of and push forward our principles with such vim and enthusiasm that society must at length duly recognize them.

The churches and organizations of every character are taking advantage of this great International Exposition, and we must not remain idle. Freethought should certainly kindle its camp-fire here and give a splendid welcome to its many allies throughout the world. It is therefore desirable that American Freethinkers should combine their efforts for a World's Fair Congress and make this union of our widely scattered forces the most inspiring and the most useful to our cause.

In view of the vast dangers that threaten us there is need now as never before of a combination of our strength, if we would retain what precious freedom we have. Therefore let us give the opportunity to become acquainted with those in other lands who are fighting the same battle as we. We must see each other, if possible, face to face; we must cultivate comradeship; we must meet and give to each other that mutual aid and encouragement which sustain our weaker brethren in the fight, and renew the confidence of those most active and vigorous in this great battle for the emancipation of conscience and the redemption of humanity; and this World's Fair gives us such a splendid opportunity for the consolidation of our ranks that it would be almost criminal to neglect it.

While Christians are uniting by the millions, while they are gathering together and strengthening each other for future conquests, are the Freethinkers of America to present no united front? Shall we not join hands with our friends? Shall we not express our brotherhood and upon such an occasion give a new and broader impulse for future work?

The Freethinkers of the world have not yet been gathered together in one congress; the time has now come when such a meeting may be held and the wish consummated; and now it has fallen to the lot of America to give the summons for this grand parliament of universal Freethought, to be held on its own broad lands. It is a proud and noble position to occupy, and the heart of every Freethinker in our land should beat high with a glorious exultation. We wish to help the Freethinkers of other lands; we wish to show them that we appreciate their work, their sacrifices, and their martyrdom. We want to send them words of cheer, to let them know that in America there is courage, generosity, enthusiasm, and hope. We desire above all that they should come to our land and with the story of their toil and dangers arouse us all to a greater activity, to a clearer vision of the magnitude of our noble cause and the splendid promise of its triumphs. In every respect, to thousands of our friends abroad, to ourselves, to our home-workers, this great Congress will be of incalculable advantage. Here we can meet, and with quickened ear listen to the songs of triumph from our fellow-workers from every land—

From France, foremost of the Infidel nations of the earth; France, the home of Voltaire, Rousseau, Hugo, Renan, and upon whose shores were penned the pages of the "Age of Reason."

From England, the scene of scores of battles for mental liberty, fought by heroes past and present, and the soil of which gave birth to Thomas Paine, Robert Owen, Richard Carlisle, and Charles Bradlaugh, and many others, too, whose fame now rolls down the ages.

From Germany, where Freethought is spreading rapidly, though strong efforts are still made by bigotry to strangle liberty even in its infancy. Germany, the home of Haeckel, Büchner, and many others of scientific and literary fame.

From Sweden, too, where such gallant fights have been made, and conquests won, by these heroes in our cause, Victor Lennstrand and Captain Thomson.

From Spain, once the paradise of the world, but now almost crushed and helpless in the cause of Freedom, under the blighting curse of Jesuitism. From Spain shall come eloquent words for liberty.

From Italy also we must have a representation. Italy, the home of popery and monkery, but where, owing to the rapid growth of Freethought principles, to an advancement of enlightenment, a statue has been erected to that illustrious Freethought martyr, Giordano Bruno. Italy, where the Romish church has received one of the most fatal thrusts against her power; Freethought is rapidly spreading here, and in this splendid galaxy of liberty's champions Italy must find a place.

To each and every Freethinker in every country we extend and assure a hearty and generous welcome.

Our delegates and members of Freethought societies throughout the world will be admitted to full membership in the Congress, and shall be entitled to vote upon filing their credentials with the secretary of the Federation.

It is hoped by the board of directors and members of the Federation that every Freethinker in America will heartily co-operate with the Federation in this Congress and let us give a generous greeting and noble welcome to the Freethinkers of other lands who shall visit our shores. We have already received an official communication from Adolfo de Maglia, Barcelona, Spain, secretary of the organization committee of the International Federation of Freethinkers, assuring us of their adhesion and co-operation in this Congress. The first meeting will be held on Sunday, the 3d of September next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. The place of meeting will be announced later.

The secretaries of Freethought societies throughout the world are urgently requested to correspond with the secretary of the Federation upon this Congress, in order to enable the committee in charge to arrange the preliminaries without delay. We would especially urge the above request upon the secretaries of all American Freethought societies, assuring us of their hearty co-operation and support.

We shall, from this time forward, concentrate all our efforts upon this gathering, and do all in our power to make it a grand success. Never before, in the history of our country, has such an opportunity occurred for the advancement of our cause. Let us all join in this grand effort; let us have a gathering of the clans of Freethought; let us unite our hearts, our hands, our voices in the noble work we have before us; let us work united in this glorious movement, and at the Fair emphasize liberty and justice to all nations.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Secretary.

GEO. L. ROBERTSON, Treasurer.

NATHAN F. GRISWOLD, First Vice-Pres.

SAMUEL SILVERMAN, Second Vice-Pres.

H. COONS, Third Vice-Pres.

Secretary's address, 345 West Randolph street, Chicago, Ill.

We placed in the printer's hands this week the manuscript of John E. Remsburg's book "Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian?" The controversy over this matter has been revived by Colonel Ingersoll's incidental remark in his lectures that Lincoln's religious belief was that of Voltaire and Paine. The defenders of the church, which claims all the great men when they are dead, have taken exception to this assertion, and twist what little favorable evidence they think they have, out of all recognition in their attempts to contradict Colonel Ingersoll. In his book, Mr. Remsburg has gone over the whole ground, quoting all the Christian side of the controversy, considering it fairly and fully, and put against it the other evidence known, besides adducing much new evidence. Since the appearance of the matter in these columns, the work has been revised and much new matter added, until it forms the most complete and conscientious consideration of the question in print. Sufficient time has elapsed since President Lincoln's death to render judicial consideration of his faith possible, while the presence among us of hundreds who knew him intimately enables the biographer to secure the necessary material for his work. Mr. Remsburg is by study and natural qualities eminently fitted to settle the question, and in this book he has attempted to do so; and with gratifying success. We shall bring the book out in handsome shape, the paper edition being in The Truth Seeker Library, for 50 cents, and a finely bound cloth edition for $1. We hope to list a great many orders at once, to be filled upon publication, which we shall push with energy. Remember the price—cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" is the title of a work to be written by Samuel P. Putnam, in connection with the World's Fair International Congress. It will give in broad outline the history of Freethought from the landing of Columbus to the present time. It will picture the intellectual condition of mankind in 1492, and from that period trace the progress of liberty and science. No more interesting subject could be selected. It will be a book of permanent value, inasmuch as it will unfold in vivid panorama the noblest results of human effort. Deriving a special interest from the World's Fair and International Congress, it will be a book that every Freethinker will always desire, for it will give to him the deepest meanings of history, and the sublimest triumphs of genius. It will be a companion book of Mr. Putnam's pen-pictures of the World's Fair, now being published in THE TRUTH SEEKER. It will not be ready in book form until next fall, as it will include in its descriptions the closing hours of the World's Fair, and the outlook of Freethought from that historic point. But the earlier chapters of the work, describing the era of Columbus, Bruno, Voltaire, Paine, etc., will appear in THE TRUTH SEEKER about August or September. The book will also be adorned with the portraits of the great Freethinkers of the world. In every respect this volume will be of intense interest and value to the Freethinker.

E. S. Westcott, one of the best-known lawyers in Hartford, Conn., and noted throughout the state as a disciple of Colonel Ingersoll, has received the following letter from the pastor and a committee of a Unitarian church:

"HARTFORD, Apr. 21, 1893.

"E. S. WESTCOTT, ESQ., Dear Sir: Inasmuch as your presence and deportment are objectionable to the great majority of those who compose the Unitarian Congregational Society in this city, and inasmuch as it is believed that your attendance is in no way helpful either to them or to you, you are hereby most respectfully requested not to attend any meetings held under the auspices of said society.

(Signed)

"MILO HUNT, }
"S. F. BRONSON, } Society Committee.
"J. L. BARKER, }
"JOSEPH WAITE, Pastor."

Mr. Westcott says he has been inside of the church but forty-eight times in twelve years, and does not think he has injured the standing of the congregation very much, but will go elsewhere in the future. How marked is the contrast between Christian methods and the customs of Liberals, who are ardent in their efforts to bring, not only to their audiences but to their platforms, individuals of views of the utmost possible divergence.

"Testimonial to Walt Whitman."

This is Mr. Ingersoll's eulogy on the "good gray poet," and is a gem of thought. Rarely is so much real good sense to be found in so small a space. It contains eighty-six pages, in good, large type, and printed on very fine paper. Price, twenty-five cents. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.—Concordia Blade.

Letters of Friends.

The Only Paper One Cannot Spare.

SAVANNAH, MO., Apr. 20, E.M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: I send draft to renew Geo. N. Davies's and my subscription another year to the only paper we cannot do without.

WM. COOK.

An Incipient Skepticism Made Complete.

SPENCER, IA., Apr. 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am highly pleased with the paper. I get more satisfaction out of it than any journal I ever read. I was raised a member of the old church in Scotland; I was always a little skeptical in my views, but THE TRUTH SEEKER just strikes me.

R. MURDOCK.

One More Disciple of Truth-Search Obtained.

BROOKVILLE, ILL., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed money order for THE TRUTH SEEKER and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." I have been a reader of your paper for seven years, and I like it best of all papers. I have at last succeeded in getting you one new subscriber.

E. G. BOWERS

Blames Finance and Religion.

BALLARD, WASH., Apr. 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It is hard to get hold of a spare dollar, and still people keep on pulling the rope more tightly around their necks and worship that yellow devil, Gold. I would like to live to see the day that Jesus and gold would be used by farmers on the onion beds to scare the crows away. I think the reformers are a greater blessing to the human race than modern inventions, great as they are.

Yours for humanity and justice,

H. L. TEUKE.

Fortunately Finding Truth Early in Life.

DADEVILLE, ALA., Apr. 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find a $5 money order—$3 for a year's subscription to the paper, $1 for "Gods and Other Lectures," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, and $1 for "Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener. My three months' trial subscription is not quite out, but I find your paper so good that I want a full twelve months' subscription before I arrive at the age of twenty-one. With best wishes to THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Liberal cause, I am,

Yours truly, R. W. CRADDOCK.

It Seeks for the Truth, and Finds It.

PORT ANGELES, WASH., Apr. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5, for which please send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and Paine's Complete Works, which I see advertised in your premium list. THE TRUTH SEEKER is well named; it seeks for the truth and finds it. I feel as though I would be lost without it. There is not a paper comes into the house more welcome, nor one so carefully read and taken care of. I will conclude, wishing success to the dear old TRUTH SEEKER.

Your Liberal friend,

MRS. THOMPSON.

Thankful for Not Being Burnt at the Stake.

MIDDLETON, Apr. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send you clippings of the Middleton Argus, April 19th, which no doubt will be of some interest to you. There are thirteen churches here, and a great church-going people—that is, the women. Fourteen years ago in this city I took a bold stand for Universal Mental Liberty, and have had a hard time of it—but not as hard as many that have been tied to a stake and roasted to death for expressing their honest opinions, and I hope the time is not far distant when religion will be carried out as Jesus Christ meant it to be.

KAUFMAN.

Trust No Man Because He Is a Preacher.

GETTYSBURG, PA., Apr. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Yes, I know them well. Have been where they make them. Have seen them in stages of development from the egg up to the full-fledged pulpit rooster. I would no sooner trust the clergy than I would trust lawyers, doctors, drummers, masons, hod-carriers, or men of any other business or profession.

Once while theological commencement exercises were in progress here some one asked Thaddeus Stevens what was going on in Christ church. "Oh," says he, "there is a set of young theological students about starting out to preach the gospel, and they are just now getting religion." This is no fictitious story. It is a fact.

Yours truly, S. R. M.

A Soldier Always in Active Service.

EAGLEVILLE, CAL., Apr. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find $10 and send papers and book as directed. It has been quite a while since my last letter appeared in the paper, and as I have seen no other from my locality, I will write a few lines. I take great interest in the letters from all over the country, and the names of the writers also, hoping some time to meet some of them and make personal acquaintance.

We have had a long, snowy winter, but not much loss of stock. I have been very busy tending to my cattle and sheep, as I have about two thousand of each, but have paid considerable interest to THE TRUTH SEEKER and its large family. I always do something to help along when I can. I am working against a revival-meeting now. I told the preacher I could listen to him a year and it would have no effect on me. I keep hotel and fight for liberty all the time.

W. U. SCOTT.

The Only Paper That Tells the Truth.

LODI, WIS., March 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2—$1 to renew my subscription for four months, the other $1 for the following books: "Crimes of Preachers," some cheap work on Thomas Paine; "The Evolution of the Devil," by Henry Frank; "Church and State," "The Bible in the Public Schools," and anything else you think you can afford to send for the money—anything that will suit an out-and-out Freethinker. Any circulars that you see fit to send me in the interest of your valuable work will be used to the best of my ability and for the benefit of the good old TRUTH SEEKER. God bless it! Long may it live to do good to mankind!

The "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" came to hand all right, and has been read with profit. The pictures are good and beat the devil. I am nearly seventy years old and quite feeble, but I intend to read THE TRUTH SEEKER as long as I live, for it is the only paper on earth that tells the truth.

N. C. SKELTON.

The Truth Seeker as an Advertising Medium.

EL RENO, OKLA., March 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your paper must be circulated throughout the world, for I have received orders for cactus plants from seventeen different states and from the West Indies. So you see, I have had lots of correspondence, and if any TRUTH SEEKER readers have sent for plants and not received them, I will gladly refill their orders. I received three different letters that had had the stamps or coin taken out, but sent the plants just the same. So if your readers have not received their plants they should write me, and be sure and sign their names plainly—post-office, county, and state. I am surprised at the number of letters received, and will answer all as soon as I can catch up. Anyone not receiving an answer will know that something is wrong with the mail, or else that I am trying to fill their order. I send you a couple of plants by to-day's mail.

Hoping your paper may grow and increase in circulation, and thanking friends for their kindly expressed letters, I remain,

Yours in truth and reason,

I. M. K. JOHNSON.

Christians Would Deprive Us of the Priceless Jewel.

MILES CITY, MONT., Apr. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER is getting better than ever and I would not be without it. I distribute them where I think they will do the most good. In fact, they are called for almost faster than I can read them. Those cartoons of Heston's are excellent. Some Christians are Liberal enough to look at them, but will go no farther, except to denounce the paper in the most spiteful terms that a Christian is capable of. Most Christians are afraid to read it—afraid some great truth will dawn upon their benighted brains and dispel the fascinating illusion or some pet superstition that adheres to their whole being with a tenacity they are either too cowardly or too powerless to resist. Such cases are hopeless. They are not satisfied with their belief but must show their Christian spirit by doing all in their power to deprive others who differ with them in belief of that priceless jewel, Liberty.

C. E. WERST.

A Pretty Kettle of Christian Fish.

BAKER CITY, Apr. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send you two copies of our daily paper. You will see that we are having quite a sensation in this orthodox town. The Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians have been holding revival meetings nearly all winter—in fact, have just closed—and the actors in the disgraceful drama are all converted Christians or have Christian parents. Rev. (?) W. T. Ford, the pastor of the Methodist church, and also editor and proprietor of the Methodist, is a laughing-stock for all sensible people. His daughter, and one of the female teachers of the public school here—which, by the way, is almost entirely controlled by the Methodists—are the leading "stars." His daughter was expelled from the public school for "spreading contaminating influences" among the pupils. This reverend (?) is noted for his abuse of the Infidel. His foul-mouthed tongue has thrown slurs on Paine and Ingersoll, whose shoes he is not fit to untie, off and on all winter during his revival. Like all of them, he had to tell lies to make converts.

Yours for the Truth, P. M.

Teaches School Without Bible.

CORCORUS, PA., Apr. 24, 293.

MR. EDITOR: I am still a Freethinker and an Infidel, i. e., I do not believe what is called the Bible, Testament, Koran, etc. In one sense of the word those who attend church and pretend to worship a God are Infidels or unbelievers, for while I have abundant faith in the sciences, the worshiper of orthodox creed, Bible, and God is an unbeliever, in that which can be proved by a logical demonstration. Why, primary arithmetic teaches and proves that $1 \text{ plus } 1 \text{ plus } 1 = 3$ and $3 \times 1 = 1$ while the inspired (?) volume says $3 \times 1 = 1$. But why meditate on such an absurd problem?

My school is closed for this term, which, as usual, I taught without a Bible; and certainly it must have been a success or I would not have been requested by the entire board of school directors to teach the school next term commencing in September. The conduct was all that could be desired. The rod was not used, nor even thought of. Without the Bible I can teach both morals and manners, but with the Bible I could not recommend virtue, for in my opinion it is obscene literature.

Your editorials are highly appreciated, and Heston's cartoons are correct every time.

Yours for Liberty,

J. W. F. COPENHEAVER.

One Merit of Future Non-Existence.

LAKE CITY, IA., March 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $3 to pay for the old TRUTH SEEKER another year. I have taken it almost from the start, and intend to while I live. But I am now in my seventh decade, with health extremely poor, so I may not be here when my time next expires. But I hope there will be some one to take my place when I have gone to the unknown land.

I see considerable said in THE TRUTH SEEKER of late in regard to a future existence. In my humble opinion that is something no living man has ever yet known anything about. All stand equal when it comes to the unknowable. I asked a man a few days ago if he desired an everlasting life in the world to come. Without a moment's thought he answered Yes. "Now," I said to him, "this is the Christian heaven you are hankering after. That every thinking man knows is all bosh. But let us take another look at this matter. Supposing after you have passed into the future life you find things not so agreeable as you expected, and after only a couple of million of years—which is but a moment in endless time—you find endless life not the thing it was cracked up to be, but it being a fixed fact in nature's eternal laws, you have no chance for a change into an everlasting good sleep." At this juncture, oh, my! how tired he did look! I think he would have given his bottom dollar right there to have been sure of an everlasting good sleep, where disturbing dreams never come.

I will now bid the entire TRUTH SEEKER family an affectionate farewell.

J. L. TOMPKINS.

An Ornament to the World Gone.

ST. CHARLES, MINN., Apr. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose an extract from a notice of the death of my father, J. S. Whiton. Mr. Whiton had been a skeptic since he was seventeen years of age, and a pronounced Freethinker for over forty years. He had been a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER for many years. His death was calm and peaceful. He was not afraid to die. Why should he be? I believe an honest man has nothing to fear, for honesty will somehow, somewhere, reap its own reward. J. EBEN WHITON.

Mr. Whiton retired at about his usual hour, but soon after called Mr. Miller to his bedside and told him that "he was going to die," and that he "was not afraid to die, that death had no terrors for him, that indeed he rather welcomed dissolution as a relief from his sufferings." He had some matters of business that he wished to communicate, which he succeeded in doing and soon after sank into unconsciousness, in which state he remained till he passed away peacefully as "one who wraps the drapery of his couch around him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Mr. Whiton was a man of strong convictions and earnest purposes, though quite conservative in his views. In his political principles he was a Republican, and in religious opinions he was an Agnostic. Generous almost to a fault in rendering assistance to all applicants, and especially to aid in disseminating the theories which he believed to be true, he contributed with a liberal hand. His morality was of a high standard, and in all his social intercourse with his fellow-men he was above reproach. Indeed it can be truly said "the world was better for his having lived in it." His precepts and example tended to make men better.

For the Truth, "If It Takes Off the Hide."

SCOTTSDALE, ARK., Apr. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Times are so hard and money so scarce in this part of God's (?) heritage, that I sometimes conclude that I will have to give up THE TRUTH SEEKER until better times, but when I am reminded that you are needing all you can get to keep the dear old TRUTH SEEKER going, I am constrained to renew. It would give me the greatest pleasure to distribute Liberal literature all over our land and country, and I would do so but for want of the needful. My "Bible of Bibles," "Bible Analyzed," "Age of Reason," etc., are out on missionary work at present. My "Handbook of Free-thought" and R. G. Ingersoll's "Gods and other Lectures" are the only books I have at home. I am keeping my "Handbook" by me for the benefit of our Methodist circuit-rider. I sent my "Automatic Praying Machine" to Texas, and after letting it go the rounds, had it returned to me. I think it would be grand alongside other ornaments of our legislative halls. We had one state Senator a few years ago who had the pluck to nominate Brother R. G. Ingersoll for chaplain. Enough just such men would materially benefit our country. There are several Freethinkers in this (Pope) county, and if times were not so hard here about money matters several might be got to take THE TRUTH SEEKER. You may always put me down as a true sympathizer for the liberties of man, woman, and child. I am, as ever,

Yours for the Truth, if it takes off the hide,

W. R. HALE.

He Tried to Free Both Slave and White.

KEOKUK, IA., Apr. 8, E.M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: I send you herewith a short sketch of the life of my father, who departed from among the living on March 27th last, hoping you can find a corner for it in the grand old TRUTH SEEKER.

Charles Naumann was born in 1833 in Saxony, Germany. He emigrated to this country as a youth, and has made his home in Keokuk county, Ia., ever since. When Freedom called for help in 1861 he marched to the front with the "boys in blue," serving in Co. F., 8th Iowa Volunteers. At the time of his death he resided at Harper, Ia. He was a lifelong Free-thinker, and a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for many years.

During his lifetime he regarded D. M. Bennett as a personal friend, and was a subscriber to the "Truth Seeker Around the World" fund, also to the Bennett Monument fund.

In politics he was never so thoroughly wedded to one party that he could not act with another when the sacred torch of Liberty was in danger. He was an invalid during the latter half of his life, and for many years devoted nearly all his time to reading and music.

At present he sleeps peacefully in the little cemetery at Garibaldi, founded long years ago by members of the Turnverein, of which association he was a member in his youth. The G. A. R. performed the short and simple funeral services. A Liberal friend delivered a short address at the grave.

In him the family lost a kind and loving father and husband, the community lost a respected citizen, and the cause of Free thought lost a staunch and steadfast friend.

E. D. NAUMANN.

A Freethought Family's Delightful Sentiments.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose a new subscriber. He is a very prominent man in our city. He is an architect and builder, and employs a great many men. He is a well-known Infidel, and it required no persuasion to induce him to subscribe. I simply showed him the paper and asked him if he would become a subscriber. He answered in the affirmative, and said he was very glad that I had called. "It is the very thing I want," he continued, "and I should be glad to take this copy home with me, for I want something to read to-night." Freethought is rapidly increasing. Among men it is becoming the fashion, as it were. This includes, however, only the thoughtful, the intelligent, and the observing.

The circulation of Freethought papers is growing better daily, but you cannot find a Freethought publication in every Freethinker's home yet, by any means. All Freethinkers—or Infidels, as church people like to call us—should never cease to try to circulate our papers—get new subscribers, if possible. If this cannot be done, give away the old papers as soon as they have been read. I take this paper, the Investigator, the Ironclad Age, and the Freethinker's Magazine. Every one of these papers is good and is worth five times the price asked for it. As soon as my wife, our children, and I have looked over the papers, we give or mail them to our friends. In this way several subscribers have been obtained.

We are Freethinkers and we are proud of it. We try to follow what our great leader, Colonel Ingersoll, has so often said: "Show kindness to everything and everybody, ask only justice for yourself, and never at any time or under any circumstances strike a child." Kindness may yet become hereditary, then strife or violence will vanish from the face of the earth.

WILLIAM T. CARTER, M. D.

Finds the Women All Christian.

MEADVILLE, MISS., March 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I write to let you know my appreciation of your paper. Of ten weekly papers that come to my sister and me your TRUTH SEEKER comes first with me. Sister won't read it, but now and then I get to show her and mother the pictures on the back, by W. Heston, which seldom fail to produce a smile. Now and then I read a little from one to them. These good Christians around here have found out that I am taking it, and some of them look as if they smell brimstone, or something worse, when they come in contact with me. I am alone here and have had a hard time of it for a long time, but managed to hold my own before I had the aid of your noble journal, and with it I guess I am here to-day. I have been a spot for the preachers to shoot at here for about twenty years. I have been a prominent figure in some amusing church scenes here in this county—though the amusement was all to myself. I may write some of them up some time and send to you. Up to this time I have never made a fight on any of the churches, but always would shoot back when an assault was made on me. My home is in a stone's throw of two churches, one on the east and the other on the west side. You may bet they whoop me up every Sunday.

I am a widower, and have been so nearly seven years. I have been trying to find a nice lady from twenty to twenty-five years of age, who has been able to climb above the detestable thing (to me) that is called Christianity, but have about given up the task as a failure. When I find one who says she does not believe in it, the first thing I know I see her kneeling in church, or going up to shake hands with some black-hearted preacher, and that gives me a disgust for her.

I send you $5, with which I wish to pay for a year's subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER ($3) and one edition of "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3), as per proposition in premium list.

I have tried hard to get one subscriber for THE TRUTH SEEKER, but have failed. See if I don't get one before my next subscription runs out! Please don't let me lose a number. Long may you live to edit THE TRUTH SEEKER. J. E. SCOTT.

Let Liberals Secure Their Share of Missionary Funds.

PIERSON, IA., Apr. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your readers may be interested in comparing the efforts for the propagation of Liberalism with the more gigantic machinery for the propagation of Christianity.

In the Methodist church—and some others—the Sunday-school Easter service is now made a "children's missionary service," the principal feature of which is a gigantic scheme of systematic begging for the missionary cause. All the children who can be enlisted in this "beggar band" are sent out, like a swarm of locusts, to afflict the whole community for some weeks, and the whole culminates in a "children's entertainment" or "Easter service." Even the children of Liberal thinkers are easily drawn into the scheme, for what child is not glad to be made an actor or singer in the flowery festival of Easter? Thus at one adroit stroke the entire Sunday-school system is transformed into an embryo engine for the spread of Christianity, both at home and abroad.

In this and other equally systematic ways the Methodist church alone is able to gather in a harvest of more than $1,000,000 for its missions each year—all the churches together aggregating many millions.

The scheme for "converting the world" embraces special schools for educating candidates, boards of superintendents, examining boards to select the most efficient workers, etc., etc.

Now let the reader compare this gigantic machinery with the puny efforts of Liberalism—no multi-million-dollar machinery, no special schools, no boards, almost no recognition in the world as a propagating force.

And yet from the board of "non-sectarian foreign missions" in Chicago comes this admission: "The chief obstacle we encounter in the foreign missionary work is infidelity. The native pagans are rapidly being educated to read and write, and their countries are flooded with Infidel literature."

This admission tells the whole story. Hoary-headed Superstition has been nearly two thousand years "converting the world to Christianity," and yet in this late day, while yet her task remains only a far-away hope, she is compelled to admit that Liberalism—the child of a day—is felt round the globe. This admission should encourage Liberal thinkers to redouble their efforts—to organize and claim a share of the millions that flow out of the people's pockets for religious propagation. If it must go, let it go in the interest of truth and reason.

Give us but half the mighty engine that propels the "gospel ship," and rest assured that when "the whole world shall have been converted to Christianity" Christianity itself will be no more.

S. T. BRUSON.

Women the Most Inoffensive Little Beasts of Burden on the Earth.

LONE ROCK, ORE., Apr. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have read and reread until I have got almost too full for utterance, so I thought I would try to say a few words to help you and scores of other noble, true, honest men who wish to return to woman her natural-born right to stand by man's side (from which she came, Selah) and vote for the lazy beggar the preacher, or the independent and self-supporting gentleman, as she sees fit. I see in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 18th that a Liberal brother by the name of Sandberg has got himself worked up to a fearful condition. He seems to be scared at the women, the most inoffensive little beasts of burden on earth. He actually lifts up both hands and screams till I heard him out in Oregon, that Women Will Abolish What Little Liberty We Have! Dear me, what a storm in a teapot! He says he has given his lifelong admiration to Mrs. Schwartz, of San José, Cal., because she would rather die than vote now. And, just think, he says she is possessed of common sense, which is such a rarity with the fair sex that it has become a luxury (wonder what the tariff is?). I wonder what he will do with his admiration now when he reads what Retta S. Anderson has to say in THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 25th. I would like to answer her letter and beg of her to not politically cut her own throat and mine too for the sake of mutilating the fair necks of some pious sisters in the church, who are good and kind but very, very ignorant in some things, like the rest of us; but we have more than a plenty of the unfair sex to keep us from being lonesome. But to return to Brother Sandberg. He says that we Liberals are aware the clergy, or sky-rockets generally, want women to vote. He must have a soft spot about his heart somewhere to pay them such a compliment. I couldn't do that. If they do, why don't they let them vote in their synods, conferences, etc.? No, sir, I don't believe they are willing to give women the right of suffrage. I think, Brother Sandberg, it was sufferance you meant. But if they are willing then I owe them an apology, and I hope there will not be one Liberal brother unwilling to do the same as they—that is, give her the same political rights as you do man, then if you want to sift out the political ignorant by all means do so and educate them while the statesman and stateswoman rule our land. When you start the political sieve to running I will admit that Miss Butterfly, with her love of a bonnet, cousin, love story, and poodle dog, will come flying out, but Alfonso with his toothpick and cane, don'tcherknow, will have to come too or he would die of ennui. And the same clear on to the end of the chapter, even ministers, for I have seen a good many of these rare bits of old china that did not see how Cleveland got the appointment over Harrison any more than the fair hand that was cooking to a turn their favorite dish, Plymouth Rock or a Lone Rock rooster. Then Brother Sandberg says a schoolmarm told him, not in confidence of course, that if women could get to vote they would soon stop the liquor business. Well, I know you would be glad of that. And then she kicked all over by saying she would have a Sunday law. Well, if it was a good one, a law to make everybody tend to his and her business one day in the week, it would be more than man has accomplished without her help. How is it with your World's Fair Sunday law? That is one little green apple you cannot lay on woman. I am just speaking for woman in general and man in general. Haven't we raised them up in the same families? Then where should there be such a need for educating her up to know what she wants politically? Or is it any worse for her to make a political blunder than man? You have made scores of them and we have borne them in silence. Now try to bear ours the same, as you know you are partly responsible for them. MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

On David's Morals, and Sunday Closing of the World's Fair.

NORTH BENTON, O., March 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Within find $1, for which send "Crimes of Preachers" and credit me on THE TRUTH SEEKER for balance. I cannot afford to do without THE TRUTH SEEKER. The cartoons are the first looked at, and are doing good in showing the ridiculousness of the Bible stories. One of my neighbors of the Quaker faith by the name of Meredith attended night and day all his life; and, by the way, he was a good, quiet, and inoffensive citizen. He and his family attended church all winter, and I am informed his wife concluded he must make a confession of his sins in open church, and kept at him till one night he made the attempt, and got up, stood some time without saying a word, then dropped on the floor and was taken home and within one week was dead. The churches have had these religious crazes here all winter. At North Benton these crazes went so far that their pastor could not stand it, and had to talk to them, and the choir had to hold themselves ready to sing them down. I attended one Sunday night. They imported a revivalist, and he took all kinds of tricks to get the steam up among them. He turned to the Bible and read about David, and extolled David to the third heavens and exclaimed how David would rejoice to see the North Benton congregation meet him in the New Jerusalem. At the close of the meeting I asked the evangelist if David was happy when he was engineering for Uriah's wife. He said he repented of that. I asked him if he would like to be in heaven with such men as David and a score of others like unto him referred to in the Bible. He said he would. I told him I would prefer being in hell with such men as Voltaire, Bolingbroke, Hume, Tyndall, Darwin, Ingersoll, and others like unto them, to living in heaven with the patriarchs mentioned in the Bible. He had no more use for me. He started for the aisle. I said to him, "The wicked flee when no man pursueth." I have lived here fifty-five years; was born in New Jersey in 1826; have known all crimes to be committed by church-members known to the laws of the land—murder, arson, rape, theft, perjury, subornation of perjury, etc.—in a greater proportion than by outsiders according to their number. They will go to church on Sunday, take the sacrament, dump their sins off on the scapegoat, pay their quarterage, and vote to have the Chicago World's Fair shut on Sunday.

Very few Christians are aware of the fact that what they call the Christian Sabbath is of pagan origin. The first observance of Sunday that history records is in the fourth century, when Constantine issued an edict reading: "Let all the judges and people of the town rest, and all the various trades be suspended, on the venerable Day of the Sun." At the time of the issue of this edict Constantine was a sun-worshiper, therefore it could have had no relation whatever to Christianity. John Calvin had so little respect for the day that he could be found playing bowls almost any Sunday. The only authority for observing Sunday as a Sabbath is the pope and the Roman Catholic church. Christians carried on their work on Sunday the same as on any other day down to the time of Constantine. It is certainly not from Paul that these Sabbatarians get their persistence and intolerance, for in his epistle to the Romans, xiv, 9, he says: "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike; let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." The narrow-minded bigotry which would close our Art Museum and seeks to close our World's Fair on Sunday because comparatively few of our people have inherited the false idea that Sunday is a sacred day, thus denying to a large majority of our people what is far more sacred than any day, their rights as citizens, ought not to be longer tolerated. The sentiment among those in control of the World's Fair at Chicago is very largely in favor of Sunday opening.

Yours truly, CHESTER BEDDELL.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

May Ministries.

What ho! how the days go!
And lo!

The gold-brown tassels blow
From cottonwood's tall pinnacles,
While each morn hath its miracles
Of leaf, and bud, and sheen that bides
Where'er a lonely cabin hides.
Like home of some small mother-bird,
Where late the leafless bushes stirred.

What song, and naught goes wrong;
A throng

Fills all the swaying boughs along
The worn-out road where willow hedges
With brown grass from the autumn sedges
Will curtain round the cosy nest
Of thrush and shrike with lifted crest.
I heard them but an hour ago,
And saw them hurrying to and fro.

Sweet May, once, oh, so gay!

Our way

Had flowers and song for every day;
No frost let down her lads blowing,
And in the thickets May-flowers growing—
The palest, purplest, fairest things,
Like wind-flowers in their blossomings;
And bluebells made a later train
When June came down with dew and rain.
While that sweet time was long ago,
We yet may love the May-flowers' glow.

Pueblo, Col.

MARY BAIRD FINCH.

Two Childish Stories.

Some hard-headed poet has cleverly termed men "but children of a larger growth." The recollection of it brings to mind a couple of good child-stories, remarks the New York Herald.

A mother of my acquaintance was impressing upon her little son the greatness and goodness of God. His blue eyes were wide open with the wonderful story, though his dimpled fingers never ceased to caress the face of a small dummy watch that had been presented to him on Christmas day. It was evident that his mind was divided between the creator and the created.

"Could God do anything, mamma?" he finally inquired.

"Certainly," was the reply; "anything!"

"Could he make my watch keep time?"

This rather floored mamma, and while she was thinking up a wise answer the little chap broke in:

"Of course I don't want him to do it if it is going to make him let the stars go out. But I'll tell you what I would do if I was in his place—I'd make all the figures on watches and clocks like these, instead of like those on the clock and on papa's watch, so we could always tell what time it is."

The figures on his dummy are Arabic. And why shouldn't they be in the figures of ordinary business use, instead of in Roman numerals? The latter are invariably painted on clock-faces with arbitrary incorrectness, anyhow, the 4 being made thus, IIII, instead of thus, IV. The solecism quite naturally makes a four-year-old child doubt the omniscience and omnipotence of the creator.

My other child-story is more humorous, but equally instructive. It is not original, having been printed in the newspapers the other day. So I will tell it briefly.

One day in Tennessee a man killed another man. The murderer was arrested, and would have been hanged in the course of time. But the brothers of the murdered man could not wait. They got up a big mob of several hundred people and attacked the jail, with the intention of taking the murderer out and killing him. The men, however, whom these same people had elected and sworn in for the purpose got together and defended the jail, and incidentally the prisoner. The result was that some twenty-five men were slain, among whom were, very appropriately, the two brothers who got up the not unique social entertainment.

Now, if that is not a funny story then I never heard one. It is enough to kill the devil with laughing. The reasoning powers of the four-year-old child are more perfectly developed than in the adult child, judging from this curious sample of masculin ratiocination.—Exchange.

Correspondence.

WOODLAND, Mo., Apr. 9, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Children's Corner again, as I saw my other letter in print. It is raining very hard this evening. My school was out the 3d of March. It is rather hard on the Sunday-school this evening. They have two churches here, and they are quarreling nearly all the time. It has been warm for the last two weeks. I live on a farm—two hundred and sixteen acres—five miles west of Woodland. I would love to have some of the children of the Corner correspond with me—about my age, and I am twelve years old. I will close for fear my letter is too long.

Your friend, DELBERT LEOD.

MOUNT TABER, ORE., Apr. 10, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I would like to give you an account of my religious experience. As my father is one of those "horrid Infidels" he never lets me go to church or Sunday-school very much. He wants me to get an education first. But last summer they built a church close to us and the Christian women wanted me to go to church so badly that I went to Sunday-school and stayed for church. They brought me some bread and wine, and told me to eat and drink, that I was one of them now. So I did, and when I went home and found that they had lied to and made a fool of me, I was mad, and did not go any more. Papa says that is just the size of a Christian, to make a fool of a little nine-year-old girl.

One time Mr. Putnam was at our house and stayed three days. He lectured every night. I liked his speeches very much.

Yours truly, MABEL HOSS.

VERMONT, IND., Apr. 15, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Will you admit a little Freethinker's girl in your Corner? I am eight years old to-day. Papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Freethinkers' Magazine. But I like to read the Children's Corner best. There are not very many Freethinkers around here, but we keep up our side. We live at a small railroad station in Howard county. Papa keeps a store and post-office. I have three little brothers, and of course they will all be Infidels. I go to school through the winter. Our school was out the 15th of March. I study reading, writing, geography, language, and numbers. If this letter is printed I will try and write again.

I wish some of the little Freethinkers of the Corner would write me a letter.

I must close this my first letter.

Your Liberal friend, AMY TROYER.

[And a good letter it is.—ED. C. C.]

CORVALLIS, ORE., Apr. 13, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought it about time for me to write to the Corner to let you know what kind of a time we have in this country. We are having a revival here of Salvation Army corps, Captain Bryant & Co. He is going to tell the young men God saved him from a drunkard's grave next Sunday, the Lord's day. He told how much of a shame the state prisons were to the civilized world. But he said if it were not for them the world would see many more crimes committed. And then he said, "Come, give your heart to Jesus that will keep you from crimes and drunkenness." But he did not say it was the religious people and criminals that filled the prison cells.

I think it would be a fine thing for the young Freethinkers to hold a convention at the World's Fair, as Miss M. M. Grier suggests, but there would be so many of them that could not attend the Fair. I suggest that the young Freethinkers of each state appoint a time each year to hold a convention in their respective states as the older Freethinkers do each year; but I am in favor of those that can go to the Fair to have a convention and have a good time. I remain your Liberal friend,

H. C. NOEL.

AUSTIN, NEV., Apr. 8, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my third letter to the Corner, so I thought I would venture to write again.

First I will tell you about Austin. It is a very small place, but there are quite a few people here. There are two mines being worked by a company and a great many by other people. My father and two other men are working in a mine above the "Winan" (that's the company's mine). They are getting pretty good ore now and will be able to ship a carload in a few weeks. There are a few farmers here, but mining is the chief occupation.

On Thursday night we had a great windstorm. It blew the porches and flagpoles and other things off the houses, and it blew one old house down and a great big roof off a large house. It made me laugh, for the house it blew the roof off was right across the way from us and one old man was all that lived there. When it blew off they told me that old fellow got up and went downtown but he kept turning and looking back at his house all the way. Why didn't God wait until morning before he let the wind blow so?

Well, I fear my letter is getting too long, so I will close. I will try to write a more interesting letter next time. I remain, A true Liberal, ALICE MOSS.

NORWALK, CAL., Apr. 9, 1893.

DEAR MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: This is my first letter to the Children's Corner. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and thinks it splendid. I look at the pictures, and then I turn to the Children's Corner. There are but few Freethinkers in Artesia, and some of them are afraid to say so, but I believe in being one or another. Don't you? I do not go to church or Sunday-school, for it does not interest me, and I don't believe half they say. There was a revival in the Methodist church not long ago. Almost all of the young folks joined, but they won't stay with it long. There have been a good many lecturers in Norwalk. Mamma and papa heard Mr. Ingersoll in Los Angeles, and it was a fine lecture. Mr. Remsburg lectured here two nights, which were good. Mrs. Krekel lectured twice and stayed all night with us, and Mr. Putnam lectured several times. I go to school and study arithmetic, spelling, grammar, geography, reading, and writing and drawing. Our teacher's name is Mr. Donnell. I like him very well. We have "The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Both of them are very nice. I have read "All in a Lifetime," and thought it was grand. We have Mr. Ingersoll's picture in our sitting-room, and we have a good many of his works.

Hoping this will escape the wastebasket, I will close, wishing good success to THE TRUTH SEEKER.

I remain a Liberal friend,
IDA INGERSOLL COWARD.

CARLSBAD, CAL., Apr. 13, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON AND CORNER FRIENDS: Here I come again. I cannot resist the temptation to write to the Corner again. The Chautauqua Society chose this place two years ago as a place to hold their meetings. They said they would build a large tabernacle, a college, and several other buildings; they would have a gymnasium and a kindergarten. The people here had to donate some land for buildings, and they gave them thirty-five or forty acres. Well, they said they couldn't build the buildings the first year, so they held their meetings in the church. Next year came around and nothing done; then they wanted the people to donate work to help get the ground ready for the buildings. Then they wanted the people to help buy the lumber, then help them build. Now, they had the gall to ask all that after the people had given them the land! Why, of course they wouldn't do it! Why, any mob of tramps would locate here if you would set them up in business. The first year they gave a few little shows to get all the money they could out of the people; the second year it didn't amount to anything. This year they came around and tried to sell some of the land to raise money to build with. They have got to do so much improving before they can get a title to the land. They are like the most of preachers—they are running a skin game clear through. They want the pure cream. They have only one church here. The people get in a dispute over politics, and such things, that have nothing to do with the church whatever. There is a wrangle amongst them all the time. I don't have anything to do with the church, but have more friends amongst them than they have. It would be a nice thing if we could have some place to meet and get acquainted with one another at the World's Fair. I would like to see this in print.

From one of your merry band,
CLINT CULVER.

P.S.—I would like to correspond with some Freethinking young ladies between the ages of fifteen and eighteen. C. C.

The grandmother of a little four-year-old had been telling her one day not to say people lied, but rather that they were mistaken. Her grandma, to amuse her, told her a bear story, which was a tough one to believe. After she had finished, the little girl looked up into her face and exclaimed, "Grandma, that is the biggest mistaken I have ever heard."

JUDITH was a very mischievous little girl. One day she was in the room adjoining the one where mamma sat sewing. She was out of sight, and was very quiet. "Judith! Judith!" called mamma, "what are you up to?"

The answer came slowly and reluctantly, "I'm up to the bureau, mamma!"—Youth's Companion.

GOLD.

SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL.

MINERAL.

3mo14

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MBSLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Prestigious Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Licentiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continence even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

28 Lafayette place, New York.

Good Books for Liberally Inclined People.

The Last Tenet; Imposed upon the Khan o. Tomathoz. By Hudor Genone, author of "Inquirendo Island." Copiously illustrated with original drawings by Louis M. Glackens. 12mo, 165 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Inquirendo Island. A novel. By Hudor Genone. 12mo, 353 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "This book is to me a delightful surprise. In my judgment it is a stronger piece of fiction than Edward Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' which at times it reminds one of. It is a merciless exposure of Pharisaism and hypocrisy, which is so prevalent in fashionable Christianity of to-day. It is a good book, and while it will offend many, should be read by all."—[The Arena.]

Lecture on the Bible. By Rev. Charles Voysey, pastor of the Theistic church of London, with a new introduction by Rev. Herbert Taft Root. Paper, 37 pages; 30c.

God in the Constitution. By Arthur B. Bradford. Paper, 18mo, 18 pages; 10c.

Evolution in its Relations to Evangelical Religion. By B. F. Underwood. Paper, 24mo; 21 pages; 5c.

The Change of Front of the Universe. By Minot J. Savage. Paper, 31 pages, 10c.

A Study of Primitive Christianity. By Lewis G. Jones. Cloth, octavo, gilt top, uncut edges, 319 pages; $1.25. "Dr. Jones is evidently a thorough scholar, and one cannot fail to be impressed with the care, the honesty, the faithfulness, the impartiality, the love of truth, the conservatism exhibited throughout this admirable volume."—[Popular Science Monthly.]

What Can Ethics Do For Us? By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 32 pages, 10c.

Freedom of Thought and of Speech. By William Mackintire Salter. Paper, 12mo, 29 pages, 10c.

The Morals of Christ. A comparison with the contemporaneous systems of Mosaic, Pharisaic, and Greco-Roman ethics. By Austin Bierbower. Paper, 16mo, 200 pages, 50c; cloth, $1. "Mr. Bierbower has carefully analyzed the old-world ethical systems which chiefly concern the modern civilized world, and in this book he has so classified the elements revealed by that analysis as to give them a high scientific value. His book is almost as systematic as a treatise upon one of the exact sciences, and stands in fine contrast to the rambling, ethical discussion of which we hear so much and which leads us nowhere."—[Chicago Daily News.]

Liberty and Life. Seventeen discourses on the applications of scientific truth to morals and religion. By E. P. Powell. 12mo, 208 pages; cloth, $1; paper, 50c. "Strong, even bold, essays on ethical and religious subjects. They are the work of a man of vigorous intellect, who has studied the doctrine of evolution long and carefully, and has not found it necessary to abandon all his old reverences. The discourses are full of interest to the casual reader by reason of their fund of anecdote and biographical citation, and to the seeker for religious and moral truth they offer many helps."—[Literary World.]

Evolution and Christianity. A Study. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Cloth, square 18mo, 75 pages, 30c. "Mr. Grumbine's statements are sound and well put. His book is the fruit of wide reading and investigation. It is a helpful one, is thoroughly interesting reading, and its presentation of the relation between evolution and Christianity includes much valuable thought."—[Buffalo Express.]

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Selected from notes of unpublished sermons by Rufus Leighton. 12mo, 430 pages; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. Dahl.

Price, 25 cents.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	10
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS

CHRIST

CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. 10 cents

Scientific Works.

Three Introductory Lectures on the Science of Thought. By F. Max Müller. 1. The Simplicity of Language; 2. The Identity of Language and Thought; and 3. The Simplicity of Thought. With an appendix which contains a correspondence on "Thought Without Words," between F. Max Müller and Francis Galton, the duke of Argyll, George J. Romanes, and others. Neatly bound in cloth. Price, 75c.

Three Lectures on The Science of Language. By Prof. F. Max Müller. The Oxford University Extension Lectures. With a supplement, "My Predecessors," an essay on the genesis of "The Science of Thought." 112 pages; cloth. Price, 75c.

The Psychology of Attention. By Th. Ribot, professor of Comparative and Experimental Psychology at the Collège de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique. Authorized translation. Treating of the following topics: 1. Spontaneous, or Natural, Attention. 2. Emotional states; 3. Physical manifestations. 4. Surprise. 5. Voluntary, or Artificial, Attention. 6. Its mechanism; 7. Inhibition; 8. The feeling of effort. 9. The Morbid States of Attention. 10. Distraction; 11. Hypochondria; 12. Fixed ideas and ecstasy; 13. Idiosyncrasy; 14. Attention in sleep and hypnosis. Cloth, 75c.

Fundamental Problems. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

The Psychic Life of Micro-Organisms. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Translation from the French with the sanction of the author. Treating of the following subjects: 1. The Psychology of the Cell. 2. The Structural and Psychological Character of Proto-Organisms: Motory and Sensory Organs. 3. The Psychology of Nutrition: Holophytic, Saprophytic, and Animal Nutrition; Predatory Habits of Certain Animals. 4. Colonies of Unicellular Organisms. 5. Fecundation of Proto-Organisms. 6. Fecundation of Higher Animals and Plants. 7. The Physiological Function of the Nucleus. 8. Correspondence between Alfred Binet and Ch. Richet (professor of physiology in the Faculty of Medicine at Paris) respecting cellular psychology. 10mo, 135 pages; cloth, 75c; paper, 50c.

Wheelbarrow Articles and Discussions on the Labor Question. Including the Controversy with Mr. Lyman F. Gage on the Ethics of the Board of Trade; and also the Controversy with Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost, and others, on the Single Tax Question. Elegant cloth binding, portrait of the author, and autograph letter. Price, $1.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Being a disquisition on the development of the idea of God in human thought and history; discussing: 1. The Nature of Ideas. 2. The Etymology of The Word God. 3. God an Abstract Idea. 4. The Conceptions of God (Polytheism, Monotheism, Pantheism, Theism, and Atheism). 5. Definitions of the Idea of God. 6. Entheism, the Monastic Conception of God. Price, 15c.

Epitomes of Three Sciences. 1. Comparative Philology: The Study of Sanscrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg, of the University of Kiel. 2. Sanscrit Research; 3. From Jones to Lassen; 4. The Discovery of the Veda; 5. The Interpretation of the Veda; 6. The History of the Vedic Epoch. 2. Experimental Psychology. By Prof. Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin. 3. Aspects of Modern Psychology; 4. Psychology in Germany; 5. Psychology in France and Italy; 6. Psychology in Great Britain and the United States. 3. Old Testament History: or, The Rise of the people of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornwell, of the University of Königsberg. 4. The Traditions of the People of Israel; 5. The Migrations of the Tribes of Israel; 6. The Conquest of Palestine and the Kingdom of Israel. With special introductions by Professors Oldenberg and Cornwell, and prefatory remarks by the editor of the Open Court. Elegant cloth binding. Price, 75c.

The Ethical Problem. By Dr. Paul Carus. Three Lectures, delivered before the Society for Ethical Culture of Chicago at the invitation of the Board of Trustees: 1. Ethics, a Science; 2. The Data of Ethics; 3. The Theories of Ethics. 112 pages, cloth. Price, 50c.

On Double Consciousness. Experimental Psychological Studies. By Alfred Binet. Table of contents: 1. Introductory; 2. Proof of Double Consciousness in Hysterical Individuals. 3. The Relations between the Two Consciousnesses of Hysterical Individuals. 4. The Hysterical Eye. 5. Mechanism or Subconsciousness? 6. The Graphic Method and the Doubling of Consciousness. 7. The Intensity of Subconscious States. 8. The Role of Suggestion in Phenomena of Double Consciousness. 9. Double Consciousness in Health. 93 pages, paper. Price, 50c.

The Lost Manuscript. A Novel. By Gustave Freytag. A handsome, elegantly bound edition of this famous and popular German romance. The author writes as a motto for the American edition: "A noble human life does not end on earth with death. It continues in the minds and deeds of friends, as well as in the thoughts and the activity of the nation." In two octavo volumes; boxed. Price, $4.

Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Authorized translation. Treating of the following subjects: 1. Nature of Personality and consciousness. 2. Organic Disorders. 3. Emotional Disorders. 4. Intellectual Troubles. 5. Dissolution of the Personality. Cloth, 75c.

The Soul of Man. An Investigation of the Facts of Physiological and Experimental Psychology. By Dr. Paul Carus. With 152 Illustrative Cuts and Diagrams. Price $3, pages 480. Printed on extra fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth. The subject-matter of the work is divided into the following sections: 1. The Philosophical Problem of Mind. 2. The Rise of Organic Life. 3. Physiological Facts of Brain-Activity. 4. The Immortality of the Race and the Data of Propagation. 5. The Investigations of Experimental Psychology. 6. The Ethical and Religious Aspects of Soul-Life. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure. By W. B. GREG.

In 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Mother of Harlots; and a Synopsis of Popery, as It Was and as It Is. By William Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. The object of this book is to expose popery, acquaint the people of the country with the dangerous machinations of the church in the United States, and warn them against giving it any countenance or support. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener. One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS: Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things; Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology), Infinity of Matter, Man, Value of Matter, Brain and Mind, Motion, Consciousness, Form, Seat of the Soul, Immortality of Natural Innate Ideas, Laws, The Idea of God, Universality of Natural Personal Continuance, Laws, Vital Force, The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes, Periods of the Creation, Free Will, of the Earth, Morality, Original Generation, Concluding Observations, Secular Generation, tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Gems of Thought.

THE destroyers of the old are the creators of the new.—Ingersoll.

If we doubt the justice of an action, we ought to forbear doing it.—Chinese author.

THE laws which we make, fragile, inconsistent, works of a moment, differ everywhere. Jacob, among the Hebrews, could marry two sisters; David, without offense to decency and morals, could flatter the importunate tenderness of a hundred beauties; the pope, in the Vatican, can not possess one. Usages, interests, modes of worship, laws, all differ. Let us be just; it suffices; the rest is arbitrary.—Voltaire.

For a series of centuries the encouragement of credulity and imposture almost annulled the value of contemporary records. Travelers and chroniclers, as well as biographers, accommodated the popular taste by dealing, not in marvels only, but in miracles; witchcraft anecdotes, preternatural resurrections, prodigies of skill and physical prowess, giants, dragons, were-wolves, and no end of spectral manifestations. It is no exaggeration to say that for a period of more than nine hundred years the dogma of the Galilean antinaturalist systematically favored the survival of the unfit, by offering a premium on mental prostitution and making common sense a capital crime.—Felix L. Oswald.

THE trap sprang upon the two rabbits in Eden, and it was some four thousand years before anything was done to take its iron out of their flesh, to take its teeth out of their bones. Is this a specimen of "loving kindness and tender mercy" as the expression is understood in heaven?

After the third part [Christ] did come down here to see what could be done for the limbs which had been broken in Eden's patent damnation-trap, could he, she, or it not have set about the task in a more sensible fashion? Tramping about in an obscure and outlandish corner of the world, accompanied by twelve yokels and a few hussies, and talking communism and nonsense, was, to put it mildly, a roundabout way of breaking the rusty iron and the gory teeth of that trap in which all creation groaned. This third part of God lived as long as it could, and died when it could not help it; and I am rather anxious to know what this had to do with the redemption of mankind.—Saladin in God and His Book.

THE dealings of theology with political economy were by no means confined to the taking of interest for money. It would be interesting to note the restrictions placed upon commerce by the church prohibition of commercial intercourse with infidels, against which the republic of Venice fought a good fight; to note how, by a most curious perversion of scripture in the Greek church, many of the peasantry of Russia were prevented from raising and eating potatoes; how, in Scotland, at the beginning of this century, the use of fanning-mills for winnowing grain was widely denounced as contrary to the text, "The wind bloweth where it listeth," etc., as leaguely with Satan, who is "prince of the powers of the air," and therefore as sufficient cause for excommunication from the Scotch church. Instructive it would be also to note how the introduction of railways was declared by an archbishop of the French church to be an evidence of the divine displeasure against country innkeepers who set meat before their guests on fast-days, and who were now punished by seeing travelers carried by their doors; how railways and telegraphs were denounced from a few noted pulpits as heralds of Antichrist; and how in Protestant England the curate of Rotherhithe, at the breaking in of the Thames tunnel, so destructively to life and property, declared it from his pulpit a just judgment upon the presumptuous aspirations of mortal man. The same tendency is seen in the opposition of conscientious men to the taking of the census in Sweden and the United States, on account of the terms in which the numbering of Israel is spoken of in the Old Testament. Religious scruples on similar grounds have also been avowed against so beneficial a thing as life insurance. Apparently unimportant as these manifestations are, they indicate a wide-spread tendency in the application of scriptural declarations to matters of social economy which has not yet ceased, though it is fast fading away. Worthy of especial study, too, would be the evolution of the better modern methods of raising and bettering the condition of the poor; the evolution, especially, of the idea that men are to be helped to help themselves, in opposition to the old theories of indiscriminate giving, which, taking root in some of the most beautiful utterances of our sacred books, grew in the warm atmosphere of medieval devotion into great systems for the pauperizing of the laboring classes.—Prof. A. D. White.

All preachers, doctors, lawyers, if felids—everybody disputing the truth of Spiritualism—should sit in high control one hour each day and know of the truth direct. No more caviling need be heard, for EVERYBODY CAN KNOW of direct spirit communion—truth that no philosopher, no professor of any science, no medium other than ever gave to the world.

"MEDIUM WE,"

Send to 2,801 Twenty-eighth and Grace streets, Richmond, Va., and get

BOOK OF MEDIUM WE.

which is $1. It contains all the instruction required for the whole world to move on in daily scientific revolution.

WIZARDS MAGIC PURSE.

The most bewildering illusion discovered in this century! A very strong purse of the finest dressed kid strongly sewed and beautifully embroidered. (Regulating goods of equal quality sell for 50c to 75c.) Comprises 3 pockets, which we GUARANTEE no one can open in 3 hours without knowing the secret. It has baffled all experts in puzzle-dom. A great novelty, a wonderful mystery and a useful article, all in one. Your money and secrets are safe inside this purse! Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Sample with secret in sealed envelope post paid with Catalogue of 1000 useful articles, 25c; 3 for 60c; 6 for $1.00, $1.80 Doz.

R. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 Cortlandt st., N. Y. Steew19

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE Reynolds Blasphemy Trial, At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW. WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR. By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, 15 cents

Materialism: Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German. Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament. THE GOSPELS.

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not included in the New Testament.

Price, $1

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY— AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND— Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession. Price, 10 cents.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
 Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
 Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
 Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
 Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port., 50c.
 Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
 Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
 Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
 Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
 Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
 Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
 Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
 Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port., $1.50.
 Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 30c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.
 3 " The Church Robbing the People.
 3 " Thanksgiving.
 6 " Sabbath Laws.
 14 " Children and the Church.
 20 " Woman and the Church.
 6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.
 3 " Studies in Natural History.
 3 " The Bible and Science.
 15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.
 4 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
 4 " The Atonement Scheme.
 3 " The Lord and His Works.
 10 " Prayer.
 3 " The Creeds.
 10 " Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
 5 " Missionaries.
 5 " The Lord's Instruments.
 1 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
 1 " The Church and Slavery.
 2 " Priests and Politics.
 4 " Ireland and the Church.
 2 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
 1 " The Uses of the Cross.
 4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
 9 " Persecutions of the Church.
 12 " Some Allegories.
 3 " Heaven.
 6 " Hell.
 7 " Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others: Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Belingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambaetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Beth- ington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Babe- 1ais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... 25
 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait..... 25
 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 15 Were Adam and Eve Our first Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
 38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 10
 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... 10
 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 3
 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 5 20. Questions Without Answers..... 5
 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
 10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
 11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 10
 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake..... 10
 14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
 15 Lucifrons Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 20 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

Has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set weight 4 oz.; exactly like cut; Postpaid for $1.50, $2 for $4.00, $3 for $6.00, by express. Mention paper, and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers need for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir.

THE MOST ARTISTIC SPOON MADE.

STERLING SILVER, MASSIVE, BEAUTIFUL.

Given Away.

In order to introduce this most artistic of all Souvenirs, I shall present to all patrons who favor me with an order for goods, to the amount of $20, one of the above spoons, my price $2.50, but guaranteed a finer spoon than sold elsewhere for $3. And for every additional $20, an additional spoon. Or with an order for $10 worth of goods I will supply the spoon for $1.

THE INGERSOLL SOUVENIR

Is made in the following variety:

Tea Spoons,	{ Oxidized,	each $2.50
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	" 3.00
"	{ 14 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	" 3.00
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
"	{ Oxidized,	" 3.50
"	{ sectional gilt,	"
"	{ 10 ounces per doz.,	"
Orange "	{ Oxidized, plain bowl,	" 2.75
Sugar "	{ " gilt "	" 3.25
"	{ " satin "	" 3.00
"	{ " gilt "	" 3.50

The $2.50 Tea is also supplied etched in bowl, "The Time To Be Happy Is Now," or other mottoes, or names, for fifty cents extra. Parties entitled to spoons may, upon paying difference in price, select any other spoon from above list.

My stock embraces everything usually kept in first class jewelry stores. Diamonds guaranteed 20 per cent below regular market price. Watches of every description, Chains, Rings, Necklaces, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Ware, Optical Goods, Bages, Gold Pins, Etc. And $1,000 will be paid for proof that I have advanced my prices above lowest prices published in any of my latest price-lists, on account of the above liberal offer.

(If Freethought Badges are preferred the $2.50 may be so applied.)

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

(Established 1857) Rochelle, Ill.

Designer of The Perfected "Otto Wettstein" Watch; the Beautiful Ingersoll Spoon; the Popular Freethought Badge.

Send for price-lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy.

Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and reports free. Prompt attention. Send drawing and description to L. BAGGOTT & Co., Att'ys. Washington, D.C.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,

Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.

ONE OF YAHWEH'S UNFULFILLED PROMISES.

*"A Digest of Science."THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the
Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from Life. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of it: "It enables somebody in every village to 'corner the parson.'" Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, $1.

Address: THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

The restaurants on the World's Fair grounds, which have been charging almost incredibly exorbitant prices, will be made to lower their rates by the Exposition managers.

The authorities at the Sioux reservation in South Dakota are having difficulty in restraining the visits of a white man named Hopkins to the Indians. He poses as an Indian messiah, and as the savages confidently expect the coming of such a personage, it is feared that his advent would breed a rising.

The review by President Cleveland of war-ships of many nations, along with those of our rapidly growing navy, which has just been held in New York harbor, elicits the comment from the London St. James Gazette: "In America all the old republican objection to a navy and to an aggressive foreign policy is fast disappearing or gone already."

The archbishop of Canterbury says that he and his brother prelates will not attend the Congress of Religions to be held at Chicago simultaneously with the World's Fair. Their reason, he says, is that they feel Christianity cannot be made a member of a parliament of religions without the tacit admission that other religions have equal claims with it upon the faith of mankind.

The question whether the Russian consul-general in this city is empowered to refuse passports through his country to American citizens of Jewish birth will be tested in Washington this week by lawyer Osias Maller. Mrs. Schwartz, of New York city, applied to the consul-general at the same place for a passport, intending to visit her husband's parents. That official on hearing that she was of Jewish blood refused her. Lawyer Maller then applied for her, urging: "But this woman was born in this country, and her husband is an American citizen of ten years' standing." "We cannot help that," said General Olarovsky; "no Hebrew can get permission to enter Russia." "Do you understand that you are insulting the United States government by this, and that you may get into trouble by your action?" "I won't have any threats made here," was the reply. "This is Russian ground and I may deal with you according to Russian law." "You cannot bluff me that way," said Mr. Maller. "This is New York city, and American law holds good here. Now I make a formal demand that you indorse this passport signed by the secretary of state." "And I formally refuse," was the reply. The lawyer has remarked since: "There would be a fine cry raised in Russia if we should refuse to allow members of the Greek church to enter America."

Though the time for all unregistered Chinamen to leave the United States has passed, they will, by order of the president, be allowed to remain pending the court decision on the constitutionality of the exclusion law, to be rendered in the cases of three New York celestials arrested for test cases last Saturday. The secretary of state wrote to the governors of several states containing many Chinese, saying that the president hoped those aliens would be protected against the riots which he heard would be raised against them on the date formerly set for their departure. The governors all replied unoffensively except Governor Penoyer of Oregon, who returned: "I will attend to my business; let the president attend to his." Some are shocked at what they call this insulting reply, and say: "The president remembers the barbarous and horrid massacre of Chinese at Silver Creek, Wyo., and the affair of the Italian massacre at New Orleans, for both of which the national government paid a large indemnity. For whatever outrage might occur in Oregon the United States and not Oregon would have to pay." Penoyer, on the other hand, says: "The Gresham telegram is an insult to Oregon. I will enforce the laws of the state, and the president should enforce the laws of Congress. It comes with poor grace for the president to ask me to enforce the state law while he, without warrant, suspends the exclusion law. . . . The president has no right to suspend any act of Congress, and that is just what he is doing. When this matter goes to the Supreme Court, if it should be decided constitutional, Cleveland will be in a position of a law-breaker. He understands this, and to save the reputation of the president of the United States it will be necessary to declare the law unconstitutional. Secretary Gresham has no more right to suggest what the governor of a state should do than I have to tell Queen Victoria what she should do. Why, even if there were a war here in Oregon, the president himself would have no right to interfere until I should call upon him for assistance."

EAGLE BRAND.

—THE BEST—

ROOFING

Is unequalled for house, barn, factory, or out-buildings, and costs half the price of shingles, tin, or iron. It is ready for use, and is easily applied by anyone. Send stamp for samples, and state size of roof.

EXCELSIOR PAINT AND ROOFING CO.,
Dept. 10, 155 Duane St., New York.
13t18

HEAVEN AND ITS WONDERS

From Things heard and seen in the Spiritual World, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG;

ALSO
THE LAST JUDGMENT,

as witnessed by him in 1757.
Both books (the first in cloth 375 pp. and the second in paper 208 pp.) sent by mail for $1.00. Address exactly
Am. Swedenborg Printing & Publishing Society,
Dept. "A," 20 COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY.
6teow17

AGENTS WANTED.

We want agents to sell our rare Mexican Cactus and Coins; will send three different kinds of samples for $1. and one coin with each order.
Address: TEXAS CACTUS COMPANY,
H. G. STILLWELL, Manager,
208 San Antonio St.,
El Paso, Texas.
4t17

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price. 10 cents

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This

Water of Life

is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 20. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 20, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

WHAT HOME RULE MEANS FOR IRELAND.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor.
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor Study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

THE ELIMINATOR; OR Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impatched; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATIONS.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Pedigree of Man, and Other Essays. By Ernest Haeckel. Contents: Part I. The Darwinian Theory; The Origin of the Human Race; The Pedigree of Man; On the Division of Labor in the Life of Nature and of Man; Cell-Souls and Soul-Cells. Part II. The Progress and Work of Zoology; The Development of Life-Particles and the Perigenesis of the Plastidule; The Proofs of Evolution; The Present Position of Evolution in Relation to Science; The Origin and Development of the Sense Organs. Price, $2.

The Natural History of Religion. David Hume's Celebrated Essay, so foully mutilated by Christian publishers, printed complete, with an Introduction by John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer. Price, 50 cents.

The True Source of Christianity; or, A Voice From the Ganges. By an Indian Officer. Answers to the questions—Who was Jesus Christ? and from what source were the doctrines derived which he promulgated? Price, 75 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.
Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

New Publications.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE! The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the prop. r offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.
The Chemical Aspect.
The Sun.
Genesis—The Creation.
Genesis—The Garden of Eden.
The Deluge.
The Scriptural God—The Creation.
The Creation of God—Abraham.
Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.
Samuel the Kingmaker.
God Save the King.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.
The End of National Life.
The Christian Era.
Organic Life—Vegetable.
Organic Life—Animal.
The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.
Food and Food-Substances.
Elimination of Waste Substances.
In General.
By the Lungs.
By the Skin.
By the Kidneys.
Digestion and Nutrition.
The Elementary Substances.
Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Soul—What Is It?
The Mind.
Sin and Salvation.
The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Rational Review.
Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.
The Planetary Gods.
Every Man His Own God.
Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.
Morals; Whence They Spring.
The Non Credo.
Rules for Human Conduct.
ILLUSTRATIONS.
Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.
Map of Theological Retrogression
Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages,
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Bod; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification: The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Instead of a Book.

By A Man Too Busy to Write One.

Culled from the Writings of B. R. Tucker.

This is a big book of over 500 pages, and sets forth the principles of Philosophical Anarchy. In fact, it is the Creed, by the veritable John Calvin, of that cult. Mr. Tucker is a mental plumb-line hewer, and has the least regard for where the chips fall of any one of the writers of that careless camaraderie. Anyone wanting to know what the thinking Anarchists think, and why they think that way, will have to get one of these books in order to know.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

By COL. JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Functions of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff for Protection; War; Punishment; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

Those who know Col. Kelso's keen analytical power, as shown in his "Bible Analyzed" and "Deity Analyzed," will realize that in "Government Analyzed" they will have the bedrock of human authority exposed, and will learn what government is. Whether they will agree with his statement of what government is depends upon whether they lean to Socialistic or Anarchistic philosophy. But at all events everyone can learn something from this book.
Price, $1.50. Sold by THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Some Handsome Premiums.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" (3.00). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3.00). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in board covers ($1).

For $7.00 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3.00) and the "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times" ($5.00), by D. M. Bennett. In two volumes. Vol. I gives a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth have worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II describes fully all religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, being fully gone into. 949 pages.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR,

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR,

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Other Newspapers WITH The Truth Seeker.

Any of our readers who desire a New York weekly political paper can obtain one of the following in connection with THE TRUTH SEEKER at reduced rates:

Tribune (Republican) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER $3 50
Tribune (Republican) semi-weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER 4 25
The Sun (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER 3 50
The World (Democratic) weekly, and THE TRUTH SEEKER 3 50
THE ARENA and THE TRUTH SEEKER Will be sent one year both for $6 00
With large picture premium with the Arena, 6 50
THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW and THE TRUTH SEEKER will be sent one year for $6 75

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 20. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.}

New York, Saturday, May 20, 1893.

{28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - MAY 20, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

A Clerical Slanderer Brought to Account.

There are a good many preachers, of rancorous tempers and no principle, who when they find infidelity stealing among their flocks notwithstanding they have gone over the whole roll of arguments against it, as a last resort think to kill it by calling it obscenity. This tendency, too, is abetted by another orthodox propensity, which is, actually and honestly to regard as obscene the scientific and radical inquiry into sex matters which is rising in the modern era. One of the pulpitic stultifiers of mankind has, from one or both of the above motives, cast calumnies upon our great Freethinker royal, Colonel Ingersoll, which have led to the famous Ingersoll-Dixon suit, another decision in which has just been rendered.

On Feb. 8, 1892, Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the Rev. Amzi C. Dixon, a Baptist clergyman of Brooklyn, N. Y., the following letter, which explains the beginning of the controversy:

"NEW YORK, Feb. 8, 1892.

"REV. A. C. DIXON, My Dear Sir: My attention was called for the first time this morning to a report that appeared in the Brooklyn edition of the New York World of Feb. 1, 1892, of a lecture delivered by you on the 31st day of January, at the Hanson Place Baptist church, and in that report the following is said to have been uttered by you:

"A few years ago it was found that pictures and impure publications were passing through the mails. Anthony Comstock decided to stop it. On investigation, whom should he find representing publishers of impure literature but Colonel Ingersoll, paid to pollute the minds of the young of this generation."

"I write for the purpose of giving you an opportunity to retract either by stating that you used no such language, or that the statements are absolutely untrue.

"If you do not make such retraction, I shall commence an action against you for having uttered a malicious libel. Yours truly, R. G. INGERSOLL.

"45 Wall street."

To this letter Mr. Dixon publicly replied by causing to be published in the New York World of Feb. 14, 1892, amongst other things the following:

"I did not use, in my address of January 31, the words you (meaning this plaintiff) quote from the World, but I should have said them, or something like them, if in the press for time, they had not escaped my mind. The reporter of the World got them through my private secretary from some notes that I had spoken into a phonograph in course of preparation; but I am willing to be responsible for them as they appeared in the World, for I believe them to be true.

"I believe, sir, that these charges against you are true, and if you desire to test them before a Court of justice, I will be happy, indeed, to represent the purity of this country as against the defenders and propagators of obscene literature."

Thereupon Colonel Ingersoll brought suit in the supreme court of New York state against Mr. Dixon for malicious libel.

To this complaint the defendant interposed an answer, and the plaintiff having moved to strike out the greater part of it as irrelevant and immaterial to the issues raised, he, the defendant, obtained leave to serve an amended answer. That amended answer consisted of four alleged defenses.

The first defense merely admitted the publication and denied any malice on the defendant's part in making the publication complained of. To this Colonel Ingersoll made no demurrer, and it consequently will figure no farther in the proceedings, and may be dismissed from the reader's mind.

But to the second, third, and fourth defenses, and to Articles XIX and XX of this amended answer, Colonel Ingersoll did enter a demurrer, on the ground that each of these defenses and each of these articles was insufficient in law as a defense upon the face thereof. The attorney of record is Robert H. Griffin, of 20 Nassau street, a gentleman of great industry and legal attainments, and like all the people connected with Colonel Ingersoll, one pleasant to know.

First we will pause to note that upon the trial of this demurrer Justice Andrews decided in general that the article published in the New York World of February 14th by the defendant Dixon was a libel upon the plaintiff, and as interpreted by him meant that the plaintiff was a "defender of the propagators of obscene literature."

Now, as to the second defense, that pleading was substantially as follows:

1. That in March, 1878, a petition was presented to the United States Congress for the repeal or material modification of the postal laws, known as the Comstock laws—which amongst other things prohibited the transmission of obscene matter through the mails—and that the plaintiff, Ingersoll, signed that petition, or caused the same to be signed, with his name.

2. That the plaintiff, either in person or through others, petitioned the House committee and the Senate committee on the revision of laws for a hearing before them on this petition.

3. That thereafter an Associated Press dispatch was sent from Washington to numerous newspapers throughout the United States saying that seventy thousand freemen, headed by Colonel Ingersoll, had petitioned Congress to repeal the laws known as the Comstock laws on account of their unconstitutionality and outrages committed under them by Anthony Comstock; that plaintiff had knowledge of that dispatch and never denied that he represented the signers of said petition.

4. That Anthony Comstock, Samuel Colgate, and others opposed the granting of such petition and were successful in such opposition.

5. That in 1879 at a convention of the National Liberal League held in Cincinnati, plaintiff made an address in which he attacked the postal laws of the United States, and especially the laws against obscene literature as engines of oppression, and claimed that the United States Congress had no right to make laws prohibiting the dissemination of literature, obscene or otherwise.

6. That at the same convention plaintiff offered a resolution expressing sympathy with D. M. Bennett and his family upon his conviction for the dissemination of obscene literature, upon the ground that he had been convicted by religious bigotry and ignorant zeal, and that at the same time plaintiff wrote to Mr. Bennett expressing sympathy with him and protesting against his conviction.

7. That the natural and necessary effect of the position and acts of the plaintiff just recited was to show him to be the defender of the propagators of obscene literature.

To this Colonel Ingersoll's lawyer opposed the following demurrer:

"The defendant justifies because, as he says, a petition was presented to the United States Congress, signed by the plaintiff and that the prayer of the petition was that certain Acts of Congress relating to the sending of obscene matter, etc., through the mails should be repealed.

"This charge that the plaintiff signed such petition, even if true, does not even tend to justify or excuse the libel.

"The defendant sets out the petition, and the petition itself states the reasons the petitioners had and the objects the petitioners wished to attain as follows:

"That the statutes aforesaid are . . . capable of and are in fact being used for the purpose of moral and religious persecution; whereby the dearest and most precious rights of the people are being grievously violated under the forms of legal inquisition, fines, forfeitures and imprisonment."

"The petitioners also say that:

"They are convinced that all attempts of civil government, whether State or National, to enforce or to favor particular religious, social, moral or medical opinions, or schools of thought or practice, are not only unconstitutional, but ill-advised, contrary to the spirit and progress of our age, and almost certain in the end to defeat any beneficial objects intended. That mental, moral and physical health and safety are better secured and preserved by virtue resting upon liberty and knowledge than upon ignorance enforced by Governmental supervision. That even error may be safely left free where truth is free to combat it."

"And the said petition concludes as follows:

"Wherefore, your petitioners pray that the statutes aforesaid may be repealed or materially modified so that they cannot be used to abridge the freedom of the press or of conscience, or to destroy the liberty and equality of the people before the law and departments of the Government, on account of any religious, moral, political, medical or commercial grounds or pretexts whatsoever."

"Now the question is: Can the fact that the plaintiff signed such a petition be used as a defense on the part of the defendant for the libel?"

"The defendant published that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation; and he submits as evidence of that fact that a petition was signed by the plaintiff, in which the plaintiff declared that the laws sought to be modified or repealed were contrary to the fundamental principles of the government, and that they were being used for the purposes of moral and religious persecution, and asked that they either be repealed or modified so that they could not be used to abridge the freedom of the press, or conscience, or to destroy the liberty and equality of the people before the law.

"Is it possible to conceive of a more perfect non sequiter than this?"

"Put this in concrete and logical form and it is as follows:

"The plaintiff signed a petition to modify or repeal certain laws so that they could not be used to abridge the freedom of the press or conscience.

"Therefore, the plaintiff represented publishers of impure literature, and was paid to pollute the minds of the young of this generation.

"In the same second defense there is the following:

"The defendant states that J. Weed Corey asked the chairman of the Senate committee of the United States Senate to be kind enough to give the committee of which Robert G. Ingersoll was chairman a hearing before it on the subject of repealing or materially modifying certain postal laws referred to, etc.; and that afterwards the said J. Weed Corey again asked for such hearing, and that in his letter he stated that more than fifty thousand petitioners had prayed for the repeal or modification of certain laws executed ostensibly to prevent the passage of so-called obscene literature through the mails of the United States, but which laws have been and are being enforced to destroy the liberty of conscience in matters of religion, against the freedom of the press, and to the great hurt of the learned professions, and therefore asks that Robert G. Ingersoll, of Illinois, the chairman of the committee, be allowed to speak in behalf of the petitioners, and that the plaintiff, in person, asked the liberty of being heard before said committee.

"Is this a defense, or can it be pleaded in mitigation?"

"Let us put this in logical form.

"J. Weed Corey asked that the plaintiff be allowed to be heard before a committee of Congress, and the plaintiff himself asked that he be heard by a committee. The object of the hearing was to repeal or modify certain laws, it being claimed by the plaintiff and others that such laws were used against the freedom of the press and of conscience.

"Therefore, the plaintiff at said time was paid by the publishers of impure literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation."

"In the same second defense it is set forth as justification and in mitigation that

"Shortly after the presentation of the said petition to the United States Congress (plaintiff then being a resident of Washington, D. C.), the following Associated Press dispatch was sent from Washington to various newspapers in the United States, and printed in said newspapers and copied in the press generally throughout the United States, to wit:

"Seventy thousand freemen, headed by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, petitioned Congress to repeal the laws known as the Comstock Laws, on account of their unconstitutionality and the outrages committed under them by Anthony Comstock."

"It is further declared that the plaintiff had knowledge of such dispatch, and that he had never denied that he represented the signers of said petition; it being charged that many of the signers of the petition were publishers of impure literature, and that the plaintiff was aware at the time that he represented such publishers and the nature and character of their publications.

"The charge is that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of impure literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation; and this is substantiated because a press dispatch was sent out from Washington—which has not been denied by the plaintiff—that '70,000 freemen, headed by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, petitioned Congress to repeal the laws known as the Comstock Laws, on account of their unconstitutionality and the outrages committed under them by Anthony Comstock.'

"Let us put this into concrete and logical form:

"The plaintiff petitioned Congress to repeal certain laws known as the Comstock Laws on account of their unconstitutionality and on account of the outrages committed under them by Anthony Comstock.

"Therefore, the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of impure literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation.

"It is also claimed that many of the petitioners so represented by the plaintiff were the publishers of impure literature, and that the plaintiff was aware at the time of the nature and character of their publications.

"Can anything be more absurd than this?

"Suppose a petition was circulated to repeal certain laws passed ostensibly in the interest of temperance, but which by many were supposed to be unconstitutional; and suppose a citizen should sign a petition to have those laws repealed, it being stated in the petition that the laws were destructive of personal liberty and contrary to the Constitution.

"Could it then be truthfully said that because of the signing of such petition, the person who signed it was in favor of intemperance—in favor of drunkenness and general debauchery? And would it be a defense, or could it be proved in mitigation, that many of the persons who signed the same petition were keepers of saloons and drunkards?

"When men sign the same petition, it is evidence that they agree as to that petition. Thieves may sign a petition that is perfectly honest, and, although honest men sign the same petition, they cannot be charged with being thieves, and then the man who charges it defend himself on the ground that thieves did sign the petition.

"It is also stated in the second defense that the plaintiff has repeatedly declared that he was in favor of said petition.

"Is this a defense? Is this in justification or mitigation?

"What was the petition? It was to have certain laws modified or repealed.

"Why? Because they destroyed the liberty of conscience and of the press.

"If one is opposed to a law that abridges the liberty of the press or interferes with the freedom of conscience is he, therefore, of necessity the paid attorney of the publishers of obscene literature?

"So as to Article IX in the second defense:

"That has nothing whatever to do with the case one way or the other.

"So it is claimed in justification that the plaintiff made an address at a certain convention in which he attacked the postal laws of the United States and especially said laws against obscene literature as 'engins of oppression.'

"Does it follow that because plaintiff denounced the laws as 'engins of oppression' he was employed by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young or that he was a defender and propagator of obscene literature?

"Suppose the plaintiff had made a speech against capital punishment. Suppose he had petitioned the legislature for the abolition of capital punishment. Does it necessarily follow that he was in the employ of murderers; that he was paid by murderers, or that he believed in murder?

"Could such an inference be drawn when in the very speech or in the petition it was charged that capital punishment tended to increase crime?

"It is set out in said second defense that the plaintiff, well knowing that one D. M. Bennett had been convicted under the postal laws of the United States for sending obscene literature through the mails, and who, prior to his conviction, had been a publisher of obscene literature, and who had prepared said petition, as the plaintiff knew, and with regard to which the plaintiff was familiar at a certain convention held in Cincinnati, moved a resolution to the effect that:

"We express the deepest sympathy with D. M. Bennett and his family, for the reason that he has been convicted by religious bigotry and ignorant zeal, and has been imprisoned and is now languishing in a cell of a felon, when in truth and fact he has committed no offense whatever against any law of this country."

"And that about this time the "Plaintiff wrote a letter to said Bennett, whom he addressed as his 'dear friend' in which letter plaintiff declared that the jury who convicted said Bennett, the judge who refused him a new trial, and the president of the United States who refused him a pardon, all committed a crime."

"What has all this to do with the charge that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young, and that he was a defender and propagator of obscene literature?

"A lawyer may be called upon to defend a murderer, but he cannot be charged with defending murder.

"So he may defend one charged with theft, but he is not thereby a defender and propagator of larceny.

"In other words, a lawyer can defend the man without defending the crime. And yet, in this case the defendant charges, because the plaintiff said that Bennett had been improperly convicted, that he had been convicted by religious bigotry and ignorant zeal, and that he had committed no offense whatever against any law of the country; and, therefore, the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation, and was a defender and propagator of obscene literature.

"So, in the same article, it is charged that the plaintiff was a contributor to a paper known as THE TRUTH SEEKER, which paper was used for the dissemination of obscene and scurrilous articles, as the plaintiff well knew.

"Is this a defense? Is this a justification or in mitigation?

"It is not charged that the plaintiff wrote any of the obscene or scurrilous articles.

"For instance: The defendant had charged that the plaintiff was paid by men engaged in certain bogus lotteries, and upon being sued, had replied that the plaintiff contributed articles to certain papers in which the schemes of these men and of their lotteries had been published; therefore, the plaintiff must have been paid by these men, although he contributed no article relating to their business or in any way upholding their schemes. This would have been just as sensible as the defense in this action.

"In the twelfth article of said defense it is alleged that the plaintiff advocated that said Bennett be pardoned, and relieved from serving out his sentence of imprisonment under said conviction, and endeavored to secure his release from prison.

"Therefore, the plaintiff was the defender and propagator of obscene literature, and was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation.

"Is it possible that every man who signs a petition for pardon justifies the offense for which the man was convicted, and for which he was imprisoned; or is it barely possible that some men ask that a man be pardoned believing that he was wrongfully convicted, and that some men ask that a man be pardoned because they think he has suffered enough; and is it barely possible that men sign petitions for pardon because they have sympathy for their fellow-men—sympathy for wives and children; and can a libeler make a breastwork of such mercy from behind which to attack his fellow-men?

"So in the fourteenth article of the said defense it is alleged that the plaintiff was a public lecturer at the time, and also a writer of books, receiving a copyright on the sales of such books; and that, by reason of the widespread notoriety acquired by appearing before Congress in behalf of the pardon of Bennett, and by his acts, declarations, and statements that the plaintiff received and was paid further compensation by the increased sale of his books and increased demand for his lectures, and was in the manner aforesaid paid for said acts, declarations, and statements.

"This is a departure. The libel was and is that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature; that he was the paid attorney of such publishers.

"Now it is that he was paid for such acts, declarations, and statements by the increased sale of his books and the greater notoriety that he attained by reason of such acts, declarations, and statements.

"This is hardly worthy of a demurrer."

Upon this second defense, plaintiff's demurrer to it was overruled, the court saying:

"Assuming as I must on this demurrer that the matters set forth in the answer are true (as matter of law a demurrer admits the truth of the pleading attacked), I am of the opinion that the demurrer to the second defense is not well taken. Some of the matters set forth in such defense are probably irrelevant, but taken as a whole the defense distinctly charges that the plaintiff has, on several occasions, acted as the defender of the propagators of obscene literature. It may well be, as claimed by defendant's counsel in his elaborate and able brief, that in whatever the plaintiff did concerning the matters set forth in the second defense, he was actuated by the very highest and purest of motives, and that his acts in that connection are deserving of praise instead of condemnation; and it may be that many of the matters set forth in such defense are not true or that they are misrepresented, or that when viewed in connection with other matters the construction to be placed upon them will be very different from that which must be placed upon them as they now stand, undenied and unexplained. But for the purposes of this demurrer everything contained in such defense must be assumed to be true, and upon that assumption I do not think the demurrer is well taken."

We will not print Mr. Dixon's third defense by itself, as the reader will get an adequate idea of it from its description in Colonel Ingersoll's demurrer against it, which is as follows:

"It is set forth by the defendant that about 1880 a book was published at Chicago and other places, entitled 'Thinkers, Principally Upon Social Science; What They Think and Why,' written by Van Buren Denslow, L.L.D., and the introduction to said book published therewith was written by the plaintiff, and that in said introduction the plaintiff commended said book to the public, including the young of this generation, using, with other language of commendation, the following: 'In my judgment this book, filled with original thought, will hasten the coming of the blessed time.' It is said that the defendant will produce the book on the trial of this action for fuller reference.

"And the defendant goes on to say:

"The natural and necessary effect of said book was to pollute the minds of the young of this generation, and by reason of the premises the defendant might lawfully publish concerning the plaintiff the matters published in his said letter of February 14th, 1892."

"The plaintiff demurs to this for the following reasons:

"The contents of said book claimed by the defendant to necessarily pollute the minds of the young are not set out—there is nothing to show that said book had any connection whatever with the charge made; not the slightest."

As the judge passed on this and the fourth defenses in one, we will go on to describe the fourth defense and then give his decision on them both. As in the preceding case, the reader will find the defense amply related in the demurrer to it. The demurrer was:

"The defendant sets out that the plaintiff for many years last passed has been making, for pay and otherwise, speeches and writing books and pamphlets attacking Christianity, in which he has blasphemed God, denied the inspiration of the Bible, and sought to weaken the sanctions and authority of the moral law.

"Let us put this in a form to be understood:

"The plaintiff has attacked Christianity. Therefore, he was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation.

"The plaintiff has made speeches and written pamphlets in which he has blasphemed God. Therefore, he was paid by the publishers of obscene literature, and was a defender and propagator of obscene literature.

"The plaintiff has denied the inspiration of the Bible and sought to weaken the sanctions and authority of the moral law. Therefore, the defendant was perfectly justified in saying that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation.

"In the XX. Article of the fourth defense the defendant alleges that he had been informed and believes that young men, members of families connected with his church, had been polluted in mind and led away from Christianity, virtue, and morality by the writings and utterances of the plaintiff, and that, therefore, he was justified in saying that the plaintiff was paid by publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young.

"The defendant also says as a defense that he had been informed of many instances of young men whose minds had been polluted—whose virtue and morality had been undermined and destroyed—by the advice, counsel, utterances, and writings of the plaintiff, and that, moved by indignation, he published the article referred to solely with the purpose and hope of counteracting the evil influence of plaintiff's said utterances and writings.

"That is to say, he had been informed of many instances of young men whose minds had been polluted, whose virtue and morality had been undermined, and therefore he, the defendant, charged that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation.

"And he concludes said defense by alleging, on information and belief, that the plaintiff's character and general reputation as to vulgarity, indecency, profanity, immorality, obscenity, and general pollution at the times before mentioned in said answer, and for many years prior thereto, had been bad, and that such general reputation was known to defendant at and before February 14th, 1892.

"And he claims that he, the defendant, was justified in charging that the plaintiff was paid by the publishers of obscene literature to pollute the minds of the young of this generation. In other words, that, the character of the plaintiff being bad, the defendant had a right to libel him."

As to this third and this fourth defense and the demurrer thereto, Judge Andrews said:

"I am of the opinion that the demurrer to the third and fourth defenses should be sustained. The fact that the plaintiff wrote the introduction to a certain book, the natural and necessary effect of which was to pollute the minds of the young of this generation, does not tend in any way to prove that the plaintiff was a defender of the propagators of obscene literature—does not even allege that such book was obscene. The fact that the actual and necessary effect of the book was, in the opinion of the defendant, to pollute the mind of the young, does not prove or necessarily tend to prove that the book was obscene. Some persons believe that the natural and necessary effect of many books which treat of scientific subjects is to pollute the minds of the young, and will not permit their children to read them; but nobody would ever think of calling such books obscene. No extracts from the book in question are given in the answer, but the brief of defendant's counsel contains what are stated by him to be such extracts; and, whatever else may be said of them, they are not obscene within any known definition of that word, and in my opinion would not be admitted in evidence upon the trial as tending to prove that the plaintiff has been the defender of the propagators of obscene literature.

"With regard to the fourth defense, assuming it to be true that the plaintiff has for many years been making speeches and writing books and pamphlets attacking Christianity in which he has blasphemed God, denied the inspiration of the Bible, and has thereby in the opinion of the defendant sought to weaken the sanctions and authority of the moral law, I am at a loss to see how any or all of these facts prove or tend to prove that he has been a defender of the propagators of obscene literature."

In Article XIX of his defense, Dixon gave notice that he would offer in evidence all of the matter set up in his second, third, and fourth defenses by way of mitigation of damages. This in law means that the defendant admits the falsity of the libel, but had reason to believe it true through other facts which had come to his knowledge, and upon which he had based his false opinion and his false charge, and that therefore believing, or having reason to believe, the charge to be true, he asks the jury to consider the facts on which that charge was based in mitigation, that is to say, in reduction of damages which the plaintiff would otherwise be entitled to.

Article XX of the amended answer is also pleaded in mitigation, and consists of this: That prior to Feb. 14, 1892, the reverend defendant had been informed of many instances of young men whose minds had been polluted, whose virtue and morality had been undermined and destroyed by the advice, counsel, utterances, and writings of the plaintiff, and that, moved by indignation caused by such information, he published the article referred to in said complaint without malice, but solely with the purpose and hope of counteracting the evil influence of plaintiff's said utterings and writings.

In the same paragraph he also charges that the plaintiff's character and general reputation as to vulgarity, indecency, profanity, immorality, obscenity, and general pollution was at the times mentioned, and for many years prior thereto had been, bad.

In regard to these articles, XIX and XX, Judge Andrews said:

"With regard to the demurrer to the XIX and XX articles of the answer, I am of the opinion that the matters above referred to, which are set up in the third and fourth defenses, will be no more admissible in evidence upon the trial in mitigation of damages than as absolute defenses, and I am also of the opinion that most of the matters set forth in the XX article will not be admissible in evidence upon the trial in mitigation of damages. But the demurrer to those two articles must be overruled, because matter pleaded in mitigation is not a subject of demurrer."

Summarizing the decision of Judge Andrews, it amounts to this:

The defendant's third and fourth defenses are excluded, and, while the demurrer to the second defense and to articles XIX and XX is overruled, the judge says that in his opinion the matter set up in them is substantially irrelevant and will not be admissible upon the trial.

Thus the case stands. The defendant having failed to escape by "justifying"—as the legal term is—his allegations, before trial, he will have to stand trial at some date before long, and show to the world whether the power wielded by clergymen throughout the whole course of former history, of destroying at will those who threaten their bread and butter, may still be exercised with impunity.

Between the sustained demurrer of Colonel Ingersoll, and the irrelevancy and inadmissibility of Mr. Dixon's pleadings, it looks as though when the case does come to trial the reverend gentleman will have no defense left, but will have to throw himself upon the mercy of the jury as to the amount of damages he should pay. And if he is mulcted to the tune of five thousand dollars decent people will say it served him right.

The Battle Thickens Over Sunday Opening.

The shameful scene at Chicago of Sunday before last, the 7th, is drawing sharp comments from all parts of the land. A particular trade or calling—the clerical—having obtained from the government a monopoly of one day in seven, a prerogative to engross to their own coffers all the coin that the people shall spend on that day, and by special details of police beating back one hundred thousand men and women from sight of elevating works of their own hands because that sight would divert trade from said clerical calling—this monstrous scene will not pass from memory for many a decade.

On that day, in consequence of exclusion from the Exposition crime flourished. There was more drunkenness in the vicinity of Jackson park than was ever known before. Brawls were numerous, and the police had their hands full. A dispatch on the following day, Monday, said:

"There were four murders, one suicide, and any number of fights in Chicago yesterday. To-day the papers claim that if the Fair gates had been opened Sunday none of these crimes would have occurred. The people who indulged in such violent amusements would have gone down to the Fair instead, and would have spent their time innocently wandering among the buildings and along the shores of the lagoons."

Still referring to the same Sunday, another advice said:

"A government wagon delivered a load of mail matter at the post-office within the grounds. Next Sunday and succeeding Sundays, if the same rule is in force, the government mail wagon will not be allowed to pass the gates. The reason for this is plain—the government put itself on record as wishing to have the Exposition closed on Sundays. It is only the expressed desire of the federal government which keeps the gates closed. The local directory wants them open. And the directory is of the opinion that if the government is a Sunday-closing government, it should transact no business of any nature within the grounds on the first day of the week. If it tries to do so, the directory will see that it does not."

During the week, among the intelligences telegraphed was this:

"A curious feature of this Sunday issue is the manner in which President Higinbotham is abused by letter, sometimes anonymously, sometimes otherwise. These epistles are from people who call themselves defenders of the American Sabbath, but frequently they contain expressions not entirely consistent with a Christian spirit."

Finally, on Friday the local directory, which is interested in the finances of the Fair, and therefore anxious that it should be open on the day when it would receive as many visitors as on any three other days, made a move to secure opening. This was brought about in the shape of the report of Edwin Walker, legal adviser of the board. The report says that the act of Congress which appropriated $2,500,000 for the Fair, did so on condition that the exhibition should be closed on Sunday. But the act creating the World's Fair prescribed that it should be an exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and products of the soil, mine, and sea. The exposition, then, in the sense used by Congress, meant the exhibition of arts, industries, etc., and did not mean the grounds. There is, therefore, a law against opening the buildings and showing the exhibits, but none against opening the grounds. Moreover, Congress has no power to forbid people visiting the buildings put up by foreign governments, or occupied by commissioners as state buildings, therefore there is no reason why these should be closed. The reasoning of Mr. Walker so commended itself to the board that they at once passed resolutions opening the grounds on Sunday, May 21st, and thereafter, at an admission fee of twenty-five cents.

But the directory had reckoned without the national commission. This latter body cares little for the financial success of the Fair, or justice to the masses, but does care to procure the love of the Sunday bigots who are watching this commission from every corner of the country. Besides, this body has a grudge against the directory growing from a quarrel over a musical director Thomas. Accordingly its members were at Jackson park the next morning earlier than usual on account of the radical stand taken by the local directory in regard to opening the gates on Sunday. The commission had thoroughly understood the sentiment of the directors on the Sunday-closing question, and for a long time had suspected that the local authorities would take the action which they did. These men who are, as they call it, to carry out the will of Congress are greatly exercised over what they term the defiant attitude of the Chicago directory. They are, says one report, in a state of mind bordering on frenzy. At this meeting some members could hardly wait for the quorum to assemble, so anxious were they to give formal utterance to their thoughts and outraged feelings. No one could be found to support Attorney Walker's idea that the grounds are in charge of the directory. Commissioner St. Clair, of West Virginia, insisted that the military force of the government would, if necessary, be used to keep the gates closed. General St. Clair could not find words to express his condemnation of the action of the directors. "I have always been in favor of Sunday opening, and have been doing everything in my power to secure it through the action of the commission," said he, "but this action of the board of directors is indefensible." "Suppose the directors should insist on opening the gates on Sunday, what measures can be taken to prevent them?" he was asked. "President Cleveland can call upon the army, and he will do so if the commission should think it necessary. The gates cannot be opened without the consent of the president. This corporation has no more right to open the gates of this Fair on Sunday than any Indian in the Rocky mountains, and for any man to assume that any stranger may take control of the government property is absurd. The law of the land must and will be maintained. The army of the government always stands ready to uphold the dignity of the government." General St. Clair's sentiments seemed to be those of every member of the commission. The commissioners felt that the United States government had been insulted by the local directory in taking such action as it did. A number of speeches were made denouncing the action of the local directory, and Commissioner Glendenning termed the action of the board a "contemptible evasion of a law of Congress." President Palmer announced that he had received a number of telegrams from all parts of the country asking the commission to put down the Sunday-opening movement, and they were placed on the table for the inspection of the commission.

On the Sunday succeeding these doings, namely the 14th, the Exposition was closed, both buildings and grounds, to all persons. It is on the next Sunday, the 21st, that efforts will be made to open it. Some violence may result. The judiciary committee of the national commission has made up its collective mind as to what is the proper thing to be done with what it calls the bold, bad local directors of the World's Columbian Exposition, and it is simply that in case the directors should open the gates on next Sunday without the consent of the commission Director-general Davis will be ordered to call on Colonel Rice, of the Columbian Guard, and ask him to close them with his forces. In the event of the colonel being unable or unwilling to obey the mandate, then President Cleveland will be asked to furnish a sufficient number of troops to carry out the act of Congress and the order of the commission. This talk about forcing the local directors to obey the law of Congress is not idle chatter on the part of the members of the national commission by any means. Attorney-general Olney has telegraphed United States District Attorney Milchrist instructing him to look after the interests of the government in any attempt to violate the law relating to Sunday closing as laid down by the national Congress. "I have taken no action as yet," said Mr. Milchrist. "What will be done this week I will not say, excepting that if a complaint comes to my office

(Continued on page 312.)

Communications.

The Dynamic Theory of the Immaterial.

Matter and mind are two terms very frequently used in the controversy between materialism and metaphysics. These terms—especially the latter—are often ill defined or not defined at all.

In the dictionary, mind is called a noun; and a noun is said to be "the name of a person, place, or thing," and thus we are indirectly told that mind is the "name of a person, place, or thing." But when we come to compare the person or thing that mind is the name of with some other thing, such as a box, for example, we soon discover a radical difference. Mind has no weight as a box has, nor has it length, breadth, or thickness, nor roundness nor squareness. It cannot be seen, heard, smelled, nor tasted. If an animal be chloroformed and carefully searched for his mind no trace of it can be discovered. The top of the skull may be removed and the curious workmanship of the brain exposed to view; the cavity of the chest may be opened and the mechanism of the circulation be inspected; the stomach may be examined and the chemistry of digestion investigated; but by no sort of scrutiny will any trace of mind be discovered. If the animal be now asphyxiated and put to death it will not be possible to tell by the use of any sort of instruments however delicate, nor by means of any of our senses, what the animal has lost, although all would agree that it had lost its mind, and its motions had all come to an end. The effect would be the same if a man were the subject of investigation instead of some other animal. Having thus discovered that the mind is not composed of materials like those of a box or other ponderable body, the ancient reasoners came to the conclusion that since it is certainly something, it must be an immaterial thing, and so they hit upon the idea of an immaterial substance. By hitting upon this idea they laid the foundation upon which has been built the greater part, if not the whole, of that enormous structure of mysticism and mental jugglery called metaphysics, including theology. It is safe to say that this idea, which it is easy to prove is totally false, has been productive of more error, persecution, and misery than any other blunder in philosophy ever made.

It would seem to be hardly necessary to say that an immaterial thing or substance is totally inconceivable and unthinkable—in fact, absolutely impossible, and yet it must be freely admitted that mind is not material.

The fact is the old definition of a noun given above is very seriously defective. If we look through the dictionary we shall find nouns on almost every page that are the names of neither persons, places, nor things. The noun "action" is a type of these words which all refer to motion or movement. We speak of a wave of the hand, of a handkerchief, of a flag, of water, etc.; of the flight of a bird, of an arrow, of the enemy. We say a walk, a leap, a run, a stroke, a fall, a rise, an advance, a retreat, etc. Now, these words and thousands more like them express motions that we declare to be real—and they are real—but whose relations to us are usually little understood. For example, a man will declare he saw the fall of a meteorite, and went and picked it up. His language is inexact. He did not see the fall, he saw the meteorite first in one place and then in another, and another, till finally he saw it on the ground. The fall is purely a matter of inference. The circumstantial evidence of the fall is complete and convincing, and yet the fall is not a material thing, and we get no direct evidence of it through a single one of our senses. We find the meteorite on the ground, but what has become of the fall? The fact is, the fall was the motion of the meteorite, and now that it lies at rest on the ground, the motion it had has ceased to be its. Nothing that is in the universe can ever get out of it—neither matter nor its motions. When the meteorite came to the earth the motion of its fall was communicated to the part of the earth it struck, certain portions were driven in, forming a depression, and when all visible motion of that sort had come to an end, if the ground and the meteorite had been examined it would have been found that their temperature had been considerably raised. A thermometer would show this, and we should feel it if we handled the bodies concerned. This temperature that causes the mercury in the thermometer to expand is due to the oscillations or concussions one against another of the particles or molecules of the meteorite and the ground it struck upon. It is the continuation of the motion of the fall of the meteorite in a new form because the bodies now moving are under different conditions.

The aggregate force of all these motions of the particles composing these bodies added together exactly equals the force with which the meteorite fell and struck the ground. Not a grain of it is lost out of the universe, although as the bodies cool off their temperature is communicated to the air and the surrounding soil and so dissipated from view, like a cup of water thrown into the ocean. This is the law of the "conservation of energy" which is now recognized as a fundamental law of physics and rests upon as sure a foundation as the law of the indestructibility of matter. Each of these laws rests on conclusions of logic, confirmed and supported by every possible experimental test.

It appears now from what has been said that, first, mind is immaterial; second, that motions of matter are immaterial; third, that motions of matter can never become anything else than motions of matter. Now, if in the further prosecution of the argument it can be shown that mind arises from, or is a sequel or consequent of motions of matter, the chain of proof will be complete that mind is one of the forms of motion taken by matter.

There is a seeming inconsistency or contradiction between the statements made above (1) that we do not see the fall of a body nor get any evidence of such fall by way of the senses directly from the fall itself; and (2) that after it had struck the ground a person picking it up would feel the heat, which heat is explained to be the continuation of the motion of the fall. Here one does get a direct sensation from the motion. But in this case it is the motion itself that is transferred to the person, and part of it becomes his feeling or sensation of heat. If a hundred people are standing around and the meteorite is passed from one to another till all have handled it, it will then perhaps have lost all its heat, which will have been transferred to the people and given rise in each one to a sensation of heat, and in this case we can assert that a large part of the motion of the fall has been turned into the motion called sensation or feeling. (I have shown in the "Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind" that mind is a product of sensations, and so a single sensation is mind as far as it goes.)

Now we see the important difference between the two cases. In the second case, all the motion of the body is lost and a considerable portion of it has gone into the bystanders and become sensation, and it could not have become sensation unless it had been lost as temperature by the fallen body. In the first case, the falling body lost none of its motion by being looked at and so it could give no direct sensation of its falling. We thus reach the vastly important generalization that we cannot get a direct sensation of the motion of a body except at the expense of the reduction of that motion. The sensation is a continuation in us of the motion lost by the body (or part of it). When we see the falling body, the sensation of seeing that we get is at the expense of the energy of the sun, for it is the sun's rays reflected from the body that are consumed in forming our sensation. But if we see the body when it is incandescent and shining by its own light, our sensation then is the sequel of some of the motion through space that the meteorite did have but has lost; for it did not become incandescent till it rushed into the atmosphere, the friction of which reduced its speed and turned the part so reduced into heat and light.

If we consider any other sort of sensation, as that of sound, it can be shown that it, as well as feeling and seeing, can arise only when a certain sort of motion has taken place in some other body and has been then lost by it and transferred to a sensitive being—a man or other animal.

Sensation—seeing, feeling, light, sound, odor, etc.—are parts of the mind and exist only in us, not in the objects outside of us from which we are accustomed to say we get them. Thus light is not in the sun; it is a motion of our own. Sound is not in a bell; but it is the motion in us that the bell sets up by its vibrations. The motion of the sun is stopped to the extent that we get the sensation light. Our sensation sound, is merely the way some of our brain tissues move when agitated by the vibrations of the bell, and it is the exact physical equivalent of the vibrations consumed in setting it up.

It is obvious that when energy is transferred from a body in motion to another at rest, the second body must offer some resistance, otherwise the first body would lose none of its motion but would keep right on. Only a body offering resistance can have motion transferred to it, and such a body is necessarily a material body. This is in fact a corollary of the law of the conservation of energy. Now, sensation being a continuation inside of our bodies of a motion of a material object outside of us, it follows from the foregoing that it is a material substance inside of us that moves in sensation.

But this is not all. Sensation being a motion of matter it can never appear as anything else in any subsequent manifestation of itself, and in ceasing to be sensation it must, according to the law of conservation, give rise to new motions of matter.

A very common form of motion to which sensation gives rise is heat. In fact, all sensations give up part of their motion (that is themselves), and many of them all of it, to subside into heat. But many of them expend themselves in setting up the various muscular motions of the body; and both heat and muscle contractions are forms of physical motion, or the energy of moving matter. The greater part of our actions are caused by painful, or uneasy, sensations, such sensations being wholly or partly expended in setting up motions of the muscles. If the person picking up the fallen meteorite finds it uncomfortably hot, he will suddenly throw it down. That is, the sensation of heat, a motion in the brain resulting from the violent oscillations of the particles of the meteorite, also commonly called heat, sets up a motion in the nerves that in turn sets up contraction of certain muscles in the hands, that loosens the grip and drops the object.

Thus the sensation is shown to be interchangeable with other forms of physical motion; it is a consequent of some of them and an antecedent of others. It could not be either, nor could it be found in any sort of relationship with physical energy, unless it were itself a form of such energy—that is, a motion of matter. Like all the other forms of motion, it is immaterial, but neither more nor less so than the rest. It could not be immaterial unless it were a motion and not a thing.

In a recent article in THE TRUTH SEEKER by Augusta Chapman, she asserts that after she has delivered her idea to Mr. Wettstein she still has it in her "brain, intact."

An idea is merely a combination of sensations; so that no matter how complicated it may be, it is a motion or series of motions of certain brain tissues. The delivery of an idea then consists in the motion of these tissues being transferred to the muscles of tongue and jaws in the production of speech, or to the muscles of the fingers in writing. When it is so delivered it ceases to be—that is to say, that particular idea no longer exists because the motion that it was, has been transferred to become motion of another sort. If another motion comes along that sets up motion in the same brain cells again, they will move nearly the same way as they did before, and produce a new idea similar to the first one, but if it is at all complicated it can never be reproduced nor expressed twice exactly alike.

In the army signal service a flag waved in a particular way is a signal to march. After such a signal has been given it would not be correct to say the signal is still "intact" in the flag. That signal has lived its life and is done forever. But if it is not understood, and has to be repeated, the machinery that produced it—viz., the flag, the man's muscles and his brain—are still there, and the call for its reproduction will again start up the brain cells, these will move the muscles, and these will wave the flag, and so a new signal very much like the first will be produced.

It is the same in all brain action. When the brain is still, the idea does not exist. But if the cells the motion of which constituted the idea in the first place, remain "intact," they may be set going again by a proper stimulation, and a new idea produced almost like the first.

It is not possible within newspaper limits to treat such a subject exhaustively, but if some one will point out what appear to him as difficulties in the foregoing, I will try to clear them up. The term Materialist, as popularly understood, does not properly describe one who accepts the above theory. I suggest Dynamicist.

JAS. B. ALEXANDER.

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting-room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

The Right of Affirmation.

Robert C. Adams in Secular Thought.

At the last session of the Dominion Parliament, a bill was passed, entitled, "An Act respecting Witnesses and Evidence." Sections 23 and 24 of this act read as follows:

23 If a person called or desiring to give evidence objects, on grounds of conscientious scruples, to take an oath, or is objected to as incompetent to take an oath, such person may make the following affirmation: "I solemnly affirm that the evidence to be given by me shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

And upon the person making such solemn affirmation, his evidence shall be taken and have the same effect as if taken under oath.

24 (1) If a person required or desiring to make an affidavit or deposition in a proceeding or on an occasion whereon or touching a matter respecting which an oath is required or is lawful, whether on taking office or otherwise, refuses or is unwilling to be sworn, on grounds of conscientious scruples, the court or judge, or other officer or person qualified to take affidavits or depositions, shall permit such person instead of being sworn, to make his solemn affirmation in the words following, viz.: "I, A. B., do solemnly affirm, etc.," which solemn affirmation shall be of the same force and effect as if such person had taken an oath in the usual form.

(2) Any witness whose evidence is admitted or who makes an affirmation under this or the next preceding section, shall be liable to indictment and punishment for perjury in all respects as if he had been sworn.

Section 25 permits a child to give evidence without oath, if in the opinion of the officer, "such child is possessed of sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence and understands the duty of speaking the truth."

Section 26 gives "the right of making a solemn declaration in attestation of the execution of any writing, deed, or instrument, or of the truth of any fact, or of any account rendered in writing." This declaration is as follows:

I, A. B., do solemnly declare that (state the fact or facts declared to), and I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true, and knowing that it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath, and by virtue of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893.

This ends a long struggle upon the part of the Freethinkers and Secularists of Canada to obtain recognition of their right to be excepted from the compulsion to take oaths. After July 1st next, when this law takes effect, no Secularist nor any other person who has conscientious objections to the oath need submit to that form, and if asked to kiss the book he can tell the judge that he reserves his kisses for untanned skins.

For many years efforts have been made to secure this act of justice, and in 1886 a bill introduced by Mr. Robertson of Hamilton passed its third reading in the House of Commons, but was defeated in the Senate, although the right to affirm was left to the opinion of the presiding judge as to the sincerity of the witness.

When I was honored with the presidency of the Canadian Secular Union, I sought for some work of benefit to Secularism that I might espouse to signalize my term of office, and justify my appointment. This question of affirmation appeared to me to be one of the most pressing and important matters awaiting solution and I resolved to make it my special effort. Aided by the courtesy of the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER and other kind friends I obtained literature on the subject, which led to the preparation of a bill by Mr. Max Goldstein, of Montreal, a clear-headed lawyer and enlightened man.

Sir Donald A. Smith, M.P., undertook to introduce this bill; and taking it first to Sir John Thompson, Hon. minister of justice, he secured his approval of its principles. The matter was placed in the hands of Mr. Robert Sedgewick, Q.C., deputy minister of justice, and its provisions were incorporated into the present act, which was introduced into Parliament by Sir John Thompson in the session of 1892. Since then the words "on grounds of conscientious scruples" have been inserted; but there seems to be no reason to object to this, although I took strong grounds against accepting the compromise clause which Mr. Bradlaugh allowed to be inserted in his oaths' bill, which required allusion to the religious belief or disbelief of the witness. We were determined to oppose the application of any religious test or inquisition. As the law will stand now, Canada is placed in the front rank of nations as regards religious toleration on the oath question; and those who have felt alarmed that Canada was to have a Catholic premier should put it to his credit that it is owing to his approval and his introduction that the bill has passed.

We have for some years endeavored to secure a similar change in the laws of the province of Quebec, but so far have been unable to find a member who would assume the hopeless and politically injurious task of introducing the bill. There is more reason now to expect success, and some efforts are in prospect, of which for politic reasons I will not speak just at present; but I pledge myself to unceasing effort until the present disgraceful laws are obliterated from the Quebec statutes.

The work that I have done has been accomplished as "president of the Canadian Secular Union," and I desire that this organization may have whatever credit the result may bring. The two following letters to Mr. Sedgewick may be useful in giving some information as to the history of the movement.

MONTREAL, July 23, 1891.

R. SEDGEWICK, Esq., Q.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, Ottawa, Dear Sir: I desire to avail myself of your kind permission to lay before you a plea for the passage of the Oaths' bill, which has been handed to the Hon. minister of justice by Sir Donald A. Smith, and which the latter has pledged himself to support.

The present state of the oaths' laws is a scandal and offense to many worthy citizens, and only operates to the defeat of justice; because they are so contrary to the enlightened spirit of the age that respectable advocates in good causes will not stoop to avail of them, and they are mainly resorted to as subterfuges in bad cases by tricky people.

The Quebec law is worse in its wording than the Dominion law, but the practical construction of both is the same, and we cannot hope to get the Quebec law altered until the Dominion parliament sets the example. At present no Agnostic is eligible as a witness in Quebec. A number of the wealthiest and most philanthropic men in the country now hold these opinions, and they occasionally have to face the alternatives of lying or of being robbed by scoundrels. The firm of Hermann H. Wolff & Co., of Montreal, lately sent a well-educated German clerk to court to prove an undoubted debt. He was disqualified as an Agnostic, and the firm lost a claim of $150, and had to pay $100 costs. Several cases have happened of late, and always to the defeat of justice.

Rascals are learning how to avail of the law. A fraudulent bankrupt named Myers, desiring not to testify, declared himself an Agnostic; later on, desiring to testify, he declared that he had been converted to a religious belief. In the first case this man was not allowed to give evidence, and in the second his testimony was received.

Many respectable unbelievers, among them some of our most prominent business men, are daily or frequently pained by having to go through forms of declaration that are offensive to their convictions and sensibilities. They regard the kissing of a book as a superstitious act, and the appeal to supernatural powers as evidence of a lack of intelligence. They demand freedom from this annoyance as well as safety for their interests. I have heard a reluctance expressed against making investment in Canada, because property is imperiled by the possible disqualification of Agnostic witnesses. A Quaker may affirm, but it has been held in Dominion courts that an Agnostic may not do so.

Many who are interested in seeing this disgraceful state of things removed would be very glad if you could get this bill presented this session, but if it is now too late for this, I beg your careful consideration of the matter. Nearly all enlightened nations have repealed or are considering the repeal of these restrictive Oath Laws, and we do not wish Canada to lag behind the rest.

With many thanks for your courteous attention, I am,

Respectfully and sincerely yours,

ROBT. C. ADAMS.

MONTREAL, Feb. 2, 1892.

R. SEDGEWICK, Esq., Q.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, Ottawa, Dear Sir: In response to your telegram of this date asking information re amendment to law relating to oaths, I have the pleasure to send you copy of my letter to you, dated July 23, 1891, a copy of the proposed bill and a speech I once made upon the subject.

I also beg leave to add some references to the existing laws, for which I am indebted to my legal adviser, Mr. Max Goldstein.

Dominion Laws.—In Revised Statutes of Canada, 49 Vict. 1886, Chap. 174, Quakers and some others are allowed to affirm, but in Section 219 occurs the phrase, "according to his religious belief;" and judges have refused to allow Agnostics to affirm under this law upon the ground that they have no religious belief.

In 49 Vict., Sec. 10, it is pointed out that "Provincial laws are binding subject to provision of Acts of Parliament," and the Provincial laws relating to oaths are very objectionable.

Ontario Law.—Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1887, Vol. 1, page 712, Sec. 12, permits affirmation at the option of the judge, but this applies only to evidence given in a court of justice. In other cases the law is unchanged and the oath is still required.

Quebec Law.—Code of Civil Procedure, article 259, provides that a person shall neither take the oath, make affirmation, nor give evidence, "if he does not believe in God and in a state of rewards and punishments after death."

Civil Code of Lower Canada, Article 1231, excludes as witnesses "those insensible to the religious obligations of an oath."

Those who favor the bill now presented to you feel that no inquisition into religious opinions should be permitted, and they consider that before the Provincial Legislatures can be expected to reform these abuses the Dominion Parliament must set an example. The judges in Provincial Courts frequently express disapproval of the laws. Mr. Justice Osler said, "No one can regret more than I do that such should be the state of the law, and I trust that before long it will be amended." The late Chief-Justice Moss expressed his regret at being obliged to reject evidence for this reason, and I know personally the strong objections to these laws held by Justice Johnson, Judge Tait, ex-Judge Church, and other eminent jurists, all of whom regard the existence of these laws as a scandal.

You are aware that Mr. Bradlaugh's bill, "Oath's Act, 1888," was passed in the Imperial Parliament. It was originally similar to the present proposed bill in allowing free option of oath or affirmation, but he finally compromised and admitted the words "and stating as the ground of such objection either that he has no religious belief, or that the taking of an oath is contrary to his religious belief." Many Liberal thinkers, such as Morley, Labouchere, Trevelyan, and others, objected to this on the ground that it authorizes an inquisition by courts into a man's belief. Mr. Morley said that "the clause was going practically to ask the man a question and to make him assert before the judge and jury that he had no religious belief. That assertion on his part in many cases might and probably would damage his evidence. That was a course entirely inconsistent with religious liberty." We object strongly to any such compromise, and we trust that Canada will set an example to the world of complete toleration and adopt this bill in its present form.

Trusting that the Hon. minister of justice and yourself will endeavor to remove these disabilities and inconveniences,

I remain, with many thanks for your attention,

Respectfully yours,

ROBT. C. ADAMS,

Pres't of the Canadian Secular Union.

NEARLY all the police stations in New York city have been supplied with libraries by a philanthropic and moneyed woman, who requested the commissioners to keep her name secret. Each library has a Bible, and many contain two. The lady evidently is not much acquainted with police stations, else she would have known that each station has a stock of from fifty to sixty Bibles. Some of the sergeants are well up in the study of the Bible, and one is leader of a Bible class. We wish that we could record that each police station is furnished with a library of Rationalistic works.

In the talk about Blaine occasioned by his death, the occurrence of the term, "the Plumed Knight," has caused some who do not know its origin to make inquiry. This title, so frequently and so admirably used by thousands, was bestowed upon that American statesman by Robert G. Ingersoll in Cincinnati seventeen years ago. Colonel Ingersoll, then a delegate from Illinois to the Republican national convention, made the speech putting in nomination Mr. Blaine for the office of president. This was the first convention in which Mr. Blaine was named for that office, and he attained 285 votes on the first ballot, against 124 for Oliver P. Morton, 113 for Secretary Bristow, 99 for Roscoe Conkling, 61 for R. B. Hayes, 58 for Governor Hartranft, 11 for Governor Jewell, and 3 for W. A. Wheeler. This was in part what Colonel Ingersoll said: "James G. Blaine is now, and has been for years, the bearer of the sacred standard of the Republican party. I call it sacred, because no human being can stand beneath its folds without becoming and without remaining free. For the Republican party to desert its gallant leader now is as though an army should desert their general upon the field of battle. Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American Congress and threw his shining lance, full and fair, against the brazen foreheads of the defamers of his country."

Please renew your subscription and obtain another subscriber.

(Continued from page 309.)

I will proceed with my duty. The situation is perfectly plain. The board of directors have usurped the functions of the national commissioners. The national commissioners alone have control over the Fair."

Charles Clingman, the stockholder who objected to his property being deteriorated in value by being closed on its best-paying day, is pushing his suit to obtain open gates. Further ground for the suit is found in the fact that the grounds on which the Fair is situated are set aside as public land for purposes by the state legislature, and no one has authority to make regulations contrary to the provisions of that act. It is also claimed that the act of Congress itself which fixes the first day of the week for the closing of the Fair, instead of the seventh, violates that part of the Constitution of the United States which says that "Congress shall not make a law respecting the establishment of religion," and while there are thousands of people who worship on Saturday any law that provides one day as against the other is a violation of the Constitution not only of the United States, but of the state of Illinois.

The Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, chairman of the new National Committee on Sunday Closing of the World's Fair, recently organized at Columbus by officers of the American Sabbath Union, Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Christian Endeavor societies, five state Sabbath associations and other bodies, is in New York arranging by telegraph for resistance to the proposed Sunday opening. The committee expects that hundreds of mass-meetings by resolutions, and thousands of individuals by letters, will appeal to President Cleveland and Attorney-general Olney to defend the law by injunction or otherwise in the courts. Mr. Crafts has a letter from President Palmer, of the Columbian Commission, Chicago, saying that he will defend the law. Besides Mr. Crafts and his labors, President E. F. Cragin, of the Columbian Sunday Association of Chicago, also a member of the National Committee of five on the Sunday closing of the World's Fair, and J. H. Knowles, secretary of the American Sabbath Union, are planning as to the nature of the campaign to be carried on in order to keep the gates to the World's Fair closed next Sunday. "There will be a cracking of guns all across the country, from New York to San Francisco," Mr. Cragin with angry looks said to a reporter. This "cracking of guns," Mr. Cragin explained, would consist of mass-meetings, at which resolutions against opening the grounds would be passed, and petitions to all officers concerned in the management would be prepared. President Cleveland, Attorney-general Olney, President Palmer of the World's Fair Commission, Secretary Carlisle, and the directors will receive these petitions. The committee of five, of which Mr. Cragin is a member, has sent out calls by telegraph for mass-meetings to be held at Columbus, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, Washington, Baltimore, Terre Haute, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Louis, and other cities. "If the national government does not do right," says Mr. Cragin, "it will find itself in a tangle which will require ten years to straighten out."

A very good thing is communicated thus:

"The more the question is agitated the more irritating it becomes to certain classes. It has resulted in inspiring criticism of the very element that has contended so strongly in opposition to the opening of the buildings on Sunday. For instance, an official closely identified with the Exposition expressed an opinion a few days ago, which one hears in different places, to the effect that the different religious denominations have contributed nothing in the way of object-lessons to this great educational display except the Roman Catholic church. This organization has provided in the Department of Liberal Arts a demonstration of methods for the conduct of a school under church supervision which is interesting in its way, but without a competitor. It is argued that the Christian church through its many denominations possessed the opportunities for demonstrating certain branches of Christian work, both charitable and educational, as applied not only to popular centers, but to remote sections or in small towns. Nothing of the kind has been suggested and the entire series of buildings, with the exception noted, is destitute of anything whatever bearing upon this great motor of civilization."

Now is the time of all times for Liberals to scatter, freely and thickly, literature on the Christian Sabbath, giving its history and false basis, and urging its injustice.

We acknowledge with gratitude the following donations to the work of spreading Freethought: James Christie, 50 cents; Charles Gregg, 50 cents; P. L. Spencer, $4.25; Mrs. A. Palm, $1.50; L. H. Harkins, $2; A. Sloney, $1; A. Chapman, $1.50; Charles R. Moyer, $1.75.

George Wilson, the Chicago bookseller, imprisoned for sending a catalog of a few translations of trashy French novels, has had the judgment reversed and a new trial ordered. He is now out of custody, on bail we presume. His conviction was illegal, and the court has only made tardy reparation in reversing the decision.

Referring to the recent Remsburg-Smith debate at Caddo, I. T., the Durant, I. T., Sentinel says: "The divinity of Christ" was discussed last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights at Caddo by John E. Remsburg, of Atchison, Kan., and Rev. M. A. Smith, of Atoka, I. T. Mr. Remsburg is a man of acknowledged ability and scholarship. It was foolish for Mr. Smith to meet such a man in discussion on any subject, and as a natural result he came out behind."

Mrs. R. B. Ewing, of Buckley, Wash., died April 20th. She was one of the pioneers of Freethought as well as of civilization in the West—a noble woman in all the relations of life. The blow to her family is severe, and to the neighborhood as well. The farewell was conducted by C. B. Reynolds, who was assisted by friends. Her grave is on the bank of White river, which was her home while living. Mrs. Ewing was known to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER as a faithful friend of Liberty, and we of THE TRUTH SEEKER have reason to remember her with tender gratitude for her assistance in depressing times. To the family and friends we extend sympathy sincere.

World's Fair Notes.

All the papers on Sunday morning, May 7th, announced that the gates of the World's Fair would be closed tight; but notwithstanding this over sixty thousand people floated to the several entrances, expecting to enter, and offering all the way from fifty cents to $10 for the privilege. Neither the poorest nor the richest could get in, nor any of the national commissioners nor foreign officials, nor members of Congress. It was not like the humbug at the Centennial, when thousands were admitted every Sunday. The gates were really closed, much to the disgust of "Sunday closers" themselves, who expected of course that they could enjoy the sights quietly, having "passes," or the influences to obtain them. But passes were no good. One of the very first to apply to President Higginbotham for a pass was a member of the national commission, who has been loudest and longest in favor of Sunday closing. This shows the detestable hypocrisy of the religious fakirs who have won a temporary triumph—a triumph that will cover them with disgrace. Undoubtedly four hundred thousand people would have visited the Fair last Sunday had the gates been thrown open and the fact published in the papers. The sixty thousand who did go, found recreation in Buffalo Bill's Wild West show, and the innumerable smaller shows good, bad, and indifferent, which throng the outskirts of the Fair ground. What a beautiful lesson Christianity teaches—thrusting people by the thousands from the Exposition and joining hands with the "barkers" and "cappers" and "fakes," gambling houses and concert halls, for the celebration of an "American Sabbath." The church must feel proud of its position to-day.

If the Fair was closed on Sunday, the theaters were not, and in the evening the city was fairly ablaze with a hundred shows of all sorts of excellence and non-excellence, from the noblest of dramatic exhibitions and grandest of symphonies to the ten-cent museum and five-cent jig. All the main streets were crowded with a fitful population, and the shop windows presented a magnificent spectacle. The churches don't seem to be a rushlight in the midst of these vast displays. They say that Chicago is a very bad city. I presume it is, but you wouldn't know it was a bad city, if you mind your own business, and wander up and down its splendid avenues of trade and pleasure. To the curious onlooker there is no vice, no crime, no wickedness perceptible in these big, rollicking, happy-go-lucky masses that meet you at every turn beneath the ten thousand lamps that make you feel that you are in some mighty palace where everybody is acquainted and everybody is at home. It is orderly as in a country village where only the candle burns and the rushes give warmth. Vice and crime are not obtrusive in Chicago any more than in other places. If you want bad things you must hunt for them, and then you will find plenty. So also you will find splendid, noble things. It depends upon the way you look.

Chicago is a great and wonderful city, and in all the world's history I do not think there will be anything more great or wonderful than this city. Stand upon the top of Masonic building, twenty-one stories high, as I did, on Sunday last, and you are simply overwhelmed with astonishment. Masses of buildings huger than the temples of Baalbec are around you for miles. You cannot see the end. You look down on structures twelve stories in height, and they appear small. A hundred railroads can be seen. Locomotives spin along with ten thousand cars. Innumerable factories roll their clouds of smoke to the sky. Vast hotels, cities in themselves, with two and three thousand people, seem like hives as you tower above them. The great lake spreads away, its shining horizon contrasting with the smoky purlieus of the metropolis, the black stacks of steamers shadowing the white sail. Here is poetry for you if one could write it out, as melodious and splendid as any that ever made music and glory on man's path. This surpasses all the gods, and outshines all the divinities. There is nothing like it in Homer's verse, or Dante's "unfathomable song," and yet we are getting so used to it that it is quite commonplace. The World's Fair is matter of fact now, and we don't realize the wonder that is in it. I met Joan and Dare the other day, a rustic couple, just from their country home, old-fashioned and simple and perfectly amazed at the things they looked upon. I envied them, dear, happy souls, in homespun, richer than any king, for this was to them a fairyland, an actual wonder "fresh as the morn and brilliant as its star." Nothing was commonplace to them. There wasn't a "chestnut" in the whole Exhibition. Everything was brand-new, and marvelous and magnificent as if they had just been born. They had never traveled. They didn't know anything, and they were immensely happy—a royal couple indeed. Every moment to them was "jeweled with joy." When I stood upon the tower of the Transportation Building the other day and the whole White City shone before me in its superb variety, with its wondrous architecture, conscious in itself almost of the glory it expressed, seeming to be living thought, as well as glowing forms, a hundred flags glancing in the sun, and the lake glistening like a diamond, how I wished I was a boy again, just from the granite hills, having never seen anything but the fields and woods and the humble home, looking upon this magnificent spectacle with unaccustomed eyes, then indeed should I realize its abounding beauty—its overflowing grandeur.

But I have been flying away from the main path. How could I help it when there are so many things to talk about—when the air is full of commotion? However, we will now take the ordered journey.

THE MIDWAY PLAISANCE.

This avenue is one mile long and six hundred feet wide. To see this first we must enter Jackson park at the western entrance on Cottage Grove avenue. The Plaisance is not a part proper of the Fair, but might be called a mile-long entrance to the Fair—a varied, picturesque, and curious entrance, with all sorts of things to entertain the lingering traveler. Representations of ancient and modern life mingle in the checkered scene. The mountain has come to Mohammed. All the world has come to Chicago to show off its peculiarities. It is almost equal to a trip around the globe to saunter through this variegated promenade. It was a happy thought to place this annex to the main Fair. There are about forty different side-shows on the Plaisance, most of them of an unusual and attractive kind, to which an entrance fee is charged. It will cost about $10, I think, to take in all these shows. The entrance fee to the Plaisance will give admission to all the grounds of the World's Fair. These shows would be incongruous as a part of the main Exposition. They are mainly private affairs, and quite a sum is paid for the privilege of exhibition. They are interesting, and one can pay his money and take his choice; or he need not go into any side-show, but pursue his way through the Plaisance, casting an outside look on the various exhibits and pass into the main Fair in the rear of the Women's Building. Whether one goes to a side-show or not he must not fail to meander through the Plaisance, as this will cost nothing extra.

Perhaps the best way will be to go up one side of the Plaisance and down the other and this will give a good idea of this miniature cosmopolis. We first strike the camping grounds of Uncle Sam's soldiers, then we pass the Hungarian Orpheum. This is a dance-hall, theater, and café combined. Then appears the Lapland village, with a tower in the center. Over the entrance is a painting representing a scene in Lapland. Inside are the huts, natives, animals, sledges, etc.

The Dahomey village is the village of the Amazons. These are the famous fighting women. I intend to have a good look at them. They are not quite ready yet to exhibit.

Beyond this is the Austrian village. There are thirty-six buildings here. They present a quaint and venerable appearance. After this is a police station and fire department; then a French cider press. Cider is made and sold here in French style. The Vienna café follows this—one of the most elegant structures on the ground.

St. Peter's at Rome now confronts us—an exact reproduction to the most minute detail of this great edifice itself. It is constructed on a scale one-sixteenth that of the original. It contains rare portraits of several of the popes. The persons in attendance wear Vatican Guard uniforms. I don't expect to make much out of this show.

The Ferris wheel is bigger than any pope—a big, enormous wheel, 250 feet in diameter. Thirty-six cars are attached to it, and sixty persons can ride in a car. The 56-ton axle is the largest piece of steel ever forged. Three thousand incandescent lights will be used. It takes twenty minutes for a passenger to revolve, during which time he will be taken 264 feet into mid-air, and will see many wonderful sights as he goes up and down. The White City, the lake, and Chicago will be spread out before him like a panorama. In the shadow of this great wheel is a model of Eiffel tower, and then are the Persian bazars and booths, with laces, rugs, etc. The Moorish palace is a brilliant structure, with labyrinth palm garden and wax figures. The Turkish village and mosque are centers of attraction. No one is allowed in the mosque. We can only peep in. The old priest is there at the altar, solemn and dirty-looking. Stevens swears that he heard him humming "Boom-de-ay" as we looked in. I shouldn't wonder. Beside the mosque is the Turkish theater. The dancing is good. Of dramatic art there is none. The music is a kind of jingle. The girls are rather pretty—the men ugly-looking. The dress is fantastic. The show lasts an hour, and costs fifty cents. There is an old battle tent, worth $5,000,000; the silver bedstead of the sultan's daughter, worth $450,000. There will be here sixty horses from the sultan's stable, and 400 Bedouins, with camels and dromedaries. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens and myself take a "Flying Trip to the East" at a cost of twenty-five cents. This consists of a view of photographs, which cannot be obtained elsewhere.

We can now take a look at the Bernese Alps, in which Mt. Blanc, as usual, "takes the cake"—frosted cake—and makes a grand display. This is worth fifty cents, if you can spare it.

Then comes the natatorium, etc., and Hagenbeck's animal show. The pavilion is 200x300 feet, cost $125,000, and 1,500 animals from Germany are in their quarters. The seating capacity is 15,000 people. There are 200 monkeys and 1,000 parrots. Three of the lions are trained to ride horseback.

We now take in the Irish village, kiss the "blarney stone," etc. New England puts in an appearance with log cabin. Inside is the thrifty housewife, pork and beans, New England dinner, and such. Of course I don't miss that. The Barre sliding railway carries you 120 miles an hour, and 160 miles with high pressure. That will do for me.

We haven't seen half the shows, and I guess we have spent five dollars already. But come on, we must see the rest. The Diamond Match Company tells us how to make matches. The International Costume Company gives a display of real live "International beauties." It is said that dresses in the latest style will be sent here every day from Paris. What a lovely time the ladies will have! The Workingman's Home represents a red brick house of the Quaker City, wherein the laboring man of that city doth love to dwell. This is a "specimen brick." The Libby Glass Company gives a free show. Everything is manufactured inside, from common every-day glass goods to glass draperies, laces, dresses, neckties, and ornaments. Glass weaving is something wonderful. The glass-blower takes a glass cane, puts it in a powerful gas jet, which quickly melts it. At the proper consistency a thread is carried over the periphery of a wheel six feet in diameter, making 200 revolutions a minute.

The wheel draws out the thread into fine silken strands, which encircle the wheel. When the wheel is covered with these bands—say 200—the bands are pulled off and stretched horizontally on long tables. Here they are cut into lengths for weaving. At the loom they are deftly woven with silk, one thread of silk to 200 threads of glass, and then the glass cloth is ready. It is so soft and delicate that beautiful garments are made from it—lamp shades, screens, pin-cushions, etc.

The Japanese bazar presents an infinite variety from that far-off empire. Then comes the Dutch settlement, with exhibits from Fiji, Philippine and Solomon islands, from Samoa, Java, Borneo, New Zealand, and the Polynesian archipelago. The Japanese inclosure and buildings are made of bamboo. A theater of dancing girls—the Nautch—will be one of the shows of this village.

The German village is constructed after medieval models. There are thirty-six different buildings. In the center is a castle—sixteenth century style—with moat and palisades. The several farm-houses represent the different provinces of old Germany—the Alemanic, Westphalic, Mendic, and others. The village occupies 175,000 square feet. Two crack military bands are with it from the German army. There are two German restaurants, a concert garden, etc.

The street in Cairo is perhaps the most versatile and interesting study in this unique assemblage. The street is lined with mosques, dance-halls, and shops filled with wares from Arabia and the Sudan. The dogs, the donkeys, the children, the fortune-tellers, and the veiled ladies are all there. You will have a veritable slice of Egypt for fifty cents, and a peep at the women's faces, if you are sharp enough.

Algeria and Tunis also shew their attractions. Then comes the magnificent panorama of Kilanena, the volcano of the Sandwich islands, always in motion, and presenting a series of lurid pictures.

The Chinese village contains a theater, and there are 200 artists from the Flowery Kingdom. The acting and the music are simply indescribable.

Next comes the Captive Balloon. If one is not afraid, he can view the "dim spot called earth" at an altitude of 1,500 feet. Solomon's Temple is near by, if one wants to worship.

We are now $10 out of pocket and a whole day's time; but we have seen what can be seen nowhere else in the world on the same space of ground. We see real folks from all over the planet. We see their habits, their costumes, their styles, their houses, their industries, their means of conveyance, their amusements, their religion, their food, their drink. We are all foreigners here and we are all at home. It is a caravansary of nations. There never was such a camping-ground as this, and never did so many peoples mingle together in gay fellowship. It's a big carnival all day long.

It is about sunset when we leave the Midway Plaisance for the great Administration Building, whose dome this evening is to be lighted up for the first time with electric jets. It is 7 o'clock when we reach the end of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building and step forth to view the illuminated scene. I do not know how to express myself to convey an idea of the imposing spectacle. Right before us is the lagoon—a wide sheet of dazzling water. At one end is a fountain with massive marble figures. At the other end is the statue of the Republic. Across the lagoon is the Agricultural Building, one of the most magnificent pieces of architecture in the whole group. To our right is the Administration Building, its dome ablaze with sheets of splendor. Opposite the Administration Building, in rear of the colossal figure of the Republic, is what is called the peristyle—a colonnade on the east side of the lagoon connecting the Casino and the Music Hall, between whose Corinthian columns is glimpsed the near lake and the distant sky. And this colonnade, or peristyle, is also beautifully illuminated. On the vast promenades around the lagoon are crowds of people thronging in and out of the immense halls. Gondoliers in bright colors bend to their long, sweeping oars, singing as they bend, and urging their curious craft over the glistening waters. Electric boats also speed along, and the lagoon is like a living picture of Venice.

Chicago, Ill.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

To the Freethinkers of the United States and Canada.

The board of directors of the American Secular Union, at its last meeting, determined to hold its annual Congress in Chicago, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, the 6th, 7th, and 8th of October next. Also to invite the Canadian Secular Union to meet with us in joint convention at that time. It will be made the occasion of getting together Free-thinkers from all parts of the world. We already have assurances that Mr. Watts, the distinguished Freethought advocate of England, and others from that country, will be with us.

We ask the co-operation of Freethinkers to make the Congress a grand success. Those willing to assist financially, will please send their contributions to Otto Wettstein, our treasurer, at Rochelle, Ill. Contributors will please state whether they wish payment to be for general expenses, or for any special purpose, such as speakers, hall, rent, etc., and the money will be so applied.

In the mean time, until more permanent arrangements can be made, our friends are requested to call upon us at the office of Vice-president Dr. Joseph H. Greer, 127 La Salle st., where they will receive a warm and hearty welcome.

C. B. WAITE,

President Am. Sec. Union.

MRS. M. A. FREEMAN,

24 Maplewood ave.,

Chicago, May 4, 1893. Corresponding Sec.

Book Notes.

In the bindery with Mr. Putnam's "Religion a Curse" and the "Design Argument Fallacies" are new editions of the following pamphlets: Paine's "Common Sense," 15 cents; Remsburg's "Sabbath Breaking," 25 cents; "False Claims," 10 cents; Washburn's "Was Jesus Insane?" 10 cents. Delayed orders will therefore be filled soon.

We have left a few of the cartoons printed in THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 25th, showing what Christianity has borrowed from the Pagans, which we can send (making a very generous count) for 10 cents a dozen; 75 cents a hundred. The picture is one of Heston's best hits, and will do good in proportion to its circulation. Send for a hundred, and scatter them around your neighborhood.

We have printed Paine's "Examination of the Prophecies" by itself in a companion pamphlet to "Common Sense." In this cheap form it also is a good missionary document. The "fulfillment of the prophecies" is one of the arguments depended upon by the Christians to establish the divinity of their "savior's" mission. This examination proves how weak that dependence is. Liberals should have it handy for controversial purposes. Price 15 cents.

Mr. Putnam's new book, "Religion a Curse," is in the bindery, and we hope to be able in a few days to fill the orders received. We also hope to receive a few thousand more orders. It is a work which, though small in volume, is great in the issues raised, and will command a great deal of attention. It will have strong friends and strong enemies, but the truth of its charges will finally be acknowledged by all Rationalists, we think. The price is 25 cents. To do our part toward circulating it widely, we will send five copies for $1.

The editorials on Design in the Universe, which recently appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER, have been put into a neat pamphlet, and we will supply them for 15 cents each. It becomes us to be modest in writing about this book, but it is hoped that it will help explain the development of material things to those who regard the Design argument as a stumbling-block to the full acceptance of the evolution theory. We think it will be useful as a document for study by Christians, and hope our friends will scatter it widely. We will send four of them for 50 cents; nine for $1.

A Christian notice of Dr. Hartmann's "Creation of God" is this from the Omaha Bee: "The Creation of God," by Dr. Jacob Hartmann, is one of the latest publications called 'truth seekers.' Dr. Hartmann's book contains much information as to geology and the formation of the world, but will not be appreciated by those who have a real desire to get at the truth in all that pertains to the creation and future state of man on account of the extreme coarseness of his style of composition. The language is degrading, and, while the ideas may be very profound and might be accepted by many readers, the style will condemn the book at once. Physician, heal thyself. The Truth Seeker Company, Lafayette place, New York." Which recalls the saying, when you have a bad case abuse your opponent's attorney. In this case the abuse is very, very far-fetched.

The need of Mr. Remsburg's forthcoming book concerning Abraham Lincoln's religious belief for use when controversy is rife about it was emphasized last week by the receipt of the following letter:

"RICHMOND, VA., May 13, 1893.

"Gentlemen: Have you in book form John Remsburg's 'Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian?' as published in THE TRUTH SEEKER some time ago? If not, will it be published in book form? I think it ought to be in every library, either Christian or Freethinker.

"Yours truly,

E. H. BAKER.

"P.S. Just now saw in THE TRUTH SEEKER notice of the above being prepared for publication. Set me down for one at $1."

We shall be glad to receive orders for the book right along. It will be out in a month or two. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Letters of Friends.

Prizes Thought Above Meat and Raiment.

LEON, KAN., Apr. 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My family could not well get along without your paper. It is more than meat and better raiment. May health, long life, and prosperity attend your noble efforts. J. BENNINGHOFF.

Is Faithful to Truth and Aidful to Truth Seekers.

ROSEBERG, WASH., May 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I heard a voice come from within, "Stay with the Truth and forget not the Seeker," so here I pay that gold $5 in which we trust, for which you may give me credit. I like THE TRUTH SEEKER and its righteousness, but S. P. Putnam on Religion went through my soul and clinched on the other side.

Yours truly, H. P. ANDERSON.

Suffocating Sunday.

MCComb CITY, MISS., Apr. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed money for "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," and other books on herein-inclosed list. I live, as you see, in church-cursed Mississippi. To go to church on Sunday and hear the old story of hell and heaven has become quite stale, and I seek of you something which may prove not only entertaining, but instructive, with which to while away the long day called Sunday, made long by the almost suffocating religious atmosphere which envelops our otherwise pleasant little town.

Respectfully, JOHN W. BOYLER.

Seeds Sown by the Wayside.

ARAVAIPA, ARIZ., Apr. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will please find the sum of $5 for renewal of subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER one year, and Paine's "Great Works Complete." Instead of keeping THE TRUTH SEEKERS on file as I would like to do, I scatter them about, trusting that some of them may fall into the hands of some one who will become a subscriber to your unique and grand paper. The picking up of a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER in a deserted miner's cabin was what caused me to become a subscriber. Therefore, trusting that some of the papers scattered by the wayside will fall into prolific hands, I remain, Yours for scattering the seeds of Liberalism, GEO. N. ADAMS.

No, Ingersoll Had No Such Discussion.

ASHLAND, ORE., Apr. 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose list of books wanted, and money. I hope to be able to get more soon. I wish I had $100 to spend for books advertised in your paper. I think I would be happy for some time. I have often tried to get subscribers for your paper; have failed so far, but will keep on trying.

Did Colonel Ingersoll ever have a discussion with a Rev. I. D. Driver, of Oregon? I was told that Colonel Ingersoll asked Rev. D. L. Moody some questions he did not try to answer, but sent for I. D. Driver to come back East, and he and Colonel Ingersoll discussed them together, and Ingersoll and Infidelity both got such a blow that they never will be able to recover from it. I wish you would give me the truth of the matter.

Wishing you success, I am,

Yours truly, MRS. A. DE PEALL.

The Prince of Drones and Bane of Nations.

MARSHFIELD, ORE., Apr. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5-$3 to pay for the best paper, certainly, that I have ever had the pleasure of reading. The best because, if for no other reason, it advocates justice and right, contrary to the usual customs of editors, who scorn to publish only to please prevailing opinions and those that have the most money to pay for press notice. And those opinions are mostly promulgated by the Prince of All Drones and the Bane of All Nations, the preacher of the gospel, who talks only to mystify and deceive, that he may continue in prominence in society and fill his capacious pockets with the shekels of his dupes.

I would like the following books: "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" in boards, and ten numbers of the "Modern Science Essayist," commencing at 3 and going to 12.

Wishing you unbounded success, I remain,

Yours for justice and right to all,
W. A. GILMORE.

A Seed Sown in Mississippi

MEADVILLE, MISS., Apr. 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your communication of the 8th of this month came to hand this evening telling me of the expiration of my time as a trial subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I was well aware of the fact that my time was up on the 1st, and tried to be in time with my renewal subscription for a year more and took advantage of a premium offer in THE TRUTH SEEKER to get your paper one year and a copy of Paine's Complete Works for $5. I guess you will have received my other letter containing $5 ere you get this. Suffice to say I am well pleased with your valuable paper, and am doing all I can for the cause of freedom by lending the journal to every sensible man who will read it and return it back in good fix. I am the only subscriber to it that I know of in the country. I wish I was able to buy a few dollars' worth of your TRUTH SEEKER tracts to distribute around in this and Amity county. I think it would be "as bread cast upon the waters to be gathered many days hence."

Respectfully your friend and well-wisher,
J. E. SCOTT.

Who Will Be Next to Help in This Way?

SCHUYLER, NEB., May 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I notice with much pleasure your offer to supply any newsdealer with two or three copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER weekly and receive back all he does not sell.

I drew my newsdealer's attention to your proposition, and he has promised me that he will gladly order two or three extra copies from your agent at Omaha and will do his utmost to sell them.

The male portion of this locality are very Liberal in their opinions in religious matters, and I believe that you have struck the right idea to increase the sale of your paper and advance our "most excellent religion."

I was converted and turned from darkest superstition about six years ago under the preaching of Mr. Charles Watts, and by reading "A Modern Zoroastrian," by Mr. Samuel Laing, of England. I am pleased to say that I have no regrets for leaving the dogmas of the Methodist church. On the contrary, my heart leaps with joy and my eyes sloop over with gratitude to Watts and others who have taught me the bright and happy way.

I am the only subscriber here to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I need not tell you that I gobble up most eagerly everything within its covers—that would not express the great pleasure and profit I gather from its pages.

J. A. REID.

Saving Money Does Not Take It Out of Circulation.

PORTLAND, KAN., May 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say a few words in reply to Mr. Geo. Geer's article on finance in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 6th.

Mr. Geer seems to be badly frightened by the picture his imagination has created. He seems unable to grasp more than one idea at a time. He sees nothing but a terrible panic as a direct result if wage-earners should save $1 a week. In his groping blindness he only sees one way to save money; that is, hide it hoard it up, take it out of circulation; and as a direct result he sees the financial center shake, crumble, and fall. Poor, foolish man, he forgets that all the money in circulation is the savings of some one, is owned by some one. Mr. Geer does not claim that wage-earners would be unable to save $1 a week, but brings his common sense to bear on the subject. His mighty mind can comprehend but one way of saving and see but one result. My friend, theory is all right if it agrees with fact. But it happens that the moment a man gets a little money ahead he puts it in circulation. Thus is the only point Mr. Geer tries to make against L. G. Reed demolished. For anyone with common sense can see that all the wage-earners can save $10 a week for ten years and not take $1 out of circulation.

I am sorry for a man who is able to grasp but one idea at a time; who will declare there is no light because he is looking at a shadow.

I highly prize THE TRUTH SEEKER, of which I am a regular reader.

Yours for the Truth, S. F. DAVIS.

A Veteran Whom Christians Have Passed Through Seven Furnaces.

GLENNS FERRY, IDA., Apr. 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Let truth live and triumph. The men who give it tongue and wing must have financial oil to lubricate. Here is $5. I wish it was $25. Radicals travel rough highways in biblical paganism. That is me. I have had seventy-four years of unquiet. A little further on and all will be still. I want it not, but I fear it not. I accept with grace the common lot of man, the result of Nature's laws, but it would be with deep disgust could I look upon it as caused by wisdom, goodness, and all the other attributes of almighty power centering in the Bible God.

Radical thinkers have sharp corners and many is the hammer that strikes them, but an industrious, investigating, courageous, determined intellect resists the blows without injury and stands out a great and grand advocate of long-hidden truths.

Tell our friends to be courageous and buckle on the whole armor, and at the word march! step out, not skulk out. We have too many skulkers. But who can blame a coward? That is his make-up. Let us make them up better, and the way to do it is to take away faith and give our disciples knowledge, scientific knowledge. I am a veteran, a fighting veteran, and when I cannot fight I will shake my fist, and when I cannot shake my fist I will make mouths. The opposition has passed me through seven furnaces well heated, but I am not consumed. In my life I have seen paganism take down her colors many times. Slavery is gone, polygamy is gone, witchcraft is gone, kingcraft is gone. We hang a king for wrong as quickly as a common man. I could name many more of the churches' dogmas legislated out of existence which their divine revelation contains.

JAMES STOUT.

Providential Destruction of Christian Property.

YPSILANTI, MICH., Apr. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find fifty cents, for which please send me Wheeler's "Hard Knocks at Christianity," and also "Crimes of Preachers," and oblige. We have been having a terrible cyclone in our little city and vicinity, wiping out buildings and trees as though they were puff-balls. I expect the pulpits will all sloop over to-day over the event. The Methodists have been holding protracted meetings for the last three weeks, having imported a "pulpit poodle" and a mouth-organ, à la Sankey. The gospel racket closed the evening the storm came. They were taking up a collection at the time. I was told they secured $200 for their three weeks' services, intending to make it as much more. Not a single saloon or gambling establishment received a scratch, while business blocks and dwellings suffered severely. A neighbor of mine said to me the next morning, "Dickinson, I expected to see your home entirely wiped out, and you are not hurt. How is it?" I said, "They have been giving me hell for the last fifty years and they probably thought I would not stand any more nonsense at present." He said, "The saloons are all right." "Of course they are," said I; "that shows that the devil, who you think did it, is true to his friends. He will do to tie to." A preacher's house just a few rods below me was completely ruined, together with many others belonging to Christians and church-members, their God not proving "a very present help in time of need." I said to a neighbor, "God must have had a grand laugh as he looked down upon the ruin he had caused." He wanted to know how I dare speak so about God. I said, "I am only quoting scripture. God says, 'When your destruction cometh as a whirlwind I will laugh at your calamity and mock at your fears.' Isn't that so, brother?" He had to admit it was, but that he had not looked upon it in that light. But the evangelists are gone and I do not apprehend any more trouble of that nature unless they return, which God forbid. They claim that between three and four hundred have been "born again." If that is true, then I suppose we have that many more babes for their coming—quite an addition, surely, for three weeks' service. With best wishes, I remain, Yours, etc., JAS. P. DICKINSON.

Pocket Argument for Disproof of the Existence of a God.

ITHACA, MICH., Apr. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I submit the following for the consideration of all such as believe in a creative Intelligence:

"Infinite goodness would desire for human kind the most perfect happiness. Infinite wisdom would know how to obtain that happiness, and infinite power would be able to carry out the dictates of wisdom and goodness. If causes exist which impede mankind in their progress toward happiness, they must exist either because God does not desire to remove them; in which case he is not infinitely good—that is, he is not God, or because God does not know how to remove them; in which case he is not all-wise—that is, he is not God, or because God is not able to remove them; in which case he is not omnipotent—that is, he is not God."

The above is an excerpt from the writings of the late Mr. Bradlaugh, which I clipped from the "Gems of Thought" column in THE TRUTH SEEKER a dozen or more years ago.

During all these years not a single person has even attempted a reply, though scores of them have read it, studied and pondered over it, and many received copies, promising that they would give me a reply, but they all failed to come to time, as I knew they would for the very good reason that the logic of those few terse sentences is unanswerable. Here, in a single paragraph, Mr. Bradlaugh clearly demonstrates that the idea of a creative Intelligence, on which volume after volume has been written to bolster up the idea, is simply an utter logical absurdity. Perhaps Mr. Anderson would like to take a turn at cracking this rather hard nut with his little hammer?

The gist of the above has been presented by other writers, but perhaps never in so neat and concise a form, where the whole force of the argument is at once so apparent and clear to the mind.

How a candid thinking man in the light of all the facts recently discovered by science can cling to the barbarous belief in a God possessing the attributes of infinite goodness, infinite wisdom, and infinite power, in view of all the sorrow, misery, and suffering abounding everywhere, is beyond conception, except on the ground that this belief is hereditary. There is no longer a vestige of ground left on which to build a hope or belief in this fabulous, useless God of the Bible.

J. GUIWITS.

Graphic Pen-Picture of the Great Free-thought Issue.

HOUSTON, TEX., Apr. 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose a few of my ideas regarding the great worth of your TRUTH SEEKER, backed up by my financial opinion for two years' subscription. I wish I was financially able to subscribe for a copy for every family of faith-bound religionists in the world, as it is a scale-remover for the eyes of the deluded and blind devotees of superstition who have been so unfortunate as to be raised in the priestcraft darkness of ignorance. I was one of those unfortunates, and I give thanks to the light of truth that dawned upon my mind "before it was everlastingly too late," and liberated me from such dungeon, into which inheritance and education had placed me. As "charity covers a multitude of sins," and makes rich the soul of the charitable, I am trying to cultivate such a spirit, for I find in the garden of my experience many obnoxious weeds planted by honest hands—but which are being displaced by the noble Freethought and truth-loving seekers of the world, not only in our much-loved United States but wherever education and science have gained a foothold.

Where should charity end? or, like a ring, should it have no end?

Charity is but the outcome of natural causes, and is but the web woven in the loom of our experience, wherein the warp of our inherited nature is interwoven with the woof of our education into one great fabric of results from which are cut and fashioned the beings we are.

Charity and toleration should be the greatest factors of mankind, for from such comes the supremacy of man over the lower orders of his beastly nature. Yet, uncharitable, intolerant, and more like beasts, we call ourselves the "children of God" and claim the right to slaughter and kill everything of a living nature that is destitute of power to protect itself. Allow me to ask, who gives us such right? Why should we fatten the innocent lamb for slaughter? The "survival of the fittest" can be the only answer. Is it not probable that the flesh of man is as palatable as other flesh? Then why condemn the cannibal for feasting from off the juicy flesh of his foe taken in battle, when he can claim the same right to prey upon the weaker as ourselves? Certainly the life of one animal is as dear to itself as that of another.

When I read of the terrible persecutions of olden times, where the lives of men were sacrificed by millions to appease the ignorant, uncharitable devotees of the supposed gods, I can but shudder at the inhuman manner in which the stronger preyed upon the weaker; and yet I realize that the effect was but the termination of causes over which they had no control. We are still in the same inhuman (imperfect humanity) business, but of a less terrible nature. Thou humanitarian editors of all classes, let your light shine! Even though the prison walls shall threaten you and the Lord's ecclesiasts call you infidels, yet press forward and enlighten the world, for infidelity and unbelief have been the only ladder by which the higher atmosphere of development has been reached, and only for such we would to-day be drinking the dregs of bitter ignorance and inhaling the odors of heretical flesh.

A. D. SWAN.

A Pleasant-Writing Catholic Converted.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Apr. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Jasper is right. "The world do move," or at least some of the creatures on the world move, and I rejoice to say that I am one of them.

During the presidential campaign last year I was in San Diego, and being somewhat shaky in my politics I went to hear an address by Mr. Geo. T. Bruce, who was advertised as a political cyclone. The address was by unanimous consent the ablest and most eloquent speech delivered in San Diego during that exciting canvass, and of course when I had an opportunity to hear this fiery and witty orator again, I availed myself of it. This time his subject was not politics but religion. Having been brought up a strict Catholic, I had up to this time never heard an out-and-out infidel speech, though I had read some of Ingersoll's sayings in the secular papers. While I was charmed with the musical sentences of the speaker, and laughed till I cried at his splendid wit, I writhed in my seat like a worm on a hot griddle as he exposed with keen and cutting sarcasm the shams and frauds of what to me was sacred. I went home mad, but I could not deny the truth of his statement that priests and kings have always been united in grinding the people down, to keep them in subjection. So plainly did he show the present and past attitude of the church on the labor question, that after I got over my mad spell, I metaphorically kicked myself for being so stupid as not to see it without having it pointed out to me; and I suspect that there is yet religion enough left in me to actually kick the ignorant class of toilers to which I belong, if I had the power, because they are as stupid as I was.

I buy THE TRUTH SEEKER every week, and have bought a few pamphlets. I expect soon to send to you for some reading matter that I have not been able to find for sale here.

I recently had a talk with the late guardian of my soul, and to say that he feels bad over my apostasy is putting it very mild. He denies that the Catholic church as a church ever persecuted. He admits that individual Catholics have been guilty of merciless atrocities, but claims that the church as an institution is no more responsible than is the Republican party responsible for the murder of Garfield because Guiteau, a Republican, did the deed. I am satisfied that he is mistaken, but I am not yet sufficiently posted to refute it, and I ask you to do it through the columns of your invaluable paper. If you will do so, I am sure you will perform a great service to many who like myself have just got their heads out of the ruts of superstition. Please give your authorities, so that I can confront the holy man with them. As my wife objects very much to my "honorable" name being attached to this impious letter, and as she has promised to attend the next infidel lecture that takes place, I have, Adam-like, caved in, and in closing I will only say, no woman suffrage for me until women have sense enough to throw priestcraft overboard.

P. F.

[The proofs that you ask are very useful to the Freethought propaganda, and will be furnished as soon as our crowded editorial page offers a vacancy—say within six weeks.—ED. T. S.]

Religion Is "a Disease," and Industrial Reform the Cure.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., N. Y., May 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Samuel P. Putnam says that religion is a disease, an unnatural appendage to man; he contends that the healthy man is not religious. If we accept the word religion in its narrowest sense, as commonly understood by people who claim to be religious—if religion be confined to a belief in God and immortality—then I agree with Mr. Putnam that religion is, or ought to be, doomed and has no raison d'être to exist in a society composed of healthy individuals. It may gratify Mr. Putnam to know that Heinrich Heine took the same view of the matter. The trouble is, he said, that we are all of us sick, and our first duty is to become healthy. But the question is, How to cure humanity of a disease which Mr. Putnam declares to be as deep as hell? It is well enough to point out the nature of the disease, but it will not fade away unless we can find an efficient remedy for it. But is the remedy for the diseased brain of humanity within our reach? How long will it take to lighten the suffering of the patient? When we take into consideration the sufferings of man, when we remember that our poor humanity is loaded with heavy burdens, when we take into account that even today the majority of the human race have to struggle and toil for their daily bread and are thankful if they are so fortunate as not to starve to death, is there any wonder that in the human brain disease is the rule and health the exception? Can we expect other results in a world filled with a few millionaires and millions of paupers? In Heine's account of the progress of philosophy in Germany we read the following: "I say it definitely, our descendants will be more beautiful and happier than we are. For I believe in progress, I believe that man was meant to be happy, and I have a higher opinion of divinity than those pious people who think it only created humanity to make it suffer. I would beforehand, by the blessings of free political and industrial institutions, establish that happiness which, according to the religious, will be first found in heaven on the day of judgment. True, the one may be as great a folly or as idle a hope as the other, and perhaps there will be no resurrection of humanity either in the politico-moral or in the apostolic-Catholic sense. Humanity is perhaps meant for everlasting misery; races are perhaps to be damned forever, trampled on by despots, bought and sold by their accomplices, and mocked by their lackeys. Ah! if this be so, we must strive to uphold Christianity, even if we believe it to be an error. Uphold it we must; one must go in the monkish cowl and barefoot over Europe and preach the nothingness of all earthly goods or goodness, and asceticism, and hold before flagellated and mocked men the consoling crucifix, and promise them—after death—all the seven heavens up there on high."

Such was the opinion of a great poet and thinker expressed sixty years since, and it seems to me that after a lapse of so many years these words have not lost their significance yet. I agree with Heine that if humanity is doomed to everlasting misery, we have no right to deprive it of its hope to enjoy happiness in another world. If the masses are doomed to reign poor and oppressed; if the realm of justice and happiness is only a dream never to become a reality; if toil and drudgery and suffering are to remain forever the lot of the majority of men, will it profit them to know that God and immortality are only fancies living in the diseased imagination of man? Why not let them cherish their delusion, if it causes a ray of light to penetrate through the darkness of their lives? In what direction then must our efforts lie? Is it not in radically changing the social and economical conditions? Let us all do all we can to resurrect humanity; let us banish industrial slavery from the world and establish in its place justice and freedom; let us make the earth a paradise; let us see that every man finds real happiness in life—then, but not until then, the brain of man will become healthy, and God, immortality, and other theological inventions, will be thrown away as useless crutches. God will retire then, and man will take his place; personal immortality will vanish, but the deeds of a happy race will remain immortal.

CYRUS W. COOLIDGE.

Christians Have to Overcome Their Aversion to Truth Gradually.

LUMBERVILLE, PA., Apr. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have read with much interest the several essays by S. P. Putnam on the subject, "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie." I regret most sincerely the selection of such a title. It seems but fitted to ironclad Agnostics who need no conversion to the many truths therein contained, while at the same time it will surely repel those who are slowly breaking away from the old superstition. Even after men feel certain that their previous convictions are false and untenable they cannot permit themselves to be forced or driven by pioneers so enthusiastic, working so zealously under high pressure and who utterly neglect to "temper their winds to the shorn lambs" that are seeking shelter from false religious teachings.

I fear that many subscribers of your paper will decline to circulate the numbers containing said essays to those neighbors to whom they have from time to time been distributing them with the earnest hope of enlightening them as to the beliefs, or rather the rational disbeliefs, of modern Agnostics.

I make no objection to the language used or the arguments advanced, as I fully agree with the writer, but it is to the title he has selected, which will repel if not disgust the reader by its harshness and needless severity. "Religion a Mistake, Religion a Failure, Religion a Superstition," would have been less objectionable and more in harmony with the feelings and wishes of those who are waiting to be led from ancient darkness to modern enlightenment. I fear Mr. Putnam's forthcoming book with its present title will fail to reach readers who would be most benefited by it.

WATSON KENDERDINE.

Philosophy on Many Matters.

CLEVELAND, O., Apr. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am past seventy years old, and when I can get work I receive eighteen cents per hour. It takes all I can accumulate to keep the wolf from entering my little home, as I have none of the filthy lucre, which professed Christians pretend to detest and despise, laid by for old age. I must husband all my accumulations to keep us above the sod. Financially I have been pulverized between the upper and nether millstones. The upper is monopolies that have become insane for the almighty dollar, the nether is the Christian worshipers of the three-headed Gods. By their pernicious laws they have taken the lion's share from me of what I have produced. And I am not in a worse condition than millions of people in the home of Jefferson, Paine, and Ethan Allen. We need not expect to have a change of the present conditions of things in this country until those that produce the wealth begin to stir up their sluggish brains and think of the cause of their degradation, by becoming educated. Then they will find out the cause that has squeezed the life-blood out of the producers of wealth. Then they will abolish all of the Gods of the universe, and abandon their future home in the ethereal blue. They will find out that they are too expensive to tolerate, for the amount of recompense they receive in return for being taxed to support the Christian churches and their schools, and venerate and keep holy their sacred Sunday, and for police, constables, sheriffs, marshals, and judges, with Gatling guns, cannons, mortars, muskets, rifles, bayonets, swords, the armies and navies, for the protection of the law-made aristocracies of wealth, so as to recruit and conscript the toilers to man the navies and fill the ranks of the armies. They are in a worse condition than chattel slaves, and if the plutocrats command them to kill their brothers and fathers they must obey. They are used by the aristocracy of wealth to intimidate, coerce, and subdue the bull-headed labor organizations, to keep them in subjection to obey those pernicious and destructive laws which the aristocrats have bought and paid for from our public servants, who were chosen by the majority of the people to represent the interest of the masses. But our public servants by their avariciousness and treachery have robbed the people of their natural birth-right. And it has caused the retrogression of the working people that make the wealth. These plutocrats purchased the people's representatives, to pass these wicked laws, so they could tax the producers and consumers that they might have the power to accumulate the products of the producer into their drag-nets, and pile up millions in their coffers, that are of no benefit to themselves and are an injury and a curse to the masses, and untold misery to those who labored and earned this wealth. But it will be a long time before evolution evolves a higher type of man than the undeveloped human species that now exist, that possess so much of the carnivorous disposition of the tiger, and the characteristics of chattering and cunning of the monkeys, making them hyenas in human form that prey upon and devour each other. This condition will continue as long as this avaricious disposition exists in men. The strong and brainy will rob and take by force the natural rights of their weaker brothers. How long must it be before the almighty giant Labor will not be muzzled like the ox who is robbed of the right to graze upon the land—who is compelled to plow it, and garner and thrash the grain, and then only receive for compensation the straw? But, friend Macdonald, there will come a change in the course of time, though you and I will not enjoy it. Time will force the betterment and improvement of the human species. And it will not be brought about by the religious teachings and veneration of the Gods, or Communism, Socialism, Nihilism, or Anarchism. But it must come through growth and evolution of this world. When this frisky planet gets out of her swaddling-clothes and her furious temper has subsided and her internal heat becomes exhausted sufficiently not to burst forth and spew her eruptions from the mouths of volcanoes, then earthquakes and cyclones will in a measure cease to exist, and then will come the time that evolution will evolve a type of mankind who will make it their study to cultivate and propagate so as to develop a better specimen of the human species, as we have learned to cultivate the vegetable and floral kingdom. But how many hundreds of thousands of years it will require for this earth to develop a condition that can bring forth out of the chaotic mass of undeveloped human beings that now exist upon this planet a good harmonious type of men and women that will not devour each other, is a problem that cannot be solved by mankind of this period.

JAMES M. WIGHT.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

When a Body's Doon.

It's unco kittle wark tae fen'
When a body's doon.
Ye canna barrow—canna len—
Ye needna ask a neebor hen—
They dinna want yer name tae ben
When ye happen doon.
Ilk funny joke fa's died and flat,
When a body's doon.
When ye can treat wi' dinners fat,
Then ony ane will touch his hat;
There isna muckle mair o' that
When a body's doon.
Hoo sune ye notice on the street
When a body's doon!
Wha used tae smile whin ye wad meet,
Noo pass ye like a dand o' peat—
It's best, they think, tae be discreet,
When a body's doon.
Ye gang tae kirk—name becks or boos,
When a body's doon—
They dinna scramble owre the pews,
A cushioned seat for ye tae choose—
Losh! a' the toon sune kens the news,
When a body's doon.
The coat, of course, is no sae fine,
When a body's doon—
Yer no sae dainty when ye dine,
An' mony things ye maun resign;
But, Fate be thanked! The sun will shine
Though a body's doon!
If sae the heart be stout an' true,
Though a body's doon—
The hardest win' that ever blew
Ne'er chills an honest conscience through,
An' Fate aye hands the richt in view,
Even when they're doon.

Rochester, N. Y. WILLIAM LYLE.

The Origin of the Earth.

[We take pleasure in publishing the creditable essay below by one of our boys of the Corner. He has gleaned his knowledge of "World Making" from the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER and Twentieth Century. How much better to turn the attention to the study of true science than to follow the silly varities of an ignorant past. As we have said often, we are proud of the bright young people of the Children's Corner. They are to take up the work that our hands must by and by lay down, and it goes without saying that they will pursue it with earnestness, wisdom, and enthusiasm. We never close our eyes to sleep that we do not first breathe a blessing on our good boys and good girls all over the continent, and some in other lands, whose letters and communications have made the Corner a pleasant and attractive part of THE TRUTH SEEKER.—ED. C. C.]

The universe or system in which our earth belongs is composed of a sun and seven planets. Several of the planets, including our own world, possess moons or satellites, which revolve around them, the planets in turn revolving about the sun. All of these revolutions take place with the regularity of clockwork, and ever since the earliest recorded observations of man there has been no deviation in the motions of the great machine.

"How did this great system come into existence?" is one of the greatest questions with which human intelligence has ever grappled. The Christians, who are generally opposed to thinking on any subject which requires a vigorous exercise of the brain, dismiss the question at once by asserting that "God made it." When asked who made God, they either say they "don't know," or that he "always existed" and needed no creator. They will not admit the possibility of the eternal existence of our universe, or the matter of which it is composed, however, and insist upon worshipping an imaginary manufacturer of the world.

Now, I want to give the Cornerites my theory regarding the origin of the universe without the assistance of a brutal, heathen god, such as the Jewish Jehovah is described to be in the so-called "holy scriptures."

Our universe is one among millions of similar systems, some of which are larger and some smaller than ours. What we call the "fixed" stars are the central suns of other systems. Boundless space is occupied by these systems, and there are probably more suns and planets in ethereal space than there are atoms in the earth. All suns and planets are composed of the same kinds of substance, which, for the sake of convenience, are collectively called "matter." Matter has always existed in one form or another. The ether which fills the space between suns and planets, is really a form of matter, and I believe matter is simply solidified ether. Matter, as we know it, consists of atoms and molecules. An atom is about one-fifty millionth of an inch in diameter. A molecule is simply a cluster of atoms, probably comprising a hundred or a thousand of them, which are held together by magnetic attraction. An atom is the smallest division of matter. A molecule is the smallest combination of atoms or "structure." It is the nature of atoms, whether existing alone in space or forming the components of a molecule, to be in constant motion. This truth is proved by the fact that everything is perishable—everything finally disintegrates, dissolves, or decays, and changes its mode of existence. A diamond or gold coin may exist a million years, but it will yield to that inevitable law of dissolution which decrees that the atoms of which it is composed must finally separate and seek new alliances or partnerships with other atoms.

Many million years ago our sun and planets were one vast fiery mass of matter, which is called "nebula." Billions and trillions of atoms whirled hither and thither, and the violent friction produced by contacts which constantly occurred caused much heat. The heat caused many atoms to unite themselves together into molecules. In the various motions pursued by the molecules, they finally assumed a "vortex" or whirlwind motion. This form of motion had a tendency to throw the matter toward the center of the whirling mass, where the molecules cooled somewhat and stuck together. Thus a nucleus or "core" was formed, which was in a violent state of revolution. More of the gaseous nebulae was added to the nucleus as time went on, until finally nearly all of the atoms and molecules had united themselves to the vast whirling globe, which was still in a molten condition and much hotter than the greatest heat we can now produce.

As the great ball of liquid fire revolved, gigantic rings of gaseous matter would form at its equator, which projected out millions of miles. These rings became somewhat cooler than the sun itself and began to harden. As they solidified they contracted and broke into sections. This caused them to become separated from the sun, and as they were revolving very rapidly, they were thrown far out into space—the distance which they traveled depending on their size and the direction which they chanced to take. Some of these fragments were thrown completely out of range of the sun and were attracted off into the realms of other suns, with which they either amalgamated or proceeded to circle around them. Other fragments of rings traveled through space until the attraction of the sun from which they were thrown exactly equaled the gravitativ stress of the other suns farther ahead, when they ceased to move in a horizontal direction, and the force with which they had been propelled, combined with their revolving movement, caused them to proceed in a circular orbit around our sun. As soon as a fragment of ring was thrown out from the sun it assumed a globular form and threw off other rings, which developed into moons; the matter composing these primitive planets was still in a molten condition but little cooler than the sun itself.

One of these flying fragments was the earth on which we live. After floating around the sun for ages, the earth ceased to cast off rings as it got cooler, and gradually a crust began to form over its surface. This crust, or shell, has increased slowly in thickness until the present time. It is now only a little more than twenty miles thick, and the interior of the planet is still in a fiery or incandescent condition. Some of the gases enveloping the slowly cooling orb condensed into water, and others into atmosphere; and when the heat abated sufficiently to permit it, vegetation was developed and began its work of covering the land.

In my next letter I shall endeavor to explain "The Origin of Man."

ALVIN J. TANNER.

Kansas City, Kan., May 1, E.M. 293.

Legend.—Continued.

"What a pity," said Jane, "that the iconoclast was allowed to destroy the exquisite works of art of ancient times because they interfered in some way with his bigoted, bloodthirsty, brutal notions of religion. I was informed to-day that if you have fine furniture and good clothes you can enter an asylum for the poor, otherwise you must die in some fearful corner. Though the poor are famished, they must attend church and receive rich calls patiently, though they have not been helped through the bitter cold of the winter. Carlyle told the truth when he remarked that women were brutally tyrannical to their own sex. Filled with the spirit of prayer, they wish to hold office and rule the world in a Christian manner; but their cruelty makes them unfit for anything of the kind. With regard to prayer, 'he prayeth best who loveth best,' and Walt Whitman told us that 'perspiration was better than prayer.'"

If Christians were not ignorant they would say to indigent persons, Attend any church, or no church, as you please.

If women meet for the transaction of business, they should inform the public that places should be kept open on Sunday, where the masses can be amused and profited at the same time. But women and Congressmen, both Christian, say that they are obliged to remain on the popular side. Then Mammon, not religion, rules both. By easy stages they would soon reach Moloch, and they would worship a jackal if they could make anything by it. Nature does not teach us to follow blindly influences not aided by art or human society. Carlyle preferred the genial touch of nature to that of art. And also Juvenal. "Nature never says one thing and wisdom another." "Nature alone," said Jane, "can give us an unbiased great man, like Clay, Jefferson, or Franklin." "Bigots are cut out by patterns," said Javeh. "Make it according to the pattern I showed you in the mount and minds can be cut off the same piece."

ALHAZA.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 24, 1893.

Correspondence.

BROOKLYN, May 1, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for eight years, and I like to read the Children's Corner. My father is now dead. I am ten years old. I go to school. I study reading, spelling, arithmetic, and language. I have two brothers and three sisters. One of my brothers and two sisters go to school. I think that my brother, my sisters, and myself are the only Freethinkers in the whole school.

I will close my letter now. I am,
A little Freethinker friend,
JOHANNA HOLMBERG.

PAULINA, ORE., March 23, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner again. I like to read the Corner. I think it is the best part of the paper. School will soon begin. I live four miles from the schoolhouse. I ride to school on horseback. I like to go to school and learn my lessons well. I like all my schoolmates. I have two brothers and one sister, and they are all Freethinkers. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER longer than I can remember.

Well, as I have written enough for the present I will close. Wishing good luck to Miss Wixon, I remain, Yours,
OTTO HARDESTY.

DEL NORTE, CAL., Apr. 27, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. My pa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I like to read the Corner. I go to school, and study arithmetic, spelling, reading, writing, geography, language, and physiology.

I am thirteen years old. I will close, hoping that this letter will escape the wastebasket
Your Liberal friend,
OLLIE L. JEROME.

[Here it is, a good letter for the first one. Now write and tell about your pets, tell about the town and the people.—ED. C. C.]

BOULDER, COL., Apr. 14, E.M. 293.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND READERS OF THE CORNER: This is my first attempt of writing to the Children's Corner. Papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a long time. I like to read the Corner very much, and would be glad to have two pages for the children so more new faces could be seen.

I am eleven years old, and go to school. My teacher's name is Miss Craig, and I think she is religious. If I give any quotations from Ingersoll, Paine, or Jefferson, she has a smile on her face until she finds out who is the author, then she looks very sour at me.

Mr. John R. Charlesworth has just been here and given us three lectures. The Liberals of Boulder were very much pleased with him, and we hope he will come again.

As my letter is getting a little lengthy, I will close for this time with best wishes to all. If this escapes the wastebasket, I will write again.

I remain your Liberal friend,
LLOYD C. LELAND.

PORT TOWNSEND, WASH., Apr. 18, 1893.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: It has been a long time since I wrote to the Children's Corner, so I thought I would write another letter; and I hope it will be interesting to the dear children who peruse the Children's Corner.

I read the Corner with a great deal of interest, and THE TRUTH SEEKER in general—more particularly Mr. Putnam's essays.

Oh, how I do wish that we could have Mr. Charlesworth and other good Freethought lecturers come to Port Townsend, so as to wake up the interest of Freethought in this bigoted Christian community! All this past winter we have had Christian revivals. Nothing but Jesus, Jesus, Jesus.

Papa was sick this winter and the doctor said that he could not live. He was visited by two of the Salvation Army captains, who asked the privilege of praying for him. He told them that they could pray if it would do them any good. After they were through praying, he told them that they had made no impression upon his mind so far as changing his belief was concerned. One of our Christian neighbors asked papa if he did not want a clergyman. He told her most emphatically, No, that he did not want any of their trash, as it is a lie from beginning to end.

We have no lack of Freethought literature, some of which I will mention. On our center-table we have the Christian's Holy Bible (for criticism) and the "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" on top of it. The last-mentioned is most sublime.

I must not forget to tell you that I dreamed last night I was at the World's Fair, but I could not get in. It must have been on Sunday.

For fear this letter may be too long, I will bring it to a close. Wishing you a long and happy life, I remain,
Your Liberal friend,

LIZZIE VINCENT.

[It is an imposition for religionists to visit a sick man without invitation. Liberals are long-suffering and slow to anger, or they would not stand such insults. We hope your papa is well again, and able to deal with his religious visitors.—ED. C. C.]

GOLD. SILVER.

MINES AND STOCKS.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN,

Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Special attention given to the expert examination of mineral properties in the United States and British Columbia.

MINES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Precious Metal Mines a Specialty. Can furnish any kind of mineral property—Platinum, Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Nickel, Copper, Lead, Antimony, Iron, Manganese, Mica, and Coal. Also Slate, Granite, Limestone, and Sandstone quarries.

RICH GOLD AND SILVER MINES FOR SALE.

Rare bargains in gold quartz, gold placers, and gold-silver galena mines in Kootenay and Cariboo districts, British Columbia. Only a few hundred dollars will buy valuable mining interests, a bonanza for a few thousand. Correspondence solicited; sampling, assays and mill tests; all work strictly scientific; investments carefully placed; bargains guaranteed; twenty years' mining and geological experience.

MILLIONS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

METAL. MINERAL.

3mo14

"INFIDELS AND CHARITY."

